I have served on committees time and again in my State to help to bring that condition about, but for some reason or other we have never been able to accomplish that result. I think the State adopted a constitutional amendment at one time to make it possible to bring about a nonpartisan judiciary in the State courts. I, with many other lawyers, I am sure, have been very much alarmed about the tendency to make Federal appointments nearly 100 percent political. There was a time when there was at least an attempt to have somewhat of a balance between the two political parties. I regret to say that in recent times, at least, within the past 15 years, that has not been the situation. We too often feel that positions should come as a reward for political service. I have no objection to rewarding those who are willing to work in politics and to serve their country, because they can perform a great service there. But that should not be one of the principal qualifications of a judge. On the contrary, the other requirements for this high office should have precedence over all else.

So, today, Mr. President, in discussing this question, I do it very reluctantly because I have come to some conclusions which I wish could be otherwise in this particular matter.

Mr. President, the citizens of Utah are no doubt wondering why there has been so much said about the confirmation of the nomination of Willis W. Ritter to be Federal judge for the district of Utah. I have been asked many times why I oppose the nomination of Judge Ritter, in spite of everything I could do to make it clear that I was not opposing the nomination of Judge Ritter, but was merely asking an investigation because of certain charges which had been made against him by a former Federal official who had served with him, a prominent Democrat, and other citizens of Utah, and because of questions which have been raised with respect to his integrity. Press statements have been issued to the effect that I have been opposing his nomination. They have been published with regularity.

The question, then, naturally arises, "Why have there been investigations and hearings on Mr. Ritter's qualifications if you in the past have not been opposed to him?"

I think I can best give the reasons and tell the story of the investigation of Mr. Ritter's nomination by presenting the substance of letters which I wrote to the Senate Judiciary Committee in September and October of 1949, and at sundry other times.

I shall read, first, a letter to the acting chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], dated September 20, 1949:

SEPTEMBER 20, 1949.

Senator HARLEY M. KILGORE,
Acting Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR KILGORE: Pursuant to our conversation of a few days ago with reference to the nomination of Mr. Willis Ritter, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for the position of District Judge of the Federal Court of the State of Utah, I suggest that a hearing be held on this nomination to permit residents of the State of Utah to state their objections to the confirmation of Mr. Ritter.

As I told you in our conversation, I am not making any personal objection. I am not acquainted with Mr. Ritter and only know him by reports made to me by people who are interested in securing his confirmation and those who are opposed.

A number of reputable Utah citizens have told me they desired to present matters to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate which they felt should be considered by this committee before it makes up its mind whether or not to recommend the approval of Mr. Ritter. In their behalf, I am urging that these witnesses either be subpenaed to come to Washington or that arrangements be made to take their testimony at Salt Lake City. I understand that one of them—Mr. Knox Patterson—has already communicated with your committee. Another, Mr. H. Grant Ivins, of Salt Lake City, a former associate of Mr. Ritter in the Rent Control Administration for Utah, also desires to be heard. There are still others who are willing to testify if given the opportunity.

On the other hand, I am sure there will be some who will wish to offer testimony in favor of Mr. Ritter.

To keep the record clear, may I state again as I did on the floor of the Senate in the matter of the confirmation of Abe Murdock, of Utah, as a member of the National Labor Relations Board, that I don't believe it is the duty of any one Senator to fight the confirmation of appointees to Federal posts, but that the committees to which the nominations are referred should make their own independent investigations in behalf of the Senate. No situation should be permitted to arise in which a Senator must appear in the role of a prosecutor and the nominee in the role of defendant.

I still believe that is the way the Senate should operate and I hope your committee will see fit to hear these witnesses from Utah either in Washington or in Salt Lake City. I am not informed as to how soon these witnesses could testify, but I believe with a week's notice they would be willing to come to Washington or appear before a representative of the committee in Salt Lake City. They are not men of means and it will therefore be necessary to allow them their expenses to make the trip to Washington in the event the hearing is not held in Salt Lake City.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR V. WATKINS.

That letter is signed by me.

Following that first letter, a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, with the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] as chairman, was appointed to consider the Ritter nomination. I addressed the following letter to the subcommittee on October 5, 1949:

OCTOBER 5, 1949.

Senator WARREN G. MAGNUSON,
Chairman, the Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: I have today received at 1:10 p. m. a notice that your subcommittee will hold further hearings next Monday, October 10, at 10 a. m. on the nomination of Willis W. Ritter, of Utah, for the United States district judge for the district of Utah.

In a letter dated September 20, 1949, directed to your committee, I suggested that a hearing be held on this nomination to permit residents of the State of Utah to state their objections to the appointment of Mr. Ritter. I informed you I was not making a personal objection. I also stated my idea of the duty of the committees of the Senate in matters of this kind. I have not changed my views on this matter.

However, I was invited to attend a meeting of the full Judiciary Committee on September 3. While at that meeting, an excerpt was read by a member of the committee from a report which was in the possession of the committee. That excerpt raised serious questions as to the integrity and morality of the nominee. I was surprised at the statements made in that report. The full report is not available to me. I understood from reference to it in the committee that it comprised more than 30 pages.

As a Senator from Utah, charged with the duty of representing and protecting the people of my State, I sincerely feel that I should have been given the opportunity to examine this report. However, the committee decided otherwise.

I may say that at that committee meeting, as I recall, I specifically asked permission to examine the report, which had been called to my attention at the hearing by a Senator's reading from it and offering some comments on it.

I resume reading the letter:

The statements from the report which I did hear have raised serious questions in my mind as to what my duty is in the premises. Frankly, I don't know whether the statements made are true or not true. They do put me, as well as members of the committee, on notice. The senior Senator from Utah was also present, and he likewise was put on notice.

I have considered this matter very seriously since that hearing as to what, if anything, I should do in the matter, since this has been called to my attention. The office of Federal district judge is one of the most important offices in my State. It affects the lives, liberty, and rights of every citizen in that State. It can be a blessing in the hands of an able and fair-minded judge and a man of integrity. On the other hand, it has powers that could detrimentally affect the citizens of the State if those powers were abused.

As a result of my consideration of this matter, I have come to the following conclusion: first, that since the senior Senator is the sponsor of the nominee for district judge, I believe it is his duty to carefully consider the official report referred to and make a very thorough investigation of any charges or questions raised by that report. He owes it not only to the people of the State, but to the committee and the Senate, and to himself to make that investigation.

Second, it seems to be my duty to also investigate carefully the matters that have been raised. I can't help but believe that I have some duty to all the people of the State, including the nominee, Mr. Ritter, to go into this matter carefully. At the moment I have no means of knowing whether the statements are true or false. This is a very different situation than a trial in court where a man is charged with offenses. In the present situation the nominee has no right to the particular office. The appointment to the office is a privilege and not a right. Under the circumstances, where serious questions are raised, it seems to me it is the duty of those charged with the responsibility to go very carefully into this matter to protect the people as well as the person whose integrity has been questioned.

You will realize that I am seriously handicapped in making any investigation. I haven't the staff, money for expenses necessarily involved, and the time, personally, to do justice to this problem. I am serving on committees—three, in fact—plus subcommittees in which I seek to do my share of the work of the Senate. You gentlemen are charged with the responsibility of making an investigation of the fitness of the nominees who are referred to your committee. You have the authority to subpena, and the full power of investigation and also are entitled to funds to pay any investigation expenses involved. All of these helps you have; I do not have any of them.

I have already advised you that certain witnesses in Salt Lake City should be interrogated. I suggested in my letter that they should be subpenaed. At that time I made it only as a suggestion. I now make it as a request that H. Grant Ivins, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Quentin Cannon of the same city, be subpenaed to attend the hearing next Monday or at such other time as will be convenient to the committee and to these gentlemen.

I also request that those persons named in the report to which I have referred elsewhere in this letter who apparently have some information with respect to the nominee which information may give light on his character and his integrity and his fitness to hold the position, be also subpenaed. Their names are not available to me, but they are to you.

In support of this last request, may I suggest that unless a report of this kind is going to be made use of, that it is idle to have made the investigation on which it is based; and of course, if there are statements damaging to the character of the nominee, then for his sake and that of the public, they should be cleared up.

I am also informed that prior to my appearance in the committee meeting of last September 3, a statement was made by my colleague that this whole matter was brought about because I am fighting the senior Senator. I didn't get a clear statement of this charge, but may I say that such a statement, either in words or in substance, is absolutely false.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WATKINS. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That statement was made in committee, and I asked the distinguished Senator from Utah if anyone had heard it said that I had made a statement of that kind, and at that time the junior Senator from Utah said he would withdraw the statement. No such statement was made by me.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, the Senator will note that I am reading a letter which I had addressed to the committee. I cannot very well leave out of the letter what I said to the committee and at the same time give a full report. If the Senator says to me that he never made any such statement, I shall certainly withdraw that statement.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It was withdrawn by the junior Senator from Utah when the letter was read in committee.

Mr. WATKINS. I shall withdraw it again. My memory is not too clear. This letter was written on October 5, 1949.

I shall continue reading from the letter:

My action in calling this matter to the attention of the committee has been prompted only by my desire to see that the people of my State are protected and that the Senate is fully informed so that it can intelligently advise, and consent with respect to this nomination. I have not now, and never have had, any personal quarrel with my colleague. As far as I know, we have been on good terms even though we were elected by different political parties and have opposing views on public questions. Since the election, I represent all the people of the State. That, of course, is the position of my colleague. Our duties, generally speaking, are similar and our responsibilities to the people of Utah and to the United States are identical. This is in no way a personal question. It is entirely a matter of doing what should be done in the public interest.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR V. WATKINS.

P. S.—It is suggested that if witnesses are to be subpenaed, the matter should be attended to at once, otherwise the witnesses will not have sufficient time to get here by next Monday.

Prior to my letter to the subcommittee, to wit on September 29, the subcommittee had held a partial hearing on the nomination of Mr. Ritter, and in answer to my letter a further hearing was held on October 11.

In the meantime, in response to suggestions contained in my letter, a telegram had been dispatched to Mr. H. Grant Ivins of Salt Lake City and to Attorney Quentin Cannon of the same place, asking them if they desired to make a statement to the committee.

Mr. Cannon answered that he did not desire to make a statement and under date of October 8 Mr. Ivins sent the committee a letter of protest.

I now read the letter of protest sent to the committee by Mr. Grant Ivins, of Salt Lake City, under date of October 8, 1949, in response to a telegram sent to him by the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON]. The letter read as follows:

Replying to a telegram received last evening from J. G. Sourwine, counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee, I desire to submit the following statement regarding Mr. Willis W. Ritter, whose nomination to the United States District Judge for Utah is now being considered by the subcommittee of which you are chairman.

From August 1942 until the abolishment of the Office of Price Administration I served as district director of that agency for the State of Utah. During part of that time Mr. Ritter was employed by OPA as Utah rent director, then as regional rent director, with offices in Denver, Colo. During the period that Mr. Ritter was in the employ of OPA, I had ample opportunity to observe his method of dealing with the public and with the administrative problems of the Rent Division.

As the result of these observations, I am firmly convinced that Mr. Ritter is not a fit candidate for the position to which the President has nominated him. In all his dealing with the landlords of Utah he treated these property owners like criminals and lawbreakers, refusing to recognize their right honestly to differ with him in regard to regulations set up for the control of their rental property. He opposed every effort to cultivate the friendship and cooperation of these property owners. He was arbitrary, tyrannical, arrogant, and abusive in his treatment of those who sought conference with him, so much so that it required many months of careful work to overcome the bitterness which was engendered by his methods.

Correspondence in the files of the OPA would substantiate all these accusations.

There would be found letters addressed to Mr. Ritter's subordinates and some to me in which he says in most forceful terms that we must not try to make friends with members of the Apartment House Association and similar organizations, but should be aware of the fact that they are only trying to find ways of violating OPA regulations. I am certain that, were members of your committee to see this correspondence, they would agree with me that no person who would give such instructions to those under his supervision is fit to sit as a Federal judge.

When Mr. Ritter was appointed regional rent director, he selected, with my approval, Glen D. Reese to act as rent director for Utah. Mr. Reese conducted his office in a manner quite different from that employed by Mr. Ritter, seeking the friendship and cooperation of all those with whom he dealt. His attitude soon became the cause of friction between him and Mr. Ritter, who, from his office in Denver, began planning for the dismissal of Mr. Reese. Knowing that I approved of Mr. Reese's administration, Mr. Ritter, in order to accomplish his purpose, informed me that he did not have enough money in his budget to make it possible for him to maintain both a rent director and a rent attorney in Utah. He informed me that it was, therefore, necessary for him to abolish the position of rent director and appoint a director-attorney for the Utah area. As Mr. Reese was not an attorney, it would be necessary for him to resign to make way for a person who could fulfill the requirements of the new position.

I objected to the change proposed by Mr. Ritter, first because I was well satisfied with the work of Mr. Reese, and, secondly, because I could not agree with Mr. Ritter in his choice of a director-attorney. I finally carried the matter to Clem Collins, regional OPA director. I learned, to my amazement, that Mr. Ritter had told Mr. Collins that Mr. Reese was doing a very poor job in Utah and should be removed from office. Mr. Collins, of course, knew that there was no need to abolish the position of Utah rent director because of a lack of funds. The disagreement on this matter finally reached such a point that I was ordered, on 6 hours' notice, to fly to Denver to meet Mr. Ritter and settle our differences. Mr. Collins informed me that Mr. Ritter expected to leave the following morning for a meeting of all regional rent directors to be held in Chicago. Mr. Collins said he did not wish Mr. Ritter to attend that meeting until he and I had settled our dispute one way or another.

I was unable to obtain air passage to Denver as requested by Mr. Collins, and so informed him by wire. Next day Mr. Ritter announced his resignation. I have no further information as to what had transpired in the Denver office.

In this entire matter Mr. Ritter was maliciously dishonest in his dealing with me and with Mr. Reese. I do not consider a man who could stoop to such deceitful methods to accomplish his purpose fit to occupy the position to which Mr. Ritter has been nominated. His prejudices are so violent, his respect for others so lacking, his integrity so questionable as to make him unfit for calm objectivity and absolute honesty.

I am astonished at the statement of Congressman WALTER GRANGER, as reported in the Salt Lake Tribune, that members of the legal profession in Utah favor the appointment of Mr. Ritter. I have talked to many prominent lawyers about this matter, and I have yet to find one who does not say that such an appointment would be little short of a calamity. Every one, however, has added that he would not say a word against the appointment, adding that having done so, he would never dare appear in Federal court before Mr. Ritter. All seem to take it for granted that the appointment will be confirmed by the Senate.

In fairness, may I add that I know nothing which would cause one to question Mr. Ritter's loyalty to the Constitution or to the Government of the United State. Nor do I question his ability as an attorney. I admire his ability, but at the same time consider him entirely unfit to occupy the position of Federal judge. I can assure you that I speak for many of the leading citizens of Utah in submitting this information.

Sincerely yours,

H. GRANT IVINS.

Mr. Ivins is not merely an ordinary citizen of Utah. He comes from one of our leading families. He has been active in politics for many years. He is one of the leading Democrats. He has been an ardent supporter, and I understand still is, of the senior Senator from Utah. He was not in any sense speaking from the standpoint of politics. He appealed to me, he told me, only because he could not get a satisfactory answer or any answer from the senior Senator from Utah, to whom he had conveyed some of the complaints which he placed in this letter. That, of course, was told me outside of anything in his letter.

Mr. Ivins, as I have said, was a coworker with Mr. Ritter in the Federal service. He was a man who finished his career with honor. He remained in office, I think, the entire time the OPA was in operation in the State of Utah, during the war period.

Mr. President, I call attention to that fact so that the Senate and the people of Utah can understand why I did pay attention to Mr. Ivins. I had known him for a number of years. While he and I were as far apart as the poles in the matter of politics, I did have high regard for his integrity and truthfulness. I sincerely thought that he believed what he was saying to me when he conveyed to me in substance what he subsequently put into this letter to the committee.

I felt that he was at least in this letter calling the attention of the Senate and the people of Utah to his position. That was one of the principal reasons why I asked for the investigation, not because I had any personal objection to Mr. Ritter, as I have stated. I previously have said that I had not known him personally. I think I met him in my office just before one of the hearings when he came to call on me in Washington.

I did have a personal and sentimental reason why I would ordinarily want to support his appointment. My son, now deceased, had been a student in his law class at the university, and he had high regard for him. I had heard that from my own boy, and because of that I had a personal reason of a sentimental nature to go along with his appointment.

Mr. President, the letter I have just read from Mr. Ivins was made a part of the public record of the hearing on October 11 by the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON]. It was later published, with other information, in a printed statement of the public hearings which were held.

In commenting upon the matters which were before the committee at that time, the Senator from Washington made a statement to which I wish to call attention. I bring this to the attention of the Senate because I think it has been overlooked by many persons that this communication of Mr. Ivins was made public property, was made a part of the record, and actually was printed, and that copies were available at the Committee on the Judiciary. This is what the Senator from Washington said:

> All of those communications are fully open to the public; they are right here, and, as I say, they contain two letters, two communications against him—> and I do not know how many—I have not counted them—which are just the opposite.

I interpolate to say that he means against Mr. Ritter—

There was one other letter which had been sent to the committee by another leading Democrat of Utah of the old Jeffersonian school. I believe he does not claim to be a New Dealer or a Fair Dealer, but he is like some of my colleagues of the Senate of the Democratic persuasion, who probably would be very much at home with him. He claims to be an old-fashioned Democrat who believes in the private enterprise system, does not believe in too much tinkering with it, and believes strongly in individual rights, as they were set forth by Andrew Jackson and Thomas Jefferson. He sent a letter to the committee. I have not placed the letter in the RECORD, and I am not reading it here today, for the reason that later he recanted some of the things he said in the letter. I think he later addressed another letter to the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and also had one published in one of the newspapers in Utah. I am not making anything of that, except that later on in the record reference was made to a letter from Knox Patterson, of Salt Lake City, Utah.

I read my letter addressed to the committee on October 5, 1949, as a part of the public record in the public hearings held by the subcommittee on October 11, 1949, and all I said in it is a part of the printed record.

The subcommittee on a 2-to-1 vote reported to the full Senate Committee on the Judiciary a recommendation that Mr. Ritter's nomination be approved.

I am quite sure that some Members of the Senate are probably wondering why it is that the nomination is now before the Senate, having been made about a year ago. As I recall, it came to the Senate some time during the latter part of August. Some public hearings, at least two, were held by the subcommittee, and, although there was a favorable report of 2 to 1 by the subcommittee to the full committee that Mr. Ritter's nomination be confirmed, the entire committee did not take action. It was along in October when the report of the subcommittee was made, and the full committee postponed action, as I recall, indefinitely, which killed the nomination, because it had not been confirmed during the period the Senate was in session.

It should be remembered that the subcommittee refused my request to subpena Mr. Ivins, Mr. Cannon, and the other witnesses mentioned in the Government report which was before the Senate Judiciary Committee. This report had been referred to and quoted from by a member of the committee at a meeting of the committee and in my presence and in the presence of the senior Senator from Utah.

The full committee postponed indefinitely further consideration of the nomination. The first session of the Eighty-first Congress then adjourned in mid-October, thus refusing in effect to approve the first nomination made by the President of Mr. Ritter.

The matter could have been settled, in my opinion, in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress had the subcommittee granted my request to subpena Mr. Ivins and the other witnesses suggested.

When this was not done, the whole committee refused to act on the nomination.

I am confident in my own mind that the subcommittee made a mistake when it did not subpena these witnesses. There were only two or three of them at that particular time, who could have come here and explained their position, and the whole matter probably could have been cleared up at that point. But it was not done. The result was that the nomination then failed, but it came up again.

Following the adjournment of Congress, the President made an interim appointment of Mr. Ritter, which authorized him to serve as judge until Congress should meet again.

Upon the convening of Congress in January 1950, the President again sent the name of Mr. Ritter to the Senate for confirmation for Federal judge for Utah. That is, after Congress had reconvened in January.

Based on the protest of Mr. Ivins which had already been filed with the committee and statements of other Utah citizens, who for the most part were Democrats, and on the letters which I had previously filed with the committee, and on the statements which I had heard read from the report to which I have already referred in one of my letters, I again requested the committee to investigate the qualifications of Mr. Ritter to hold this high office.

The committee then ordered that hearings in executive session be held at Salt Lake City, Utah, and at Denver, Colo. Some other matters happened in the interim which I do not think are important to my present discussion.

The hearings were ordered to be executive even though I urged they be held in public since the committee had decided that Mr. Ritter could appear in person and be represented by attorneys for the purpose of examining witnesses who would appear. I also was given the privilege of appearing to cross-examine witnesses and of suggesting the names of witnesses to be called. It will be remembered in the original letters sent to the committee in September and October 1949, I had insisted that it was a committee investigation to which I was not a party. I did not want to be in any way made responsible for the conduct of the investigation. I was willing to help, but I did not feel that it was proper for any Senator to be made the prosecutor or attorney for any group which might be protesting.

I may say that I attempted to continue that stand all the way through, but finally at various times I was almost forced, if the investigation was to go forward at all, to assume the position more or less of a prosecutor, much to my resentment, because I do not believe it to be proper, even though it has been somewhat the practice in the Senate.

That is the position I have taken all along through this rather lengthy case.

Sometime before March 13, I was notified by the distinguished Senator from Nevada, the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary [Mr. MCCARRAN] that my request for an investigation of the qualifications of Mr. Ritter for Federal judge had been granted and that the hearing would be held in executive session.

On March 13, I wrote a letter to the chairman of the committee, in which I stated:

> You told me verbally that my request for an investigation of the qualifications of Willis Ritter to be Federal District Judge of the District of Utah had been granted, but that the hearings would be held in executive session. Of course I haven't the right to prescribe the method of holding the hearing, but I do want to make it clear that my own opinion is that under the circumstances, the hearings should be public. But since the committee has decided otherwise, I shall have to abide by that decision.

In the same letter, I also said:

In connection with the entire investigation, may I suggest that in a previous letter I called attention to the fact that Mr. H. Grant Ivins, who will be one of the witnesses, had informed the committee that the files and records of the Rent Control Division of the OPA contained written evidence of the unfitness of Mr. Ritter to hold this position. I hope the committee is having a trained investigator examine these files to discover if there is any such evidence. I am sure Mr. Ivins will be glad to cooperate with him in the location of the evidence. In the event the committee needs assistance in this matter, I shall be glad to designate a member of my staff to aid in the investigation.

On April 20, I received another letter from the chairman of the committee which contained the following paragraph:

In view of the fact that you are opposing Judge Ritter's nomination and that the witnesses whom you named are being subpenaed, I respectfully urge you to be in Salt Lake City on May 1, to participate in the hearings which will convene in the Federal Building there beginning at 9:30 a. m. on that date; and that you also be present in Denver on May 5 for the hearings which will convene in the Federal Building in Denver at 2 p. m. May 5. You will be given the privilege of presenting your witnesses—

I emphasize the word "your"— your witnesses in such order as you may determine, and you will have the right to question or cross-examine any witnesses who appear. The nominee will be granted the same right, in person or by counsel.

This paragraph indicates clearly that at least the chairman of the committee considered the investigation in fact a trial. He places me in the position of attorney opposing Judge Ritter's nomination and he speaks of the privilege which is given me of presenting my witnesses in such order as I might determine.

To that letter I replied:

APRIL 24, 1950.

Hon. PAT MCCARRAN,
Chairman, and Members of the Committee on the Judiciary,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: On April 21 I received a letter from the chairman of your committee which contained the following paragraph:

"In view of the fact that you are opposing Judge Ritter's nomination and that the witnesses whom you named are being subpenaed, I respectfully urge you to be in Salt Lake City on May 1, to participate in the hearings which will convene in the Federal Building there begining at 9:30 a. m. on that date; and that you also be present in Denver on May 5 of the hearings which will convene in the Federal Building in Denver at 2 p. m. May 5. You will be given the privilege of presenting your witnesses in such order as you may determine, and you will have the right to question or cross-examine any witnesses who appear. The nominee will be granted the same right, in person or by counsel."

Then I proceed with my letter:

May I most respectfully state that there are two statements in that paragraph to which I take exception. There is also a policy announced which I sincerely believe is not proper under the circumstances of this investigation.

May I repeat again with all the emphasis at my command I am not opposing the nomination of Judge Ritter. I have tried to make that crystal clear in previous letters to your committee. (Attached are marked copies of letters.)

As I recall, I attached to the letter copies of those earlier letters.

I read further from my letter:

The witnesses I have suggested be called are not my witnesses, but the witnesses of this committee. As an aid to the committee, I have suggested their names. I believe they have knowledge of facts which should throw light on the qualifications of the nominee.

I haven't filed any charges against this nominee. I am not a complaining witness. I am not the plaintiff, neither am I the attorney for any person or group who may or may not be against or for Judge Ritter.

My entire interest in this matter is that of a Member of the United States Senate representing the people in the State of Utah.

I want to have a careful, thorough, and fair investigation made of all the qualifications of the nominee for the high and very important office of Federal judge for Utah.

I requested that this investigation or hearing be conducted because a number of Utah people, members of the Democrat Party for the most part, laid before me certain alleged facts which they honestly believed to be true, which in their opinion disqualified the nominee.

These people are reputable people and I am convinced believe what they have told me to be true.

Their position is largely, but not wholly, stated in a letter filed by this committee by H. Grant Ivins of Salt Lake City with which this committee is, or should be, familiar.

That is the letter from Mr. Ivins which I have already read.

I continue to read my letter:

In addition, I heard read and discussed briefly at a meeting of this committee certain matters from an executive department report which raised serious questions as to the integrity and morality of the nominee.

I have no means of knowing whether questions raised by these citizens of Utah or the questions raised by the report are true or false. I have had neither the time, the staff, nor the money to investigate these matters. But they were serious enough in character to warrant, in my judgment, a thorough investigation by this committee—a committee which has been charged with the responsibility and given the necessary staff and money to do the job.

May I most respectfully urge that this is not a trial—it is an investigation to see whether or not the Senate will approve this nominee named by the President.

Too often matters of this kind have been conducted as trials; and when this has been done, the reputation of the Senate has in several notorious instances suffered as a result.

Mr. President, I can name them. I think the Senate and the country now have in mind a current investigation which in my opinion is not bringing any honor or respect to this great deliberative body. I expect to mention it later in my speech.

I read further from my letter:

The hearings on the Lilienthal and Clapp appointments are outstanding examples.

In the paragraph I quoted at the beginning of my statement it was stated: "You will be given the privilege of presenting your witnesses in such order as you may determine, and you will have the right to question or cross-question any witnesses who may appear. The nominee will be granted the same right, in person or by counsel" and to this I add the last sentence of the letter, "As you have been previously advised, the hearings * * * will be in executive session."

If I understand the language, it means that this hearing is to be a trial—a trial held in executive session—in secret, and the evidence also is to be kept secret as I have been previously informed by the chairman.

This is completely contrary to the idea of an investigation conducted to see whether or not we want to approve the hiring of Judge Ritter as a life-time Federal judge.

It is contrary to the traditions of the Senate to permit the nominee or his counsel to cross examine witnesses at such executive hearings. It is contrary to the practice of the executive department when it conducts investigations of persons under consideration for appointment by the President.

The Justice Department investigates entirely in secret. No appointee or counsel is present when the FBI makes inquiry of various citizens about nominees.

Mr. President, in that respect let me say that it would seem to me to be utterly ridiculous, in the case of any office for which the Senate is to advise and consult in regard to the confirmation of a nominee for a position of such great responsibility, to adopt a policy by which the person being investigated to see whether he should be confirmed to such a position and should be given such great responsibility, should be permitted to attend, together with his attorney, such hearings, and should be permitted to cross-examine every person who would submit information. I can readily understand that under such circumstances the committee would not get any information, because no person wishes to go on record as criticizing another human being under such circumstances. After all is said and done, the reason the FBI makes its investigations is not because there is a want of political endorsements by prominent persons who live in the State from which the nominee comes. Anyone knows that a large record can be filled with endorsements from persons who know the general reputation of this appointee. That situation applies in the case of practically every appointee, I do not care who he may be; it is almost always easy to secure plenty of endorsement. I have in my office bulging files, not only in the case of the nominations of judges, but in the case of the nominations of persons for other positions, for the benefit of whom many persons have written letters of endorsement, addressing them both to the Senators from their State and to the committee concerned.

Mr. President, I continue to read my letter:

No appointee has the right to an office in government. It is a privilege only which may or may not be granted by the appointing and confirming power. This has been held in a long line of cases. Only recently it was reaffirmed in the case of Bailey v. Richardson by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Miss Bailey was in office, but was discharged without having the opportunity to face her alleged accusers.

Let me interpolate that she had gone even further; she was then holding the job, and at that stage she seemed to have some kind of right to the job; at least, she felt that she did. So she was in a considerably better position than someone who is merely seeking an appointment.

I continue to read my letter:

The circumstances of the Bailey case were much stronger in favor of an actual trial where the accused would be present and have all the rights of a defendant charged with an offense—but the Court said "No" to her argument. The President could discharge without any hearing or without giving any reasons. (Attached to this statement are quotes from the Bailey case decision.)

Lets look at the present investigation from a practical point of view. The committee and the Senate want the truth about the qualifications of the nominee. The office is not elective—the people of Utah will have no opportunity to approve or disapprove the nominee. That is why the Senate investigation is so important.

Mr. Ivins, a former associate of Mr. Ritter in the rent control, says Judge Ritter is vindictive and that he is maliciously dishonest.

Aside from Mr. Ivins, what witnesses are likely to be willing to testify against the nominee if he is present when they know that he may be the judge to pass on their rights—their liberties?

Mr. President, let me say at this point that I have profound respect for the courage of H. Grant Ivins, who even went against one of his good friends, the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], and other members of his party in Utah, who took a different point of view after the nomination had been made. Mr. Ivins had nothing to gain politically or otherwise by taking this stand. Regardless of whether he was or was not mistaken, regardless of whether he got his facts twisted or whether he misunderstood the situation, he certainly had courage to do what he did. I think the senior Senator from Utah will agree with me that Mr. Ivins is one of the best men in the State of Utah, that he is an honorable man, that he is a truthful man.

Mr. President, I resume reading my letter:

What lawyer who earns his living partly by practicing in the Federal court in Utah should be required to tell what he knows about the nominee's qualifications before the nominee and then subject himself to cross-examination by the nominee or the nominee's attorney? Is the committee likely to get the truth under such circumstances?

Remember that I am addressing this letter to the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, which had notified me that it was to be an executive session—a secret session—and that the nominee and his attorney would be there to cross-examine witnesses, and I have said in my comments that that is in the nature of a trial. I repeat:

Is the committee likely to get the truth under such circumstances?

The letter continues:

Is such a procedure fair to the lay witness and lawyers?

I think every member of this committee has been requested many times by employers in and out of Government for confidential statements on personnel being considered for appointment to responsible positions. I think I am safe in saying that most of us might refuse or at least be very reluctant to give advance evidence or opinions if our responses were not to be kept in confidence.

In this connection I have talked with many lawyers in Utah who are not in favor of Mr. Ritter as judge. Some of them have information which I think the committee should hear, but these same lawyers have pleaded with me not to have them called. They claim that it would ruin their practice in the Federal court if they were called and testified to anything that would be adverse to the nominee—that is, of course, assuming he will be finally confirmed as judge. Incidentally, they have the belief that he will be confirmed because of the political situation in the Senate.

One other matter which is wholly in keeping with the idea of a trial is that statement contained in several letters signed by your chairman to the effect that the committee will issue subpenas duces tecum on any books, papers, or documents which I may desire to have brought in. I am directed to describe them with reasonable particularity and to tell the committee where they are and in whose custody. Obviously, this is on the theory that I am one of the parties to the investigation and that it is my duty to find the evidence and then have the subpenas duces tecum issued.

I have been a judge long enough and a lawyer long enough to know that when that direction is sent to anyone it means that he is responsible for getting the evidence, he is responsible for bringing it in. He may only be calling the committee's attention to something for the purpose of aiding and assisting it in getting information the Senate should have, certain information that it needs, immediately, as has been done here previously. The burden is imposed on him, if he even makes the charges. It should, in my opinion, fall on the committee. I continue with the letter:

Let me say again that I have had neither the time, the staff, nor the means to make an investigation of the records of the OPA. It was Mr. Grant Ivins, a former associate of Judge Ritter in the OPA, who told the committee in his letter that there was documentary evidence in the files to substantiate his statements about Judge Ritter. I have offered to help locate these documents. I have offered a member of my staff to aid the committee staff in search for them. My office has spent considerable time trying to locate these files, but it should be clear to the committee that I am not in a position to get these files opened up for my investigation; only the committee has that power.

It should also be kept in mind, I may interpolate, that the OPA files for any State, even though it may be no larger than the State of Utah, are very voluminous. They would make many truckloads. But, with the help of Mr. Ivins, the trained investigator, having in mind the dates that were controversial, would be in a position to get the facts. Mr. Ivins claims in his letter that these things happened, and that in the files would be found documents to substantiate what he said. I think that the committee's staff could have found that information.

I want to say now that only a few days before the hearings actually began, a member of the committee staff was assigned to work with me and at my direction, and that was the time to which I referred. Finally I was put in a position, over my objection, of having to dig for the evidence, a task which I felt, and still feel, should have been undertaken by the committee and its staff. To give it the lead, Mr. Ivins could call it to the attention of the committee and state where it could be found. But the task apparently was placed on me and the one staff member who was assigned to me.

I continue:

My office has spent considerable time trying to locate these files, but it should be clear to the Committee that I am not in a position to get these files opened up for my investigation—only the committee has that power.

We tried, but we could not get into those files. It finally had to be done by a member of the committee's staff. But it was not done in time really to be of any special service or to throw any particular light on the matter. At least, there was not the full investigation which Mr. Ivins had suggested and which I desired. That is one of the criticisms I have had of this particular investigation, that it was not complete, not merely in respect to Mr. Ivins' allegations, but with respect to certain other matters to which I shall later call the Senate's attention.

I continue:

In conclusion, may I say, gentlemen, that I am not writing this letter in any spirit of personal criticism. I know that there have been many hearings here which have made regular court trials out of investigations. Ever since I came to the Senate I have been against such procedure. I have said so publicly on the floor of the Senate and I have said so in letters to this committee, and, since I feel that I am right in this position, I do not believe I should change even to accommodate myself to the present investigation.

I am willing to do everything I can to aid and assist the committee. I want to know the truth about the qualifications of Judge Ritter. I haven't made up my mind as yet as to whether or not he should be confirmed. My final position will be largely determined by this investigation.

May I also add that since the scene of the hearing has been shifted to Salt Lake City and Denver that I shall be put to considerable personal expense—transportation, hotel bills, and otherwise—which I do not feel under the circumstances should be my personal responsibility. I should like to take a member of my staff along to aid in the investigation. I think his expenses ought to be paid by the committee. He is a lawyer from Utah and is well acquainted with the situation in Utah so that he can be of real help.

I earnestly urge that you give the matters I have discussed in this letter serious consideration.

The letter is signed by me.

I think this letter is very significant. In it I maintain the position I took in the very beginning of these proceedings, but apparently the Chairman, at least, has been following the old custom in the Senate of casting a Senator who asks for an investigation in the role of prosecutor and the nominee in the role of defendant. The investigation becomes a trial. The committee sits as jurors or judges.

In my letter, I think I pointed out the reasons why such a policy and such a method of making investigations are not compatible with the obligations of senatorial committees, which are the agencies of the Senate itself, constituted and endowed with investigatorial powers, in my opinion, to act as investigating agencies for the Senate. It is too big a job for the Senate to undertake for itself, at least to gather the facts—not to try people to determine whether they are guilty or innocent of charges, but to determine, as the President determines, if you please, whether we should consent to the hiring or the appointment of nominees.

I am so much concerned with this matter of procedure of committees, that I have discussed it, not merely in this particular instance, but previously. I have been considering legislation which would set up for the Senate a nonpartisan staff of experts who could be called upon by any of the committees to aid in investigations. The staffs we now have include some members who are trained to investigate, and some who are not. They have many duties to perform. But when they are called upon to make investigations which take considerable time and trouble, and which are rather difficult, it is almost impossible for them to get away from their other work. I can readily understand how committees are situated. But we now have a helter-skelter method of investigating these matters. The Committee on the Interior must consider the appointments to such positions as those of the Secretary of the Interior, the governors of the various Territories, and numerous other positions.

In the Committee on Public Works, consideration must be given to the appointment of the Chairman of the Board of TVA and of those having to do with the public works of the United States. Each committee has its job to do. But it is manifest to me, and I think it should be to everyone, that each committee cannot have a trained staff of investigators. I am today going to some length to discuss this matter, because I believe it is a question which we should seriously consider, to see whether we cannot work out a reform, and bring about the creation of a staff, nonpartisan in nature, to do an objective job of getting the facts, of ascertaining the truth in cases in connection with which questions have been raised about personnel, or in other investigations where we need to get the truth and the whole truth.

In the matter of the confirmation of the nomination of the Honorable Abe Murdock to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board, which came up in 1947, the first year I came to the Senate, I stated my objections to this manner of committee procedure. What I then said is applicable in the present case. I used the hearings in the Lilienthal and Gordon Clapp cases to illustrate my criticism. Among other things I said—and the reason I took those cases to illustrate my point of view is because the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Committee on Public Works were criticized by the press of the country very bitterly for consuming so much time and permitting a member of this body, who was objecting to the confirmation of the nominations, to take so much time of the committee to cross-examine and to present the cases.

I shall quote what I said at that time in a speech which I made to the Senate. I am very serious about this matter, and I hope that at some time we can bring about some reform. I said at that time:

> Apparently the committee considered its function to be that of a jury—

I am referring, now, to the committee which held the Lilienthal hearings—> which was to hear the evidence presented by the prosecutor and by the defendant, and from this determine the qualifications of the nominee. Under this theory, the senior Senator from Tennessee was the prosecutor, and Lilienthal, the defendant.

>
> That my conclusions are correct is borne out by the following quotation from a very effective speech which the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] made in behalf of Mr. Lilienthal. Said the Senator:
>
> "Since it is impossible for all Senators to know the record developed in 7 weeks of utterly exhaustive hearings, I respectfully suggest that fair-minded men cannot wholly ignore the impact of the cold hard fact that eight out of nine of the Senate's own jury"—

I hope the Senate appreciates that point—

> "of the Senate's own jury, commissioned by the Senate to pass on the facts"—

Let me emphasize the words "pass on the facts"—

> "report, regardless of party lines, in favor of confirmation."
>
> That illustration was carried out to a great extent in subsequent language in the speech to which I have referred.
>
> It will be noted that the Senator said to "pass upon the facts." Had the committee made its own investigations, the prosecutor in this case would have been relegated to a very minor role indeed.
>
> May I respectfully suggest that if there is to be any jury role played at all it should be by the entire Senate, and not by one of its committees.
>
> As it was the senior Senator from Tennessee carried the burden of the investigation apparently because no one else was willing to do so. He was permitted to set the pace and the direction of the hearings, although it should be said in fairness that he and his witnesses used no more time than did the friends of the nominee. But what he did had a big influence on the time used by the so-called defendant in the case.
>
> Then there was the Gordon Clapp case. It will be recalled that Mr. Clapp was nominated for the position of Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority.
>
> This case largely paralleled that of Lilienthal—the same witnesses, the same methods, the same result.
>
> I sat as a member of the Public Works Committee, and I know that the members of the committee were trying to do a good job, but it seemed that we were following the custom which had been established in the Senate of letting someone else bring in the evidence, and letting the man who was under charges meet the evidence. We did very little on our own initiative. I say that without any desire to criticize the chairman or the members of that committee, or the other committee for that matter.
>
> Over the years there have been other cases. The issues were different, but the methods of considering the nomination were the same.
>
> Mr. President, I think that before I conclude this statement, I should at least suggest how I believe committees can greatly improve the procedure in considering Presidential appointments.
>
> In making such a suggestion I do so in humility becoming a freshman Senator, and I respectfully submit it in that spirit. The suggestion is this:
>
> All investigations should in actual fact as well as in theory, be made by and through the committee on its own initiative rather than a trial between two or more opposing factions, and a professional staff of investigators should be used to obtain proper information for committees on any appointments that might be questioned.

Mr. President, I have been thinking, as I went over the statement I made at that time, how much trouble might have been averted in the recent investigation of loyaly risks authorized by the Senate; how many reputations might have been saved; how much truth might have been arrived at and determined—and that is what we are after—if we had had a trained nonpartisan staff to make the preliminary investigation and to report to the committee, rather than for the committee to demand of a Senator who called to its attention alleged facts which he though needed investigating to furnish the evidence and to do the job which the committee itself was authorized to do. It seems to me we could have avoided much unpleasantness, much time of an important committee, if such staff had the job of a thorough investigation turned over to it.

I may say, Mr. President, that I am not in sympathy with any proposal to take away from the Congress its power to investigate and to place it in a so-called commission outside the Congress. Especially am I opposed to having the Executive or anyone else name any of the members of such an investigating group. That is the function of the Congress which should never be delegated to anyone outside Congress. While we may not have discharged that duty any too well in many instances, I think the remedy is not in trying to get someone else to do the job, but to reform our procedure and finally do what we should do in the way in which it should be done, so that the procedure will be fair to everyone and we will be effective in getting the truth—the facts.

In presenting a review of the Ritter case today, I am seriously handicapped because I am not permitted to quote the transcripts of the hearings held in Salt Lake and Denver. It should be remembered the hearings were held in secret. The chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in a letter to me, dated March 30, 1950, said, in response to a letter which I had sent to him:

> I believe you are in error in stating you discussed with me the question of using, on the floor of the Senate, the record of hearings held before the committee in closed executive session. I do not recall discussing this point with you. You speak of this as a right which is traditional. On the contrary, the precedents appear to support the view that hearings held in closed executive session may not be made public, nor discussed in the Senate in open session. Proceedings before the committee are proceedings of the Senate; the right of the committee to order executive sessions is preserved by the Legislative Reorganization Act, and with respect to such executive sessions, it appears that provisions of Senate rule 38 would be applicable. Certainly, when members of the committee bind themselves by directing that a particular proceeding be in executive session, any Senator not a member of the committee, who is by courtesy granted the right to be present is equally bound. The provisions of subsection 202 (d) of the Legislative Reorganization Act, making committee records available to Members of Congress, is unquestionably a privilege personal to each Member and for his own information alone and carries no inference of the right to disclose any information so obtained.

In what may have been my blissful ignorance of the precedents of the Senate, I thought that ruling of the chairman of the committee was in error. It was difficult for me to believe that public business of this kind should be carried on in secret. Apparently it is impossible for me to use any of the voluminous record made in the secret hearings held in Salt Lake City and Denver.

I have seen those records, and I was present when they were made. As I recall, the records involved something more than 1,200 pages of typewritten transcript. I have examined the record of the Senate to find out what kind of report was made to the Senate on this nomination. It was the usual printed form in which merely the statement was made that the committee reported the nomination with a recommendation favorable to the nominee, or words to that effect. No printed copies of the record of the hearings have been made available, or have ever been sent to Senators. There is nothing in the report of the committee except that the recommendation is favorable and that it is reported to the Senate. It would be difficult for me or for anyone else, particularly for anyone who has not gone into the matter to understand what was done by the committee and what the facts are with respect to the Ritter nomination. It was done in accordance with the rules of the Senate. I am pointing out that it seems to me to be a rather absurd and ridiculous situation for the Senate to be placed in. Even if my memory were sufficiently accurate to enable me to quote evidence which I heard at the hearings I would not be permitted to do so, under the chairman's interpretation of the rule.

Except for the use of one small volume of testimony, I have been required to review the record in the committee rooms, and at the convenience of the committee staff. The committee staff has been very courteous to me. They have stayed at night on two or three occasions, so I could, after hours when I was not engaged in committee work, go there and try to read some of that voluminous record. No review of the record is contained in the brief committee report. That would not be permissible. So all that the Senate has before it is the bare recommendation of the committee that Judge Ritter's nomination be confirmed and what I may say about it, what members of the committee may say about it, and what my distinguished colleague from Utah may say on the subject. The hearing record, as I understand, is available only to committee members and at the committee headquarters. They did make the record available, as I indicated, because I was a Senator from the State which was involved. If there was nothing to conceal why should there be so much secrecy?

The situation being what it is, I am compelled to present the matter to the Senate, to justify my conclusions, my reasons for what I have done, and what I am saying now, as well as my entire conduct in this matter, as best I can and still keep within the rules.

In reviewing this matter, let me remind the Senate that it has been held repeatedly by our courts that no citizen is entitled to public office as a right. Holding public office is a privilege granted by the people in accordance with procedures that have been established by law. Any candidate for an elective or an appointive office voluntarily places his whole life's record before the people for scrutiny. The people have a right to know about his activities, both public and private. If anyone does not think the people do not take advantage of that right, let him run for public office in an election, and he will find out that that is the case. The public does a pretty good job of illuminating the past record of a candidate, even to his secret thoughts. If a citizen does not want to undergo that kind of examination he should never become a candidate in the first place. If he does not want to hold up to the limelight his reputation, or hang it out on the clothesline, so to speak, he should never become a candidate. And office is never forced upon him.

The qualifications required of a Federal judge are of the highest order. He not only must be trained in the law with the ability to apply the law to the facts of each matter that comes before him, fairly and equitably, but he should also be a man of the highest integrity and morality. He should be exemplary in every respect. He should bring respect to the office and should not be handicapped in any way by a previous record inconsistent with the laws and principles he will be called upon to enforce.

He should be loyal to his country and its institutions and to the Constitution of the United States which he will swear to uphold and defend.

He should not be vindictive or dictatorial. Every litigant, every citizen should be treated fairly and justly.

It is not only necessary that he have a record of law observance, that is, of keeping within the law, but he should be in all matters of morals and integrity above reproach and suspicion.

Those are high standards but may I say with justifiable pride that there are many lawyers in the State of Utah in both political parties, who in my opinion can meet the test.

In Utah we have not come to the point where only one man is competent and qualified to be a Federal judge. I believe that is true in every State. In every State of the Union many lawyers could be found who would be qualified to hold such a position. In my State probably several hundred lawyers, out of more than a thousand, could qualify to do a good job as a Federal judge.

In such a situation it is not necessary, in order to get a judge, to appoint anyone whose conduct is justly open to question and reproach. It is not necessary, in determining the qualifications, to find that a person has not been guilty of crime beyond a reasonable doubt. As I have already pointed out, a person should be above reproach and above suspicion. It should not be necessary to appoint merely anyone, unless, of course, there cannot be found a qualified person who is beyond reproach or suspicion. I want to keep that in mind in connection with the position I have had to take in this matter, and the reason I have asked for this investigation, as well as the result to which I have come to with respect to it.

I now proceed to view rather briefly my position in this matter. I do so for the simple reason that this nomination was to come up at 4 or 5 o'clock this evening, as most executive matters come up at the end of the day, and I have not had an opportunity to finish putting into precise language what I wanted to say on this particular point. Therefore what I have to say will be more or less sketchy, but I shall do the best I can under the handicaps which are imposed upon me, particularly because I am unable to use the record, for the record is secret.

I wish now to discuss the qualifications of Mr. Ritter and the charges which have been made against him by Mr. Ivins, and other incidental matters connected with the question of the fitness of Mr. Ritter to be a Federal judge. In doing so, I realize that I must take a different approach from that of referring to the record, because the record is not available to me for this discussion. Neither is it available to other Members of the Senate, as I understand, outside of members of the committee and my distinguished colleague from Utah, who also would be permitted to see it, as I have been permitted to see it.

In his statement, which I have heretofore read in full, Mr. Ivins is very definite and specific in his protest against Mr. Ritter. He is firmly convinced that Mr. Ritter is not a fit candidate for the position. I think he makes that abundantly clear. He charged that in all Mr. Ritter's dealings with landlords in Utah while he, Ritter, was the OPA rent director he treated property owners like criminals and lawbreakers, refusing to recognize their right honestly to differ with him in regard to regulations promulgated for the control of their rental property and opposed every effort to cultivate the friendship and cooperation of the property owners.

Mr. Ivins in his letter of protest to the committee said:

> He was arbitrary, tyrannical, arrogant, and abusive in his treatment of those who sought conference with him, so much so that it required many months of careful work to overcome the bitterness which was engendered by his methods.

Mr. Ivins further charges that Mr. Ritter used deceitful and dishonest methods in attempting to secure the discharge of Glen D. Reese, who was then the rent director for Utah. Mr. Ritter at this time was regional rent director for Utah, Idaho, New Mexico, and other States. Mr. Ivins claims that Mr. Ritter told him he would have to consolidate the office of Utah rent director with that of rent attorney because the funds in his budget would not make it possible for him to maintain both offices. Since Mr. Reese was not an attorney, he would have to release him and appoint an attorney in his place.

Mr. Ivins claims that he took the matter up with Clem Collins, regional OPA director, who was over both Ritter and Ivins, and found from Mr. Collins that Mr. Ritter had told Mr. Collins that Mr. Reese was doing a very poor job in Utah and should be removed from office. Mr. Ivins charges that—

> In this entire matter Mr. Ritter was maliciously dishonest in his dealing with me and Mr. Reese. I do not consider a man who could stoop to such deceitful methods to accomplish his purpose fit to occupy the position to which Mr. Ritter has been nominated. His prejudices are so violent, his respect for others so lacking, his integrity so questionable as to make him unfit for calm objectivity and absolute honesty.

On the other hand, Mr. Ivins also said:

> In fairness, may I add that I know nothing which would cause me to question Mr. Ritter's loyalty to the Constitution or to the Government of the United States. Nor do I question his ability as an attorney.

The papers have carried the stories that Mr. Ivins was a witness at the Salt Lake hearing. Under the rules, I cannot state what Mr. Ivins testified to, but I can say that before going on the witness stand, he affirmed to me that he stood back of everyone of the charges he made in his letter of October 8, 1949, and that he was not backing down in any respect.

Since whatever defense Mr. Ritter would have to Mr. Ivins' statement would be involved in the secret proceedings, I cannot, unfortunately, disclose it. I may say, however, without violating any of the rules, that as far as my own judgment is concerned, I feel the matter has been cleared up to some extent. I may be wrong, but I have tried to investigate the matter carefully, so that I could keep within the rules, and I say that in my judgment there are still some important questions on Mr. Ritter's integrity unanswered with respect to the charges made by Mr. Ivins.

There have been questions asked regarding Judge Ritter's views on the Constitution. One prominent Salt Lake lawyer advised me before the hearing that in a conversation he had with Mr. Ritter, Mr. Ritter said, in substance:

> Don't you know that the Constitution is outmoded and that it does not now work? It was all right perhaps 150 years ago to affect a small population on the Atlantic seaboard, but it is not adaptable at all to the complexities of our present civilization and the Government has got to function. The Constitution won't work—that is the best modern thought today.

This same lawyer testified at the Salt Lake hearing, and that fact was carried in the press of Salt Lake City.

I am not permitted to comment on any defense offered to this statement for reasons that I have already mentioned, and I think no one else is, because the same rule should be binding upon the other Members of the Senate that are binding upon me. If it should be true that Mr. Ritter made the statement, and I am inclined to believe that he did, then it is my judgment that his views on the Constitution are not such as should be required of one who is to uphold the Constitution and interpret its meaning.

In my investigations in Salt Lake City prior to the hearing, I was advised by a prominent Salt Lake attorney that he had had an experience in Judge Ritter's court which could be construed as revealing vindictiveness on the part of the judge.

Mind you, Mr. President, Judge Ritter is now sitting as an interim judge. He is more or less on trial, on his good behavior, because his nomination has not been confirmed, but he has been acting in the meantime under an interim appointment.

I shall not take the time this evening to detail that attorney's statement. It was made by a man who held positions of great responsibility in the State. I believe him to be an honest and a fair man. When he appeared before the judge to represent one of his clients he felt that the judge discriminated against him and showed some hostility toward him because he, the attorney, had not consented to sign the petition endorsing Judge Ritter. The fact that his name had not appeared on the newspaper list of those who endorsed the judge had, in his opinion, some effect upon what the judge did on the particular day in question.

I can realize that probably the judge is human, and he may not have liked what this attorney did, and he may have shown his feeling. At least, the attorney seemed to feel that he did. He told me about this before the hearing, and he later testified. What I am giving is what he said to me in the preliminary investigation. This client felt the attorney was in a position where he was considered unfriendly by the judge, and decided he had better get an attorney who was not in the bad graces of the court. So he discharged his attorney and went to another, and to my recollection the record in the newspaper shows that the second attorney was one of those who did endorse the judge, and the next day the second lawyer got, in substance, the relief for the client which the first lawyer could not get. Whether or not that is evidence of vindictiveness the Senate itself will have to judge. To me it did raise some questions which were not satisfactorily answered.

I can readily understand, because I have been a judge, that people disagree frequently with what judges do, and they may have imaginations which would lead them to believe that a judge was unfriendly to them if he did not speak to them as they thought he should speak, or if he was short in his answers, and all that sort of thing, but under the peculiar circumstances of the situation, as related to me by this attorney, I feel there are some questions on the judge's conduct unanswered, and that is one of the reasons which bring me to the conclusion I am reaching, and am compelled to reach on this particular matter. Again, the rules of the Senate make it impossible for me to comment upon any explanation that may or may not have been made in the secret hearings in Salt Lake City.

Mr. President, there are a number of other matters which I have not been able to state with the precision with which I would have liked to state them, and I must speak extemporaneously on some other phases of the matter.

Because of the attitude I have taken in asking for an investigation I have been seriously criticized by some who do not know the circumstances, and some who do not care what the circumstances are. I have already referred to circumstances which were called to the attention of the committee when I was present, which I believe involved questions of the integrity and the morals of the nominee, things which are alleged to have happened at Albuquerque, N. Mex., while the nominee was regional rent director for the intermountain area, which included the State of New Mexico.

I did as much as I could personally, in the limited time and with the limited means I had, and through the committee staff member who had been assigned to me, to investigate a mass of rumors and a mass of conflicting statements which had come to my attention. I believe I may honestly and fairly say that that general investigation made by us independently, as the facts were related to me, and as some were related to the investigator, showed substantially the following situation:

Statements were made that during the time when Judge Ritter was rent director, he had made more or less frequent visits to the city of Albuquerque to investigate and check up on the enforcement of the OPA rent regulations in the State of New Mexico; that there he met a young lady in the employ of the area rent director, Mr. Taylor; that on several occasions she drove him to the area rent director's home, some 7 to 10 miles out in the country to attend dinners and parties at the area rent director's home; that a more than ordinary friendship developed between them; that he sent her flowers and other gifts; that he was her escort to at least one dance; that he had been to her home rather frequently, had met her parents, and had continued whatever friendship existed until some time not many months before the name of the nominee was sent to the Senate by the President. It was further stated that he had more or less frequently telephoned her after she left the service and went to San Francisco; that they corresponded by letter and by postal card.

From statements made to me or my investigator it was also revealed, without an attempt being made by me to pass any judgment on that particular situation as between Mr. Ritter and this young lady, that there was a lot of gossip in Albuquerque, and particularly among members of the OPA administration in that area over the attentions Mr. Ritter was paying to the young lady; and that Mr. Taylor, an attorney, who was the head of the area rent-control division there, heard of it, and thought it of sufficient importance that he made an investigation. We were told that he went to the young lady in question and warned her against conduct which would bring criticism on the rent administration. As I recall, he told us that he said to the young lady, "I don't care what you do, but I want you to be careful about it." He said that reports had come to him that an affair was happening there.

Other statements were made about the gossip that was going on. I am not going into detail on these matters, but I will say that these rumors, this gossiping, had apparently reached the State of Utah and the ears of Mr. Ritter's wife even before the President had sent the name of the nominee to the Senate for confirmation.

In my judgment what I have said here with respect to the events in New Mexico cannot be successfully denied by Mr. Ritter.

I will say, even though I had heard many rumors which were of a much stronger nature than what I have said here, that in all fairness that not enough evidence to convince anyone of an offense was brought to my attention. Apparently the gossip started because Mr. Ritter, a married man, with a wife and four children, developed a friendship which attracted attention.

I would say that with respect to this matter the investigation was not complete. It was not possible for the committee to get the testimony of the young lady involved. She was in the State of California, and the report came to the committee that she was ill in a hospital. That information was not a part of the secret proceedings, but it had been reported in the newspapers. It appeared that her doctors would not let her come to Salt Lake City in answer to a subpena. I know that the investigator assigned to me tried to see her in the hospital, and, although her temperature was not too high—she had been reported ill with a chronic illness—still he was not permitted to talk to her at all. Since the hearings were concluded it has been reported to me that she left the hospital and is somewhere in southern California in a sanatorium.

So that phase of this investigation is not complete, and still leaves some questions undetermined.

I had hoped we might clear this matter up completely. There were other questions with reference to the sobriety of the nominee which were settled in his favor. I regret very much that we were not able to make a clean job of this particular investigation. I feel that had the committee adopted the policy that it was their duty to investigate, and to use their investigators to run down these matters and check them, since there had been serious objection raised to the confirmation of this nominee, we would have been able to resolve questions—all the questions which were left unanswered.

In connection with this matter I may say that prior to the hearings in Salt Lake City and Denver there were filed with the committee many endorsements, glowing endorsements, of Judge Ritter, and testimonials as to his character and his integrity. Many witnesses were subpenaed, whose names appeared in the newspapers at Salt Lake City, and who testified. But again the rules forbid any comment or discussion of what actually took place in that committee hearing. So I cannot with propriety discuss that. But I should like to say that many of the leading citizens of the State of Utah prior to this hearing did endorse the nominee. So far as they knew he had a very excellent reputation.

From what investigation I have made my own opinion is that the nominee is an able lawyer. He is an able student of the law. He has not had too much experience as a trial lawyer, but he has taught law for many years in the University of Utah. So far as I could find out I do not think anyone can question his ability to understand and interpret the law.

There are questions still in my mind as to whether or not he can be actually fair, whether or not he has a vindictive attitude, whether he is not somewhat arbitrary. But on the question of his competence as a lawyer I think there is not any doubt whatsoever.

The American Bar Association usually makes an investigation, through one of its committees, of nominees to the judiciary, and makes a report. I call attention to a copy of a letter of February 7, 1950, addressed to the Honorable PAT MCCARRAN, Committee on Federal Judiciary, 424 Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C., as follows:

> Re nomination of Willis W. Ritter, of Iowa, to be United States District Judge for the District of Utah—vice Hon. Tillman D. Johnson, retired.

I am sure the clerk who wrote the letter made a mistake. He should have put in "Utah" instead of "Iowa." At any rate, I read the letter as it is:

> DEAR SENATOR MCCARRAN: Receipt is acknowledged of your telegram requesting that any opinion or recommendation that the American Bar Association wishes to express in respect of the nomination of Willis W. Ritter to be United States District Judge for the District of Utah, vice Hon. Tillman D. Johnson, retired, be submitted to your committee.
>
> The Standing Committee on Federal Judiciary of the American Bar Association authorized to act on behalf of that association does not recommend the confirmation of Mr. Ritter to be United States district judge.
>
> Yours sincerely.

Signed "Chairman," but I do not know his name.

I am reading from a copy of the letter.

I may say, Mr. President, in fairness to Mr. Ritter, that the members of the Bar Commission of the State of Utah in their personal capacity, and not as a commission, and in no way speaking in an official manner, personally endorsed Mr. Ritter, as have the many members of bar associations of Weber County, Utah County, Salt Lake County, and other sections of the State.

I pointed out in the beginning of my remarks that if we were to rest the case and the investigations upon endorsements of a general nature which could be obtained, there would be no necessity to maintain the services of the FBI to aid the President in determining whom he should nominate and whom he should not nominate, and investigations would be unnecessary, because usually it is possible to obtain bales of general endorsements, particularly if the position is at all powerful, because in such cases many persons rush in to give general endorsements in order to "get in on the ground floor" with the new official.

Mr. President, I have not pointed out all the things which have come to my attention or all the investigations I have made. Time will not permit.

However, in view of the questions which have been raised and not answered to my satisfaction, and in view of the standards which I think every nominee for a position of this kind should meet, I cannot conscientiously vote for confirmation of the nomination of Judge Ritter. I have arrived at this conclusion after considering all the matters which have been developed in this case.

Judge Ritter is not personally obnoxious to me; I am not asking or urging any Member of the Senate to vote against the nomination on the ground that Judge Ritter is personally obnoxious to me. I say that notwithstanding the fact that it has been suggested to me by several Members of the Senate that if I will take the position that this nominee is personally obnoxious to me, they can obtain many votes in the Senate against confirmation.

Mr. President, I am not asking any Senator to vote against the nominee by reason of his politics, because I do not think politics should be involved in any way in such matters. I have already stated that I have had a lifelong devotion to the principles of obtaining a nonpartisan judiciary. I have worked laboriously in my State to help bring that condition about. So I would resent any suggestion that politics be permitted to enter in any way into the consideration of this matter.

I say again that I am not asking any other Member of the Senate to vote against confirmation of the nominee because of any objection I have made in my personal capacity. In my opinion, every candidate for a public office of any kind or description, and particularly every candidate for an office in the judiciary, should have his qualifications for the particular office to which he is nominated considered on their merits, not on the basis of politics or on the basis of personal likes or dislikes.

Mr. President, I do not have in my heart any feelings against any man. I can not hate people; that would be contrary to all I have been taught and all that I believe in.

Some of my friends in Utah have and some of my friends in Congress—and some who are not my friends have said to me, "If you take this stand against appointments and continue to do what you are doing, it will mean your defeat in the future."

Mr. President, that makes no difference to me. If taking what I believe to be a conscientious stand means my defeat, then I would prefer to be at home in Utah, rather than in Washington in the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators aswered to their names:

Aiken	Hickenlooper	Millikin
Anderson	Hill	Morse
Benton	Hoey	Mundt
Bricker	Holland	Murray
Bridges	Humphrey	Neely
Butler	Hunt	O'Mahoney
Byrd	Ives	Robertson
Cain	Johnson, Tex.	Russell
Chapman	Kefauver	Saltonstall
Connally	Kem	Schoeppel
Cordon	Knowland	Smith, Maine
Darby	Langer	Smith, N. J.
Donnell	Leahy	Sparkman
Douglas	Lehman	Stennis
Ecton	Lodge	Taft
Ellender	Lucas	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	McCarran	Thye
Flanders	McCarthy	Tobey
Frear	McClellan	Tydings
Fulbright	McFarland	Watkins
Gillette	McKellar	Wherry
Green	McMahon	Wiley
Gurney	Magnuson	Williams
Hayden	Malone	Withers
Hendrickson	Martin

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is present.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Willis W. Ritter to be a United States district judge for the district of Utah?

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, I have stated the reasons why, personally, I cannot vote for the confirmation of the nominee. Many Senators now in the Chamber were not present when I was speaking. I am not asking any Senator to vote against Judge Ritter because he may be personally obnoxious to me. He is not personally obnoxious to me, and the nominee should be considered on his merits. I realize that there are sufficient party votes to confirm his nomination, and I do not want to speak on the matter any further. I do not want to consume the time of the Senate with a useless roll call, so I shall not ask for the yeas and nays. I have made the record and I am willing to submit it without any further statement.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I feel, as the Senator from Utah feels, that I am compelled, under the circumstances, to vote against the confirmation of the nomination of Judge Ritter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I desire to state that I too shall vote against confirmation of the nomination of Judge Ritter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

The nomination was confirmed.

THE EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF WASHINGTON

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the nominations of members of the board of directors of the Export-Import Bank of Washington.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I do not like to delay any longer the work of the Senate. However, in behalf of the junior Senator from Oregon, I should like to ask that the nominations in the Export-Import Bank be passed over for today, in order that we may see what can be done about them on tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nominations will be passed over.

THE UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James G. Norman, to be lieutenant, junior grade, in the Coast Guard.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations in the Coast and Geodetic Survey are confirmed en bloc.

POSTMASTERS

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Post Office Department.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations in the Post Office Department are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the nominations on the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills and joint resolutions of the Senate:

S. 2348. An act to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States;

S. 3550. An act to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter), and rice and rice products;

S. J. Res. 170. Joint resolution to provide for the transfer of the paintings "The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone" and "The Chasm of the Colorado" from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior; and

S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution transferring the plaster cast of the Statue of George Washington from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3571) to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 88) to print additional copies of the report of the Committee on the Judiciary on the immigration and naturalization systems of the United States.

AMENDMENT OF MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1949

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3809) to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not know how many more speeches will be made on the unfinished business. It is the sincere hope of the Senator from Illinois, and I think it is the hope of the people of the country, that we act on the pending bill as fast as we possibly can. I understand that the Senator from Iowa intends to address the Senate, and perhaps the Senator from Washington.

Mr. WHERRY. Perhaps two or three other Senators.

Mr. LUCAS. Perhaps two or three other Senators. I should like to conclude the consideration of the unfinished business this evening. I do not think we can do so. Therefore I shall not make a unanimous-consent request. I wanted to see whether we could complete consideration of the bill by 7 o'clock. Apparently we cannot do so.

Mr. WHERRY. I wonder if the distinguished majority leader would propose a unanimous-consent agreement that we vote tomorrow at 3 o'clock, with the time between 12 and 3 o'clock to be divided equally between the opponents and the proponents.

I believe all speeches can be made within that time. If so, it would settle once and for all the time at which we would vote on the pending measure. I believe it would be very helpful to do so, if the distinguished majority leader feels so inclined. So far as I know, no amendments have been submitted. Therefore, we would have simply the vote on the bill. If there is objection to a vote at 3 o'clock, I should be willing to advance the time so that we may have an earlier vote, if it is agreeable to everyone on this side of the aisle, as I believe it would be.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to make it 2 o'clock, if we are to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection to the majority leader's making that request. I have no objection to taking the vote at 2 o'clock.

Mr. LUCAS. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois requests that at 2 o'clock on tomorrow the Senate proceed, without further debate, to vote on the pending bill, S. 3809. Is there objection?

Mr. LUCAS. And on any and all amendments offered thereto.

The VICE PRESIDENT. And on any and all amendments. Also that all amendments to be offered shall be germane.

Mr. MUNDT. Reserving the right to object, I wonder whether the Senator from Illinois would put into the unanimous-consent request the same provision that I asked for on the last occasion, namely, permitting 5 minutes' debate for each side on each amendment. In other words, we should have an explanation of an amendment that is offered to the bill.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not object to the modification. Of course there are no amendments pending at the present time, as I understand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that at 2 o'clock p. m. tomorrow the Senate shall vote on the bill, S. 3809, and all amendments thereto; that all amendments shall be germane to the issue; and that on all amendments pending at 2 o'clock there shall be 5 minutes' debate on each side, the time to be equally divided and to be controlled by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY]. The Chair understands that the time from 12 to 2 o'clock is also to be equally divided.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. The Vice President is correct. I should like to include in the request any amendment or motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Would the request include reference to amendments offered after the hour of 2 o'clock arrives?

Mr. LUCAS. No amendment could be offered after 2 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. They could be offered but not debated, unless there was an agreement to that effect.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. HOLLAND. I should like to ask the majority leader if it is his intention to hold a session on Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. It is the intention of the Senator from Illinois to hold a session on Monday. I do not know at this time what we shall take up on Monday. I am not able to tell the Senate today, but I may be able to do so tomorrow. We have one or two bills which we can dispose of tomorrow. The primary purpose of holding a session on Monday would be to try to move along with the business of the Senate. We should try to move along as rapidly as possible. It is my hope that committees will continue to function over the week end. I am especially referring to the Committee on Appropriations. If we could get the appropriation bill on the floor of the Senate we might be able to adjourn by July 31, assuming that world conditions permit. It is my understanding that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] intends to hold hearings on Monday and Tuesday on the tax bill if the bill comes over to us from the House. So that we are laboring to wind up the business of the Senate as fast as we can.

Mr. HOLLAND. The Senator from Florida is trying to cooperate in that respect. He has been conducting hearings all day. My purpose in asking the question was to see whether we could have the vote on the mutual defense bill after the first quorum call on Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. I cannot wait that long. We have been debating this bill a long time. A world crisis exists. This is an important measure from the standpoint of the psychological effect its passage would have on our friends and also on the aggressors.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that at 2 o'clock p. m. on tomorrow the Senate proceed to vote upon the pending bill and all amendments thereto, that the time between 12 o'clock and 2 o'clock be equally divided, to be controlled by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

Mr. WHERRY. I do not object to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That all amendments shall be germane to the bill.

Mr. WILEY. The Vice President left out motions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. I will put them in.

Mr. LUCAS. I shall read the unanimous-consent agreement which I propose, so that there will be no question about it:

Ordered, That on the calendar day of Friday, June 30, 1950, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., the Senate proceed to vote, except as hereinafter provided, on any amendment or motion that may be pending or that may be offered to the bill (S. 3809) to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949, and upon the final passage of the said bill: Provided, (1) That no vote on any amendment or motion shall be had prior to said hour of 2 o'clock p. m.; (2) that no amendment that is not germane to the subject matter of the said bill shall be in order; and (3) that after said hour of 2 o'clock p. m. debate on any amendment or motion shall be limited to not exceeding 10 minutes, to be equally divided between the mover thereof and the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Ordered further, That the time between 12 o'clock noon and 2 o'clock p. m. on said day be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the bill and controlled, respectively, by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN REAL PROPERTY BY DEPARTMENTS OF ARMY, NAVY, AND AIR FORCE—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interest therein, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interest therein, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 305. The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to convey to the Carolina-Virginia Coastal Highway Corporation, a municipal corporation created under the laws of the State of North Carolina, or to the State of North Carolina, a perpetual easement one hundred feet wide, in, over, and across a tract of land comprising one hundred and seventy-four acres, which includes all land lying between the Atlantic Ocean and Currituck Sound for a distance of approximately three thousand three hundred feet north and south along the coast, referred to and known as target site number twelve and located approximately one mile north of Duck, North Carolina, and to accept in exchange therefor from Ray T. Adams, the conveyance of a leasehold interest in one hundred seventy-four acres of land which is a part of a larger parcel of land located at Corolla, North Carolina, and owned by the said Ray T. Adams, at such location upon said larger parcel of land and under such terms and conditions as may be determined and agreed upon by the Secretary of the Navy and the said Ray T. Adams: Provided, That the said Ray T. Adams shall erect, or shall have erected, at the option of the Secretary of the Navy, adequate substitute facilities without cost to the United States on such leasehold site as may be determined and approved by the Secretary of the Navy."

And the Senate agree to the same.

HARRY F. BYRD,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
VIRGIL M. CHAPMAN,
LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

CARL VINSON,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the conference report? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, in the confusion I was not able to hear what the request was. Will the Senator please state what is involved in the report?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. President, House bill 5368 passed the House during the last session of the Congress. It provides for the conveyance by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force, of certain interests in land. It is really an omnibus easement bill. Inasmuch as it came to the Senate committee during the closing days of the session, we postponed consideration of it until this session of Congress, in order that we might hold thorough and careful hearings on all the conveyances. There were certain amendments agreed to. One difference between the two Houses especially we have agreed on, and the conference report has the unanimous recommendation of the conferees.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

COMPOSITION OF ARMY AND AIR FORCE—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 8, 10, 12, 16, 21, 22, and 24.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 11, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 33 and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "Army (exclusive of the numbers authorized by law for the Army Nurse Corps, the Women's Medical Specialist Corps, professors of the United States Military Academy, and any numbers authorized by special provisions of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"(b) Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, and subject to the limitations imposed by sections 202 and 203 of this Act, the Air Force of the United States shall have an authorized strength of not to exceed seventy United States Air Force groups and such separate United States Air Force squadrons, reserve groups, and supporting and auxiliary United States Air Force and reserve units as may be required."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "twenty-seven thousand five hundred, exclusive of any numbers authorized by special provision of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following: "(1)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 25: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "guided missiles, and (3)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 34: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 303. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"(b) Moneys appropriated to the Departments of the Army, Navy, or Air Force for procurement of technical military equipment and supplies, the construction of public works, and for research and development, including moneys appropriated to the Department of the Navy for the procurement, construction, and research and development of guided missiles, which are hereby authorized for the Department of the Navy, shall remain available until expended unless otherwise provided in the appropriation Act concerned."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"LIMITATION OF AUTHORITY

"SEC. 304. Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to authorize the Department of Defense to expend any money appropriated pursuant to authority conferred by this act for the design or development of any prototype aircraft intended primarily for commercial use."

And the Senate agree to the same.

VIRGIL M. CHAPMAN,
HARRY FLOOD BYRD,
LYNDON B. JOHNSON,
CHAN GURNEY,
LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

CARL VINSON,
OVERTON BROOKS,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE C. ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator be kind enough to state what are the points which have been resolved in the conference?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senate conferees I desire to make a statement on this conference report in order that the Senate may have a clear expression of the views of the conferees.

H. R. 1437 is a bill to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes. This bill has the official title of "The Army and Air Force Authorization Act of 1949," but it is popularly referred to as the "70 air group" bill.

With the final adoption of this conference report and its approval by the President, the Air Force will have, for the first time, its own statutory authorization as to its size and composition, and also for its procurement program. It is important that these matters be settled definitely by the enactment of a law instead of leaving the Air Force, as is now the case, to operate by virtue of the residue of authority transferred to it from the Army under the provisions of the Unification Act.

For the most part, the Senate amendments were accepted by the conferees of the House of Representatives, and the Senate conferees are satisfied that the Senate's position has been in large measure reasonably and satisfactorily maintained.

There is one important section, however, in which the Senate conferees agreed to a modification of the original position of the Senate. This I shall attempt to explain. The House bill provided for an authorization of 70 air groups, 22 air squadrons, and 61 Air Reserve groups. The Senate eliminated from its original bill that specific authorization. We took the position that there was no definition of "group" in the House bill, and that the language had no definite meaning. We contended that "group" is a variable term and that, in view of authority conferred upon the Secretary of the Air Force by another section of the bill, the House language, authorizing 70 air groups, 22 air squadrons, and 61 Air Reserve groups, would constitute a limitation on the future development and administration of the Air Force. It was indisputable that "air group" is an elastic term, susceptible of changes from time to time. For example, a group might consist of 18 B–36 long-range bombers today, and next week it might contain 30 such bombers. When the Senate passed its bill last year, the report stated, in substance, that this body believed it desirable to establish a planning base of 70 groups for the Air Force. The Senate bill authorized plans, personnel, and airframe tons on the basis of a 70-air-group plan, but did not write into the bill the definite language, "70 air groups."

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Could the Senator define for us what is an air group, so that we may know what the term "70 air groups" means?

Mr. CHAPMAN. That is what the Senator from Kentucky is attempting to do now.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CHAPMAN. In stating the position of the Senate conferees that we did not accept the House language, because it contained no definition, and it was impossible to know exactly what an "air group" meant, "air group" being a variable term which may change from time to time, I expressed the view of the Senate conferees that the original House bill provided what might be called a rubber yardstick for measuring the size of an air group. The conference report fixes a definite ceiling on Air Force strength.

We attempted to make it clear that what was proposed was intended for planning purposes only, and that such groups could not be organized unless sufficient funds were appropriated for that purpose.

The Senate conferees, in bringing in this report, agreed to the use of the expression "70 air groups" in the law. It was used as a definite ceiling on the size of the Air Force. The House version of the bill had been drafted to authorize 70 air groups. The conferees agreed to and wrote into this report a provision that the Air Force is authorized to maintain not in excess of 70 air groups, and that that authority shall be subject to the limitations on personnel and tonnage contained in other sections of the bill.

It is the desire of the conferees to make it clear to the Senate that in agreeing to the language in the conference report, we regard this figure of 70 air groups solely as a planning base for the Air Force, and that it is not contemplated that an Air Force of that size will be developed unless the world situation changes drastically or our economic situation becomes such as to justify us in appropriating sufficient funds for such an Air Force without jeopardizing our national economy. The authorization contained in this bill for Air Force personnel for serviceable aircraft and for airframe tons constitutes a ceiling on future Air Force expansion that cannot be exceeded except by an authorization enacted by the Congress.

A further safeguard is the amount of funds the Congress appropriates for that purpose.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator was undertaking to give us the definition of an air group. I note in the statement of the managers on the part of the House on page 5 certain language. After telling what the House bill authorized and what the Senate amendment did, namely, to delete certain provisions of the House bill, the statement of the managers is:

> The conference agreement provides that the Air Force of the United States shall have an authorized strength of not to exceed 70 Regular Air Force groups and such separate Regular and Reserve squadrons and units and Reserve groups as may be required.

The question I should like to address to the Senator, and do so address, is this: Although this sentence in the statement of the managers is quite clear, to the effect that the authorized strength shall not exceed 70 Regular Air Force groups. I fail to find, in the statement of the managers, at any rate, any definition of what a Regular Air Force group is, so, although I know that the maximum number that is authorized by the conference agreement is 70, I thus far am unable to tell—70 what? That is to say, in other words, what is a Regular Air Force group and where is it defined?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. President, because of the variableness of a group, which means a group of planes that can be commanded by one officer; because of the fact that a group might consist of, as I said before, 18 B–36 long-range bombers today, and next week or next month the size of that group in the organization of the Air Force might change to 30 of the same type of bombers, the House placed in its bill only one limitation. That was "70 Regular Air Force groups, 22 Air Force squadrons, and 61 Air Force Reserve groups." The conferees wrote a more definite and rigid ceiling in this report, authorizing an Air Force not to exceed 70 air groups. Recognizing that that "group" is an uncertain, variable term, we placed in the bill the definite limitation of the authorized personnel and the authorized serviceable aircraft or the airframe tons.

The total regular personnel authorized is 502,000. That figure was not in conference. Of that number, 27,500 may be Regular officers and 4,800 warrant officers.

As to the aircraft ceiling, we limited it to 24,000 serviceable aircraft, or 225,000 airframe tons. That leaves it to those in control of the organization of the Air Force to strive for this goal of 70 air groups, but they will be bound by that limitation as to the number of men and the serviceable aircraft or the airframe tons.

We wish to make our position clear. As I have already stated on behalf of the conferees, this is merely a basis for planning, and we are not expecting immediate appropriations for the full number of groups, aircraft, or men authorized by the conference report. Your conferees are unanimous in recommending that this conference report be adopted. The enactment of this bill into law will record another important forward step in America's preparedness program for the preservation of peace.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like first to thank and congratulate my able friend on the Armed Services Committee, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN] for the splendid manner in which he has handled this bill, both as a member of the subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, and later as the chief Senate conferee on the part of the Senate conferees in negotiating and working out differences with the House conferees to reconcile the two viewpoints. I think the Senator from Kentucky has maintained admirably the integrity of the Senate's position. In doing so I know he has followed the general policy which applies to the Navy, in which we have destroyers, submarines, cruisers, and battleships, as we have fighters, medium bombers, and big bombers in the Air Force. We have been able to limit the Navy only by limiting the tonnage of the Navy in the over-all composition bill. We have always had a limitation on the seamen in the Navy and the officers in the Navy too.

So that with those two things in the hands of Congress, to wit, the amount of tonnage and the number of personnel, there has quite often been a certain degree of latitude, of flexibility given as to whether the tonnage shall go into destroyers or cruisers or battleships.

I say that the Senator from Kentucky has admirably adopted that same policy, so that with tonnage fixed for the 70 air groups, they can have 50 with all the tonnage, or they can have 70 with all the tonnage, but they cannot have more than the tonnage fixed by the Senate or the House version. They can have 50 groups with so many officers and men. They can have 70 groups with the same number of officers and men. But they cannot go above the two ceilings.

I am indebted to the Senator from Kentucky, and I think we are all indebted to him, for the splendid management he has given to this measure from its very inception down to the present time, and I warmly congratulate him, while acceding to certain House positions on the bill, for not surrendering the integrity of the Senate version all the way along the line, which was severely attacked in the conference. I think it is a real achievement. I believe that what we have is due to the stick-to-itiveness on the part of the Senator from Kentucky in maintaining the position of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

NOMINATIONS TO BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE EXPORT-IMPORT BANK

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield to me for a brief comment?

Mr. GILLETTE. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, so that there may be no misunderstanding about the situation, I desire to say that it is my understanding that while I stepped out this afternoon when nominations on the Executive Calendar were before the Senate, the majority leader called up the names of the nominees to the Export-Import Bank. I assume I did not make clear to the majority leader yesterday, as I thought I had made clear, that I was objecting to any action on those nominees in the immediate future, until the Banking and Currency Committee could hold some hearings in regard to certain objections which I presently have and which will become permanent objections unless the nominees can clear up the objections.

I want the RECORD to show that I have talked to certain members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, including the chairman of that committee. The facts are that the committee never even had a committee meeting on these nominees. The nominations were reported to the Senate by way of a so-called informal poll because, as the chairman of the committee said, he was not aware that any question was being raised in regard to any of them. He said, "If I had known that any question was being raised we would not have sent the names to the floor of the Senate."

I wish to advise the Senator, without using his name, because he will have to speak for himself, that a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, after discussing with me certain matters connected with the Export-Import Bank, told me that he would advise the committee to withdraw his approval of reporting the nominations to the Senate. I am informed that he has so advised the committee.

I have talked to other Members of the Senate, who assure me that in their opinion the allegations which have been presented to me should be considered by the committee before action is taken on these nominations.

As I said in my speech the other day, I wish to be exceedingly fair to the nominees themselves. I happen to believe that the floor of the Senate in this particular instance is not the first forum, at least, in which this matter should be discussed. I should prefer, in order to lean over backward in making certain that complete fairness and impartiality are applied, to discuss this matter in executive session of the committee. The chairman of the committee assured me that upon his return from South Carolina, so far as he was concerned, he would be very glad to go into this matter with me. Other members of the committee—I do not speak for the committee, but at least I speak for four or five members of the committee whom I have consulted—have told me that they think this matter should be gone into. In my opinion it should be gone into in executive session.

So, Mr. President, I hope that request will not be made tomorrow to consider these nominations, because if we have to pass on these nominations at that time on the floor of the Senate, I shall not hesitate to discuss them, and I shall have to do so at some length.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that no request was made by a Senator to have the nominations considered. The Senate was in executive session today, primarily for the purpose of considering the nomination of Judge Ritter. During executive session, the nominations to which the Senator from Oregon has referred, were called; but they went over.

Mr. MORSE. Then I apologize for assuming that the nominations were called at the request of some Senator.

Mr. President, under the circumstances I shall close my remarks by saying that I hope the Senator from Illinois will understand my reason for making this statement. I have made it for the reason that, having been advised that the nominations were called up, I wish to work out a gentlemen's understanding that the nominations to the Board of Directors of the Export-Import Bank will not be called up until I have a chance to appear before the Banking and Currency Committee to discuss—in executive session, I hope—some matters which I think should be discussed before the nominations are brought up on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GILLETTE. I yield, although I hope other Senators will not ask me to yield, because I am anxious to proceed with my remarks.

Mr. LUCAS. I shall be very brief.

Mr. President, I wish to express my thanks to the Vice President for the statement he has made.

When these nominations were called during the executive session, I think I was in conversation with some other Senator at the time.

I remember distinctly the conversation I had with the Senator from Oregon. He can rest assured that these nominations will not come up until he wishes them to come up.

Furthermore, Mr. President, I have been informed that the distinguished chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee is perfectly willing to hold hearings upon these nominations. I am sure that when he returns, the two Senators can get together, and probably can have the nominations returned to the committee, where hearings can be held.

Certainly I do not wish to push through any nomination during the call of the Executive Calendar, unless consideration of the nomination is agreeable to all Senators.

Let me add that when I give my word to any Senator, I think he can depend upon it.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, it was not a question of depending on the Senator's word. I simply felt that I had not made my position clear. I was informed that the nominations came up during the executive session today; that is why I made the statement I have just made.

AMENDMENT OF MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1949

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, it is my desire to discuss—somewhat briefly, I hope—the unfinished business, Senate bill 3809.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield, to permit me to make a statement for about 2 minutes and to make insertions in the RECORD?

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, I dislike very much to yield for a statement. However, I am willing to yield for an insertion in the RECORD.

Mr. MALONE. I should like to make insertions in the RECORD, and also a very short explanation.

Mr. GILLETTE. Very well; I yield.

THE FREE-TRADE PROGRAM—COPPER

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, free trade is the announced general program of the administration.

House Joint Resolution 494 has been referred to the Senate Finance Committee and it is extremely important that opportunity be had for the complete story to be put before the committee before they act on this important matter.

I intend to not only oppose the extension before the committee and present supporting data—but if it does reach the floor the junior Senator from Nevada intends to debate the subject thoroughly and at length.

The general procedure of the State Department is to use one group against another in reaching its objective of averaging the living standards of the nations of the world, including our own.

EVERY AGREEMENT USED

The pressure to extend the free trade on copper, Mr. President, is tremendous and coming from strange places. The friendship of the South American countries is agreed to be at stake. Mr. President, we have protected them for 127 years under the Monroe Doctrine—and only an economically strong America can do the job.

The plan as advanced at Annecy, France—and it is planned to further the program at Torquay, England, in September of this year—is to include in the further free-trade program approximately 2,500 or 3,000 products of this country. The present Free Trade Act extension on copper is a definite part of the free-trade program.

COPPER A PART OF THE PROGRAM

Mr. President, that particular extension is simply a part of the program. The American products directly affected include textiles, petroleum, lumber, and wood products, minerals, precision instruments, clocks and watches, bicycles, gloves, shoes and other leather goods, chemical products, and hundreds of additional products making up the employment and taxable structure and involving the national safety of this country. It happens that the current House Joint Resolution No. 494 would extend the free trade on copper, which is only one of the thousands of products affected by the program of the administration.

KEPT IN BUSINESS BY TARIFF

The argument is made that we do not produce enough copper for our own use, and that therefore there must be no tariff or import fee on importations of copper.

Mr. President, the fact that we are producing only a part of the total amount of the thousands of products making up the economic structure of this country comes about by reason of the long-standing policy in regard to tariff or import-fee protection of such products. In the case of only a few of these products do we produce all we need.

Any such reduction of tariffs or import fees below the differential of production costs due to the difference between the wage standard of this Nation and the wage standards of competitive nations, is dangerous to the economic structure of the United States.

VENTURE CAPITAL DISCOURAGED

Venture capital cannot be secured for investment in industries which are threatened with a reduction of such protection.

The result is that the administration is continually pressing for a reorganization of the RFC in order to permit the RFC to furnish Government funds to replace the venture capital and the investments which are scared out by the threatened free trade.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have a copy of my testimony before the Senate Finance Committee on August 5, 1949, inserted at this point in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IMPORT DUTY ON VIRGIN COPPER AND METAL SCRAP

(Statement of Hon. GEORGE W. MALONE, United States Senator from the State of Nevada)

Senator MALONE. Mr. Chairman, in my previous statement before your committee on February 24, 1949, I said at that time that whenever the world price of copper dropped below the cost of domestic production—that the independent copper mines in our country would close—and production would generally be curtailed causing unemployment and loss of taxable property.

The amendment to the scrap-metal bill would restore the copper tariff that was repealed or the time of such repeal extended on March 18, 1949. Of course, the State Department has reduced the 4-cent-per-pound tariff or import fee to 2 cents per pound under the authority granted them under the 1934 Trade Agreements Act—so it would only be a token protection now.

GENERAL PROBLEMS

First, the problem is general. It is unfortunate that copper has been singled out because practically all the strategic and critical minerals produced in this country, including practically all other products—I mention briefly livestock, sugar, lumber, textiles, precision instruments, and many other industries—and the workers in those industries are affected in exactly the same manner.

The wage-standard of living in these industries has been raised above the world average through protection, and as a result the standard of living in such industries and the standard of living of the workingmen of America are far above the standard enjoyed in any other country.

Therefore, there are only a very few industries, and those only temporary, in my opinion, in which the workingmen of America can compete with the lower wage-living standard countries of Asia, Europe, Africa, and South America in production.

First, it was generally considered that with our know-how and our up-to-date machinery, we could still compete with foreign cheap labor; that, however, is no longer true, because our machinery and assembly line methods, together with our trained superintendents and foremen are all available to their countries.

Money is fluid. It can and does go anywhere. Capital investment follows wherever the economic adjustment places the industry. When a tariff is removed or adjusted or in some manner the economics of the industry is changed and made more economically feasible in another country than it is here, it immediately locates there. That is simply business. No one is to blame but ourselves.

When we continually tinker with the tariff or import fee, which establishes the floor under wages for the workingmen of America, it is simply to give notice to the public that capital investment is no longer safe in that field, therefore, experience shows that no further capital investment will be attracted to that industry; simply because of the fear that when the investment had been made that Congress or the State Department would again remove the differential in cost of production which is represented by the tariff or import fee.

I am not discussing a high tariff or low tariff. I am referring to that differential in cost of production between producing an article in this country and in the low-wage foreign country, due mostly to the wages paid and the standard of living enjoyed by the workingmen of the competitive countries, as against the standard enjoyed in this country.

Mr. Chairman, the flexible import fee which I introduced in 1948 and again in 1949—and which I intend to offer this year as a substitute for the 1934 Trade Agreements Act when that act comes before the Senate for the 3-year proposed extension, simply is based on "fair and reasonable" competition. The "fair and reasonable" competition can easily be determined from the declared customs value and from the offered sale price.

It will take into account the manipulation of currency by the foreign nation for trade advantage—and also the block buying and selling that some foreign nations now are practicing—where they undersell in this country for dollars and then sell the dollars at a higher price in another country which in many cases makes up for more than the loss in the first instance. All of the foreign nations manipulations are rather complicated, but the flexible import fee would automatically take all of such intrigue into account. I will go into it at the proper time on the Senate floor.

My second point is that it is practically impossible to get new capital investment into any industry where the labor needs such protection when Congress is continually fiddling with the amount of such protection, on no principle whatever except whatever influence and whatever immediate shotgun opinion can be brought before the committee.

Capital is invested only where it has a reasonable chance for success and where there is no reasonable protection against the low-cost foreign labor—then little new capital investments will be found.

Mr. Chairman, those are my two main points in this particular instance.

I understand that since the Congress removed the tariff on copper early in 1947 for 2 years, and extended it again for 1 year in 1949, that the State Department has reduced the tariff to 2 cents through a trade agreement with Chile. The 4-cent of production—the differential of cost, import fee or tariff or excise tax, whatever you choose to call it, has been reduced to 2 cents through the exercise of the 1934 Trade Agreements Act provisions.

The 2 cents of course is no protection at all. The floor under wages has been lowered so there is no recourse but the resulting unemployment and loss of taxable property.

It is a parallel case of the tungsten import fee—we had a 50 cents a pound tariff on contained tungsten for many years. Just prior to the war we were producing about 45 percent of the tungsten used in this country. Such import fee does not stop imports. What it does is bring them in on our level of costs and keeps our own people working on their standard of living.

So we were importing the required 55 percent. When they hit Pearl Harbor and cut off the Burma and China (the world supply) shipments—we raised the domestic price slightly and within about 6 months we were practically self-sufficient in the production of that metal.

I was special consultant to the Senate Military Affairs Committee during the war—and very familiar with the operation—I was not in the Senate. The State Department lowered the tariff from 50 cents to 38 cents per pound of contained tungsten and almost immediately shut down every tungsten mine in America except three. Two of the remaining mines closed down very soon. There is one running now and it will probably be closed in a very short time. They are running on developed ore and will quit when it has been worked out.

I mention this as an illustration of interfering with that differential of cost due to the difference in the wage standard of living, without proper information. A State Department official with whom I was discussing it informally said, "We didn't lower it very much. We only lowered it to 38 cents, lowered it 12 cents."

I said, "Yes, but you can take a blow torch and cut 2 feet off the Potomac River bridge. You wouldn't cut much off it but you wouldn't have a bridge left either—and you couldn't swim the river because it would block the channel."

That is what we have done to tungsten, and that is what you are doing to copper. All the independent copper mines are now closing because of removal of the 4-cent tariff, and the big operations are curtailing their work.

Inexperienced people juggling the tariff or import fees is just like a blacksmith working on a Swiss watch. This flexible import-fee legislation which I shall again propose would turn the Tariff Commission into a foreign trade authority and give them the same latitude in that field that we give the Interstate Commerce Commission in fixing the freight rates.

Mr. Chairman, if I might be allowed to round out this testimony with any facts I think might be helpful to the committee, I think that completes my statement. If there are any questions, I would be very glad to answer them.

The CHAIRMAN. You may round out the statement if you wish to submit additional facts.

Senator MALONE. Mr. Chairman, I am including a table showing the world production, domestic production, the United States percent of world production, imports into the United States, United States exports, and the domestic consumption.

Amounts in short tons

	World production	Domestic mine production	United States percent of world production	Imports	Exports	Consumption
1940	3,000,000	878,086	30	491,342	427,650	1,008,785
1941	3,000,000	958,149	32	735,545	158,893	1,641,550
1942	3,100,000	1,080,061	35	764,393	210,518	1,678,091
1943	3,038,000	1,090,818	36	716,596	294,459	1,502,000
1944	2,843,000	972,549	34	785,211	237,515	1,504,000
1945	2,425,000	772,894	32	853,196	132,555	1,415,000
1946	2,023,000	608,737	30	393,275	97,475	1,391,000
1947 estimate	2,458,000	846,400	35	413,890	196,999	1,290,000
1948 estimate	2,400,000	834,813	35	466,112	146,000	1,202,000
1949	----------	[1] 385,655	----------	[1] 303,898	[1] 72,665	[2] 316,661

[1] 6 months.
[2] First quarter.

It will be noted that imports were not restricted or in any way retarded through the 4 cents per pound tariff which prevailed up to and including the year 1947—until removed by congressional act—but the 4-cent tariff representing the "floor under wages"—the differential of the cost of production in this country and where the competition is located, due mostly to the difference in the wage-living standards.

WAGE COMPARISONS

The following wage comparisons for skilled and semiskilled labor prevailing in several of the foreign nations and in the United States are self-explanatory.

Country	Group	Rate	Date
Sweden	All industrial groups—men	68.5 cents per hour	November 1948.
Canada	Manufacturing	95.9 cents per hour	December 1948.
Great Britain	Including Scotland. Average of 16 major industries—men.	59 cents per hour	October 1948.
Australia	All industrial groups except shipping and agriculture.	56 cents per hour	March 1948.
New Zealand	Skilled labor	72 cents per hour	September 1948.
Chile	Average industries	30 cents per hour	December 1948.
China (Shanghai)	Textiles, printing, machine making	5.26 cents per hour	August 1948.
India	General engineering	13 cents per hour	1946.
Iran (Tehran)	Plumber. Wage rates vary greatly less than a dollar for unskilled workers up to $5 a day for highly skilled workers. Hours of work not available.	$1.50–$2 per day	September 1948.

Country	Group	Rate	Date
Spain	Skilled single men	23 cents per hour	1947.
	Skilled married men with 3 children	40–45 cents per hour
Burma	Information not available
Iraq	do
United States	Copper mines	$1.40 per hour	1947–48.

PREVAILING TARIFFS ON COPPER AND BRASS PRODUCTS

There is a tariff on brass sheets, strips, rods, and plates of 4 cents per pound.

The tariff on the lipsticks which are often made of brass is 20 percent ad valorem.

COPPER ORE AND FABRICATED GOODS TARIFFS

Copper acetate and subacetate (verdigris): Free plus 4 cents a pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper concentrates—for smelting or refining and export: Free.

Copper concentrates—product of Cuba: Free.

Copper concentrates (taxable): Free plus 4 cents a pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper: Cuprous oxide: 35 percent ad valorem 3 cents per pound (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper in rolls, sheets, or rods: 2½ cents per pound plus 4 cents per pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper ore and concentrates—product of Philippine Islands: Free.

Copper ore—for smelting, or refining and export: Free.

Copper ore (taxable): 4 cents per pound on copper content.

Copper ore—product of Cuba: Free.

Copper, other than ore and concentrates—product of Philippine Islands: Free.

Copper oxides, not elsewhere specified: 25 percent ad valorem plus 3 cents per pound (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper, refined, in ingots, plates, or bars—for smelting or refining and exports: Free.

Copper, refined in ingots, plates, or bars (taxable): Free plus 4 cents per pound (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper sulfate (blue vitriol): Free plus 4 cents per pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper tubes, brazed: 11 cents per pound plus 4 cents per pound (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper tubes and tubing, seamless: 7 cents per pound plus 4 cents per pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper: unrefined black, blister, and converter, in pigs, or converter bars—for smelting or refining and export—free.

Copper: unrefined black, blister, and converter, in pigs, or converter bars, free for United States Government—free.

Copper; unrefined black, blister, and converter, in pigs, or converter bars (taxable), free plus 4 cents per pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Copper wire, not specially provided for: 25 percent plus 4 cents per pound on copper content (Internal Revenue Code).

Mr. Chairman, it will be noted that the brass manufacturers, the manufacturers of the fabricated articles made from the raw brass and copper are all supported by a substantial tariff or import fee. (The copper content of brass averages approximately 70 percent.)

The raw material—the copper which is the basic material used in the manufacture of such fabricated articles and products is on the free list—there is no floor under wages—so the workingmen in the industry must meet the foreign wages plus the freight to keep their jobs.

Mr. Chairman, copper is high on the list of strategic minerals and materials necessary in an emergency; it is high on the list for stockpiling purposes. National security is the paramount consideration, and it is well known and recognized that it is necessary to have a healthy going concern copper-mining industry in addition to a substantial stockpile to meet a real emergency.

The employment and taxable property furnished by this important industry is important to our national economy.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any questions for Senator MALONE?

Senator MILLIKIN. I might invite the Senator's attention to the fact that it it is our trade agreement with Chile that rules the copper tariff, the 2-cent tariff, to which the Senator referred. The trade agreement with Chile was made at the conference in Geneva in 1947. That agreement, happily, contains an escape clause. If the President is of a mind to do so, if we should restore the tariff to 2 cents, the President would have it within his power to retore it to 4 cents.

Senator MALONE. I might say to the Senator from Colorado I appreciate the question, but there is no matter of record that I can find where the President has used the escape clause to restore anything that looks reasonable.

Senator MILLIKIN. I was not putting that out as an assurance, Senator. I was putting it out as a possibility.

Senator MALONE. I would take the entire matter of adjusting tariffs and import fees out of the President's hands, out of the State Department's field—and away from Congress—put it under the Tariff Commission—turned into a foreign trade authority—to be adjusted under the flexible import fee principle laid down by Congress—just as freight rates are adjusted under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

We have transferred the copper jobs from the independent copper mines of America to Chile, South America, and Africa. We all know with $2 and $2.50 labor in Chile, they can produce copper much cheaper than we can here. They can add the freight to it and still the wages must be substantially lowered in this country to meet the low-wage living standard foreign competition.

I say again, if we could put the emphasis where it belongs, which I shall do on the floor of the Senate when the 1934 trade agreements come before us for the 3-year extension, we will understand that what we are doing is lowering the floor under wages—and destroying an important source of employment and taxable property.

What we do when we remove the import fee on copper or any other mineral, when we lower it on textiles, or precision instruments or any other industry, is to say to the workingmen of America that we are lowering the floor under wages.

When we lower the floor under wages, the workingmen must meet the labor in Chile, on copper for example, at $2.50 per day with the freight to America added and our people must work for the resulting wage or become unemployed. Take precision instruments: Competing countries are paying 8 to 10 or 12 cents an hour. We pay $1.80 to $2.40 here. They are transferring those other jobs to Chile, the precision-instrument jobs to Japan and Germany. If it were examined in that perspective, I do not think the people would let it be done.

It means that the people have their choice. They can come down to the $3.50 or $4 a day, or they can have mass unemployment. If they come to the $4, when they have been getting $11.17 a day in the copper mines, they cannot keep the kids in school or pay their taxes, and they cannot buy radios or keep carpets on the floors or live on any standard that befits the American workingman, so naturally we are going to have mass unemployment, and then the Congress will be passing bills appropriating money to relieve the unemployment.

Mr. Chairman, that completes my statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much. We are glad to have your statement.

Senator MALONE. Thank you very kindly.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have inserted at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a copy of Representative DOUGHTON'S statement made yesterday in the House of Representatives.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes. I was surprised at the copper resolution being passed by unanimous consent late yesterday afternoon after the House had concluded its discussion on the tax bill. I understand the resolution that passed was only introduced yesterday afternoon or some time yesterday. Our committee that is supposed to have jurisdiction over this matter was not consulted at all. It was the most extraordinary procedure I have ever known.

Our committee has had this matter under consideration for some time. It was brought to our attention through a lot of correspondence. We had set apart Monday, July 10, in order that we might have time to consider this. As chairman, I invited the interested parties on both sides to be present and notified them that we would have to expedite the matter in order to have time to give consideration to the bill after completion of our work on the pending tax bill; therefore, we set Monday, July the 10th, as the date for hearings on continuing the suspension of the import tax on copper. I have not been so surprised at anything that has taken place in this House since I have been chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point a dispatch appearing in the Wall Street Journal of today, showing that House Joint Resolution No. 494 was "sneaked" through the House.

There being no objection. the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOUSE EXPECTED TODAY TO REVERSE ITS ACTION ON COPPER IMPORT DUTY—WESTERN CONGRESSMEN CHARGE BILL CONTINUING DUTY SUSPENSION WAS SNEAKED THROUGH

WASHINGTON.—House leaders were preparing the way for the House to reverse today its Tuesday action continuing the suspension of the copper import duty for another 60 days.

Western Congressmen charged that the 60-day suspension of the 2-cents-a-pound duty was sneaked through the House Tuesday and that the action should be changed. Representative BARING, Democrat, Nevada, served notice he would call up in the House today a resolution to rescind Tuesday's action and bring the bill back to the House.

Top Democratic leaders indicated the Baring resolution would be approved. Mr. BARING will first ask unanimous consent for passing of his rescinding resolution, but if this unanimous-request is blocked by Representative PATTERSON, Republican, Connecticut, author of the duty-suspension bill, or any other Representative from copper-consuming districts, the House Rules Committee is prepared to report out a special rule which would permit the House to call the bill back from the Senate by a majority vote.

House leaders indicated they had no doubt that the majority vote could be obtained if not unanimous consent. "It's not going to get anywhere in the Senate, anyhow," one Democrat observed, "so why should we put our western Members on the spot?"

If the House does rescind its action of Tuesday, the duty will almost certainly go into effect, at least temporarily, starting July 1. The House will not take up any legislative business after today until July 1. That's the day, incidentally, that the House Ways and Means Committee is scheduled to open hearings on another bill of Representative PATTERSON's which would continue duty-free importation of copper until June 30, 1951.

Apparently Mr. PATTERSON's 60-day extension bill got through the House Tuesday by unanimous consent as a result of misunderstanding among the House leaders. Each thought the other had cleared the bill and let it slide through. Moreover, Mr. PATTERSON requested action on the bill late in the day, when most of the Members had left the floor thinking the legislative business of the day was over.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, there is more to this free trade on copper than meets the eye. The Senate of the United States would do well to inspect and analyze closely the power behind the rush to adopt an extension of an act that will permanently kill the independent copper producers of America.

I thank the Senator from Iowa for yielding to me.

AMENDMENT OF MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1949

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3809) to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, before I speak briefly on Senate bill 3809, I wish to refer to the tripartite foreign ministers' conference held in London last month. Before that meeting was held, several Senators joined with me in writing to Secretary of State Acheson, a letter, making some suggestions which we thought would be helpful in outlining our viewpoint and position in connection with the pending conference. The letter was addressed to the Secretary of State, and was signed by the two able Senators from New York [Mr. IVES and Mr. LEHMAN], the able Senator from New Jersey who now occupies the chair [Mr. HENDRICKSON], the able Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], and myself.

A few days ago I received an answer from the Secretary of State, addressed to that group of Senators. In his answer, the Secretary of State discusses rather fully the questions we had raised and the suggestions we had made. With the letter the Secretary of State sent copies of correspondence, including a letter from Commissioner McCloy to Dr. Adenauer. I ask unanimous consent that this file of correspondence be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the correspondence was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MAY 9, 1950.

The Honorable DEAN ACHESON,
Secretary of State,
In care of American Embassy,
London, England.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: On the occasion of the Foreign Ministers Conference in London, at which it is expected that decisions of profound importance regarding Germany will be reached, we wish to submit to you this expression of our views on certain aspects of the crucial German problems.

It is understood that the conference will make strenuous efforts to bind the Federal Republic of Germany more securely to the west. From the standpoint of the security of the nations of the Atlantic community this would appear, under proper conditions, to be a desirable achievement. Yet we are troubled lest some of the efforts in this direction may have the unfortunate practical effects of weakening present western unity and also of affording advantages to the rulers of the Soviet Union in their attempts to absorb all of Germany within the eastern bloc of nations.

In this regard, we are particularly mindful of the reports emanating from western Germany that proposals will be made at London to increase German steel production from the present limit of 11,200,000 tons annually to a level of 12,500,000 tons or more this year and to 14,500,000 tons or more by 1952. Such proposals, at a time when steel production in western Europe is in excess of requirements, are especially disturbing, since there has been evidence that steel produced in the Ruhr is already being sold, legally or illegally, to countries within the Soviet sphere.

There are several considerations, other than the desire to win the favor of spokesmen of west German parties, which must compel our concern. We urge the American delegation to give the fullest weight to these considerations:

1. Our efforts to unify the countries of western Europe, which only 5 years ago were liberated from German domination, will fail if once again their people begin to fear the resurgence of German industrial and military might.

2. Given the already existing surplus of steel above market requirements this year in western Europe, no increase in the present level of German steel production can be justified. Any increase in German steel production might well have the following undesirable effects:

(a) Faced with overproduction and lack of markets in the west, German steel interests will seek cartel arrangements with the other western steel producers, leading as in the past to German domination over the western European economy.

(b) Having established price-fixing mechanisms, allocated markets and set production quotas by cartel agreements covering western Europe and western Germany, German industry will seek outlets for steel production in the Soviet sphere, including Communist China.

(c) Diplomatic and military rapprochement between Germany and Russia will follow resumption of large-scale shipments from the Ruhr to the Soviet sphere, and may even be the sine cua non demanded by the Russians.

(d) Finally, in the event of Russian invasion, greater German steel production will merely add to the industrial and military strength of the Soviet Union.

3. Prior to granting any further independence to the Federal Republic of Germany, the Western Allies should demand performance in the following key economic sectors:

(a) Land reform: Completion of the land reform program in western Germany in order to open for cultivation the estimated 1,900,000 hectares (3,750,000 acres) of unused land, provide farms for a possible 2,000,000 persons among the expellees and refugees from the east, increase food production benefiting the entire population, and decrease dependence on outside food sources.

(b) Consumers' goods: Development of German light industry, as opposed to present emphasis on heavy industry, to provide consumers' goods marketable in western Germany and other western countries, to absorb the unemployed, to help pay for needed imports and to reduce the necessity for continued outside aid.

(c) Housing: Development of an extensive housing program to provide dwellings for the increased population, rebuild damaged residential area and absorb excess steel production from the Ruhr that is now being sold to the Soviet sphere or being dumped abroad in countries which themselves have steel in excess.

(d) Competition: Drastic action to destroy cartels and to decentralize ownership and control of existing heavy industry, particularly iron, steel, coal, coke, and chemicals, in order to encourage free competitive enterprise and weaken the power of those whose control over heavy industry now permits them to dominate the Federal Republic's Government and afford them opportunity to prepare the way for a new German-Soviet alliance.

(e) Purchasing power: Immediate efforts to raise the purchasing power of the German people through higher wages, lower prices, tax reforms, consumer credit, and other measures designed to provide the large domestic market needed to absorb German production and reduce the need for exports of goods not now able to be purchased by German consumers.

To the extent necessary, the Economic Cooperation Administration should be encouraged to provide counterpart funds for the financing of certain of the above activities.

Mr. Secretary, we believe that if the United States delegation will insist on the position outlined above, as prelude to all discussion of increased independence of action by the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany, the rest of western Europe will show less hesitancy about accepting Germany as a partner in the Atlantic community, that the danger of a Russo-German alliance will be materially reduced, that the effects of Communist agitation among the poorer classes will be largly nullified, that the German people themselves will respond to the measures proposed in their behalf, and that the conference will, in respect to the German question, achieve a notable success.

With sincere wishes for the success of your mission, and with assurances of our highest respect and good will,

Sincerely,

GUY M. GILLETTE,
ROBERT C. HENDRICKSON,
IRVING M. IVES,
HARLEY M. KILGORE,
HERBERT H. LEHMAN,
United States Senators.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1950.

The Honorable GUY M. GILLETTE,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR GILLETTE: While at the recent tripartite meetings in London I received the letter of May 9 sent by you and Senators HENDRICKSON, IVES, KILGORE, and LEHMAN, concerning the German problem. I regret that the pressure of work at that time prevented my prompt reply.

The Department of State is fully in accord with your view that it must be our objective to bring the German Federal Republic into more secure association with the west under proper conditions, that is, in a manner which will not give cause for concern to the other nations of western Europe. The Department is also in agreement with many of the views expressed in your letter as to means of accomplishing this objective.

There was no decision, nor any proposal, at the recent meeting of the Foreign Ministers in London to raise the permitted level of steel production in the western zones at the present time. Any decision to raise the level would have to be by agreement of the British, French, and United States Governments since the present level was set by governmental agreement. The policy of the United States Government is that it should be raised only when a need for peacetime use by western Germany has been clearly demonstrated.

The Department agrees that integration of the countries of western Europe will not be encouraged if the western European peoples begin to fear the resurgence of German military power and war potential. The United States Government is continuing, as it has for the past 5 years, the policy of disarmament of Germany.

The land reform program, it must be admitted, has not been carried out to the extent that was originally contemplated or to the extent that would be desirable, although the extent of the problem which exists in the western zones has been exaggerated. It is expected that final results will be more favorable, but we cannot candidly anticipate all that might be desired. We did not in the Occupation Statute reserve control in respect to land reform and we, therefore, must seek to exert our influence in this field through persuasion. The land reform program is being given continuing attention by the Office of the United States High Commissioner in Germany.

The increase of western German food production as well as the construction of adequate housing, developing of industry along economic lines, and other objectives which will help to make the German economy less dependent on foreign aid are being pursued with the assistance of counterpart funds. The investment plan for western Germany (including Berlin) for the ERP year 1949–1950, as submitted by the German Government to the ECA Mission in Germany, included DM 647 million for food and agriculture development programs, including DM 312 million of counterpart funds, and DM 2,200 million for housing, including DM 232 million of counterpart funds. It is anticipated that the counterpart funds going into housing, though proportionately small, will make possible the larger sums contemplated from other German public funds and private capital.

There are enclosed herewith copies of three letters to the German Government which may be of interest to you in this connection (from R. M. Hanes to Dr. Wilhelm Niklas, dated December 1, 1949, and to Dr. Franz Bluecher, dated December 22, 1949; and from John J. McCloy to Dr. Konrad Adenauer, dated February 20, 1950).

The first two of these letters strongly urge the development of efficient agriculture and support of agriculture commensurate with the need to increase food production. The third includes, as an enclosure, the outlines of the German investment plan for 1949–1950, and sets forth the basic information concerning this program desired by the ECA Mission.

There are certain apparently insurmountable difficulties to exclusive emphasis on the development of German light industry as opposed to heavy industry. Primarily, sufficient markets for the products of light industry are lacking, both in Germany and in other western countries. This is due in part to competition for export markets from the other countries of western Europe and elsewhere. In any case the development of light industries to date has not been too successful. In the textile industry, to take one example, Germany is unable to find extensive foreign markets because all of the major countries of western Europe and even many of the world's relatively unindustrialized areas have developed their own industries to take care of their textile requirements.

The necessity to seek export markets, however, does not arise primarily by reason of inability of German consumers to purchase goods. Rather the primary need in this field at the present time is to raise the level of exports to that of German import requirements. Wage-price relationships, although not yet a matter of concern with regard to absorption of surplus production, have been a problem from the point of view of general economic recovery. From recent information, it appears that there has been some degree of improvement in wage-price relationships. Prices have shown a general tendency to decline, although the declines have not been widespread. Hourly wage rates and gross weekly earnings have shown significant improvement since the latter part of 1948. These improvements, while not as great as might be wished, indicate a general trend in the direction of improved purchasing power.

It is the policy of the Department to eliminate German cartels, and to decentralize ownership and control of heavy industry to the extent necessary to eliminate monopolies and excessive concentrations of economic power in order to place German industry on a sound, competitive footing. The United States High Commissioner has been vigorously pursuing these objectives under the powers reserved over deconcentration and decartelization by paragraph 2 (a) of the occupation statute.

Allied High Commission Law No. 27, reorganization of German coal and iron and steel companies, published on May 17, 1950, provides for the achievement of these objectives with respect to enterprises in four of the fields which you specifically mention in your letter—iron, steel, coke, and coal. In brief the law provides for the liquidation and reorganization "with a view to the elimination of excessive concentrations of economic power which constitute a threat to international peace or to the maintenance of democratic government in Germany or which unreasonably restrain trade" of 13 steel and coal combines. In addition, provision is made that liquidation proceedings involving 10 more companies which are currently in progress shall be continued. An examination is to be made by the High Commission of three additional combines and if any is found to be an excessive concentration of economic power it will be liquidated and reorganized also. Provision is also made for inclusion of 42 other companies or some or all of the assets of such companies in the reorganization plans on certain specified conditions among which are that the assets concerned are presently being operated by certain operating companies which from part of the combines being dissolved or that such assets have heretofore been forfeited as Nazi-owned under other provisions of law.

The Department will push strenuously for early completion of the reorganizations contemplated under law No. 27. Completion of these reorganizations should establish the German iron and steel and coal industries upon the basis suggested in your letter.

In the chemical field, action is continuing to provide for the final liquidation of I. G. Farben and its reorganization into individual units. The economic committee of the Allied High Commission has approved, with certain minor exceptions, the principles upon which the operation should be carried out and has referred the matter to the law committee which is drafting the necessary legislation. A tripartite team of experts is presently conducting a survey of the Farben project. The reports of this survey, which should be completed within 60 days, will then serve as the basis for the dispersal plans.

The reorganization of I. G. Farben into self-contained, self-sustaining, and competitive units will achieve in the chemicals field the same results as may be expected in iron and steel and coal under law No. 27. The Department has no intention of agreeing to any diminution of the powers reserved under the occupation statute to accomplish these reorganizations until they are computed.

The Department welcomes your continuing interest in the German problem.

I would appreciate it if you would be good enough to communicate this reply to the other Senators who signed the letter.

Sincerely yours,

DEAN ACHESON.

ECONOMIC COOPERATION ADMINISTRATION, OFFICE OF THE SPECIAL MISSION TO GERMANY,
December 1, 1949.

Subject: Improvement of agricultural production in western Germany.

To: Dr. Wilhelm Niklas, Federal Minister for Food, Agriculture, and Forestry, Frankfort, Germany.

1. Mr. McCloy, as senior ECA representative to Germany, is addressing a letter to the Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany stressing the need for immediate German action in certain economic fields if the objective of freeing Germany from the need for extraordinary outside assistance is to be attained. Particular stress is being laid in this letter on the essentiality of specific action to increase agricultural production.

2. The largest part of present United States dollar aid for western Germany is for food and feed imports amounting to about $500,000,000 in 1949–50. The ECA mission is especially concerned about the continuing magnitude of this deficit. It is the announced intention of the United States Government to reduce ECA appropriations sharply and progressively, and to terminate such extraordinary aid by 1952. OEEC has adopted the general principle of not allocating ECA aid to support higher levels of food consumption than can be maintained after the cessation of ERP aid in 1952. The ECA mission to Germany concurs in this principle. It is clear, therefore, that evidence that the proposed food levels can continue to be maintained by Germany without extraordinary United States dollar aid after 1952 is required in order to justify this mission's support of German food import requirements over the remaining ERP period.

3. This future food level depends in large part upon the level of agricultural production; and in our view this level of agricultural production can be raised considerably. There are a number of critical problem areas in the food and agricultural sector that demand immediate consideration and corrective action if improved agricultural productivity is to reach the necessary level by 1952–53. Of these, the areas which seem most important for the German officials to emphasize in developing efficient agriculture include the following:

(A) PRICE RELATIONSHIPS

Existing agricultural prices neither encourage the production in Germany of dollar-imported foods and feeds nor discourage their excessive use. Thus the principal dollar import is grain; yet domestic grain prices are approximately 30 percent lower than imported grain and 25 percent lower than producer prices in other important OEEC countries. These low grain prices tend to encourage the consumption of imported cereals rather than domestically produced potatoes and fodder roots. Animal products and alcohol prices are relatively higher than grain, and therefore result in excessive diversion of grains to livestock and alcohol production at the expense of direct human consumption of food. In general the whole structure of German farm prices and its relation to the cost of farm requisites fails to provide proper income incentives to the German farmer.

(B) AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION CREDIT

The OEEC Agricultural Production Plans and Programs Committee has stated that "lack of capital has been a major factor in retarding the development of agriculture" and also that "no major expansion can be expected unless capital is more freely available, whether from public or private sources." Available German commercial credit for agricultural production usually carries an interest burden of around 7 percent in contrast to a rate in the Netherlands of about 3½ percent. Such agricultural credit aid as can be provided should place much greater relative emphasis on the needs of the individual farmer and small farm groups rather than alloting limited resources too largely to food processing and other commercial enterprises. Present lack of farm credit restricts fertilizer consumption, rate of mechanization, livestock improvement, improvement of land resources (particularly meadows and pastures) and construction of proper farm buildings and storage facilities.

(C) AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION, RESEARCH, AND EXTENSION

The ECA mission agrees with OEEC statements that the first condition necessary to induce farmers to embark on a policy of major agricultural expansion is "a rapid strengthening of the agricultural extension services for the provision of technical information and advice to farmers." Very substantial technical advances for increasing world food production have been made within the last few years in other countries through organized research and extension programs. It has been estimated that only 20 percent of German farmers are contacted by the present agricultural extension service advisers, while in other countries group methods reach over 80 percent.

As a further example of the need for farm advisory services 70 percent of the farm land in western Germany is devoted to production of animal feeds. The greatest single potential for increasing food availability is to produce more animal products from this area and replace dollar-imported feeds. This could be done by the application of modern, efficient agricultural techniques of production and conservation of feeds, improved breeding, feeding and management practices.

(D) LAND CONSOLIDATION, RECLAMATION, AND DRAINAGE

It is considered that the importance of land resources warrants the establishment of aggressive action programs to cover each of these three aspects of land improvement. Important progress has been made in other countries in improving the productivity of meadows and pastures by proper seeding and fertilization, plus benefit payments and the use of cooperative power equipment as farmer incentives.

(E) FARM MECHANIZATIONS

The replacement of animal power by tractors economizes feed for the production of additional livestock products and increases the efficiency of cultivation. Favorable farm-price relationships, adequacy of credit, and land consolidation would greatly facilitate a rapid extension of mechanization. About 70 percent of the arable land in Germany is in farms under 20 hectares, and the possibility for capital accumulation on such small units preclude large-scale programs for mechanization. In France and Holland the most practical solution to this problem has been found in the development of machinery cooperatives partially financed with state assistance.

4. The obstacles to agricultural production increases must be attacked initially on a national basis at the highest level. Mr. McCloy's letter to the Federal Chancellor indicates the importance which we lay on the matter. Basic decisions must be made on controversial issues involving prices, credit, and benefit payments, which are fundamental elements of a national agricultural policy. The ECA mission is anxious to assist you by all means within our power. Our common objectives are to take advantage of all means of increasing agricultural efficiency and productivity—but to avoid establishment of high-cost farm production requiring continuing protection and placing obstacles in the way of expanding world trade.

5. May I ask, therefore, that you carefully reappraise the agricultural possibilities in western Germany with a view to determining additional measures which can be taken to expand an efficient German agriculture. The ECA mission urgently needs your program as to specific measures which the German authorities intend to take in these matters. We would expect to see such plans reflected in the general memorandum accompanying the 1950–51 and 1951–52 programs due December 15 with supplementary details to the mission. Your preparation of such a revised action program should carefully appraise and include the financial requirements for maximizing food production, within the limits of the German national investment program.

R. M. HANES,
Chief, ECA Mission to Germany.

TEXT OF LETTER FROM MR. R. M. HANES, CHIEF OF ECA SPECIAL MISSION TO GERMANY, TO DR. FRANZ BLUECHER, ERP MINISTER OF FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY, REGARDING AGRICULTURAL INVESTMENTS AND POLICY, DATED DECEMBER 22, 1949

In my letter to you of December 16, 1949, approving the investment program from counterpart funds for the first half of the fiscal year 1949–50 amounting to DM 1,036,000,000, I stated that this mission expected by January 1, 1950, a comprehensive investment program for the economic year June 30, 1950.

I should like to emphasize the need for increasing the national investment for agriculture in future programs. Over 70 percent of the dollar aid to Germany this year is designated for food and feed imports, yet to date less than 9 percent of counterpart investments have been designated for agriculture. As sharp reductions in dollar aid materialize, the food sector of the economy is likely to become most critical since Germany's basic deficiency is in food. It is in the interest of the German welfare to maximize its own food production. However, with the recent approval of DM 1,036,000,000 which brought the total program for counterpart fund utilization, including GARIOA and ECA, to DM 1,583,800,000 only DM 128,000,000 was designated for agriculture. Only about one-half of this is for purposes designated to directly increase food production.

Future investment programs should include a support of agriculture commensurate with the immediate need for increasing food production. Funds are urgently needed for increasing use of fertilizer, machinery and high-quality seed, for improvement of livestock and greenland, for land drainage and consolidation, for construction of silos and feed drying equipment and for agricultural research, education, and advisory services.

Some of these activities cannot be financed by credit. In the case of research, advisory services, and support of public agricultural institutions, there is no basis for repayment. Support of these activities must necessarily be in the form of grants-in-aid (verlorene Zuschuesse). A small beginning on this latter type of project has recently come to our attention in a DM 75,000,000 draft program developed by the Ministry of Agriculture. This mission interposes no objection to the use of counterpart funds as grants-in-aid for projects of merit to increase food production provided such projects are administered in a manner that will avoid misuse.

FEBRUARY 20, 1950.

His EXCELLENCY,
The Chancelor of the Federal Republic of Germany, Palais Schaumburg, 141 Koblenzerstrasse, Bonn.

DEAR MR. ADENAUER: I refer to the discussion which the High Commission had with you and members of your cabinet and the president of the Bank Deutscher Laender on February 16, 1950, in which we reviewed together the investment plans of the Government with particular reference to the emergency measures which are under consideration for the purpose, among other things, of relieving unemployment. The object of this letter is to outline the types of information which we consider necessary for an adequate appraisal of the plans and to assist you in preparing the information which you volunteered last Thursday.

We have in our possession the investment program for the 1949–50 ERP year which was submitted in the letter of February 3, 1950, from Vice Chancellor Bluecher to Mr. Hanes as well as the emergency program which you announced to the Bundestag on February 9 and which served as the subject of the discussions on the 16th. Our understanding of the magnitude and nature of these two programs is summarized in the enclosure to this letter.

These discussions have also made it clear that the Government's investment goals depend in some measure on counterpart funds. As you know the ECA Mission to Western Germany as well as the ECA organization in Washington and Paris are anxious to see that best use is made of these funds within the framework of bringing economic recovery to western Germany. In my capacity as ECA representative for Germany, I am obliged to meet certain statutory requirements in the review of the German investment plans and the role which counterpart is intended to play in such plans before ECA can consent to releasing the funds.

I share with you a recognition of the immediate urgency of the investment program because of its relation to unemployment and basic recovery goals and for my part I wish to facilitate in every possible way the appropriate use of ERP counterpart in such a program.

The basic information we desire is a composite investment program for an agreed time period. This program should include the following data:

1. Your appraisal of the effects which the over-all investment plans will have on employment.

2. Your views as to the effects which the intended investment of counterpart funds will have on production—particularly production for export—and on production costs and on sales prices. This information is needed both for the program as a whole and for the various sectors of the program.

3. In the light of our deep interest in the problems of Berlin and of refugees, statements from you as to the aid which is planned through counterpart or other resources for each of these purposes, with some description also of the mechanism by which the refugees are expected to benefit from the funds.

4. A detailed breakdown of the sources of financing this investment program, with as precise an indication as possible of the amounts to accrue from current revenues, from other public sectors of the economy, from public borrowing and the financing techniques you propose to use in connection with the latter. We would like this data as to financing segregated as between short, medium, and long term. Such information should cover self-financing by way of depreciation, reserves, and undistributed profits.

5. Information as to the disposal of the investment funds within each of the major branches of the economy and within each of the principal sectors of industry. This information should provide estimates as to the total amounts which each area is expected to obtain from private as well as public sources, as outlined in 4 above. Here, too, a distinction should also be made between long-term capital needs and others.

We shall undoubtedly have further comments to make on the programs as the work on them proceeds. However, I should like to give you my preliminary views now with respect to two aspects of the foregoing. The first is related to the prefinancing of investments for which your Government expects to use ERP counterpart funds and to which you have attributed some importance both in written statements and in our discussions. You will, of course, appreciate that the ECA cannot give advance assurance of its approval of the release of counterpart funds.

The second, which I share with my British and French colleagues, is the concern expressed at our meeting on February 16 with the need for adopting fiscal policies which will contribute to the achievement of the economic recovery of Germany. It is in this area which particular attention should be focused on effecting the most desirable use of available resources. For clarity I might add that this latter observation is directed toward the entire question of consumer versus capital goods.

I can well appreciate that it may prove difficult for you to furnish all the data requested herein and that in its preparation you may well desire further guidance from my staff. I need hardly add that my experts are at your disposal if you desire to avail yourself of their services in this regard.

I await with interest your reply at your earliest convenience.

Accept, sir, the assurances of my highest esteem.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN J. McCLOY,
ECA Representative for Germany.

OUTLINES OF THE INVESTMENT PLAN FOR THE 1949–50 ERP YEAR AND OF THE EMERGENCY INVESTMENT PLAN ANNOUNCED BY THE CHANCELOR ON FEBRUARY 9

A. The investment plan for the 1949–50 ERP year as transmitted to Mr. Hanes by Mr. Bluecher on February 3 may be summarized as follows:

Investment plan, western Germany (including Berlin)

[Million DM]

Major expenditure class	Public funds and capital market	Counterpart funds	Total
Industry, including coal and steel	840	975	1,815
Public utilities	215	466	681
Food and agriculture	335	312	647
Transport and postal services	444	243	687
Housing	1,968	232	2,200
Public services	660	----------	660
Other	38	52	90
Total known investment	4,500	2,280	6,780
Unknown portion: Short-term loans and self-financing (from depreciation, reserves and profits)	----------	----------	[1] 10,000
Total investment	----------	----------	[2] 17,000

[1] Over.
[2] At least.

Figures of a similar kind had previously been supplied the ECA Mission in connection with the last ERP program documents. The scale of investment was expected to continue at about the same level into 1950–51.

B. The emergency investment measures referred to in the announcements to the Bundestag on February 9 and in the discussions with the High Commission on February 16 were understood to amount in the calendar year 1950 to a total of DM 3.4 billion. This figure has been itemized as follows:

	Million DM
Housing	2,500
Bundesbahn	200
Post	50
Medium and long-term export orders	300
Industry	300
Small business	50
Total	3,400

It is not clear what relation the second program bears to the first.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, during the last few days when we have been discussing the matter, the question has been raised several times as to whether the President exceeded his authority under the Constitution as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy in the steps taken by him with reference to Korea. I am free to say that I was somewhat disturbed when the President's statement was made to the press and was sent to the Senate. Since that time, however, I have studied the statement carefully. I have studied it in connection with the machinery set up in the United Nations Charter, and I am thoroughly convinced that the President did not go outside his constitutional responsibility and authority. In fact, I was somewhat surprised after I read the statement a little more carefully to note how assiduously and meticulously he had followed the machinery and the instructions of the United Nations Charter.

I shall speak of three or four sentences in the statement of the President having reference to the United Nations Charter. In the second sentence of his statement, the President said:

The Security Council of the United Nations called upon the invading troops to cease hostilities and to withdraw to the thirty-eighth parallel. This they have not done.

I call attention to article 39 of the Charter:

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40 reads as follows:

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable.

This they definitely did, and this the President reported, with the failure to comply. The President's statement further says:

The Security Council called upon all members of the United Nations to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution of this resolution. In these circumstances I have ordered United States air and sea forces to give the Korean Government troops cover and support.

I call attention to articles 41 and 42 of the Charter:

ARTICLE 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon members of the United Nations to apply such measures. * * *

ARTICLE 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in article 41 would be inadequate, or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. * * *

The President again called attention to this, in the second paragraph of his statement, which reads:

In these circumstances the occupation of Formosa by Communist forces would be a direct threat to the security of the Pacific area and to the United States forces performing their lawful and necessary functions in that area.

The President was undoubtedly acting under the authority of article 51, which reads as follows:

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense, if an armed attack occurs against a member of the organization, until the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by members in the exercise of this right of self-defense shall be immediately reported to the Security Council.

In the concluding paragraph of his statement, the President says:

I have instructed Ambassador Austin, as the representative of the United States to the Security Council, to report these steps to the Council.

It was evident to me, after I had made the comparison and the study, that the President was acting not only within the interpreted authority of the Constitution of the United States, but was acting fully within the articles and provisions of the United Nations Charter, and as agent thereof.

Mr. President, in addressing myself to the pending measure to extend the military assistance program another year, I wish only to make a few remarks of a general nature.

As I speak today, the shadow of the Korea incident hangs over us darkly, and the atmosphere seems poorly suited to calm appraisal or reasoned debate. As with earlier diversionary maneuvers by the Communists, such as the Berlin crisis that attracted the world's attention away from the sweeping successes of the Chinest Communists, so in this instance we may reasonably assume that the instigators of the Korea incident have other ends in mind than just the military conquest of the South Korean peninsula. We can safely assume that those responsible for this latest outbreak have not overlooked the powerful psychological and political effect which their aggressive actions will have upon the minds of men in all countries, especially in countries all around the Soviet perimeter, from Korea through southeast Asia to the Middle East, the Mediterranean and western Europe. To the extent possible, we must strive to understand all the implications of the Korea incident and to grasp the essential Communist purpose behind this shocking turn to armed violence in the Far East. We may fail in our search for understanding, but we must try. We have the responsibility of preventing ourselves and our Nation from reacting blindly to the tactics of psychological terrorism as it is being practiced by the Communist rulers. We must not fall into another totalitarian trap. We must not be thrown off balance. Much more is at stake than South Korea.

I wish, therefore, to consider the present bill in its proper perspective within the over-all frame of the world picture.

Mr. President, during the debate on this program last autumn, I ventured a number of predictions, a forecast of what I believed would be some of the probable results of passage of a measure to ship American arms to various countries overseas. A significant number of these predictions has already come true, I regret to state, although, fortunately, not all the eventualities I foresaw have yet fully come to pass.

I must confess, however, that there has been one outcome of the adoption of the military aid act which I did not foresee at all, although I did make note of the fact that the will to fight and the reason for fighting against a possible Russian attack were not things that we could put into crates and boxes, as we put arms and munitions, and ship to foreign armies. It seemed to me then that the purely military emphasis which this bill gave to our foreign policy, the transfer of guns, tanks, planes, and so forth, and the accompanying talk of strategic plans and military staff conferences, would be insufficient to our purpose, and, if undertaken without other kinds of action, might have most deleterious consequences.

I did not foresee how deleterious those consequences might be. I did not foresee clearly at the time that the military assistance program of the United States, all the goings and comings of military men, all the conferences among general staffs, and all the publicity surrounding this program, were going to stimulate a wave of neutralism in Europe. Now, however, it is perfectly obvious that the increasing emphasis on military preparation to contain communism, as symbolized by this bill, is being accompanied by an increasing effort among large sections of the western European populations to resign from the cold war and to create a neutral third force Europe. This, I imagine, has been an unforeseen consequence for most of us.

Neutralism is the concept of western Europe as a neutral zone between Russia and the United States, the idea that the peoples of Europe can and will retire from the cold war, reject all war of any kind, and let the giants who start it, as they say, fight it out between themselves.

However unrealistic we may regard this desire and this effort, it is a very real factor. It is a most serious development, Mr. President, as any intelligent European commentator will affirm. Ever since the military aid program got under way, "neutralism"—call it European isolationism, if you prefer—has been gaining ground throughout western Europe. After the recent meetings of the North Atlantic Council in London, where grand strategy for the military defense of western Europe was stressed to the practical exclusion of all other questions, political or otherwise, reliable observers on the continent reported a veritable upsurge of neutralist feeling.

I do not need to call the attention of the Senate to the existence of the "neutralist" spirit in such Asiatic countries as India, Pakistan, and Indonesia. It is a problem that I am sure keeps some of our leaders awake nights.

The Communists do not appear to have originally created this neutralist sentiment. Indeed, I am informed that up until February of this year Communist propaganda in western Europe was actively opposing European neutralism with a view to winning positive adherence of the people to the Communist cause. Since February, however, Communist propaganda has abandoned the earlier line to a considerable extent and has seized upon and is exploiting the spontaneous neutralist sentiment of the peoples of Europe to the full.

The Soviet Union today is conducting, through its fifth columns in western Europe, a gigantic, all-out peace offensive. This offensive is of a very special kind. It is not directly seeking to attract supporters to the Communits doctrine or to the Soviet bloc. It is rather seeking to turn the peoples of Europe against the United States by playing upon the deep abhorrence of war among European peoples. This campaign is directed straight at people whose homes have been bombed and shelled, whose families have been decimated and crippled, whose factories have been smashed, and whose cities have been blasted to rubble, who have lived on starvation rations for 10 years during and since the war, who know, as we in America have never known, the meaning of total war, and who would prefer almost anything to the outbreak of atomic war.

I call attention to the tremendous losses in property alone as depicted in the figures given the Senate on Wednesday by the chairman of the Armed Services Committee [Mr. TYDINGS].

Since some 3 months ago, when the Communist Parties of western Europe organized their World Peace Congress in Stockholm and had their front men proclaim a manifesto entitled the "Stockholm Peace Appeal," a vast army of agents has been swarming through western Europe under the guise of partisans of peace. They are gathering signatures by the hundreds of thousands on petitions against war, against atomic weapons, against atomic warfare. It is reported that in France, for example, where there is a large, well-organized Communist movement, these partisans of peace have formed committees in every village, town, and city. The committees go from house to house asking people: "Are you in favor of peace? Are you against the atomic bomb? Then sign up for peace on this petition." It is reported that nearly 4,000,000 signatures have been obtained already in France and that the total in Europe may surpass 20,000,000. Granted that many of the signatures may be forgeries, it is nonetheless a most serious development, particularly from the point of view of those who seek true peace through strengthening free societies. A great many anti-Communists, too, have been drawn into this campaign, so great is the appeal of the idea of peace.

Every shipment of arms from America arriving in continental ports is grist for the Communist propaganda mill. Every boatload is met by an outbreak of Communist-sponsored protests, often by Communist-led strikes. Every speech made by an American official about impending war, which the Europeans see as a war to be fought in their homelands, produces another spurt toward a neutral Europe, a Europe that is neither pro-Russian nor pro-American, but that is profoundly antiwar.

Serious French writers, such as the editors of impeccably conservative newspapers like Le Monde, for example, suggest that France must have the right to remain neutral in case of Russo-American conflict.

Chancelor Adenauer of the West German Republic warmly supports the Schuman plan for a heavy-industry consortium as a means of creating a third and neutral bloc of nations between the two quarreling world powers, as he calls them.

Among Europeans generally, I am informed, the term cold war is now the label they attach to the whole international effort of the United States.

We are being cloaked, despite ourselves, with the warrior's mantle. Europe is slowly absorbing a picture of the cold war in which the United States alone is portrayed as seeking to lead an unwilling western bloc into a shooting war with the Soviet Union.

While we in the United States know very well what we are really seeking to do, it is not so certain that others understand us as well. As the London Economist recently put it, there are two kinds of peace: "Peace through strength on the western model, or peace through appeasement and capitulation which is the only peace the Soviet Union seeks and understands." It is far from certain that other peoples generally understand and accept these distinctions. It appears more likely, after their recent experiences, that all they want is peace of any kind—they would prefer to let the Russians and the Americans have their war somewhere else, in Korea, anywhere, but not in Europe.

What troubles me profoundly, Mr. President, is how passage of this arms bill will affect the Communist neutralist campaign. I fear that if we pass it by itself, without some other mitigating action, we may do more harm than good to our cause. For this reason I am going to ask that passage of this bill be accompanied by a political and moral act in the United States Senate, on the highest plane, which will attract the people of western Europe away from their neutralist fixation and shake them out of the hypnotic trance induced by the Communist peace offensive.

How many more Europeans, already worried sick about the dangers inherent in the Korea incident, are going to read the headlines in a day or so and see:

"United States to ship Europe billion more in arms"—only to throw up their hands in despair and go out in search of the nearest partisan of peace to sign his petition against war? We dare not ignore the pervading spirit of the men and women of Europe who have just lived through the second great war of this century. While we give the impression of concentrating all our energy and all our thought and all our propaganda on waging the cold war as if it were purely a military operation, we allow the enemies of peace to capture the banner of peace as cover for their political penetration this side of the iron curtain.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Does he mind being interrupted?

Mr. GILLETTE. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does the Senator by his remarks wish to indicate that he believes the participating European nations are accepting arms and planning with us for a common defense, with the absolute understanding that they are going to fight, if necessary, to the last, to prevent their nations and their people from adopting communism?

Mr. GILLETTE. While I would not reach that conclusion in those words, I am convinced that the situation is such that the aid which we have been rendering, with the emphasis on military aid alone, is operating against the very thing we seek.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is the substance of what I had in mind, that the Senator does not believe the people of western Europe are willing to accept our military aid and thereby come to the conclusion that, if necessary, they must fight politically, economically, and in a hot war to prevent their people from becoming Communists.

Mr. GILLETTE. The fact, as I stated a few moments ago, is that 4,000,000 persons in France alone have signed the petitions to which I referred within the past few weeks. An estimated 20,000,000 persons in Europe have signed them, and that is certainly proof of the attitude of the people and their abhorrence of war and the prospect of war as we abhor it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does not the Senator believe that the implementation of the Atlantic Charter by this MAP program is understood by the people to be a peace move and a move to prevent war? Does he think that those people are of the opinion that what we are doing will not prevent war?

Mr. GILLETTE. We are trying to impress upon them that it will.

Mr. FERGUSON. What are they thinking of?

Mr. GILLETTE. That is what I am trying to discuss.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does the Senator believe they are thinking otherwise and therefore are signing these petitions?

Mr. GILLETTE. We have indisputable evidence that they are reaching other conclusions. We are allowing the Soviet Union to carry the banner of peace instead of our carrying the banner of peace.

Mr. FERGUSON. Is it not a fact that the Soviet Union's attempt to carry the banner of peace is one of the great frauds?

Mr. GILLETTE. Unquestionably.

Mr. FERGUSON. It is one of those promises which cannot possibly be fulfilled because of the imperialistic attitude of Communist Russia which seeks to dominate the whole world and to spread the idea that peace can come only if the European group of nations become communistic. That is the fraud which is being perpetrated upon the people of the world under the banner of so-called peace.

Mr. GILLETTE. Undoubtedly it is as fraudulent as anything can be. It is for that reason, because I believe it to be a fraud, that I want our gestures in the way of military assistance to be accompanied by other actions, in order to convince the people of the world that we are the ones who are raising aloft the banner of peace and will lead the world in the direction of peace.

We hear it said over and over again that the cold war is a war of ideas, a struggle for the allegiance of the minds of men. What contribution to that struggle does a bill of this kind make? What contribution is made by a bill which gives greater scope for military influence than the bill of last year?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GILLETTE. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I may not have heard the last few words of the Senator, because I was interrupted. However, I wonder whether it is his intention a little later in his address to state what additional actions he believes should be taken, in addition to the passage of this bill.

Mr. GILLETTE. The junior Senator from Iowa has the temerity to make three or four suggestions.

Mr. DONNELL. I am very much interested, and I shall be very much interested to hear the suggestions the Senator has to make.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GILLETTE. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator has been discussing the so-called Partisan for Peace movement in France. He refers to the Partisans for Peace obtaining signatures from the citizens of France on the theory that Communists are the only ones in the world who can give the people of France peace. I presume that that movement is Communist-inspired.

Mr. GILLETTE. I believe there is no doubt about it.

Mr. LUCAS. In other words, the Communists in France are the ones who are primarily responsible for the circulation of these petitions among the citizens of France.

Mr. GILLETTE. I think they are assiduously doing it.

Mr. LUCAS. I presume the Senator knows that there are something like 4,000,000 so-called Communists in France at the present time.

Mr. GILLETTE. I do not know the exact number. I am told that substantially one-third of the population is Communist.

Mr. LUCAS. I understand that approximately 4,000,000 Communists voted in the recent elections. I have one further question which I should like to ask the Senator. I should like to ask if in his study of this particular question he has found whether the government of France, those who are in charge of the French Government, are doing anything to offset this communistic propaganda which is being circulated through these petitions?

Mr. GILLETTE. I am unable to answer the question of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator knows that France is a Republic, and that the government officials are elected, just as they are elected in this country. It seems to me that the Government of France itself should be taking steps to offset the movement which is being started by the partisans for peace, so far as the circulation of the so-called petitions for peace is concerned. The Senator and I know that the people who are conducting the Government of France, and who believe as we do in democratic processes, are just as anxious to obtain peace with honor as we are in this country. It seems to me that if the French Government is not doing anything toward offsetting the propaganda, their attention should be called to it by the proper authorities of this country.

Mr. GILLETTE. I thank the Senator from Illinois. His remarks are very pertinent and very proper in connection with this subject matter. I am afraid that this bill standing alone makes little contribution to the kind of struggle we are trying to win.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. GILLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. The last remark I made should not be understood that I am attempting in any way, by the suggestion I made, to interfere with the sovereign rights of the Government of France. However, so long as we are furnishing arms under the military assistance program, it seems to me that we should have a right at least to discuss this question thoroughly with the French Government without in any wise interfering with or jeopardizing their governmental right.

Mr. GILLETTE. I think the Senator from Illinois is absolutely right.

The bill's chief immediate effect, I imagine, would be to create more millions of neutralists abroad, some of whom may well say in effect, "All right, if the Americans want to arm us to help them fight their war against the Russians, let's take the arms and then let's use them to build strength for our neutral bloc. If the Americans and the Russians are going to have their war, let them fight it out in the Middle East, or in the Pacific Ocean, or, best of all, on the Arctic ice floes. We neutral Europeans want none of it in Europe."

Unless, as I say, we accompany passage of this bill with some nonmilitary political act, we may only add impetus to the movement that is losing us the allegiance of men's minds in Europe and elsewhere. This loss, at present is not to communism, but to neutralism, to the doctrine of withdrawal and isolation, of "plague on both your houses."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GILLETTE. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is it not true that the Partisans for Peace have been a Communist organization all the time? We had them here in the United States. This man Rogge ran around the country making speeches for the Partisans for Peace. The next thing we hear, he is over in Moscow conferring with the Russians. So I think the Senator would fall into error if he identified the Partisans for Peace as being in favor of neutrality or neutralism. They are not really for peace. They are for Russia. They are for communism. They are for totalitarianism. They are using the Partisan for Peace label merely as a front. The Senator from Iowa would fall into error if he would construe their activity as a movement for neutrality or for peace. It is just a flanking movement. They are not for peace at all.

I do not know what action the Senator proposes we take besides passing the bill. According to all the information we have been able to get from the Secretary of State and others who attended the conferences with regard to the program in Europe, including the Secretary of Defense and General Bradley, the participating European nations are now doing more than they have ever done, and they are showing signs of doing all that they can possibly do, to support the program by which we are aiding them. Is that not true?

Mr. GILLETTE. I think that is definitely true, and the able chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations has stated much more forcefully than I could that this is not a new movement, but is one which is being used and shaped to the end that the Communist groups are claiming to be the leaders for peace, or trying to convince the people that they are the leaders in carrying the banner of peace. Again I say that we want to carry the banner of peace. But unless, as I say, we accompany passage of this bill with some nonmilitary, political act, we may only add impetus to the movement that is losing us the allegiance of men's minds in Europe and elsewhere.

As I said at the outset, it is particularly unfortunate that the Korean incident should come at this time. It would be unfortunate at any time, but is particularly unfortunate at this time. I repeat that I am convinced that the President of the United States took the only action that he could take, and that his action was in strict accordance with his powers and responsibilities, not only under the Constitution but under our adherence to the Charter of the United Nations.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HENDRICKSON in the chair). Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. GILLETTE. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator says that accompanying the action of passing this bill we should do something which would be nonpolitical, and so on and so forth.

We are taking such action. We have an ECA bill in the Commitee on Appropriations now, and the committee is working on it. It has no politics in it; it has no arms in it. It is a bill for the rehabilitation, economically and culturally, of the people of western Europe. If the people of western Europe are so dumb that they cannot understand why we are doing that, if the people of the world cannot understand it, it is unfortunate; but that is being done. That should be the most eloquent pronouncement we could possibly make.

We cannot chase down the Communists and expose their every trick. The Partisans for Peace movement is an absolute fraud on its face. We cannot chase the Communists down and grab them and convince them and talk them into coming along with us. That is an impossibility. They have made up their minds to play hell if they can get a chance. The Partisans for Peace movement is somewhat like a circus sideshow, where barkers tell about what wonderful things are going on inside. They just want to get people on the inside, but when they go inside they soon see that the show is a fraud and does not amount to anything. Those who run the show have the money, and that is all they want.

I think it would be a mistake for us to play up the Partisans for Peace to the neutral people of western Europe. We are getting along all right with the people of western Europe now. They are improving their economic condition. There is more production in western Europe now than there was before the war, and that is the foundation of military strength, as well as political and economic strength.

Let the Partisans for Peace go along, but show them up, denounce them, demonstrate that they are frauds, and the people of France will not follow them, the people of western Europe will not follow them, when we are handing them help from ECA and at the same time are passing this arms bill in order to help put into their hands the weapons for protecting their lives, the integrity of their soil, and the institutions which they themselves have sanctioned at the ballot box, as was so well suggested by the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas once more. I may remark at that point that he cannot expect the people of Europe, who have gone through the hell they have suffered, to think so keenly, so carefully, and so clearly as the Senator does, and reach the sound conclusions he reaches.

As I have said, unless we accompany the passage of this bill with some nonmilitary political act, we may only add impetus to the movement that is losing us the allegiance of men's minds in Europe and elsewhere. This loss, at present, is not to communism, but to neutralism, to the doctrines of withdrawal and isolation, to the sentiment "a plague on both your houses."

If we continue as we are going, by offering no way out but war—so far as the Europeans can see—we shall create a neutral Europe. No attitude, I submit, would serve the Kremlin to better advantage in its political subversion of the world.

Mr. President, I have no private knowledge of the real purpose behind the present Communist attack in Korea. It seems highly unlikely, however, that they are risking a general world conflagration for the sake merely of occupying that small territory, whatever its strategic value may be. We have not yet had answered the question: Why Korea and why at this time?

I take this Communist offensive to be aimed at something far more important than the capture of South Korea, part of a far greater design. I think it may be designed to carry terror into the hearts of every man, woman, and child living along the vast perimeter of the Communist world, from the Pacific to the Atlantic: Terror of Communist occupation, yes, but, even more, terror of war itself, of the horrible war which the scaremongers have been describing in recent years. It may be that the Communists intend that all the peoples living in those lands along their border shall feel that any expression of American interest, any shipment of assistance, any provision for arming them, is equivalent to a "kiss of death." In that sense, though this may seem a paradox, the Korea incident, while itself an act of war, is part of the "peace" offensive—an offensive, remember, which seeks no adherents to the Communist cause, and which certainly seeks no peace, but which seeks a condition of will-lessness and neutrality in all the nations bordering the Soviet Union. By their assault on Korea, the Communists are in effect telling all the peoples along their frontier: "You see how close war can come. It may burst out at any moment. See what may happen to you if you play the American game. You don't want war, do you? You don't want this to happen to you, do you? Then go neutral, become isolationist, reject the Americans as carriers of war."

I realize, Mr. President, that this may seem complex and paradoxical. But we are not dealing with a troop of simpletons. We are dealing with men who have mastered the waging of international civil war and who know how to manipulate the passions and fears and hopes of mankind. They appear to be acting on the theory that if the peoples of the world fear that war is close, the desire to avoid war will become unmanageable by the governments opposing communism, particularly in areas close to the Soviet Union. This is a softening-up process for political conquest.

At one and the same time, then, the Communist Partisans for Peace can obtain signatures on antiwar, really anti-American, petitions in Europe, while the Communist North Koreans carry out warring actions in Asia; and both are aimed at the same effect, namely, to paralyze the will to resist where there is a will to resist, to nullify American aid where it has been sent, and to strike the terror of atomic destruction into the souls of every person in the lands around the Soviet frontier.

Mr. President, in an effort to meet this problem squarely, I direct an appeal to all Senators, those who may favor the bill before us and those who may oppose it.

Would it not be wonderful if, on the same day that passage of this measure is voted, as I assume it will be voted, we simultaneously performed a nonmilitary, propeace action of a character that would tend both to check the Communist perversion of the stated purpose in sending these arms, and to remind the world, in the most dramatic fashion possible, that it is we, the United States, who are the true bearers of peace. Let us in the Senate strike these two blows together. Let us reestablish the balance between our physical and spiritual commitments between the military and the moral.

I offer a number of concrete suggestions, Mr. President, and I beg the careful attention of my fellow Senators to them. Let us decide to take at least one of the following political actions:

First. Let us have Senate Concurrent Resolution 94 reported from the Foreign Relations Committee at once, so that we may vote to recommend an immediate special session of the United Nations General Assembly for the single purpose of stopping the armaments race. Let us, in other words, take a dramatic leap beyond the sterile concept of the cold war which the Communists have forced upon us, and demonstrate to the wavering peoples in Europe, in Asia, and all over the world, that the United States is the true believer in real peace.

Second. Let us go even beyond Senate Concurrent Resolution 94, and urge our Government immediately to introduce a resolution into the United Nations Little Assembly calling for establishment of an international police force, under an international peace authority within the United Nations, to bring order not only in Korea but in all other threatened areas, and to provide the force with which to disarm all nations down to their rifles. If those who cry peace mean peace, they will support this move. If they do not support it, we and the world well know once and for all their true objectives: World conquest by military force. Let us seize the opportunity afforded by this foul attack on South Korea to transform the United Nations into an effective peace-enforcement body. There is no veto, I would remind the Senate, in either the Little Assembly or the General Assembly. I can find no prohibition in the Charter against doing what I suggest.

Third. Let us have Senate Concurrent Resolution 57 reported from the Foreign Relations Committee at once, so that we may vote to call on the President to convoke a constitutional convention of the Atlantic democracies as provided for in that resolution. Let us, in other words, take a dramatic step toward transforming the purely military alliance that we have established under the North Atlantic Treaty into a federal union of all the free peoples of the Atlantic area, a union so strong that no European member of it will be tempted to resign himself to the fraudulent attractions of "neutralism," a union so strong that no number of Communist agents will be able to dismember it, a union of peoples, and not just of armies, so strong that no nation will dare attack it by force and that every nation will give up hope of conquering it by deceit.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an observation and a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEM in the chair). Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. GILLETTE. I yield.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I am delighted to hear the statement of the distinguished Senator from Iowa that in connection with the Korean experience we should not only give immediate aid and back up the position of the President, but that we should learn something from that experience as a lesson in history, and that we should adopt a resolution asking the President to call a meeting of the representatives of the democracies who sponsored the North Atlantic Pact so that we could have at least the possibility of union by law in order that the men of the Kremlin might know in advance what they are going to be up against if they should repeat such a performance as they have carried on in Korea.

I certainly want to join with the distinguished Senator in hoping that the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, which has had this matter in its bosom for more than a year, will decide that it is time to do more than simply patch the dam when some leak occurs, and, that we should build a real structure which will give the free people of the world some strength in the face of communistic aggression which we may expect time and time again unless we take action to prevent it.

Mr. GILLETTE. I thank the Senator from Tennessee.

Fourth, let us resolve to call upon the executive department and upon our Foreign Relations Committee to undertake immediate preliminary studies for a Pacific Union, paralleling and similar to the proposed Atlantic Union, so that we may offer to the peoples of Korea, Japan, Formosa, the Philippines, Indochina, Indonesia, Australia, New Zealand, as well as to Canada, Mexico, and ourselves, a federal union of democracies in the Pacific Ocean, which, like its Atlantic counterpart, would be so strong that none of its people would seek to turn neutral or give up hope and submit to Soviet threats—a Pacific Union so strong that neither the Soviet Union nor its Chinese Communist ally could attack any part of it without attacking the whole of it, without, that is, attacking North America as part of that Pacific Union.

These, Mr. President, are four concrete political steps which this body can take today or tomorrow, if it so desires. Any one of them would achieve part of what we most need: a nonmilitary, political, and moral action to electrify world opinion and thus to set the arms-aid bill in its proper perspective as what it is: merely one more desperate effort by the United States to carry out its physically impossible plan to contain communism by military force.

While we are debating here how to contain communism by military force—and the Communists are encouraging us to do so by their significantly timed attack in South Korea—in Europe the Communist partisans of peace are conquering people this side of the iron curtain by political force, by psychological warfare, by the strategy of terror, by a fraudulent peace offensive that plays upon the tragic fear of the war-shocked populations of the Continent. It is worth considering the possibility, Mr. President, that the Communists, experts in international civil war that they are, would like nothing more than for America to concentrate upon the purely military approach to the struggle, while leaving the political, psychological field open to Communist capture.

As I have said, my own fear is that if we adopt the pending measure alone, without taking any other positive political action simultaneously, we will in effect be giving aid and comfort to the enemies of democracy. Since this bill is certain to pass, then let us also adopt one or another of the resolutions to which I have alluded. I do not limit my thought merely to the four proposals I have mentioned—disarmament conference, international police force, Atlantic federal union and Pacific federal union. If any Senator or any group of Senators comes forth with better proposals, I shall be more than glad to see them. All I am concerned about, Mr. President, is that the United States shall recapture its rightful place in world opinion as the preserver and upholder and advocate of a peaceful world of free nations, and not allow that position to be occupied, through fraud and deceit or through our own ineptitude, by the worst enemies of peace and freedom who have stomped over the world since Adolf Hitler.

In conclusion, then, Mr. President, I urge with all the sincerity and prayerful persuasion that I can muster, that when this bill is passed, the Senate turn without loss of a moment to approval of one of the peace proposals of which I have just spoken or of any other, better peace proposal which may be submitted by any Member of this body.

We Americans know what our country's true intentions are. We dare not assume that peoples in other lands know the same thing as well as we do. Words alone cannot convince them. Appeals to their intelligence will not suffice, for they are stricken with nameless dread. Only action will reach the hearts and minds of frightened men—action to sweep aside fear and to supplant it with confidence and stern resolve.

The action of the President of the United States in carrying out the decision of the Security Council with regard to the Korean incident is, in its way, that kind of action—peace-enforcement action—and I wholeheartedly support it for what it is. But it is not action enough—and, again, it is action wholly in the military sphere. It is the fear of war that is losing us our friends. It will be by our action to make war recede into the background and to make peace a reality through inner strength and union, that we shall abolish fear, neutralize neutralism and build a community of free men strong in their freedom and strong in their resolve to stand together against all threats and all enticements. Until we have taken this kind of action, Mr. President, we will remain defenseless against the Soviet political offensive and find ourselves ever more incapable of stamping out the international civil war which Soviet Russia is waging against us and against all free peoples of the world.

INVESTIGATION OF BENEFIT OF ATLANTIC FEDERATION—ACTION BY CANADIAN PARLIAMENT

Mr. CAIN obtained the floor.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to me, for the purpose of making an observation which will take about 5 minutes, with the understanding that he does not lose the floor?

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, if I may have unanimous consent to yield to the Senator from Tennessee without losing the floor, I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Washington may yield to me without losing the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I have just received news from Canada which I hope will be a guide for all the free people of the world in the present critical situation. Particularly do I hope that the Senate of the United States will give pause to consider this development.

Just a few moments ago the Canadian Senate took action which I venture to predict will dwarf in history the aggression of the Communist puppets in Korea. The Canadian Senate, with only one lone dissenting vote, adopted a resolution calling for an exploratory federal convention to investigate the great benefits of Atlantic federation. The resolution was introduced by Senator Euler, and support came from Senator Robertson, the Senate leader for the Canadian Government.

Here is the text of the resolution passed by the Canadian Senate:

> That the Senate of Canada do approve of the calling of a convention of delegates from the democracies which sponsored the North Atlantic Treaty and representing the principal political parties of such democracies, for the purpose of exploring how far their peoples and the peoples of such other democracies as the convention may invite to send delegates, can apply among them, within the framework of the United Nations, the principles of federal union.

The adoption by the Canadian Senate of this resolution calling for an exploratory convention marks a new and significant milestone in the history of freedom. It is the first time any legislative body has acted officially toward the creation of a great federation of the Atlantic democracies: a union which could prevent war, assure increasing prosperity, and expand progressively the frontiers of freedom.

It is particularly fitting that this initial step should be taken by Canada. Our trusted neighbor to the north is today the keystone of the Atlantic community. She, like we, has had sufficient practical experience to be able to lead the way in solving our common problems on a regional basis, just as she, like we, has solved her own domestic problems by federal union. Politically and geographically, Canada occupies a central position in the North Atlantic area, possessing close ties not only with the United States, but with Great Britain and France, as well. Because of these ties, the views of Canada have extensive representation of thought on both sides of the Atlantic.

The United States Senate should respond to the gallant action from the north by taking like action. Our Committee on Foreign Relations has had this proposal in its bosom for more than a year. Extensive hearings have been held. Support for this proposal is pyramiding throughout the Nation. However, sadly, official action is yet to come. We have dallied, while Canada has seized the initiative and has acted.

Mr. President, this is a time for action. To meet Communist aggression in Korea, we have shown that we can act when we see the need. Britain has answered the challenge by running her navy alongside ours in the defense of freedom in the Pacific. Now that Canada has lighted the way, we need also to recognize the need for an investigation of the application of the principles of American federation to the critical world situation. Thereby, notice would be served on the Kremlin that we would not fear any further Communist aggression. This is the over-all and enduring answer to the threat of the Communists, not only in Korea, but in other areas of Europe and Asia where the blow might have fallen just as logically. We are being foolhardy indeed not to begin now to explore in convention the great advantages of federated unity which once before has proved to be the solution to our problem.

Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the members of the Canadian Senate for their farseeing, affirmative step. It is my conviction that this act of high statesmanship will be written in the history of mankind in letters larger than most of us can now visualize.

If our own Nation will be prompt in following the lead, we may find the door open to the permanent peace and prosperity for which mankind has yearned throughout the ages.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington for yielding to me.

Mr. CAIN. The Senator from Tennessee is very welcome.

AMENDMENT OF MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1949

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3809) to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I previously have asked the Senator from Washington whether he could see fit to yield to me, to permit me to make a few remarks; and the Senator from Washington has courteously agreed to do so, in order that at this time I may make a brief statement regarding the unfinished business.

Therefore, I now ask the Senator if he will be so kind as to yield to me.

Mr. CAIN. I am very pleased to do so.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I wish to discuss the unfinished business, the bill amending the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949. I wish to see the bill passed as quickly as it is possible for the Senate to do so. I regret that it has not already been passed and embodied in the statute books.

I am among the majority of the American people who believe that in the Korean situation the President did the only possible thing he could do under the circumstances. For him to do anything else would certainly have been to invite the picking off of countries one by one, the process we witnessed in the thirties, at the hands of Hitler.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to permit a question in connection with this matter?

Mr. McMAHON. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me say that the sentiments just expressed by the Senator from Connecticut were also voiced yesterday by former President Hoover, approving the action taken by President Truman, and saying that it was all that could be done.

The President's action was also approved, not by reference, but in fact, by General Eisenhower, the Supreme Commander in the recent war. General Eisenhower said the President's course was correct, and that the President could not do anything else—notwithstanding the oratorical flamboyance on the floor of the Senate by certain Senators who disagreed with those views.

Mr. McMAHON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, there are several suggestions which I should like to make.

First I should like to remind the men in North Korea who started this affair of the trials which were held in Nuremberg and in Tokyo. I should like to remind them that the precedent there established has now become woven into the fabric of international law; and it seems to me that it would be well for this Government to communicate to the United Nations the names of the men whom it holds directly responsible for having precipitated this conflict. I further suggest that the United Nations be notified that the precedent of Nuremberg and the precedent of Tokyo, will be adhered to by this Government.

Mr. President, the second suggestion I should like to make is that it seems to me that the announcement by our Government that we are going to stand south of the thirty-eighth parallel must and should be revised. The objective is to end this conflict just as quickly as possible; and the way to end it quickly is to destroy the supply lines of those who are the aggressors and who are carrying on this crime against mankind.

The third observation I should like to make is—although I may be entirely in error—that I do not believe the present situation is going to result in a general world conflict. I believe it is a Soviet scheme to add further to the tensions in the world, to add further to the military budgets of our own and other free peoples, and that perhaps in 2 or 3 weeks this adventure will be brought to an end.

I pray that it will. I likewise realize that in saying so I am venturing a prophecy which may be shown to be not possible of fulfillment almost as soon as the words are spoken. Nevertheless, that is the way the situation presents itself to me now.

However, Mr. President, when the Korean affair is finished, if it is finished in a short time, as I have suggested, it will be but 6 or 9 months before the same kind of operation will be commenced somewhere else in the world. The objective is to exhaust the economy and to exhaust the people of America, who are the keystone and the foundation of freedom in the world today.

So I wish to commend the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] for what he said about the necessity of having the United States of America seize the leadership for peace. Perhaps we cannot place as much emphasis on this particular point today as we would like to place on it; but as soon as the Korean conflict is over, the subject I am now discussing must be examined into and, in my opinion, the proposal must be pushed.

It has been pointed out that our military forces are holding the line. However, Mr. President, the Communists seem to be moving with the peoples; they seem to have the peoples moving. That has occurred because they have captured the minds of millions of people in the most amazing deceit ever perpetrated in the history of the world. They have managed to sell slavery, if you please; but they have put it into a cellophane package which has caused it to be bought by millions and millions of the poor people of the world.

You and I, Mr. President, and all other Members of the Senate know, and the American people know, that what we want is peace, because God knows that we have more to lose when peace is lost than have any other people on the face of the earth. If a general world war comes, away will go the standard of living which the American people enjoy today; that is as inevitable as the rising of the sun.

Furthermore, Mr. President, we are not war-minded. We know that our freedoms and our Bill of Rights can thrive only in an era of peace, and we know what past wars have cost us.

We also know that we do not desire to rule over any other people or to seize any other people's territory or material possessions. We also know that the way to avoid a general conflict is to develop areas of strength. I join in a phrase which has been used by the Secretary of State. We differ somewhat as to what we can be defined as an area of strength. An area of strength cannot be built merely with an army and by economic aid and assistance. Underlying those two things there must be a passionate conviction in the minds and hearts of men that they are devoted to the truth, the objective truth; that they are devoted to righteousness, that they are devoted to the things that make life worth while in the sight of God. That is why when the present crisis is over, it seems to me we must inaugurate the most tremendous drive the world has ever seen to convince the people of the world that what we want is peace. If we succeed in conveying that message to a sufficient number of people this side of the iron curtain, then, by the use of the ingenuity which we have, we shall be able to get it to people on the other side of the iron curtain. Once we break down the curtain and get that idea to the people of the world, so that they will understand what we want, then they will be unwilling to fight. That is the only way it will be possible to avoid world war III.

Wars will continue—Korea, now; perhaps Iran in 9 months or a year from now, or some other country. But the wheels of atomic factories are operating behind the iron curtain; and, after our budgets have been expanded continually, while our liberties are being diminished—and the two go together—and when our adversaries have accumulated a sufficient stockpile of the things that count the most in the way of weapons, then the day will come when we will not be here to discuss such matters. That is why it is to our interest to enact this bill, to grant arms aid, and develop that area of strength which is necessary.

Then we must destroy the so-called Partisans for Peace. I agree with the Senator from Texas they are as phony as a $3 bill. But we have got to prove that to the peoples of the world. I have made certain suggestions as to how we should go about proving it, and as to how we should go about winning the good opinion of the world, which we deserve, but which, in many millions of minds we do not have, and which, if we do get, will stop world war III.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. McMAHON. I want to thank the Senator from Washington for having so graciously yielded to me this time.

Mr. CAIN. The Senator from Connecticut is more than welcome. If the Senator from Connecticut will permit, the Senator from Washington would like to associate himself with the two observations or suggestions which the Senator from Connecticut has made in the course of his remarks; the first being that the Senator from Washington is very hopeful that at an early date those primarily responsible for the outbreak of war in the Korean Peninsula may be tried by an international tribunal as war criminals; and, second, if I correctly understood the Senator from Connecticut, he was hopeful that we might be able to say to the world that our only determination in respect to Korea is to repel the invader and force him back to a position north of the thirty-eighth parallel. If that is the understanding, I should like to be associated with a declaration of purpose of that kind.

Mr. McMAHON. I may say to the Senator that what I want to do is to end the Korean outrage as quickly as possible. That was the objective the Senator from Connecticut had in mind in suggesting that, after suitable notice, we take measures to destroy the nests from which these——

Mr. CONNALLY. Vipers.

Mr. McMAHON. I thank the Senator for the suggestion—vipers are coming, to engage in an unconscionable, an unjustified, and a bloody attack.

Mr. CAIN. And to repeal or destroy the invader. But our American intention is to protect South Korea, without any ambition to take over the territory in the northern part of the peninsula.

Mr. McMAHON. That is correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. The Senator from Washington is pleased to yield to the Senator from Minnesota, who, he thinks, desires to make a request.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I should like to request of the Senator from Washington an opportunity to make a few remarks, not to be extended over a considerable period of time. I shall try to confine them to a brief statement.

Mr. CAIN. For the purpose of planning, I may ask whether the Senator from Minnesota will venture an approximation of the time he will require. The Senator from Washington would like to meet the requirement.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I should say not more than 10 minutes.

Mr. CAIN. The Senator from Washington is pleased to yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, first of all, I wish not only to associate myself with the splendid address of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McMAHON] but to tell him that it is refreshing and very inspiring to witness his leadership and his vision. I am proud to be associated with him. Surely he has analyzed for us in the few moments that he addressed the Senate, the most distressing and complex problems which face us on the international scene. I know the Senator feels as I do, that the Korean crisis has not terrorized the American people. The American people have accepted this as one of the inevitable consequences of the Communist menace that faces us in this world. It is most reassuring that our people are not panic-stricken. They are not crying out for war. There is no jingoism. There seems to be a sense of solemn responsibility for acting in the cause of world peace.

The vast majority of Americans support the President and his action in the Korean crisis. I was particularly pleased to hear the Senator from Connecticut point out that we may be faced with similar incidents or similar crises in other areas of the world. It is my considered judgment that we shall have a plague of these crises, a plague that will be directed and master-minded by the evil men in the Kremlin and the Politburo. We must be prepared to meet these challenges—prepared in armed strength, in moral courage, and clear-cut understandable policy. Therefore, I think it particularly important that the debate of yesterday, centering around the powers of the President, should be given the fullest exploration and the fullest documentation.

I was pleased to read in the Washington Star today a feature article by David Lawrence, entitled "Precedents Are Cited for Action Taken by President on Korea." At this point I should like to have this article printed in the body of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PRECEDENTS ARE CITED FOR ACTION TAKEN BY PRESIDENT ON KOREA—CONGRESS SHOULD RATIFY MOVES AT ONCE FOR TECHNICAL REASONS

(By David Lawrence)

President Truman acted entirely within his constitutional right in ordering American armed forces to go to the assistance of invaded Korea.

There are plenty of precedents for instantaneous action by the President of the United States without the formal consent of Congress when an emergency arises threatening the security of American citizens.

The closest parallel occurred on April 21, 1914, when, in the midst of a civil war in Mexico, President Wilson ordered American naval forces to capture the port of Vera Cruz, Mexico, in order to prevent the landing of arms which might be used against American lives and property. The fighting took place all of that day. The next day—April 22, 1914—the Congress passed a resolution ratifying the action of the Chief Executive in ordering combat operations outside of the territory of the United States.

It is true that the President had asked for the power on April 20, before the seizure of Vera Cruz occurred, but Congress did not act until after the warfare had begun.

DOZENS OF INSTANCES

Again and again in dozens of instances in the Caribbean area and also in Peking, China, in the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, Presidents have ordered American armed forces to engage in shooting in order to protect American citizens and their property, and this has long been recognized in international lawbooks as executive prerogative without the need of congressional approval.

The Constitution of the United States, by plain implication, approves emergency action by the President without the consent of Congress. Article I says in part:

"No State shall, without the consent of Congress * * * engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay."

Clearly the Constitution by inference would permit the same authority to be exercised in behalf of all 48 States of the Union which it so explicitly delegates to a single State. The American armed forces in Japan, for example, are carrying out a specific task with the full authority of Congress. This has been affirmed several times by Congress in appropriation laws since VJ-day as a postwar occupation duty of the highest importance.

To say that the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the armed forces, may not take instant action to protect such forces by thwarting a possible aggressor who might attack them is to live in the nineteenth century instead of in the atomic age. The best expression of the doctrine was given by the late President Roosevelt in an address to a joint session of Congress on May 16, 1940, just 6 days after Hitler invaded Belgium and the Netherlands and started his march which led to the conquering of France.

WHAT ROOSEVELT SAID

Mr. Roosevelt said to Congress: "Surely, the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of an attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and to prevent them from reaching their objectives. * * *

"An effective defense by its very nature requires the equipment to attack the aggressor on his route before he can establish strong bases within the territory of American vital interests."

President Truman in his Tuesday statement to the world, reciting that he had ordered American armed forces into Korea, took care of the constitutional point thus:

"The attack upon Korea makes it plain beyond all doubt that communism has passed beyond the use of subversion to conquer independent nations and will now use armed invasion and war. It has defied the orders of the Security Council of the United Nations issued to preserve international peace and security. In these circumstances the occupation of Formosa by Communist forces would be a direct threat to the security of the Pacific area and to United States forces performing their lawful and necessary functions in that area."

Obviously the conquest of Korea by the Communists would be even a greater threat against the security of United States forces in Japan.

There are many technical reasons, having to do with pensions, legal claims, and other matters affecting the status of those American troops now engaged in defense of Korea, which would make it seem desirable for President Truman immediately to ask Congress to pass a resolution ratifying what has been done. Such a resolution could also authorize the continued use of the Armed Forces to bring to a state of security the Pacific area affected by the aggression from Communists in North Korea. Congress this week surely would pass such a resolution by overwhelming vote.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I commend this article, because it is crystal clear by now that we should not delay action on the part of the executive branch of the Government by debate as to whether the President can act to protect the security of this Nation or to protect the security of American lives. The precedent of executive powers has been cited in the debate by the majority leader and the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and others.

I was also interested in an editorial which appeared in the Washington Post for today, entitled "Company They Keep." This editorial pertains to two editorials, one to be found in the mouthpiece of the Communist Party, Pravda, the other, in the Chicago Tribune. The editorial in the Post is concluded with the following words:

Yet it would be both sad and unjust if (applying the principle of guilt by association) people should now begin to refer to the Tribune as the prairie edition of Pravda.

This editorial goes on to point out what all understanding and intelligent people have known, that if one merely stands still long enough, the comrades will join up with you somewhere along the line. The Communist Party line shifts so often, makes so many twists and turns, that soon it finds itself mouthing the same observations being made by self-styled anti-Communists—strange as it may seem, the reactionary Communist left, joins hands with the bitter and blind forces of the reactionary right.

The Washington Post editorial gives to us the criticism which Pravda made of the President, namely, the President acted without authority. I noticed that there was considerable comment on the Senate floor in connection with the statement that the President acted without constitutional authority.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. As I recall, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] made that statement on the Senate floor.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I am pleased to receive the observation of the Senator from Texas, because there was considerable debate on the issue of the President's authority to act. The President acted, according to Pravda, without legal authority and in violation of the Charter of the UN. The President's authority to act was likewise criticized by the Chicago Tribune and on the floor of the Senate. Students of government, those who are students of constitutional law and the constitutional history of the Nation, recognize that the President not only had authority to act, but he would have been derelict in his duty and responsibility to uphold and defend the Constitution and to protect the general welfare had he not acted. To condemn the President's action is to play into the hands of the enemy and to lend credence to the enemies' false charges.

So, Mr. President, I ask that this editorial entitled "Company They Keep," be printed at this point in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMPANY THEY KEEP

One of the more interesting corollaries of this Korean crisis has been a general exchange of bedfellows all over the place. To put it bluntly, the Communists have found themselves a brand new set of fellow travelers.

The party line on President Truman's announcement of a new policy in the Far East has been set forth in an editorial in the Communist Party mouthpiece, Pravda. Pravda's main point is that the President in ordering American planes and warships to support the resistance in South Korea has usurped an authority he does not rightfully possess.

"Who authorized the American Government (i. e., Mr. Truman) to take this step? In putting its armed forces into action did the United States Government reach an agreement with the United Nations on its policy about their loyalty, to which Truman and Acheson make such a display? It was not the United Nations, nor any other international body, that authorized the Government of the United States to take these actions with regard to Korea and China that Truman announced yesterday."

Interestingly enough, this very same point of illegality has been raised by the Chicago Tribune and its Washington outlet. Where Pravda feels that Mr. Truman had no right to take any action about the Korean war without an explicit mandate from the Security Council (of which Russia, of course, is a member), the Tribune feels that only the Congress had the right to decide what should be done about Korea. Therefore, says the Tribune, the President's statement "is an illegal declaration of war. * * * It is beside the point to say that Congress may or will back Mr. Truman. The fact is that Congress has not been consulted."

It almost seemed as if the Tribune's words were taken out of the mouth of Representative VITO MARCANTONIO, or vice versa. The President, asserted Mr. MARCANTONIO, has "usurped the powers of Congress by declaring war without its consent."

There is yet another point on which Colonel McCormick's boys in the Tribune Tower, Chicago, and Comrade Stalin's boys in the Daily Worker on East Thirteenth Street, New York, appear to agree. Both believe that Mr. Truman has been impelled by other motives than a benevolent interest in the well-being of the world. The Tribune thinks Mr. Truman is rushing us into war in a desperate effort to ward off political defeat.

"Mr. Truman's thinking, if that is the word for it, is * * * confused by his own political troubles. A month ago his man, Senator PEPPER, was licked in Florida, and on Saturday his man, Senator GRAHAM, was licked in North Carolina. The Democratic Governor of Ohio said only a few days ago that he was half inclined to vote for Mr. Truman's leading Republican opponent, Senator TAFT. Mr. Truman's political fortunes are ebbing. He could use a war."

The official pronouncement by the national secretariat of the Communist Party in America, has, to be sure, a slightly different version of the President's motives. He is, say the comrades, simply obeying the will of his masters in Wall Street.

"These war moves of armed intervention are only in the interest of the powerful bankers who mint their profits from the lives of the plain people here and throughout the world."

But whether Mr. Truman's motive is political panic or economic cupidity, the Tribune and the Daily Worker draw precisely the same moral. "Not one American in a thousand," says the Tribune, "believes that the defense of Korea is worth the life of a husband, a son, or a brother." "The interest, the will of the American people," says the Worker, "is for peace * * *. Our country, our sons, our daughters are in grave danger."

Oh, well, it all goes to prove that no matter what position you take, if you stay there long enough you'll suddenly find the comrades by your side. Nor is this the first time they have found themselves places on the bench beside the Tribune. There was also, you remember, the little interlude of the Hitler-Molotov pact. Yet it would be both sad and unjust if (applying the principle of guilt by association) people should now begin to refer to the Tribune as the prairie edition of Pravada.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Minnesota would yield for a very urgent matter.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I shall be glad to yield in a moment, but the junior Senator from Washington was kind enough to yield to me, and I have but a few moments.

Mr. President, I ask that at this point in the RECORD an editorial entitled "More 'Too Late' Thinking," published in the Washington Evening Star of today, be printed in the RECORD along with another editorial from the Evening Star of today, entitled "Formosa and Our Asiatic Line."

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MORE "TOO LATE" THINKING

Senator TAFT, if he wishes to do so, can say with some justification that he was right earlier this year when he urged that the Navy be used to defend Formosa, and that the administration was wrong when it rejected, and even ridiculed, that proposal. But there is no justification for the Senator's criticism of the President for going to the aid of South Korea without obtaining prior congressional approval.

There is no clear and comprehensive definition of the powers of the President in a situation of this kind. As Commander in Chief, he certainly has some authority to use the Armed Forces, without consulting Congress, to protect our national interests in an emergency. It has been done dozens of times by other Presidents. What the precise limits of this authority may be is a debatable question. Constitutional lawyers could, and probably would, argue themselves blue in the face about it.

When the North Koreans attacked, however, the President was confronted with a fact, not a constitutional theory. It was clear then, and it is even clearer now, that time was of the essence. If anything effective was to be done in Korea, it had to be done at once. A delay of as much as a few hours might well have been fatal, and the latest reports from the battle front raise a question as to whether American aid, even with the President's prompt action, may not have come too late.

Senator TAFT says the President should have obtained congressional approval before acting, although he approves in general of what the President did. But the strong probability is that, if the President had sought congressional approval, the South Koreans defense would have collapsed while the Senators were debating the issue. Approval undoubtedly would have been forthcoming in the end, but by that time it would have been too late. The fight would have been over and there would have been no South Korean Government or army for us to assist.

Herbert Hoover sounded the proper note when he said that "now is not the time to argue origins, mistakes, responsibilities, or consequences." If the President was right in going to the aid of Korea—and there seems to be no dissent on that score—he was also right in acting with all possible speed. It would have been utterly senseless to have waited until it was too late to act at all.

FORMOSA AND OUR ASIATIC LINE

Although overshadowed by his orders for direct American military intervention to save Southern Korea, the President's move regarding Formosa, the Philippines and Indochina are not less significant, in their own way, than the armed action now being taken to stop the Kremlin's puppet Korean invaders and drive them back to the thirty-eighth parallel.

In effect, these moves—considered either in conjunction with or apart from the action in Korea—serve notice on the Soviet Union that the United States has drawn a definite line in continental Asia and among the islands of the far Pacific against any new aggression by the Russians or their satellites. In its essence, the development—which has been welcomed by the entire free world—represents the formation of a kind of "cordon sanitaire" to prevent the further aggressive spread of Kremlin-controlled communism in that part of the globe.

As far as the continent is concerned, President Truman has made clear that the line—wholly apart from Korea—has been drawn between Red China and Indochina. In the latter country, France and the Associated States of Viet Nam, Laos, and Cambodia are to receive accelerated armaments aid from us, and a special American military mission is to be assigned to work closely with them to stop the Communist forces of Ho Chi Minh. What this amounts to, in substance, is a warning to the men of the Kremlin that the United States is throwing its weight behind the effort to prevent them from seizing control, through Ho and the Chinese Reds, of the gateway to southeast Asia.

As for the islands of the far Pacific, protective measures against Communist aggression have been set in motion by the President's orders on the Philippines and Formosa. The Philippines action involves two important moves: (1) A stepping up of our military aid to the Quirino government and (2) a strengthening of our forces at the bases we are maintaining there in keeping with a special treaty. Equally important—and much more dramatic in that it involves a direct commitment of our naval power to a possible battle in the near future with the Chinese Reds—is the directive to the Seventh Fleet, under the over-all command of General MacArthur, "to prevent any attack on Formosa," which is now held by the remnants of Generalissimo Chiang's regime.

Of all these Asiatic moves beyond Korea, the Formosa decision is certainly the most spectacular. It represents a reversal of policy. Not many months ago, the President and Secretary Acheson turned thumbs down on suggestions that we should send naval forces, if necessary, to prevent the Chinese Communists from taking the island. In reversing that policy, however, the President has not committed himself to the idea of trying to restore the shattered Nationalist rule of Chiang Kai-shek. On the contrary, in connection with directing the Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa, he has called upon the generalissimo, who has assented, to end air and sea operations against the Chinese mainland and thus deactivate his forces for the time being at least. As for the island's future, and implicitly the political future of Chiang, that is something, according to Mr. Truman, that depends on events yet to come, including such things as a Japanese treaty and action by the United Nations.

Meanwhile, regardless of what may or may not happen to Generalissimo Chiang, Formosa will be one of the key points in the Asiatic defensive line of the United States and the free world as a whole. If they try to breach that line with the criminal tactics they are employing in Korea, the Kremlin and its puppets will find themselves up against forces determined to stand firm even at the risk of war. At any rate, that is the sum of our American position: Even at the risk of war—right now.

RATES FOR RAILROAD MAIL

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, may I shift the scene for a moment. I realize that my time is just about to expire.

Mr. President, I read with great interest in yesterday's press reports the fact that the Joint Committee on the Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures is now holding hearings on the Post Office Department and the postal deficit. In connection with those hearings, testimony is now being received with regard to the question of the railroad mail pay rates. In one sense, I, of course, welcome any public attention given to the problem of the postal deficit, and I have a particular interest in the postal deficit which results from the present archaic, inefficient and unfair method of determining rates for railroad mail. In a more profound sense, the news of the joint committee's activities demonstrates again the fact that the joint committee is a duplicating function of the Congress. The evidence in connection with the problem of railroad mail pay rates is proof of this duplication.

Mr. President, I happen to be the chairman of a subcomittee of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service which held extensive hearings and investigated in great detail the question of rates for railroad mail. Those hearings were held in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress, in April and May 1949. Other members of our subcommittee are the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. FREAR], the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. ECTON], and the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON].

As a result of those hearings, Senate bill 1596 was reported to the full committee and from the full committee reached the floor of the Senate on August 19, 1949, and is now on the calendar.

At this point I ask that an analysis of that bill which I have prepared be included in the RECORD, stating its four provisions.

There being no objection, the analysis was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The bill as originally introduced fell into four general divisions.

1. It provided for switching services.

2. It allowed the Post Office Department to obtain necessary information from the railroads as to the cost of carrying the mails.

3. It repealed the so-called "round trip" provisions of the Railroad Mail Pay Act of 1916.

4. It provided for judicial review of orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, in order to conserve time, I ask that the further remarks which I had prepared pertaining to the railway mail pay matter be incorporated in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the remainder of the remarks were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The second and third points are those which most directly affect the question of economy in the Post Office Department.

The railroads today, according to the Postmaster General, are asking an increase in mail pay in the pending railroad mail pay case of approximately $144,000,000 per year. In addition, the carriers are asking about $533,000,000 in retroactive pay. On the basis of an analysis made by the Post Office Department, it is fair to estimate that the increase sought by the railroads in the pending pay case involves about $3,500,000,000.

In the face of these facts and of the tremendous financial burden which may result from the railroad mail pay case and in the face of the further fact that the expense to the United States Government for transporting the mail by railroad is a major item in the postal deficit, it is clear that the Postmaster General must have power to determine the cost of mail transportation and the proper compensation to be paid for that transportation. At the present time it is also clear that the Postmaster General does not have that power.

The railroad companies engaged in transporting United States mail must have a duty to furnish relevant and pertinent details and information so that the Postmaster General can fairly and accurately determine whether the costs upon the Post Office Department are fair or unfair. S. 1596 would give the Postmaster General the authority which he needs.

The hearings before our subcommittee, Mr. President, produced other facts with regard to the so-called round-trip provisions of the Railroad Mail Pay Act. The committee finally decided that provision should be deleted from the bill submitted to the floor of the Senate and that it should come before the Senate the second session of this Congress for further study. A report was therefore requested from the Post Office Department, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the General Services Administration, and the Comptroller General. To date, reports have been received from the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Comptroller General, and from the Postmaster General.

I now feel, on the basis of these reports, that the round-trip provisions should be repealed. I therefore intend to submit an amendment to S. 1596 to repeal the round-trip provisions. For the past 20 years the charge for empty return of mail cars has cost the Government of the United States more than $400,000,000. This is a matter which merits immediate action by the Congress.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I conclude with the following observation: I bring this question to the attention of the Senate now to show that it is a matter which has been thoroughly studied by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, there are 277 pages of hearings and testimony. What is more, Mr. President, according to Senate bill 1596, which is on the calendar, the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has requested reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the General Accounting Office, the Post Office Department, and the General Services Agency, and it is my intention, as chairman of the subcommittee, under the rules of the Senate, after studying the matter of railway pay, to present an amendment to abolish the round-trip provision, requiring the Post Office Department to pay for empty cars as well as for full cars.

There can be no defense, in my judgment, for duplicating the activities of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee and its staff.

I have on many occasions alleged the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures serves no function not otherwise performed by other agencies of Government and other committees of the Congress. If the Senate of the United States wants Post Office matters to be analyzed by the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures, then we had better know it and had better have the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service cease its activities.

I want to know whether the job which has been assigned to me as chairman of an important subcommittee handling a bill which deals with the sum of $2,000,000,000 shall go on, or whether it will be stopped because of the intrusion of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures. The Congress has no business paying two highly trained staffs to do the same job and requiring two committees to do the same work and submit duplicating reports. The Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures is living on a program of duplication, and it is about time that the Congress of the United States acted upon the proposal which the junior Senator from Minnesota presented to it—namely, to abolish that committee. The Committee on Nonessential Expenditures is going along investigating things which have already been investigated, gathering in reports which other agencies have already prepared, and asking questions which have already been asked.

I bring this matter to the attention of the Senate because it involves a jurisdictional problem. As one of the members of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, and assigned as chairman of a subcommittee to investigate the railway mail pay, and the subcommittee having done its job and having published its report, I consider it an insult to the ability and intelligence of every member of the subcommittee for the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures to continue spending the people's money, gathering reports already in, asking witnesses to come to Washington who have already been here, asking agencies of the Government to republish reports which are already published, and asking officials to testify a second time on the same issue when they have already been under cross-examination. If ever there was a clear-cut example of duplication of work, of nonessential expenditure of public funds, the present activities of the Byrd committee are a cardinal example.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. I should like to ask the Senator if he would be willing to postpone his speech until tomorrow upon the condition that he shall have the floor when the Senate reconvenes at 11 o'clock and will be willing to speak without a quorum call at that time.

Mr. CAIN. The Senator from Arizona and the Senator from Washington have been discussing the situation during recent minutes, and I think the request of the Senator from Arizona is a very fair one, partly because it accommodates the wishes of a great many other Senators, and certainly I should be pleased to yield the floor on the conditions stated by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McFARLAND. I think it would probably meet with the approval of the staff. I do not believe those who wait on us will have any objection.

Mr. CAIN. In these very long and difficult days we are all trying to accommodate the wishes of others as best we can. I personally was beginning to become a trifle curious as to when I might be able to quit accommodating the wishes of others, but having had no intention of not trying to accommodate others, I am exceedingly pleased by the request which has been made by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McFARLAND. I am pleased that the Senator is accommodating and that he has the welfare of others in mind.

Mr. CAIN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, when the Senate reconvenes at 11 o'clock, the junior Senator from Washington may have the floor to speak, without a quorum call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXTENSIONS OF AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE UNDER MERCHANT SHIP SALES ACT OF 1946—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on Senate bill 3571 to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read.

(For conference report, see p. 9499, House proceedings of today.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. CAIN. Reserving the right to object, I wonder if my colleague, the senior Senator from Washington will explain the nature of the conference report and the reason for his bringing it up at this hour.

Mr. MAGNUSON. If my colleague will yield until the conference report is before the Senate for consideration, I shall be glad to explain it.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, again reserving the right to object, I should like to ask my colleague a question.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I shall be glad to explain the report. It is on a bill which extends the ship sales and charter provisions of the Maritime Act for another 6 months, approximately, sales being extended to January 15, 1951, and charters being extended for approximately 4 months. The ship sales and charter provisions of the Maritime Act expire on June 30, which is tomorrow, at midnight. I understand that the President of the United States is leaving the city at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, and it is very important that the bill go to the White House for its signature before that time.

We have been for a long time shutting off sales of excess ships and the chartering of our reserve fleet, on the very solid ground that if we continue on and on ship operators or those who want to engage in the maritime business will not attempt to build any new ships, or keep our merchant marine at an adequate level. The bill was passed unanimously by the House of Representatives, and the Senate passed it unanimously on a call of the calendar. The conferees agreed unanimously to the provisions of the conference report. It is very important that the bill go to the White House tonight so that it may be signed tomorrow morning.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, again reserving the right to object, it so happens that the junior Senator from Washington understands the conference report and hopes action can be taken on it now. However, because he is presently acting in the place of the minority leader, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] he feels impelled to ask this one question: Can the acting majority leader or my colleague, the Senator from Washington, provide assurances that it is agreeable to the minority leader and to all other Senators that the report be considered and acted on at this time?

Mr. McFARLAND. So far as I am concerned, I cannot provide that assurance. Perhaps the Senator's colleague can provide it. However, the report was signed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS]. The bill was unanimously reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. No objection has been made to it.

Mr. CAIN. The junior Senator from Washington has been advised that the Senators who previously had questions with respect to the bill are now completely satisfied, and there is no objection to considering the conference report at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report? The Chair hears none. Without objection, the report is agreed to.

RECESS

Mr. McFARLAND. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, June 30, 1950, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATION

Executive nomination received by the Senate June 29 (legislative day of June 7), 1950:

IN THE MARINE CORPS

Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Watson, United States Marine Corps, to have the grade of lieutenant general on the retired list in the Marine Corps effective from the date of his retirement.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 29 (legislative day of June 7), 1950:

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Hon. Willis W. Ritter to be United States district judge for the district of Utah.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

James G. Norman to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The following-named officers of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for permanent appointment to the grades indicated, subject to qualification therefor as provided by law:

To be captains

Henry E. Finnegan
Charles M. Thomas
Charles Pierce

To be commanders

Ross A. Gilmore
Gilbert C. Mast
Fred A. Riddell
Ira R. Rubottom
Maurice E. Wennermark
Fred Natella
Jeremiah S. Morton
Robert A. Marshall

To be lieutenant commander

Don A. Jones

To be lieutenants

Robert C. Darling
Miller J. Tonkel
William E. Randall

To be lieutenants (junior grade)

John R. Plaggmier
Leonard S. Baker
Eugene W. Richards
Samuel D. Parkinson

POSTMASTERS

ALABAMA

William T. Boyd, Gadsden.
Lester A. Tucker, Sumiton.

ARIZONA

Blanch T. Kelley, Thatcher.

ARKANSAS

Carroll T. Gambill, Eudora.
Clifford C. Fry, Gravette.

COLORADO

Raymond G. Miller, Brighton.
Reese E. Wilkinson, Greeley.

DELAWARE

George J. Tugend, Delaware City.

GEORGIA

Eva L. Hunter, Kensington.
Willis H. James, Homerville.
Allen W. Holder, Whitesburg.

IDAHO

Mabel L. Beck, Bellevue.
Homer P. Golding, Rathdrum.

ILLINOIS

Virgil F. Reither, Beardstown.
Lester V. McCandless, Brookport.
Evert L. Giesler, Cisco.
Richard E. Ellison, Decatur.
Chester L. Kampert, Fox River Grove.
Robert E. Dufner, Girard.
Oscar R. Poorman, Humboldt.
Paul J. Giblin, Ivesdale.
Frederick Joseph Lowrey, Sr., Manhattan.
Robert J. Horn, Mount Pulaski.
Claude Wilbur Frank, Plano.
Mary C. Morrissey, Utica.

INDIANA

Joseph Cline Huey, Bryant.
Joseph Elmer Porter, Carthage.
Arthur L. Clerget, Chalmers.
Robert K. Auxier, Edinburg.
Francis Xavier Newman, Mitchell.
John F. Limp, Orleans.
Jesse R. Hall, Pekin.
Raymond L. Fowler, Pendleton.
John H. Harding, Roby.
Leslie A. Byram, Vevay.
William F. Stembel, Wheatfield.

IOWA

Joseph P. Carr, Anthon.
Frank L. Arensberg, Garrison.
Earl W. Knudson, Irwin.
Burdette O. Baldwin, Nashua.
Leo P. Mimbach, Renwick.
Norman R. Stickney, Smithland.
Howard E. Smith, Stockport.
Edward D. Johns, Tracy.

KANSAS

Joseph F. Coyle, Kansas City.

KENTUCKY

Earl H. Haynes, Calhoun.
James W. VanOver, Closplint.
Russell R. Davison, Fordsville.
Bryant E. Gilliam, Milburn.
Hanson B. Chandler, Jr., Mount Olivet.
Joseph E. Gregory, Pembroke.
Lucille W. Eakins, Robards.
Homer C. Hamilton, Virgie.

LOUISIANA

Wilbert G. C. Rhodes, Gretna.

MARYLAND

Samuel T. Eaton, Jr., Edgewater.

MINNESOTA

Alfred W. Gesterlin, Browns Valley
Verona B. Bloedow, Clements.
Maud R. Olson, Lake Crystal.
Henry J. Cress, Rose Creek.
Kenneth J. Erding, Wykoff.

MISSOURI

Lindall L. Arndt, Clever.

NEBRASKA

Dale M. Larsen, Hardy.

NEW JERSEY

Clifford H. Smock, Bedminster.
Frederick G. McKeon, Butler.
Peter F. McGlade, Gloucester City.
Edna V. Sharp, Island Heights.
Joseph Murray, New Milford.
John P. Reilly, West Milford.
Emma Walls, Zarephath.

NEW YORK

Maurice J. Dexter, Cortland.
George F. Byrne, Fulton.
James V. Corrigan, Gardenville.
Margaret M. Humes, Great Bend.
Roger B. Griffiths, Keuka Park.
Harland Smith, Springfield Center.
Claude Willett Mount, Three Mile Bay.

NORTH CAROLINA

Lloyd H. Taylor, Archdale.
Stella H. Bowers, Newland.
Harold W. Grant, Seven Springs.

OREGON

Clinton E. Atherton, Canyonville.
Eldene F. Frenger, Central Point.

PENNSYLVANIA

Minnie Mae Gray, Boston.
Daniel J. Cullinan, Cambridge Springs.
Rosemary F. Schettig, Ebensburg.
Donald J. Watts, Millville.
Arthur E. Stanfield, Renfrew.
Ralph M. Henry, Rochester Mills.
Carrie M. Ketner, Strausstown.
Sarah E. Vensel, West Alexander.
Jerry J. Kasprisin, Yukon.

RHODE ISLAND

Rudolph Z. Choquette, Hamilton.
Ambrose G. Bliss, Little Compton.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Kenneth M. Kennedy, Blackstock
Benton Sheorn, Camden.
Isabella P. Frick, Chapin.
Willie H. Nims, Fort Mill.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Marvin H. Westin, Alcester.
Leo C. Huss, Faulkton.
William Klein, Howard.
Mary E. Becking, Marty.
Sylvester K. Krokaugger, Pickstown.
Edward P. Ryan, Weaver.

TENNESSEE

James J. Patton, Lexington.

TEXAS

William Virgil Samples, Blue Ridge.
Horace L. Turns, Bowie.
Gladys R. Kenner, Hemphill.
Henry W. Haynie, Kemp.
Walter P. Freytag, La Grange.
Willard Grigsby, Nocona.
John L. Biggerstaff, Whitewright.

UTAH

Joseph R. Mills, Pleasant Grove.

VERMONT

Joseph M. Durick, Fair Haven.
Louis F. Martin, Jr., Manchester Center.
Ernest R. McDonald, Jr., Plainfield.
John T. Pickett, Proctorsville.

VIRGINIA

Robert M. Waters, Chilhowie.
Dorothy Cox Moore, Chuckatuck.
Charles C. Anderson, Clintwood.
Robert S. Griffith, Jr., Dante.
Jefferson W. Newman, Pennington Gap.
Mount Vernon Damron, St. Paul.

WEST VIRGINIA

James C. Gum, Durbin.
Barnes E. Hall, Masontown.
Owen E. McKay, Jr., Paden City.
Ronald C. Bell, Smithers.
Evelyn A. McBrayer, Thorpe.
Wallace J. Varney, Williamson.

WYOMING

Clifford L. Hanson, Kaycee.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, by whose mercies we are spared and by whose power we are sustained, may we daily meet life's duties, difficulties, and dangers with faith and courage, confident that as our days so also shall be our strength.

Thou alone knowest the answer to the many questions which are haunting and perplexing us. May we realize that the supreme question is not whether Thou art on our side but whether we are on Thy side.

We pray that as we plan and think about mobilizing our material resources to meet humanity's desperate needs we may not fail to lay hold of our spiritual resources. May we understand more clearly that Thou art not with the many and the strong unless the many and the strong are with Thee.

Grant that each to the extent of his ability and all with equal fidelity may help to bring in that day when the kingdom of righteousness and peace shall be established everywhere.

Hear us in the name of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 3258. An act to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia; and

S. 3776. An act to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 5 minutes today, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered.

Mr. BIEMILLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 15 minutes today, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S ACTION IN THE KOREAN SITUATION

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, President Truman's prompt action in the Korean situation has received the praise it deserves. Of all the Nation's newspapers only the Chicago Tribune and the Daily Worker—along with their satellites—have raised their voices in opposition. It looks like the same old alliance of the extremists.

The record is now in on the reaction in most of the free world and the record is singularly satisfying.

For that reason, I want to single out the State Department for special praise today. Its careful and effective diplomatic handling of the Korean crisis in the United Nations has made our cause in Asia the cause of the free world. It has stripped Soviet aggression of its peaceful pretensions. And through Secretary of State Dean Acheson, it has forcefully stated the case for intervention by members of the United Nations.

Acheson and the State Department have recently been the victims of one of the most vicious, stupid, backhanded assaults in the history of this country. Penny-ante politicians from my own State have attempted to play with the high stakes of American foreign policy through these assaults.

They must now recognize their mistake or discard all pretensions to interest in the Nation's welfare. Their alternatives now are complete retreat or abject silence.

Meanwhile, Acheson and his colleagues deserve our plaudits for their share in the drawing of the line in Asia.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS OF THE UNITED STATES MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, I submit the report of the Board of Visitors of the United States Merchant Marine Academy and ask unanimous consent that the report of the board and of the Superintendent be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The reports referred to follow:

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS TO THE UNITED STATES MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY, 1950, KINGS POINT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y., APRIL 21–22, 1950

The PRESIDENT of the SENATE.
The SPEAKER of the HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

GENTLEMEN: Pursuant to Public Law 301, Seventy-eighth Congress, approved May 11, 1944, the following Senators and Members of the House of Representatives were designated to constitute the 1950 Board of Visitors to the United States Merchant Marine Academy:

SENATORS

By the President of the Senate: Senator ERNEST MCFARLAND, Arizona, Democrat.

By the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce: Senator EDWIN C. JOHNSON, Colorado, Democrat (ex officio); Senator HERBERT R. O'CONOR, Maryland, Democrat; Senator HOMER E. CAPEHART, Indiana, Republican.

MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

By the Speaker of the House: Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, New York, Democrat; Congressman HARRY L. TOWE, New Jersey, Republican.

By the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee: Congressman EDWARD J. HART, New Jersey, Democrat (ex officio); Congressman DONALD L. O'TOOLE, New York, Democrat; Congressman HERBERT C. BONNER, North Carolina, Democrat; Congressman ALVIN F. WEICHEL, Ohio, Republican.

Congressman EDWARD A. GARMATZ, Maryland, Democrat, was subsequently appointed by the chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to replace Congressman HERBERT C. BONNER, who was unable to be present.

The meetings of the Seventh Congressional Board of Visitors to the United States Merchant Marine Academy took place on the 21st and 22d of April 1950.

Congressman DONALD L. O'TOOLE, of New York, was accompanied from Washington, D. C., to Kings Point by Rear Adm. Telfar Knight, United States Maritime Service, Chief, Bureau of Maritime Services, of the United States Maritime Commission, and Commandant of the United States Maritime Service; Capt. J. T. Everett, United States Maritime Service, Assistant Chief, Division of Cadet Corps Training, and Deputy Supervisor, United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps; and by Commander Calvin R. Shorter, United States Maritime Service, Chief Liaison Officer, Bureau of Maritime Services of the United States Maritime Commission. Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, New York, and Congressman EDWARD A. GARMATZ, Maryland, subsequently arrived at Kings Point. The remaining members of the Board were prevented from attending because of the press of affairs in Washington.

TOUR OF THE GROUNDS

Individual tours of the grounds and Academy facilities were conducted for the members of the Board of Visitors by their officer escorts. This tour included visits to cadet-midshipman living quarters and Cleveland Hall, the several academic departments including the television classrooms of the Department of Naval Science where joint experiments on the effectiveness of instruction through the medium of television are being conducted by the United States Merchant Marine Academy, the Naval Special Devices Station at Sands Point, N. Y., and Fordham University. Inspection was also made of the new planetarium built by Academy personnel for use in implementing the course in navigation taught by the Department of Nautical Science. An inspection of the new installation of a ship's steering engine in the Department of Engineering was included in the tour of the engineering facilities.

Upon the conclusion of the tour the cadet-midshipman regimental commander was presented to the members of the board to extend them an invitation to lunch with the regiment in Delano Hall.

MEETING WITH THE REGIMENT OF CADET-MIDSHIPMEN

After lunching with the regiment the members of the board met in the cadet-midshipmen's lounge in private conference with cadet-midshipmen from their home States, from 1245 to 1400.

FIRST MEETING OF THE BOARD

The board assembled at Wiley Hall, Kings Point at 1400, Friday, April 21, 1950.

The following members of the board were present: Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, Democrat, New York; Congressman DONALD L. O'TOOLE, Democrat, New York; Congressman EDWARD A. GARMATZ, Democrat, Maryland.

The members of the board convened in the conference room in Wiley Hall for purposes of organization under the temporary chairmanship of Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH at 1400 Friday, April 21, 1950.

The board elected Congressman KEOGH to serve as permanent chairman and confirmed the appointments of Commander Clifford W. Sandberg and Lt. Maurice W. Price, United States Maritime Service, as secretary and assistant secretary respectively.

The secretary outlined the proposed plan of the day to the chairman and the members of the board. The chairman then directed the secretary to invite the Chief of the Bureau of Maritime Services and the Superintendent of the United States Merchant Marine Academy and their respective staffs to join the board in conference.

At the request of the chairman, the Superintent read his annual report to the board.

Upon the conclusion of the reading of the Superintendent's report to the board the chairman and the members of the board discussed the needs of the academy at considerable length with the Chief of the Bureau of Maritime Services and the Superintendent and their respective staffs. The matters discussed are contained in this report under the sections devoted to general comments and specific recommendations.

GENERAL COMMENTS

The board desires to express its high admiration of the splendid esprit de corps that exists in the regiment, and among the officers, and personnel of the academy. Of equal note is the excellent condition of the physical facilities.

The board is impressed with the obvious contribution made by the United States Merchant Marine Academy to the national defense structure. This is clearly evidenced by the great interest manifested by the Navy in the Kings Point program.

Of particular gratification to the board is the progress the Academy administration has made in those matters specifically recommended by the academic advisory board as a result of their meetings on March 9, 10, and 11, 1949, at Kings Point. This unquestionably is largely responsible for the accreditation of the Academy's curriculum extended by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools on November 26, 1949. It is felt that the efforts of all concerned who have made this recognition possible are to be greatly commended.

The board was pleased to observe that a general policy of keeping operating expenses at a minimum has been rigidly followed and many noticeable economies have been effected.

With respect to the reductions in personnel and operations at Kings Point recently effected by the Marine Commission in conference with the Budget Bureau's formula, the board notes with considerable concern the additional arbitrary 10-percent reduction of the Federal maritime training budget for the fiscal year 1951 recommended by the House Committee on Appropriations. This additional reduction would cause, insofar as Kings Point is concerned, a further release of 36 in personnel by June 30, 1950, in addition to the 46 already released or awaiting release during 1950. It is evident to the board that the efficiency of operations at Kings Point would be most seriously impaired by this additional release of staff members. The board is fully cognizant of the very important position Kings Point has assumed in developing superior Naval Reserve officers and is of the opinion that any additional curtailment of this program would not be in the national interest.

The board notes that discussions are now under way concerning retirement and tenure for the officers and personnel of Kings Point. The board concurs with the specific recommendation on this matter made by the Board of Visitors in 1949 who suggested that an adequate retirement and tenure policy be effected consistent with the practice of the United States Government to provide such benefits for all personnel in Government service.

In part V of the Superintendent's report to the board the attention of the board has been invited to H. R. 1251, Eighty-first Congress, first session, now pending before Congress. This is a bill to revise, codify, and enact into law, title 46 of the United States Code, entitled "Shipping." Briefly, section 545 of chapter 25 of this bill clarifies the status of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, and the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point. The board believes that enabling legislation in form similar to section 545 as revised by H. R. 1251 should be enacted.

The campaign inaugurated to raise funds for the construction of a chapel at Kings Point to serve as a national shrine memorializing the men of the merchant marine is deserving of special comment. The board commends those responsible for the administration of this splendid project, believing that recognition of the valor and heroism of the men of the merchant marine is long overdue.

The need for a suitable library is self-evident in view of the present inadequate facilities. The board is of the considered opinion that a request by the Maritime Commission to the Bureau of the Budget to present to the Congress an estimate for an appropriation to complete the construction of the chapel and library should receive the favorable attention of the Congress.

The suggestion of the academic advisory board relative to the publicizing in certain geographical locations of the merchant marine and the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps is deserving of serious consideration. The board feels that a comparatively small expenditure which an adequate program will entail would contribute in a material way to the national interest.

SPECIFIC RECOMMENDATIONS

The board specifically recommends that the discussions now under way concerning retirement and tenure for officers and personnel at Kings Point be continued with the object in mind of establishing adequate retirement and tenure privileges, consistent with the civil service nature of their duties.

The board specifically recommends that early action be taken to obtain passage of enabling legislation in form similar but broader than that contained in H. R. 1251, title 46, chapter 25, section 545 (a result of the Report of the Committee on Revision of Laws, House of Representatives, under the Chairmanship of Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, New York) now pending before Congress with the object of establishing the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York as a permanent institution. This legislation should be broadened to specify the complement and pay of cadet-midshipmen.

The board specifically recommends that the Bureau of the Budget and the Congress give favorable consideration to a request from the Maritime Commission for such appropriation as may be necessary to complete the construction of the Memorial Chapel and the Library.

The board specifically recommends that a definite allotment of funds be provided for the publicizing of the merchant marine and the advantages offered to American youth by the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps program.

CONCLUSION

The board wishes to again enter upon the records its appreciation of the Maritime Commission, Bureau of Maritime Services, Division of Cadet Corps Training, the regiment of cadet-midshipmen and the officers and personnel of the United States Merchant Marine Academy for the effective contribution they are making to the United States merchant marine and to the national defense structure of the Nation.

The board wishes to thank Rear Adm. Telfair Knight, Chief of the Bureau of Maritime Services and Rear Adm. Gordon McLintock, the Superintendent of the United States Merchant Marine Academy, cadet-midshipmen and officers and personnel of Kings Point for the valuable information and hospitality extended to the members of the board.

The chairman and members of the board wish to express their appreciation for the able assistance given by Commander C. W. Sandberg, secretary of the board and Lt. M. W. Price, assistant secretary of the board.

EUGENE J. KEOGH.
DONALD L. O'TOOLE.
EDWARD A. GARMATZ.

UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION,
BUREAU OF MARITIME SERVICES,
U. S. MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY,
Kings Point, N. Y.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT TO THE SEVENTH CONGRESSIONAL BOARD OF VISITORS, APRIL 21, 22, 1950

GENTLEMEN: We are most happy to welcome the Seventh Congressional Board of Visitors to Kings Point. In these times, when all phases of our national security are under close scrutiny by the Congress, the status and problems of the merchant marine, as a vital element in our security planning, are deserving of the best attention. Since we realize that the effectiveness of our merchant fleet can be no stronger than the efficiency of the personnel manning our vessels, our concern at Kings Point is with the development of thoroughly educated and competent officers who will reflect credit upon our Nation. In the furtherance of this obligation, we will be grateful for the advice and counsel of your Board and for a continuance of the necessary support and guidance which, for the past several years, has stemmed from these annual visits. We want your visit to be both informative and enjoyable and to that end we hope you will call upon us freely to be of service to you.

In these opening remarks, we believe it fitting to pay our respects to the memory of your long-time colleague, and the academy's proven friend, the late Honorable Schuyler Otis Bland. The "Judge," as he was affectionately known, was chairman of our First Congressional Board of Visitors and a member of all succeeding boards up to the present. The same untiring efforts and devotion he displayed over the years to the upbuilding and maintenance of a strong American Merchant Marine characterized his interest in the Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and its academy from its early beginnings and we feel that, in his passing, Kings Point has suffered the loss of one of its stanchest advocates and truest friends.

PART I

Introduction

For the benefit of those members of your board who have not previously visited Kings Point, we feel that, perhaps, an effective means of introduction is to set forth the mission of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and its Academy:

To attract a high type of young American with a definite ambition to become an officer in the United States merchant marine;

To impart to him the necessary academic background and the fundamentals of a practical nautical education essential to a successful career at sea;

To develop in him high sense of honor, uprightness, and loyalty;

To instill in him a pride in his profession, and a determination to uphold the traditions of the merchant marine; and

By effective teaching, training, and guidance, to send him forth to his calling with a deep respect and affection for the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and its Academy.

To effectuate this mission, a course of 4-years' duration was promulgated in 1938, providing a curriculum finely balanced between subjects in the areas of general education and the professional-technical fields for the effective training of deck and engineering officers. As was the case with the other Federal academies and with many colleges and universities, the necessities of the recent war compelled the abridgement of this curriculum. To fulfill the increasing demands for officers to man our rapidly growing merchant fleet and to serve as commissioned officers in the Navy, our courses, during the war years, were reduced to 18 and 24 months. With the cessation of hostilities, these were gradually extended to meet the requirements of the several groups in various stages of transition until, on 1 July, 1946, the full 4-year curriculum was resumed and the first of the classes pursuing the reinstituted full course will be graduated in June of this year.

Up to this time, approximately 9,100 officers have graduated from the cadet corps with merchant marine licenses as third mates or third assistant engineers. These men were also commissioned as ensigns in the United States Naval Reserve. Of this number, about 6,600 were graduated while the war was in progress and, of these, more than 2,100 were selected for active duty in the Navy, many of them remaining to accept permanent commissions in that service.

Since its early beginnings, the Academy's relationships with the Navy have been extremely close. The Navy has been most cooperative in making available surplus equipment for instruction purposes and has manifested its interest in Kings Point in countless other ways. Our records are replete with commendatory expressions from high-ranking Naval officers on the performance of Kings Point graduates, and this fine spirit of recognition has been a source of real strength and genuine satisfaction. Because of its national defense implications, it is believed that the Academy's contribution to the development of Naval Reserve officers is deserving of the particular notice of your Board. At Kings Point, besides courses in naval science and tactics the cadet-midshipmen devote their entire 4 years to a nautical education, including 1 year of practical application at sea, and, throughout, are subjected to the rigid discipline of barracks life and the routines of military procedures designed to develop effective leaders.

PART II

Operation

The physical plant of the United States Merchant Marine Academy, including land and equipment, as it now exists, represents a capital investment by the Government of approximately $12,000,000—less than the cost of one modern submarine, the merchant vessel's most dreaded enemy. Certain foreign powers are spending untold millions to build up their submarine fleets and our Navy is allocating multimillions in the development of antisubmarine weapons. This academy, at a cost of less than 2/100 of 1 percent of our total national defense budget, can play a vital role in that program since every Kings Point graduate, as a highly trained and skilled merchant marine and Naval Reserve officer, becomes a potentially effective antisubmarine weapon.

During the past year, every effort has been made to conduct the affairs of the academy at a high standard of efficiency, despite considerably curtailed budget allowances. The expenditure of Government funds for new equipment and apparatus has been comparatively small, that being acquired having come to us through the medium of transfer of surplus materials from the Navy and Maritime Commission and by direct presentations by manufacturers. Unfortunately, the availability of surplus materials from Government agency sources is lessening rapidly and the benefits we have enjoyed up to now in this respect will, before long, be denied to us. The maintenance of grounds, buildings, and equipment has had our best attention with a limited staff, which will be even further reduced in the approaching fiscal year. The maintenance problem becomes one of growing importance as our buildings and plant become older and the costs of materials increase.

The present complement of cadet-midshipmen at the academy is 1,019, inclusive of 69 Filipinos in training on behalf of the Philippine Government. These are divided:

First class (upper)	220
First class (lower	145
Second class (upper)	179
Second class (lower)	141
Fourth class (upper)	194
Fourth class (lower)	140
Total	1,019

This total, comprised of young men from practically every State in the Union, is somewhat higher than would normally be the case at this time and is explained by the transfer last month of 91 cadet-midshipmen (Fourth class, upper) from the cadet school at Pass Christian, Miss., which had been closed because of an anticipated radical reduction in the appropriation for cadet corps training in fiscal 1951.

The third class cadet-midshipmen, now at sea, total 445, including 20 Filipinos. Of this number, approximately 290 are in the upper half and the remainder in the lower half. All of these men are serving as cadets on merchant ships in regular operation and are paid (at the rate of $82.50 per month) by the companies operating the vessels.

In conformance with the policy outlined by the Bureau of the Budget and approved by the President, our total cadet-midshipmen complement for fiscal 1951 will be materially reduced. This complement, ashore and afloat, during the current fiscal year, will average 1,260. The budget proposed for fiscal 1951 will cause this to be reduced to 1,116 and, because of the necessity for further limiting the number of young men admitted each half-year, the over-all complement will, shortly, be reduced to approximately 800.

The cadet corps system of education has its critics and, while on the subject of cadet-midshipman complement, it seems appropriate to comment upon certain statements which have been made by these opponents at various House and Senate committee hearings and on the floors of Congress. The principal burden of these criticisms is: (1) that because of the postwar unemployment situation prevailing in the merchant marine, the training of additional officers for an overcrowded field should be discontinued; and (2) that, having been trained at Government expense, a large proportion of the academy's graduates have made no attempt to follow the sea, or, after sailing for a short time, have undertaken extended educational programs elsewhere or have entered other than maritime fields of employment.

With respect to the first, the unemployment situation is recognized, but this is typical of the merchant marine. From time immemorial, there have been varying numbers of mariners "on the beach," but, in the present instance, the ranks are swelled by the many less competent who readily found berths when shipping was at its height during and in the years immediately following the war, but who lack the qualifications to justify their employment in these more competitive times. There has been a constant decline in the number of vessels in operation since the war, accelerated somewhat in recent months by the approaching deadline (June 30, 1950) terminating the bareboat charter of Government-owned ships. It is anticipated that this decline will continue in a slight measure for the next year, when the active fleet will reach a total of approximately 1,200 ocean-going vessels, employing, roughly, 12,000 licensed officers. This does not take into consideration a large number of other vessels staffed by merchant marine officers such as the Military Sea Transportation Service, Army engineers, inland waterways, and the Great Lakes fleet which, at the height of its seasonal operation, comprises some 450 American-flag vessels. As the result of many years of study, it has been determined that the approximate attrition or turn-over in officer requirements is about 10 percent per annum. On this basis, our national needs, for ocean-going vessels alone, would be about 1,200 officers per year. Under our present plan, Kings Point will admit 200 applicants per year and, with a normal attrition of about 25 percent, will graduate about 150 officers per year—12½ percent of these anticipated requirements. With the four State academies combined graduating about the same number, this leaves 75 percent of the vacancies to be filled by men in unlicensed positions qualifying to become officers. Obviously, the governing consideration in this matter should not be one of quantity but, rather, the technical and professional competence of the officers to whom the operation of our fleet is to be entrusted. The great technological strides that have been made in recent years in ship design, high-pressure propulsion plants, intricate auxiliaries and electronic aids to navigation, demand technically trained and educated men. Kings Point is producing such men, and in only such numbers as to provide the nucleus necessary to uphold the standards of a merchant marine as envisioned in the national policy declared in the Merchant Marine Act of 1936—the same act under which the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps was created.

The second criticism is evidently founded upon a comparison of the number of Kings Point graduates now following the sea, with the total number graduated by the cadet corps since its inception. Such a comparison is neither fair nor valid. From 1941 to 1945, when the war was at its full tempo, our country was seeking men and yet more men to officer our increasing merchant fleet. Of the numbers of young men who responded to the call and entered the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps during that period, many of them, perhaps the majority, selected this service not because they had any idea or intention of following the sea as a career, but as their contribution to the war effort. Like the many thousands who entered the Army, Navy, and Air Corps to make this contribution, a large proportion had predetermined careers in diversified fields and, when entering the cadet corps, interrupted educational programs projected toward those ends. Again, like their counterparts in the other services, they resumed those programs upon their release. Lacking the benefit of Government assistance for their tuition, such as other veterans enjoy, many of our wartime graduates undertook service on their licenses for a time to accumulate sufficient funds to see them through. Of those who may not have determined upon other careers prior to entering the cadet corps, a number were undoubtedly influenced by the enactment of the so-called GI bill of rights providing, among other things, college education for veterans. The benefits of this bill were denied the men of the merchant marine. It became apparent to our young men, who entered the cadet corps from the motivations of war service that they were destined to meet degree-equipped contemporaries at any time they sought to establish themselves ashore, and, accordingly, many decided to similarly equip themselves. At that time, our Academy had not been accredited and we were not awarding degrees. In the light of this background, the fact that only a comparatively modest percentage of the total number of our graduates is now following the profession of the sea will be more readily understandable.

For the past 2 years or more, a number of the Great Lakes operators have been evincing increasing interest in the Kings Point program. In January of this year, Mr. John L. Horton, marine superintendent of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., visited the Academy to address the regimental assembly on the topic, A Career on the Great Lakes, which was particularly well received by the cadet-midshipmen. This company together with three others, is accepting cadet-midshipmen for their third-class year service and, to provide for the essential differences between fresh-water and deep-sea routines, we have prepared special assignments for study by these cadet-midshipmen while on the Great Lakes. A number of our graduates are already employed in licensed capacities on Great Lakes vessels, while many now at the Academy look forward to making their futures on those waters.

PART III

Academics

Under this heading, we are extremely happy to report a most significant event—the accreditation of the Academy on November 19, 1949, by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. This action followed a careful examination of the prescribed courses of study, the qualifications of personnel, and an exhaustive investigation of every detail of the operation of the Academy by the association's inspection committee from the commission on higher education. Understandably, we have been greatly pleased and encouraged with the result of their findings which we consider marks a most important milestone in the Academy's development and progress. Pursuant to authorization contained in Public Law 247, Eighty-first Congress, introduced by your fellow Board member, the Honorable EUGENE J. KEOGH, and approved August 18, 1949, we are now empowered to confer the bachelor of science degree upon our graduates. The first to receive the degree will be the members of the class to graduate on June 21, next, and studies are now in progress for the formulation of regulations setting forth the requirements to be met by previous graduates to qualify for the degree.

On March 2, 3, and 4, 1950, we had the pleasure of welcoming our Academic Advisory Board on its third annual visit. This Board, appointed by the United States Maritime Commission in accordance with Public Law 214, Eightieth Congress, for the purpose of advising the Superintendent concerning the curriculum is composed of seven of the Nation's outstanding educators, of whom all but one were in attendance. The Board was most thorough in its review of our academic program and activities, particularly with respect to the action taken on the specific recommendations it had made on previous visits. The general satisfaction expressed by them with respect to our academic progress was, naturally, most gratifying to us.

The Academic Advisory Board made a strong recommendation regarding the publicizing of the merchant marine and the advantages of the Academy in certain geographical areas of the United States. Although the benefits of a program of this kind are fully appreciated, our activities in such fields are woefully restricted because of inadequate funds. As a consequence, in many sections of the interior of our country, numbers of young men are unaware of the promising careers that might be theirs. From our standpoint, the greater selectivity of applicants resulting from an increased number of applications is much to be desired and it is hoped your Board will give consideration to ways and means by which the Academic Advisory Board's suggestion may be implemented.

PART IV

Current problems and planning

Public Law 485, Eightieth Congress, approved April 17, 1948, authorized the United States Maritime Commission "to construct a suitable chapel for religious worship by any denomination, sect, or religion, and a library, at the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N. Y." The Maritime Commission was further "authorized to accept private contributions to assist in defraying the cost of construction of the chapel and library provided for" herein.

After a careful survey made by an Academy committee, it was determined that the solicitation at this time of private subscriptions for the construction of a library would probably have little public appeal. Concerning the chapel, it was decided that, rather than to present this as a strictly Academy or Cadet Corps project, popular interest would be encouraged by constructing the chapel as a perpetual national memorial to all of the heroic officers and men of the American merchant marine who have given their lives in the service of our country. Accordingly, prominent persons from banking, insurance, industry, the clergy of all denominations, and the professions, were invited to serve on an honorary national committee and as members of working regional committees comprising the Atlantic coast and Great Lakes region, the Pacific coast region, and Gulf coast region. The national campaign was inaugurated on January 1 of this year under the director of the supervisor, Rear Adm. Richard R. McNulty, who has been designated national secretary of the committee, and is to continue until October 31, 1950, with the goal set at $500,000, each region being allocated a fixed quota. The Academy personnel is, of course, very active in the campaign and we anticipate no difficulty in raising and exceeding our quota of $7,500. The reports of the general public response have, up to now, not been too encouraging. To a large extent, the campaign has been retarded by newspaper accounts and other reports of appropriation reductions affecting Cadet Corps training. The obvious handicaps created by such impression, not only with respect to the chapel fund but in many other ways, serve to emphasize the Academy's dependence upon an adequate and stable budget structure which can be resolved only by constructive and understanding congressional support.

Although the procurement of funds through private subscription for the construction of a library has not been deemed feasible, our need for such a structure is nonetheless very real. As an institution of learning accredited to rank with our other Federal academies and leading colleges, Kings Point deserves a properly housed library of adequate size and facilities for the efficient conduct of instructional and research activities.

In the area of planning, such matters as teaching methods, examination procedures, grading practices, and similar academic problems, common to all educational institutions, are under constant review. We do not permit our curriculum to remain static, and, after appropriate study, such changes as may be required to keep our courses in line with the latest technical developments, the shipping industry's needs, and current trends in the fields of general education, are adopted. The maximum educational needs of the cadet-midshipmen are our first consideration and, with due recognition of the limitations of the learning process, our courses are designed to fulfill those needs.

PART V

Matters submitted for consideration

(A) Sufficiency and Stability of Annual Appropriation

The budget estimate for the fiscal year 1951 submitted to the Congress by the President provides the sum of $1,984,267 for the operation of the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, as against $2,404,483 appropriated for the current fiscal year of 1950, or a reduction of $420,216. This is exclusive of the cost of training 89 Filipino cadets, funds for which are provided by the State Department. In this budget estimate for fiscal year 1951 the President has also directed a change in the method of covering expense allowances for cadet-midshipmen after July 1, 1950. Heretofore they have been allowed $65 per month, from which they have purchased their uniforms, textbooks, and other required equipment, and have paid other incidental expenses, including laundry, dry cleaning, haircuts, and cost of Academy activities. Begining with July 1, 1950, the expense allowances will be eliminated and they will be supplied with required uniforms and textbooks not to exceed a cost of $200 per cadet-midshipman per year and institutional (not personal) laundry at Government expense.

The budget estimate for the fiscal year 1951 includes a limitation on staff salaries which will provide funds for a staff of 363 persons as against 409 for the fiscal year 1950. The House Committee on Appropriations has recommended a further reduction of $257,340 from the over-all budget estimate of $3,600,000 for all phases of Federal maritime training of which the allowance for Kings Point is a part. Should this further reduction be approved by the Congress, it will result in the necessary release by June 30, 1950, of 36 additional members of our staff, since the proposed reduction is applied to the limitation for salaries and is a flat additional 10 percent of that limitation (less $9,640 for other staff expense). The over-all staff to conduct the training program has already been reduced by 15 percent in the budget estimate. The Maritime Commission is asking that this budget cut be restored. It will be impossible for us to operate the Academy efficiently with this further proposed staff reduction.

It is hoped that future appropriations for the Academy can be stabilized now that the number of cadet-midshipmen to be trained has been reduced to conform to peacetime conditions. It is most difficult to plan ahead for an educational institution with a 4-year course of training unless appropriations can be depended upon with some degree of certainty. The Bureau of the Budget has indicated its agreement with this policy.

(B) Retirement and Tenure for Staff Personnel

The Sixth Congressional Board of Visitors in May 1949 recommended that the attention of the Maritime Commission be drawn to the need for adequate tenure and retirement for officers and personnel of the Merchant Marine Academy, consistent with the practice of the United States Government to provide those benefits for all personnel in Government service. The Maritime Commission has taken cognizance of this recommendation and is engaged at the present time in discussions with the Bureau of the Budget on the subject. The Bureau of the Budget is on record as approving the principles of retirement and is now making a study of the best method of bringing it about.

(C) Clarifying Legislation for the United States Merchant Marine Academy and the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps

The attention of the Board is respectfully invited to H. R. 1251, Eighty-first Congress, first session, now pending before Congress, which is a bill to revise, codify and enact into law, title 46 of the United States Code, entitled "Shipping." Section 545 of Chapter 25 of this bill (maritime training) clarifies the status of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point and reads as follows:

"Legislative authority for the education of officers for the American merchant marine stems from powers granted to the United States Maritime Commission under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, which specifically authorizes the training of American citizens in the status of cadets and cadet officers to become officers of American vessels. Supplementing this general power are a few public laws on specific matters such as the degree-granting power, the appointment annually of a congressional board of visitors, the creation of an academic advisory board, the appointment of cadet-midshipmen from the Latin-American Republics and from the Philippines, H. R. 1251, Eighty-first Congress, first session—is a bill to revise, codify, and enact into law title 46 of the United States Code, entitled "Shipping." Section 545 of chapter 25 of this bill (maritime training) clarifies the status of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, and reads as follows:

"'The Maritime Commission may train American citizens to become licensed officers of the merchant marine of the United States in a status of cadets and cadet officers at shore-based units, including the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N. Y., on training vessels of the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, on Government-owned or subsidized vessels, in cooperation with other governmental and private agencies, or other vessels, and for instructional purposes only, in shipyards, plants, and industrial and educational organizations.

"'Such training shall be upon terms arranged by the Commission. Expenditures incident to such training are authorized.'

"The attention of the Board is respectfully invited to this pending legislation."

(D) Chapel and Library

As previously reported herein a campaign has been inaugurated to raise funds for the construction of a memorial chapel at Kings Point in accordance with provisions of Public Law 485, Eightieth Congress, approved April 17, 1948, which authorizes the United States Maritime Commission "To construct a suitable chapel for religious worship by any denomination, sect or religion and a library, at the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N. Y., and to accept private contributions to assist in defraying the cost of construction of the chapel and library provided for" therein.

This campaign is scheduled for conclusion on October 1, 1950, after which we will request the Bureau of the Budget to present to the Congress an estimate for such appropriation as may be necessary to complete the two buildings.

GORDON MCLINTOCK,
Rear Admiral, United States Maritime Service, Superintendent.

REDUCTION IN EXCISE TAXES

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the question on the passage of the bill (H. R. 8920) to reduce excise taxes, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the Members of the House realize how futile it is to attempt to obtain an over-all reduction of our taxes.

Long after the fighting of World War II has ceased, while we are in the most prosperous years of our existence, this wasteful administration, hoping to attract votes, is each year spending more than it receives—going ever deeper and deeper into debt.

The efforts of the Republicans and those on the other side who believe that the only way to prevent inflation, bankruptcy, and a grievous depression is to reduce needless spending, rather than to increase taxation, find themselves faced with a situation which makes it impossible for the Congress, if needful Government activities are to continue, to put through a tax bill which would reduce the total take obtained by taxation.

President Truman, who was never conspicuous, so far as we know, as an individual who achieved financial success or who engaged in any activities other than governmental which returned him a livelihood through his own efforts, has issued a decree that any tax bill which does not net his administration spending money approximately equal in amount to that which he is now wasting will be vetoed.

Unfortunately for the citizen, for the good of the Republic, he forces us into a situation where, if the Government is to continue to operate at all, in order to get a reduction in excise taxes we must vote for additional taxes on corporations. His argument is easily understandable.

It is that there are more people who pay excise taxes than there are who realize that they contribute to the payment of taxes levied upon corporations, hence, it is politically expedient to reduce excise taxes but increase corporate taxes, for, says the President—at least, by his action—the poor dumb citizen will think he is getting a reduction in the tax he pays on many an article he purchases over the counter but will not realize that the taxes on corporations are, by the corporations, passed on to him. Excise taxes—war taxes—should be repealed—not just reduced—expenditures should be reduced instead of taxes increased.

My vote shall be cast for the motion to recommit the bill and, if that fails, I will then be forced by the President's action to vote against the bill itself.

It is my hope—yes, and it is my prayer—that before it is too late we will get for President an American who has sound economic ideas, who believes in America first, and that his first duty is to the taxpayer and the citizen of this country, rather than to a political machine.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, the providing of relief from wartime excise taxes is long overdue and I am supporting the measure which the committee, after lengthy study and work, has brought before the House at this time. This measure will bring about a substantial reduction of the excise taxes which were imposed during the war and which were necessary as a wartime measure. The public has been long-suffering and patient in the payment of such wartime taxes for more than 5 years after the cessation of hostilities.

As you know, these wartime taxes would have expired automatically during 1947. However, they were continued by action of the Eightieth Congress as permanent legislation and it is, therefore, necessary to pass this measure here today in order to repeal this permanent wartime tax legislation and to effect an excise tax reduction.

It is hoped and believed that this measure will be approved by President Truman. He has indicated that no excise tax reduction bill would be favorably considered by him—in fact, the same would be vetoed—unless there were coupled with the reduction feature of the bill provision for needed revenue—which would thus be lost—from other sources. And this bill does just that. It provides for excise tax relief and, at the same time, provides for necessary revenue by levying an additional tax on corporate enterprises with earnings in excess of approximately $167,000. This bill will provide for both consumers and small business much needed relief and encouragement.

This bill affords both relief for consumers and for additional taxes for the Government from those best able to pay. I am supporting this measure and, by reason of the fact that it is long overdue, I urge that it be passed.

Mr. ROOSEVELT. Mr. Speaker, the tax bill which is before us is an admirable measure and I rise to urge its adoption. It seems to me that the Democratic majority on the Ways and Means Committee has done an outstanding job of balancing the needs of those taxpayers who most need tax relief, and the needs of the Federal Government in meeting the great costs of making America strong and secure. In some respects, the bill does not go as far in readjusting the tax burden as I might like but by and large it is an excellent measure.

What it does, in brief, is—

First. To reduce substantially inequitable excise taxes on a number of consumer goods.

Second. To plug a number of tax loopholes so that part of the revenue lost by the excise tax reduction will be made up.

Third. To increase the tax rate for a small group of high-income corporations, while reducing the tax load on many small businesses.

I have urged the reduction or elimination of wartime excise taxes on the floor of the House and to the Ways and Means Committee in the past. Because of the large number of small, consumer goods business firms in my district in New York, I have had a great deal of information about these taxes, particularly as they affect furs, jewelry, luggage, cosmetics, photographic equipment, and electrical appliances. In addition, when the movie industry asked for a cut in the tax on admissions, I obtained a pledge from the theater industry's leaders so that all of the benefit of tax reduction would be passed along to movie-goers in the form of lower prices. The committee estimates that the excise tax reductions or eliminations in this bill will total $1,010,000,000. Perhaps $100,000,000 will come back to the Federal Government from these industries, since their volume of business will almost surely go up as a result of this cut.

Part of this net loss of $910,000,000 will be made up by plugging loopholes in our present tax laws. For example, salaries and wages paid to most Americans are now subject to taxes which are withheld. But taxes on corporate and patronage dividends are not now collected by the withholding technique. This bill plugs that loophole, and it is estimated that the Government will gain $170,000,000 that way. Another $100,000,000 will be made up by taxing the business ventures of various trusts and foundations, and $70,000,000 more will come in from stop-gap taxes on insurance companies.

Almost half of the revenue loss from the excise-tax cut will be made up by plugging these loopholes. The final major change in the tax structure is the readjustment of the corporate-tax structure.

Under this bill, some 20,000 corporations whose net income after taxes is $167,000 will pay a slightly higher tax rate. At the same time, some 170,000 smaller corporations whose net income is under $167,000 will pay at a lower rate than they did this year. For those opponents of this bill whose greatest concern is with the welfare of big business, I should like to present several excerpts from the recent study of the joint committee of the House and the Senate on the economic report—Joint Economic Report; Report No. 1843, Eighty-first Congress, second session.

First, on the question of what has happened to corporate and personal income taxes in the last few years—pages 76–77:

In the last 10 years marked changes have taken place in the distribution of the burden of taxation on individuals. In 1939 individual income taxes took up 15 percent of the total tax burden. In 1949, the figure is estimated at 37 percent, representing an increase of more than twofold while that collected by taxes on corporations increased less than one-half. The reduction in the percentage obtained from customs duties and from estate and gift taxes is likewise striking. Between 1945 and 1949 the percentage collected by excise taxes increased 6 points from 12 percent to a figure of 18 percent, while the tax burden borne directly by corporations went down 5 points from 32 percent to a figure of 27 percent. * * *

The second notable change in the individual income-tax structure has been the large increase in the percentage of the total that is paid by those with incomes less than $10,000. * * * In 1947, the last year for which the Bureau of Internal Revenue has published detailed data, those earning less than $10,000 paid 62 percent of all income taxes. The smaller group in 1939, paid 18 percent of the total. Contrariwise, those in 1939 whose taxable net income was $25,000 or over, paid roughly 65 percent of the total, in 1947 about 23 percent.

Second, the joint economic report is very illuminating on the relative ability of big and small businesses to pay increased corporate taxes—pages 54–55:

There is evidence that small business has not fully shared in profit bonanza since 1947. * * * All manufacturing corporations are classified into five groups according to the size of their total assets. * * * Thus at the end of the second quarter of 1949 the five classes had sorted themselves out so that the level of their profits was a direct reflection of their relative size. The biggest corporation had the largest rate of profit, the smallest corporations had the smallest rate of profit. The three middle groups fell in between in the order of size. In the second half of 1949, the profit rates of the two groups with the highest volume of assets * * * rose while the profit rates of the three smallest groups fell.

In the postwar boom, when most goods were scarce, there was an unlimited market for everyone's goods. For the time being, the small businesses of this country did well. Their profit rates rose to levels as high or higher than those of the business giants. When this exceptional period of scarcity came to an end, big business was scarcely affected. The earnings rates of little concerns started downhill.

It is these economic facts that prove the wisdom of lightening the burden of taxation on small business, while increasing it on big business. Many thousands of small businesses will also benefit from the reduction of excise taxes. Whether it is considered from the standpoint of the stability of the economy, or the justice or relative tax loads, this bill deserves to be passed immediately.

Mr. DONOHUE. Mr. Speaker, it is well known that I have long been urging congressional action to substantially reduce, and in some instances to repeal entirely, the war-emergency excise taxes. I note with real satisfaction the proposal before us now incorporates a great many of the provisions included in the bill—H. R. 8765—which I personally introduced. I am, therefore, very glad to speak in support of this measure and urge my colleagues to join with me in voting in favor of it.

We have today the opportunity to answer the American taxpayers' demands for relief from excessive taxes assessed against certain goods as wartime emergency measures to aid the war effort. These excise taxes have proved to be an unbearable handicap on the bowed shoulders of our already heavily overburdened taxpayers. They constitute a definite drag on legitimate business expansion and full employment.

Although they were supposed to be levied on luxuries only, I submit such a concept is obviously a hoax. Excise taxes are an unjust burden on every housewife, every family man, every career girl, every wage earner, every businessman, and almost every manufacturer.

Who will say that transportation is a luxury, that telephone and telegraph messages are luxuries, that baby toilet articles are luxuries, that women's cosmetics are a luxury, along with many other numerous items and services which carry the penalty of taxes for ordinary usages?

The war-emergency taxes have been patiently borne by our people for a period of 9 years, 5 of which are after the end of hostilities with both Germany and Japan. In the Revenue Act of 1945 reductions were made in corporation income taxes, the corporate excess-profits tax was repealed, and individual income taxes were somewhat reduced. Further reductions were made in the individual income taxes in the Revenue Act of 1948. However, the war-emergency excise taxes are still in effect at their wartime levels. Today you and I have the chance to correct this injustice being visited mainly on the ordinary man and woman in this country. I earnestly hope you will all take advantage of it.

I make this plea to you with full realization that we are faced with, and will perhaps face for a long time to come, an extraordinarily large and oppressive budget. This is due principally because of the cold war, lately becoming hotter, in which we are forced to engage. The United States is a competitor with a great foreign power that is bending all its resources to overtake us in technology and production and military effectiveness.

It is, therefore, vitally necessary for us to realistically confront the fact of gigantic expenditures for national security in self-defense. It is only at the peril of slavery that we can afford to fall behind in the race for world leadership with our competitor. Although the outlook is a grim one, I earnestly believe we can maintain our obligations, at home and abroad, and still, by this excise-tax-repeal action, extend a measure of tax relief to the American citizens. For the sake of a high American morale, in these threatening times, we must demonstrate to our own American people that we are not forgetting them.

I further believe we can accomplish this long-sought objective without endangering the national security or increasing the existing budget deficit. The bill we are presently considering contains provisions for plugging up definite tax loopholes which will make up, in good amount, for the loss of revenue resulting from excise-tax reductions. Of course, as a natural corollary to reduction of excise taxes there should be, and there must be, a real reduction in Federal expenditures. The elimination of waste and extravagance in Government spending along with curtailment of nonessential Federal functions can and must be developed into reality in order to maintain the integrity of this country. As a member of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, which considered the Hoover Commission recommendations, I have supported, and will continue to support, every Hoover proposal to sensibly save the American taxpayers' money and to see to it that he gets a dollar value service for the dollar he contributes. We have already enacted into law several of the Hoover suggestions, and I hope we will adopt a good many more of them before this Congress adjourns.

Of course, these deliberations this afternoon serve, as I stated many times before, to emphasize the absolute need of completely overhauling the tax system structure, and I earnestly hope effective action toward this objective will soon be initiated.

If we follow these tenets of a sound fiscal policy, we can forestall the Soviet strategy of sabotaging the American economy and, at the same time, demonstrate to the American taxpayers that the United States Congress exists primarily to promote the welfare of Americans first.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. REED of New York. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. REED of New York moves to recommit the bill H. R. 8920 to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to report it back forthwith as two separate bills, the first bill containing those provisions relating to excise taxes and the second bill containing the remaining provisions of H. R. 8920.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 147, nays 239, answered "present" 1, not voting 43, as follows:

[Roll No. 188]

YEAS—147

Allen, Calif.	Bishop	Clevenger
Allen, Ill.	Blackney	Cole, Kans.
Anderson, Calif.	Boggs, Del.	Cole, N. Y.
Andresen, August H.	Bolton, Ohio	Corbett
	Bramblett	Cotton
Angell	Brehm	Coudert
Arends	Brown, Ohio	Crawford
Auchincloss	Byrnes, Wis.	Cunningham
Barrett, Wyo.	Canfield	Curtis
Bates, Mass.	Case, N. J.	Dague
Beall	Case, S. Dak.	Davis, Wis.
Bennett, Mich.	Chiperfield	D'Ewart
Dolliver	Kennedy	Rees
Dondero	Kilburn	Rich
Eaton	Kunkel	Riehlman
Ellsworth	Latham	Rogers, Mass.
Elston	LeCompte	Sadlak
Fenton	LeFevre	St. George
Ford	Lichtenwalter	Saylor
Fulton	Lodge	Scott, Hugh D., Jr.
Gamble	Lovre
Gavin	McConnell	Scrivner
Golden	McCulloch	Scudder
Goodwin	McDonough	Shafer
Graham	McMillen, Ill.	Sheppard
Gwinn	Mack, Wash.	Short
Hale	Macy	Simpson, Ill.
Hall, Leonard W.	Marshall	Simpson, Pa.
	Martin, Iowa	Smith, Kans.
Halleck	Martin, Mass.	Smith, Wis.
Hand	Mason	Stefan
Harden	Merrow	Stockman
Harvey	Meyer	Taber
Herter	Michener	Talle
Heselton	Miller, Md.	Taylor
Hill	Miller, Nebr.	Tollefson
Hoeven	Murray, Wis.	Towe
Hoffman, Mich.	Nelson	Van Zandt
Holmes	Nicholson	Velde
Hope	Nixon	Vorys
Horan	Norblad	Vursell
James	O'Hara, Minn.	Wadsworth
Jenison	O'Konski	Weichel
Jenkins	Patterson	Widnall
Jennings	Pfeiffer, William L.	Wigglesworth
Jensen		Wilson, Ind.
Judd	Phillips, Calif.	Wolcott
Kean	Potter	Wolverton
Kearney	Poulson	Woodruff
Kearns	Reed, Ill.
Keating	Reed, N. Y.

NAYS—239

Abbitt	Doughton	Kruse
Abernethy	Douglas	Lane
Addonizio	Doyle	Lanham
Albert	Durham	Larcade
Allen, La.	Eberharter	Lind
Andrews	Elliott	Linehan
Aspinall	Engle, Calif.	Lucas
Bailey	Fallon	Lyle
Baring	Feighan	Lynch
Barrett, Pa.	Fernandez	McCarthy
Battle	Fisher	McCormack
Beckworth	Flood	McGrath
Bennett, Fla.	Forand	McGuire
Bentsen	Frazier	McKinnon
Biemiller	Fugate	McMillan, S. C.
Blatnik	Furcolo	McSweeney
Boggs, La.	Garmatz	Mack, Ill.
Bolling	Gary	Madden
Bolton, Md.	Gathings	Magee
Bonner	Gordon	Mahon
Bosone	Gore	Mansfield
Boykin	Gorski	Marcantonio
Brooks	Granahan	Marsalis
Brown, Ga.	Granger	Miles
Bryson	Grant	Mills
Buchanan	Green	Monroney
Buckley, Ill.	Gregory	Morgan
Buckley, N. Y.	Gross	Morrison
Burke	Guill	Morton
Burleson	Hagen	Moulder
Burnside	Hardy	Multer
Burton	Hare	Murdock
Byrne, N. Y.	Harris	Murphy
Camp	Harrison	Murray, Tenn.
Cannon	Hart	Noland
Carlyle	Havenner	Norrell
Carnahan	Hays, Ark.	Norton
Carroll	Hays, Ohio	O'Brien, Ill.
Cavalcante	Hébert	O'Brien, Mich.
Celler	Hedrick	O'Hara, Ill.
Chatham	Heffernan	O'Neill
Chelf	Heller	O'Sullivan
Chesney	Herlong	O'Toole
Christopher	Hoffman, Ill.	Pace
Chudoff	Holifield	Passman
Clemente	Howell	Patman
Colmer	Huber	Patten
Combs	Hull	Perkins
Cooley	Jackson, Wash.	Peterson
Cooper	Jacobs	Pfeifer, Joseph L.
Cox	Javits
Crook	Jonas	Philbin
Crosser	Jones, Ala.	Pickett
Davenport	Jones, Mo.	Poage
Davies, N. Y.	Jones, N. C.	Polk
Davis, Ga.	Karst	Powell
Davis, Tenn.	Karsten	Preston
Dawson	Kee	Price
Deane	Kelly, N. Y.	Priest
DeGraffenried	Keogh	Rabaut
Delaney	Kilday	Rains
Denton	King	Ramsay
Dollinger	Kirwan	Rankin
Donohue	Klein	Redden
Regan	Stanley	Whitaker
Rhodes	Steed	White, Calif.
Ribicoff	Sullivan	White, Idaho
Richards	Sutton	Whitten
Robeson	Tackett	Whittington
Rodino	Tauriello	Wickersham
Rogers, Fla.	Teague	Wier
Rooney	Thomas	Williams
Roosevelt	Thompson	Willis
Sabath	Trimble	Wilson, Tex.
Sadowski	Underwood	Winstead
Secrest	Vinson	Withrow
Smathers	Wagner	Woodhouse
Smith, Va.	Walsh	Yates
Spence	Walter	Young
Staggers	Welch	Zablocki

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Miller, Calif.

NOT VOTING—43

Andersen, H. Carl	Hall, Edwin Arthur	Quinn
		Rivers
Barden	Hinshaw	Sanborn
Bates, Ky.	Hobbs	Sasscer
Breen	Irving	Scott, Hardie
Bulwinkle	Jackson, Calif.	Shelley
Burdick	Johnson	Sikes
Dingell	Keefe	Sims
Engel, Mich.	Kelley, Pa.	Smith, Ohio
Evins	Kerr	Stigler
Fellows	McGregor	Thornberry
Fogarty	Mitchell	Werdel
Gillette	Morris	Wheeler
Gilmer	Phillips, Tenn.	Wilson, Okla.
Gossett	Plumley	Wood

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. McGregor for, with Mr. Bates of Kentucky against.

Mr. Smith of Ohio for, with Mr. Wilson of Oklahoma against.

Mr. Engel of Michigan for, with Mr. Sasscer against.

Mr. Fellows for, with Mr. Barden against.

Mr. Hinshaw for, with Mr. Kerr against.

Mr. Hardie Scott for, with Mr. H. Carl Andersen against.

Mr. Gillette for, with Mr. Dingell against.

Mr. Jackson of California for, with Mr. Miller of California against.

Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall for, with Mr. Gilmer against.

Mr. Sanborn for, with Mr. Sims against.

Mr. Johnson for, with Mr. Sikes against.

Mr. Plumley for, with Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania against.

Until further notice:

Mr. Hobbs with Mr. Keefe.

Mr. Mitchell with Mr. Burdick.

Mr. Rivers with Mr. Werdel.

Mr. Breen with Mr. Phillips of Tennessee.

Mr. WITHROW changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I have a live pair with the gentleman from California, Mr. JACKSON. If he were present he would have voted "yea." I voted "nay." I withdraw my vote and vote "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 375, nays 14, not voting 41, as follows:

[Roll No. 189]

YEAS—375

Abbitt	Allen, Ill.	Andrews
Abernethy	Allen, La.	Angell
Addonizio	Anderson, Calif.	Arends
Albert	Andresen, August H.	Aspinall
Allen, Calif.		Auchincloss

Bailey	Ford	McGuire
Baring	Frazier	McKinnon
Barrett, Pa.	Fugate	McMillan, S. C.
Barrett, Wyo.	Fulton	McMillen, Ill.
Bates, Mass.	Furcolo	McSweeney
Battle	Gamble	Mack, Ill.
Beall	Garmatz	Mack, Wash.
Beckworth	Gary	Madden
Bennett, Fla.	Gathings	Magee
Bennett, Mich.	Gavin	Mahon
Bentsen	Golden	Mansfield
Biemiller	Goodwin	Marcantonio
Bishop	Gordon	Marsalis
Blackney	Gore	Martin, Iowa
Blatnik	Gorski	Martin, Mass.
Boggs, Del.	Graham	Merrow
Boggs, La.	Granahan	Meyer
Bolling	Granger	Michener
Bolton, Md.	Grant	Miles
Bolton, Ohio	Green	Miller, Calif.
Bonner	Gregory	Miller, Md.
Bosone	Gross	Miller, Nebr.
Boykin	Guill	Mills
Bramblett	Hagen	Monroney
Brehm	Hale	Morgan
Brooks	Hall, Leonard W.	Morrison
Brown, Ga.	Halleck	Moulder
Brown, Ohio	Hand	Multer
Bryson	Harden	Murdock
Buchanan	Hardy	Murphy
Buckley, Ill.	Hare	Murray, Tenn.
Buckley, N. Y.	Harris	Murray, Wis.
Burke	Harrison	Nelson
Burleson	Hart	Nicholson
Burnside	Harvey	Nixon
Burton	Havenner	Noland
Byrne, N. Y.	Hays, Ark.	Norblad
Byrnes, Wis.	Hays, Ohio	Norrell
Camp	Hébert	Norton
Canfield	Hedrick	O'Brien, Ill.
Cannon	Heffernan	O'Brien, Mich.
Carlyle	Heller	O'Hara, Ill.
Carnahan	Herlong	O'Konski
Carroll	Herter	O'Neill
Case, N. J.	Heselton	O'Sullivan
Case, S. Dak.	Hill	O'Toole
Cavalcante	Hoeven	Pace
Celler	Hoffman, Ill.	Passman
Chatham	Holifield	Patman
Chelf	Holmes	Patten
Chesney	Hope	Patterson
Chiperfield	Horan	Perkins
Christopher	Howell	Pfeifer, Joseph L.
Chudoff	Huber	Pfeiffer, William L.
Clemente	Hull	Philbin
Clevenger	Jackson, Wash.	Phillips, Calif.
Cole, Kans.	Jacobs	Pickett
Cole, N. Y.	James	Poage
Colmer	Javits	Polk
Combs	Jenison	Potter
Cooley	Jenkins	Poulson
Cooper	Jennings	Powell
Corbett	Jensen	Preston
Cotton	Johnson	Price
Coudert	Jonas	Priest
Cox	Jones, Ala.	Rabaut
Crawford	Jones, Mo.	Rains
Crook	Jones, N. C.	Ramsay
Crosser	Judd	Rankin
Cunningham	Karst	Redden
Curtis	Karsten	Reed, Ill.
Dague	Kearney	Rees
Davenport	Kearns	Regan
Davies, N. Y.	Keating	Rhodes
Davis, Ga.	Kee	Ribicoff
Davis, Tenn.	Kelly, N. Y.	Richards
Davis, Wis.	Kennedy	Riehlman
Dawson	Keogh	Robeson
Deane	Kilburn	Rodino
DeGraffenried	Kilday	Rogers, Fla.
Delaney	King	Rogers, Mass.
Denton	Kirwan	Rooney
D'Ewart	Klein	Roosevelt
Dollinger	Kruse	Sabath
Dolliver	Kunkel	Sadlak
Dondero	Lane	Sadowski
Donohue	Lanham	St. George
Doughton	Larcade	Saylor
Douglas	Latham	Scott, Hugh D., Jr.
Doyle	LeCompte	Scrivner
Durham	LeFevre	Scudder
Eaton	Lichtenwalter	Secrest
Eberharter	Lind	Shelley
Elliott	Linehan	Sheppard
Ellsworth	Lodge	Short
Elston	Lovre	Simpson, Ill.
Engle, Calif.	Lucas	Smathers
Evins	Lyle	Smith, Kans.
Fallon	Lynch	Smith, Va.
Feighan	McCarthy	Smith, Wis.
Fellows	McConnell	Spence
Fenton	McCormack	Staggers
Fernandez	McCulloch	Stanley
Fisher	McDonough	Stefan
Flood	McGrath	Stockman
Forand	McGuire	Sullivan
Ford	McKinnon	Sutton
Frazier	McMillan, S. C.	Tackett
Fugate	McMillen, Ill.	Talle
Fulton	McSweeney	Tauriello
Furcolo	Mack, Ill.	Taylor
Gamble	Mack, Wash.	Teague
Garmatz	Madden	Thomas
Gary	Magee	Thompson
Gathings	Mahon	Thornberry
Gavin	Mansfield	Tollefson
Golden	Marcantonio	Trimble
Goodwin	Marsalis	Underwood
Gordon	Martin, Iowa	Van Zandt
Gore	Martin, Mass.
Gorski	Merrow
Graham	Meyer
Granahan	Michener
Granger	Miles
Grant	Miller, Calif.
Green	Miller, Md.
Gregory	Miller, Nebr.
Gross	Mills
Guill	Monroney
Hagen	Morgan
Hale	Morrison
Hall, Leonard W.	Moulder
Halleck	Multer
Hand	Murdock
Harden	Murphy
Hardy	Murray, Tenn.
Hare	Murray, Wis.
Harris	Nelson
Harrison	Nicholson
Hart	Nixon
Harvey	Noland
Havenner	Norblad
Hays, Ark.	Norrell
Hays, Ohio	Norton
Hébert	O'Brien, Ill.
Hedrick	O'Brien, Mich.
Heffernan	O'Hara, Ill.
Heller	O'Konski
Herlong	O'Neill
Herter	O'Sullivan
Heselton	O'Toole
Hill	Pace
Hoeven	Passman
Hoffman, Ill.	Patman
Holifield	Patten
Holmes	Patterson
Hope	Perkins
Horan	Pfeifer, Joseph L.
Howell	Pfeiffer, William L.
Huber	Philbin
Hull	Phillips, Calif.
Jackson, Wash.	Pickett
Jacobs	Poage
James	Polk
Javits	Potter
Jenison	Poulson
Jenkins	Powell
Jennings	Preston
Jensen	Price
Johnson	Priest
Jonas	Rabaut
Jones, Ala.	Rains
Jones, Mo.	Ramsay
Jones, N. C.	Rankin
Judd	Redden
Karst	Reed, Ill.
Karsten	Rees
Kearney	Regan
Kearns	Rhodes
Keating	Ribicoff
Kee	Richards
Kelly, N. Y.	Riehlman
Kennedy	Robeson
Keogh	Rodino
Kilburn	Rogers, Fla.
Kilday	Rogers, Mass.
King	Rooney
Kirwan	Roosevelt
Klein	Sabath
Kruse	Sadlak
Kunkel	Sadowski
Lane	St. George
Lanham	Saylor
Larcade	Scott, Hugh D., Jr.
Latham	Scrivner
LeCompte	Scudder
LeFevre	Secrest
Lichtenwalter	Shelley
Lind	Sheppard
Linehan	Short
Lodge	Simpson, Ill.
Lovre	Smathers
Lucas	Smith, Kans.
Lyle	Smith, Va.
Lynch	Smith, Wis.
McCarthy	Spence
McConnell	Staggers
McCormack	Stanley
McCulloch	Stefan
McDonough	Stockman
McGrath	Sullivan
	Sutton
	Tackett
	Talle
	Tauriello
	Taylor
	Teague
	Thomas
	Thompson
	Thornberry
	Tollefson
	Trimble
	Underwood
	Van Zandt
	Velde
	Vinson
	Vorys
	Vursell
	Wagner
	Walsh
	Walter
	Weichel
	Welch
	Whitaker
	White, Calif.
	White, Idaho
	Whitten
	Whittington
	Wickersham
	Widnall
	Wier
	Velde
	Vinson
	Vorys
	Vursell
	Wagner
	Walsh
	Walter
	Weichel
	Welch
	Whitaker
	White, Calif.
	White, Idaho
	Whitten
	Whittington
	Wickersham
	Widnall
	Wigglesworth
	Williams
	Willis
	Wilson, Ind.
	Wilson, Tex.
	Winstead
	Withrow
	Wolcott
	Wolverton
	Woodhouse
	Woodruff
	Yates
	Young
	Zablocki

NAYS—14

Gwinn	Morton	Simpson, Pa.
Hoffman, Mich.	O'Hara, Minn.	Taber
Kean	Reed, N. Y.	Towe
Marshall	Rich	Wadsworth
Mason	Shafer

NOT VOTING—41

Andersen, H. Carl	Hinshaw	Rivers
Barden	Hobbs	Sanborn
Bates, Ky.	Irving	Sasscer
Breen	Jackson, Calif.	Scott, Hardie
Bulwinkle	Keefe	Sikes
Burdick	Kelley, Pa.	Sims
Dingell	Kerr	Smith, Ohio
Engel, Mich.	McGregor	Steed
Fogarty	Macy	Stigler
Gillette	Mitchell	Werdel
Gilmer	Morris	Wheeler
Gossett	Peterson	Wilson, Okla.
Hall, Edwin Arthur	Phillips, Tenn.	Wood
	Plumley
	Quinn

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Engel of Michigan for, with Mr. Smith of Ohio against.

Until further notice:

Mr. Bates of Kentucky with Mr. Hardie Scott.
Mr. Wilson of Oklahoma with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Barden with Mr. Hinshaw.
Mr. Sasscer with Mr. Jackson of California.
Mr. Dingell with Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Burdick.
Mr. Fogarty with Mr. McGregor.
Mr. Sims with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Mitchell with Mr. Sanborn.
Mr. Sikes with Mr. Phillips of Tennessee.
Mr. Hobbs with Mr. Keefe.
Mr. Rivers with Mr. Werdel.
Mr. Breen with Mr. H. Carl Andersen.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RESCINDING THE PASSAGE OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 494

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 673, Rept. No. 2397), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the action of the House in passing on June 27, 1950, the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to extend for 2 months the existing suspension of certain import taxes on copper" is hereby vacated and the Clerk of the House is hereby directed to request the Senate to return such joint resolution to the House.

INVESTIGATION OF EXPLOSION AT SOUTH AMBOY, N. J.

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 643, Rept. No. 2398), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, acting as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed (1) to conduct a full and complete investigation to determine the cause or causes of the disastrous explosion which occurred at South Amboy, N. J., on May 19, 1950, and to determine whether negligence was involved on the part of the United States Coast Guard, and (2) on the basis of such investigation, to make such recommendations as it deems advisable for promoting greater safety in the transportation and shipment of high explosives and for preventing similar disasters in the future.

The committee shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) as soon as practicable during the present Congress the results of its investigation, together with it recommendations.

For the purpose of carrying out this resolution the committee or subcommittee is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the United States, whether the House is in session, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, and to require, by subpena or otherwise, the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, papers, and documents, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member of the committee designated by him, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. FURCOLO asked and was given permission to address the House for 20 minutes today, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered.

RESCINDING PASSAGE OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 494 RELATING TO SUSPENSION OF CERTAIN IMPORT TAXES ON COPPER

Mr. BARING. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 673) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the action of the House in passing on June 27, 1950, the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to extend for 2 months the existing suspension of certain import taxes on copper" is hereby vacated and the Clerk of the House is hereby directed to request the Senate to return such joint resolution to the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nevada?

Mr. KEATING. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly the action just taken by the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEATING]. The gentleman from Nevada [Mr. BARING] had just offered his bill to vacate the consent request granted in the House 2 days ago to extend for 2 months the suspension of the excise tax of 2 cents a pound on imported copper.

This 60-day suspension was passed under very irregular circumstances because the bill was not referred to the Ways and Means Committee and the chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON], was not even consulted. Furthermore, the gentleman from North Carolina had announced that hearings would be held by his committee to consider an extension of this suspension on July 10.

Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to a permanent lifting of the excise tax on copper. I am opposed to the unprincipled method by means of which the 60-day suspension bill was passed. The procedure was certainly undemocratic and unnecesary and to the best of my knowledge this is the first time a bill has been passed through the House in this manner.

Mr. Speaker, I only ask that the proper procedure of this House be upheld in the consideration of legislation. I deplore the methods which have been used and I hope the House will reconsider its action so that hearings can be held, the true picture of the copper situation presented, and the will of the House expressed in an open and aboveboard manner.

The present situation may well make it necessary to allow a limited extension of the suspension. However, let us have all the facts presented and then use our own best judgment in arriving at a decision. Let us make absolutely sure that if an extension is granted that such an extension will not become permanent. This is a tremendously important question and the facts should be made known to the American people and their representatives.

Mr. Speaker, I want the House to know that my main reason for making these remarks at this time is because I object to the undemocratic, unprincipled, and unfair way in which this 60-day suspension was passed.

Mr. BENNETT of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleagues who are interested in the future of copper mining in the United States in protesting the action that was taken by the House on Wednesday, June 28, 1950, on House Joint Resolution 494. It is significant that the action was taken on this resolution near the end of a long day when all of the announced business of the House had been disposed of.

There is hardly a single Member of this body, including the author of the resolution referred to, who is not aware of the fact that any further suspension of the import tax on copper is a highly controversial subject.

The fact that the resolution was not even referred to a House Committee and acted upon almost immediately after it was introduced, without notice, and with only a handful of Members in attendance, is indeed regrettable. If legislation of vital concern to large segments of this country is to be handled under procedure that even a police court lawyer would shy away from, it is time that the country knew about it.

Bills to provide for further suspension of the copper tariff have been pending before the Ways and Means Committee for months. Hearings on these bills have been set by the committee for July 10. Everyone concerned with this problem was to have an opportunity to be heard. But the sponsors of legislaiton to further suspend the copper import tax could not wait for the opposition to be heard. They thought they would beat the gun by using this cute strategy in the hope of gaining some momentary advantage.

I have introduced a resolution similar to that sponsored by the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. BARING] which was objected to a few minutes ago by the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEATING].

I hope the Ways and Means Committee will act immediately to correct the injustice which has been done by this precipitous and unusual action. I am convinced that when the House has had an opportunity to hear both sides of this question, it will act in the interest of protecting the American copper miner and the critical metal which he produces.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING OF VETERANS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 2596) relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944), and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. NO. 2373)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2596) relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, Seventy-eighth Congress, June 22, 1944), having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "That paragraph 9 of part VIII of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: 'Provided, That, except as provided in this amendment, no regulation or other purported construction of title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, shall be deemed consistent therewith which denies or is designed to deny to any eligible person, or limit any eligible person in, his right to select such course or courses as he may desire, during the full period of his entitlement or any remaining part thereof, in any approved educational or training institution or institutions, whether such courses are full time, part time, or correspondence courses: Provided further—

"'A. That the Administrator shall disapprove a course in any institution which has been in operation for a period of less than one year immediately prior to the date of enrollment in such course unless such enrollment was prior to August 24, 1949, but this shall not require or permit the disapproval of (a) any course in a public school or other tax-supported school, (b) any course in an institution which has been in operation for a period of more than one year which does not completely depart from the whole character of the instruction previously given by such institution, or (c) any course in an institution which has been in operation for a period of more than one year, by reason of a change in the location of such institution from one point to another within the same general locality: Provided, That upon the certification of any State approval agency, that a new or existing institution is essential to meet the requirements of veterans in such State, the Administrator in his discretion may approve such an institution notwithstanding the provisions of this paragraph;

"'B. That in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 3 (a) of this part, the Administrator may, for reasons satisfactory to him, disapprove a change of course of instruction, and may discontinue any course of education or training if he finds that according to the regularly prescribed standards of the institution the conduct or progress of such person is unsatisfactory;

"'C. That if any eligible veteran, who has completed or discontinued (for any reason other than unsatisfactory conduct or progress) a course of education or training, applies for an additional course in the same or any other field of education or training, the Administrator may deny initiation of such course only if he finds (1) that it is precluded by the first proviso, paragraph 1 of this part VIII, as amended, or (2) that it is not in the same general field as his original educational or occupational objective, and that such veteran has already made one change from one general field to another, or (3) that it is precluded by limitation of paragraph D below: Provided, That, in any case in which the veteran has already made one change from one general field to another, the Administrator may require advisement and guidance before approving another such change, but where the Administrator requires such advisement and guidance and the veteran is not notified of the decision of the Administrator within forty-five days following the date of application for such change, such change shall be deemed to have been approved;

"'D. That the Administrator shall refuse approval to any course elected or commenced by a veteran on or subsequent to July 1, 1948, which is avocational or recreational in character. The following courses shall be presumed to be avocational or recreational in character: Dancing courses; photography courses; glider courses; bartending courses; personality-development courses; entertainment courses; music courses—instrumental and vocal; public-speaking courses; and courses in sports and athletics such as horseback riding, swimming, fishing, skiing, golf, baseball, tennis, bowling, and sports officiating (except applied music, physical education, or public-speaking courses which are offered by institutions of higher learning for credit as an integral part of a course leading to an educational objective); but no such course shall be considered to be avocational or recreational in character if the veteran submits complete justification that such course will contribute to bona fide use in the veteran's present or contemplated business or occupation; and the Administrator may find any other course to be avocational or recreational in character, but no such other course shall be considered avocational or recreational in character when a certificate in the form of an affidavit supported by corroborating affidavits by two competent disinterested persons has been furnished by a physically qualified veteran stating that such education or training will be useful to him in connection with earning a livelihood. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, education or training for the purpose of teaching a veteran to fly or related aviation courses in connection with his present or contemplated business or occupation shall not, in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary, be considered avocational or recreational when a certificate in the form of an affidavit supported by corroborating affidavits by two competent disinterested persons, has been furnished by a physically qualified veteran stating that such education or training will be useful to him in connection with earning a livelihood.'

"SEC. 2. Paragraph 11 of part VIII of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subparagraph (d) as follows:

"'(d) As used in this part, the term "customary cost of tuition" or "customary charges" or "customary tuition charges" shall mean that charge which an educational or training institution requires a nonveteran enrollee similarly circumstanced to pay as and for tuition for a course, except that the institution (other than a nonprofit institution of higher learning) is not regarded as having a "customary cost of tuition" for the course or courses in question in the following circumstances:

"'(A) Where the majority of the enrollment of the educational and training institution in the course in question consists of veterans in training under Public Laws 16 and 346, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended; and

"'(B) One of the following conditions prevails:

"'1. The institution has been established subsequent to June 22, 1944.

"'2. The institution, although established prior to June 22, 1944, has not been in continuous operation since that date.

"'3. The institution, although established prior to June 22, 1944, has subsequently increased its total tuition charges for the course to all students more than 25 per centum.

"'4. The course (or a course of substantially the same length and character) was not provided for nonveteran students by the institution prior to June 22, 1944.

"'For any course of education or training for which the educational or training institution involved has no customary cost of tuition, a fair and reasonable rate of payment for tuition, fees, or other charges for such course shall be determined by the Administrator. In any case in which one or more contracts providing a rate or rates of tuition have been entered into in two successive years, the rate established by the most recent contract shall be considered to be the customary cost of tuition notwithstanding the definition of "customary cost of tuition" as hereinbefore set forth. For the purpose of the preceding sentence "contract" shall include contracts under Public Law 16 (Seventy-eighth Congress, March 24, 1943), Public Law 346 (Seventy-eighth Congress, June 22, 1944), or any other agreement in writing on the basis of which tuition payments have been made from the Treasury of the United States. If the Administrator finds that any institution has no customary cost of tuition he shall forthwith fix and pay or cause to be paid a fair and reasonable rate of payment for tuition, fees, and other charges for the courses offered by such institution. Any educational or training institution which is dissatisfied with a determination of a rate of payment for tuition, fees, or other charges under the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, or with any other action of the Administrator under the amendments made by Veterans' Education and Training Amendments of 1950, shall be entitled, upon application therefor, to a review of such determination or action (including the determination with respect to whether there is a customary cost of tuition) by a board to be known as the "Veterans' Education Appeals Board" consisting of three members, appointed by the President. Members of the Board shall receive, out of appropriations available for administrative expenses of the Veterans' Administration, compensation at the rate of $50 for each day actually spent by them in the work of the Board, together with necessary travel and subsistence expenses. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall provide for the Board such stenographic, clerical, and other assistance and such facilities and services as may be necessary for the discharge of its functions. Such Board shall be subject, in respect to hearings, appeals, and all other actions and qualifications, to the provisions of sections 5 to 11, inclusive, of the Administrative Procedure Act, approved June 11, 1946, as amended. The decision of such Board with respect to all matters shall constitute the final administrative determination. In no event shall the Board fix a rate of payment in excess of the maximum amount allowable under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended. Nothing contained in these amendments shall in any way affect the provisions of the first proviso in paragraph 1 of this part VIII, as amended.

"'Any institution having a "customary cost of tuition" established under this part may revise and improve an existing course (or establish a new related course) of substantially the same length and character subject to the same customary cost of tuition: Provided, That nothing in the foregoing amendments shall be construed to affect adversely any legal rights which have accrued prior to the date of enactment of the Veterans' Education and Training Amendments of 1950, or to affect payments to educational or training institutions under contracts in effect on such date: Provided further, That during negotiations for a contract, and during the pendency of any appeal which a school may make, the Veterans' Administration shall continue to make further payments to the school in such amount as the Administrator considers to be "fair and reasonable", but not less than 75 per centum of the most recent rate paid to the school.

"'Any educational or training institution which has a contract covering any period subsequent to August 24, 1949, shall be entitled to a review by the Veterans' Education Appeals Board of the rate of tuition, fees and other charges established in such contract. Application for such review must be made within sixty days following the date of enactment of the Veterans' Education and Training Amendments of 1950.'

"SEC. 3. Paragraph 5 of part VII of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is further amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a colon and the following: 'And provided further, That for the purpose of applying the governing statutes and applicable regulations of the Veterans' Administration respecting the payment of tuition and other charges, in the case of nonprofit institutions, any institution shall be regarded as a nonprofit institution if it is exempt from taxation under paragraph (6), section 101, of the Internal Revenue Code, whether it was certified as such by the Bureau of Internal Revenue before or subsequent to June 22, 1944: And provided further, That for the purpose of applying the governing statutes and applicable regulations of the Veterans' Administration respecting the payment of tuition and other charges, any professional or graduate school which has been continuously affiliated with an educational institution since June 22, 1944, may elect to be subject to the nonresident tuition rates established for such educational institution, with respect to payments made for tuition during any school year beginning on or after August 1, 1949, even though the administrative function of such school is separate and distinct from that of the institution with which it is affiliated.'

"SEC. 4. The third sentence of section 3 of Public Law Numbered 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended, is hereby amended by adding before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: 'or (4) rendering necessary services in ascertaining the qualifications of proprietary institutions for furnishing education and training under the provisions of part VIII of such Regulation and in the supervision of such institutions.'

"SEC. 5. That paragraph 11 of part VIII, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"'(e) 1. In order to secure or retain approval to train veterans, any school operated for profit which, during any period, has fewer than twenty-five students, or one-fourth of the students enrolled (whichever is larger), paying their own tuition, in addition to meeting all requirements of existing law, will be required to submit to the appropriate State approving agency a written application, in form and contents prescribed by the State approving agency, setting forth the course or courses of training. The written application covering each course must include the following:

"'a. Title of the course and specific description of the objective for which given.

"'b. Length of course.

"'c. A detailed curriculum showing subjects taught, type of work or skills to be learned, and approximate length of time to be spent on each.

"'d. A showing of educational and experience qualifications of the instructors.

"'e. A description of space, facilities, and equipment used for the course.

"'f. A statement of the maximum number of students proposed to be trained in the course at one time.

"'g. A statement of the educational prerequisite for such a course.

"'2. The appropriate approving agency of the State or the Administrator may approve the application of such school when the school is found upon investigation to have met the following criteria:

"'a. The curriculum and instruction are consistent in quality, content, and length with similar courses in the public schools or other private schools with recognized and accepted standards.

"'b. There is in the school adequate space, equipment, instructional material, and instructor personnel to provide satisfactory training. When approval is given, it shall state the maximum number authorized to be trained in each course.

"'c. Educational and experience qualifications of the instructor are adequate as determined by the State approval agency.

"'d. Adequate records are kept to show attendance, progress, and conduct, with periodic report to be provided to the Veterans' Administration; and there are clearly stated and enforced standards of attendance, progress, and conduct.

"'e. Appropriate credit is given for previous training or experience, with training period shortened proportionately. No course of training will be considered bona fide as to a veteran who is already qualified by training and experience for the course objective.

"'f. A copy of curriculum as approved is provided to the veteran and the Veterans' Administration by the school.

"'g. Upon completion of the training, the veteran is given a certificate by the school indicating the approved course, title, and length, and that the training was completed satisfactorily.

"'h. Such additional criteria established by the State approving agency as it may deem necessary for approval of schools training veterans under this part.

"'3. No new course, or additions to the capacity of an existing course, in any school operated for profit, shall be approved if the State approving agency shall determine that the occupation for which the course is intended to provide training is crowded in the State where the training is to be given and that existing training facilities are adequate.

"'4. The Veterans' Administration is not authorized to award benefits under this part if it is found by the appropriate State approving agency that the course offered by a school operated for profit fails to meet the applicable requirements of this subparagraph (e); but the findings of the State approving agency on such requirements shall be final.'

"SEC. 6. Paragraph 6 of part VIII of Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended by inserting '(a)' immediately after '6.', and adding the following new subparagraph:

"'(b) For the purpose of this part, a trade or technical course, offered on a clock-hour basis below the college level, involving shop practice as an integral part thereof, shall be considered a full-time course when a minimum of thirty hours per week of attendance is required with not more than thirty minutes of rest period per day allowed. A course offered on a clock-hour basis below the college level in which theoretical or classroom instruction predominates shall be considered a full-time course when a minimum of twenty-five hours per week net of instruction is required. The provisions of the first sentence of this subparagraph shall not be applicable prior to July 1, 1951, in the case of any school or institution in which, for a period of one year immediately preceding the date of enactment of the Veterans' Education and Training Amendments of 1950, a minimum of twenty-five hours per week of attendance was required for any course in compliance with regulations of the Veterans' Administration.'

"SEC. 7. Paragraph 5 of part VIII, Veterans Regulation Numbered 1 (a), as amended, is hereby amended by inserting '(a)' immediately after '5.', and adding a new subparagraph (b) as follows:

"'(b) In any case where it is found that an overpayment to a veteran of subsistence allowance (which overpayment has not been recovered or waived) is proved in a hearing before the Committee on Waivers of the appropriate Veterans' Administration regional office to be the result of willful or negligent failure of the school to report, as required by applicable regulation or contract, to the Veterans' Administration unauthorized or excessive absences from a course, or discontinuance or interruption of a course by the veteran, the amount of such overpayment shall, at the discretion of the Administrator, constitute a liability of the school for such failure to report, and may be recovered by an off-set from amounts otherwise due the school or in other appropriate action: Provided, That any amount so collected shall be reimbursed if the overpayment is received from the veteran. This amendment shall be construed as applying only to matters arising after the effective date of this amendment, and shall not preclude the imposition of any civil or criminal action under any other statute.'

"SEC. 8. This Act shall become effective on the date of its enactment except that sections 5 and 6 shall become effective the first day of the third calendar month following the date of enactment of this Act.

"SEC. 9. The matter beginning with the first proviso in the item 'Readjustment benefits' under the caption 'Veterans' Administration' in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1950, approved August 24, 1949, is hereby repealed.

"SEC. 10. This Act may be cited as the 'Veterans' Education and Training Amendments of 1950'."

And the House agree to the same.

JOHN E. RANKIN,
A. LEONARD ALLEN,
OLIN E. TEAGUE,
BERNARD W. KEARNEY,
GLENN R. DAVIS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

CLAUDE PEPPER,
LISTER HILL,
PAUL H. DOUGLAS,
ROBERT A. TAFT,
WAYNE MORSE,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House, at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2596) relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944), submit the following statement in explanation of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to such amendment, namely:

SECTION 1

Section 1 of the bill has been amended to generally conform to the version as approved by the House. Language was agreed upon which provides that nothing in this section or in this act shall be construed in any manner so as to change the cut-off date of July 25, 1951, now provided in the law. While it was not the intention of the Senate in originally passing the bill to affect this date, nor in the House committee in reporting the measure, the language contained in the conference report leaves no doubt on this subject.

The provision contained in Public Law 266 requiring the disapproval of any course in an institution which has been in operation for a period of less than 1 year immediately prior to the date of enrollment, unless such enrollment was prior to August 24, 1949, was not in conflict between the two Houses and thus is unchanged. Certain exceptions are made, however, to provide that this ban shall not apply or permit the disapproval of any course in a public school or any tax-supported school or in any course in an institution which has been in operation for more than 1 year which course does not depart completely from the whole character of instruction previously given by such institution. Exception is also made for any course in an institution which has been in operation for more than 1 year but which has changed its location from one point to another within the same general locality. These changes were agreed upon by the conferees since they are clearly within the intent and meaning of the law and since it has been found that many institutions have moved from one place to another in the same general locality and by reason of such move have been denied approval.

The Senate conferees have agreed to the technical changes made in the language permitting the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, at his discretion, to approve schools which have been in existence for less than 1 year, upon approval and certification by State approval agencies that a new or existing institution is essential to meet the requirements for training veterans in a State. This authority is completely discretionary. It is not mandatory. The Administrator is not required to approve such a school even though it has been recommended and approved by a State approval agency. In other words, the findings of the need for a new or existing institution must be concurred in by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs in order for this provision to be operative.

In the opinion of the managers, the training of veterans and the taking of future courses by veterans has been considerably tightened over the version originally passed by the Senate. The language in the conference report provides that the Administrator may deny initiation of any course only if he finds (1) that the veteran is not eligible by reason of the July 25, 1951, cut-off date, or (2) that it is not in the same general field as his original educational or occupational objective and that such veteran has already made one change from one general field to another, or (3) that it is precluded by reason of the fact that it has been found to be avocational or recreational in character.

Thus under this paragraph, a veteran who entered training at any time since the enactment of the original law, June 22, 1944, who is receiving education or training under the act and has had one change of course from one general field to another and who applies for a change of course which is not in the same general field as his original educational or occupational objective, cannot make the second change without the approval of the Administrator. For example, if a veteran has been preparing for a medical career and decides to drop his studies in this field and begin the study of law, assuming he has not had a previous change, he could begin the study of law. But should he at some future date decide to study for the ministry and drop his law preparation, he would be precluded without the approval of the Administrator from taking any such course under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act.

On April 1, 1950, the Administrator issued a regulation providing that a veteran must have commenced and actually be pursuing his course of training on July 25, 1951, and remain continuously in this training except for periods of vacation or for other reasons beyond his control. In other words, if the veteran is not in training on that date, he is precluded from taking any training or additional training under the act.

The Administrator has subsequently made two exceptions to this general rule: One applies in the case of teachers who take work during summer-school sessions in order to obtain graduate degrees. In such cases the Administrator has ruled that a teacher, as long as he is engaged in graduate level work and remains in the teaching profession, may continue to take consecutive summer-school work after July 25, 1951, to the extent of his entitlement. The second exception relates to applicants for medical and dental schools who are not admitted due to failure of an approved medical or dental school to accept the veteran's application for enrollment. In such cases, where the veteran continues to apply for admission and is accepted subsequent to July 25, 1951, he will be permitted to continue his training as long as his entitlement continues.

The conference agreement is not intended in any way to change the Veterans' Administration regulation issued on April 1, 1950, as described above governing training on and after July 25, 1951.

The conference committee also has inserted language providing that, where a veteran has already made one change from one general field to another, the Administrator may require advisement and guidance before approving such change but where advisement and guidance is required and the veteran is not notified of the decision of the Administrator within 45 days following the date of application for such change, the change shall be deemed to have been approved.

This provision is not intended, however, to permit the veteran, after advisement and guidance has been ordered, to defeat its purpose by failing to appear at the time required for advisement and guidance or otherwise failing to cooperate in receiving this service. This amendment is intended solely to provide that advisement and guidance be given promptly where required and that a decision as to whether or not the change may be rendered within 45 days from the date of the application for the change. Evidence has been presented to the effect that the procedure for advisement and guidance has resulted in much delay. It is the opinion of the conference that 45 days is an adequate time within which to process an application for a change of course.

Subsection D of section 1 was not in conflict between the two Houses. This section lists the courses which are presumed to be avocational and recreational in character but provides that such courses shall not be so construed if the veteran submits complete justification that such course will contribute to the bona fide use in his present or contemplated business or occupation. This section conforms to Public Law 266 of the Eighty-first Congress. The enactment is not intended to require or permit the discontinuance of any school now in existence and operating in this field which meets present Veterans' Administration and State approval agency requirements and standards for approval and operation.

Subsection D of section 1 gives the Administrator authority to declare "other courses" to be avocational or recreational in character. The authority conferred by this subsection should be interpreted and applied in context: It is intended that this authority be used to classify as avocational or recreational only those courses similar to, or of the same general character as, those courses specifically listed in the subsection. It is not intended that the classification avocational or recreational shall be applied to all courses regardless of their nature.

SECTION 2

Section 2 relates to the customary cost of tuition and to other charges required by educational institutions for the training of veterans under this act. Much of the language contained in this section will replace that contained in Public Law 266, Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1950. This law provides that in any case in which one or more contracts providing for a rate of tuition have been executed for two successive years, the rate established by the most recent contract will be considered the customary cost of tuition. The conferees amended this language to provide that where one or more contracts have been "entered into in" two successive years, in order to remove any ambiguity which might have existed. This would have the effect of freezing the tuition rates as prescribed by the most recent contract as the customary cost of tuition.

The provisions of section 2 apply to all courses which were covered by contract or other agreement, without respect to the calendar duration established or the weekly hours of attendance required for such courses. It is also intended that where a contract includes tuition, fees, or other charges for a course, such contract shall be considered as an entity in determining the rate or rates to be paid to the institution for such course.

Under the terms of Public Law 266, a Veterans' Tuition Appeals Board, consisting of three members appointed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, was created to hear the complaint of any school which was dissatisfied with the determination of the rate of payment for tuition fees and other charges. This section creates a Veterans' Education Appeals Board which replaces the present Veterans' Tuition Appeals Board. The information of the conference is that the present Board, while in receipt of numerous appeals, has delayed action pending final consideration of this legislation. Cases pending before the present Board would be transferred and decided by the new Board.

The conferees agreed to give the new Board authority to review any contract entered into by any education or training institution which covered a period subsequent to August 24, 1949, the effective date of Public Law 266 of the 81st Congress. Thus, if a school had entered into a contract on January 1, 1949, which expired October 30, 1949, and was dissatisfied with its provisions, a review and appeal of the contract could be had before the Veterans' Education Appeals Board. On the other hand, any contract which expired prior to August 24, 1949, would not be covered by this provision. Application for such review must be made within 60 days of the enactment of this act.

The new Board is to consist of three members appointed by the President and is to be an independent board. Board members are to be paid from administrative expenses of the Veterans' Administration, and the Administrator is directed to provide such stenographic and clerical assistance and facilities as may be necessary for the discharge of the functions of the Board. It is provided that the decision of the Board with respect to all matters coming within its jurisdiction shall be the final administrative determination. It would not of course have jurisdiction over the determination as to whether a veteran was eligible in the first place for training under this act, or other matters primarily affecting the veteran. An appeal of this sort would be processed through the existing Board of Veterans' Appeals. It is not intended that the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Education Appeals Board created by this act shall in any way conflict with or infringe upon the jurisdiction of the Board of Veterans' Appeals.

The Veterans' Education Appeals Board shall in its independent judgment promulgate rules and regulations governing its own operations and determine all disputes between the schools and the Veterans' Administration which this act authorizes the Board to review. In the proper exercise of its review function, and on the basis of the administrative record of the hearing, the Board shall take cognizance of, but shall not be bound by, such regulations as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may have issued or issue for implementing the Servicemen's Readjustment Act. For example, regulations which prescribe the method of computing fair and reasonable payments to schools. However, the Board shall have the authority to determine which of these regulations are applicable to the facts in the given case and whether the application of such regulations would result in fixing a rate of payment which, in fact, was not fair and reasonable in the opinion of the Board. The Board in rendering its decision shall give careful consideration to long-established policies and decisions of the Administrator but shall not be bound with respect to any regulation or decision of the Administrator or other official of the Veterans' Administration construing the provisions of any statute, since this would result in curtailing the jurisdiction of the Board in rendering independent decisions as contemplated under this act.

A provision was included that nothing contained in this section creating the Board shall in any way affect the provisions that provide that training under this act must be initiated on or before July 25, 1951.

One of the House amendments provided that the Veterans' Administration should continue to make payments to a school while the school and the Veterans' Administration were negotiating a new contract. The House provision provided originally that the payments should be such an amount as found by the Administrator to be fair and reasonable. The conferees have accepted this language, and have included a provision that in no event shall less than 75 percent of the most recent rate paid the school constitute a fair and reasonable minimum. This is the figure now paid to institutions of higher learning during the conduct of negotiations, and it is believed fair to extend this same rate to all schools concerned.

In carrying out the provisions of this section, it is intended that the Veterans Administration shall make these payments to the institutions in prompt and regular installments. When a contract is finally negotiated, the contract rate agreed upon shall apply and be paid for the whole of the contract period, and not just for that portion of the contract period remaining on the date on which the contract is agreed to.

SECTION 3

Section 3 provides a method for determining whether or not a school shall be regarded as a nonprofit institution. It was provided in both versions of this act that any institution shall be regarded as a nonprofit institution if it is exempt from taxation under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. The Senate conferees agreed to accept a House provision providing that any professional or graduate school which has been continuously affiliated with an educational institution since the enactment of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act may be subject to non-resident-tuition rates established for the parent educational institution, even though the administrative function of the affiliated school is separate and distinct from the parent institution.

SECTION 4

Section 4 authorizes payments to the States for rendering necessary services in ascertaining the qualifications of proprietary institutions for furnishing education and training under the provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act. This section is contained in both the House and Senate bills and only a technical amendment was added. It conforms to the practice under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1943 which governs the education and training of service-connected disabled veterans.

SECTION 5

Section 5 generally conforms to recommendation 7 which accompanied the message of the President of February 13, 1950 (H. Doc. 466), calling for the enactment of legislation prescribing minimum standards for profit schools. The Senate version contained no such standards and the House amendment has been accepted with modifications. Amendments were agreed upon in the conference which provide that schools making application to train or to continue to train veterans in submitting their written application should file such application in the form and contents prescribed by the State approving agency. Authority is also granted the State approving agency to provide such additional criteria as may be deemed necessary for approval of schools training veterans under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act.

The conferees agreed on elimination of one of the standards originally suggested which would have required that the salaries of teachers and administrative personnel be comparable to the prevailing salary rates of teachers and administrative personnel in similar schools located in the same area. This standard was deleted since it was believed that adequate control of this factor is being achieved under present policies and procedures.

Language was also added which provides that the State approving agency rather than the Veterans' Administration shall make final decision as to whether or not the private school meets the requirements set forth in the standards.

One of the suggested standards contained in the President's message to the Congress provided that no new course or additions to the capacity of existing courses should be approved, if the State approving agency acting in consultation with the State employment service determines that the occupation for which the course is intended to provide training is crowded nationally and in the State and locality where training is to be given, or that existing training facilities are more than adequate to meet the demand. The bill as passed by the House did not contain the requirement for the occupation to be crowded nationally but restricted it to States and localities. The conferees further restricted it to the State in which the veteran is training.

SECTION 6

Recommendation 6 made by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to accompany the President's message, mentioned above, urged the enactment of legislation requiring a minimum of 36 hours of attendance in those courses which are customarily learned through apprenticeship. The Veterans' Administration regulation in effect today requires 25 hours. The bill as passed by the House included a requirement of 30 hours while the Senate version was silent on this subject. The conferees have agreed to accept the House version with an amendment that the requirement for 30 hours per week of attendance shall not apply until after July 1, 1951, to any school which has been operating on the 25-hour schedule in accordance with the regulation for a period of at least 1 year immediately preceding the date of enactment of the act. In other words, schools which have been operating at a required attendance level of 25 hours per week in accordance with regulations of the Veterans' Administration and which have been in existence for 1 year prior to the enactment of this law may continue to operate at such 25-hour level until July 1, 1951, when 30 hours will be required. This would be applicable both to courses in existence at the time of enactment of this act as well as any new courses instituted by such schools.

SECTION 7

This section contained only in the House bill further carries out recommendation 5 accompanying the President's message to assure that schools will make prompt reports to the Veterans' Administration when enrolled veterans discontinue, interrupt, or fail to report their courses, with suitable penalties for failure to comply. This is expected to greatly reduce the volume of overpayments of subsistence to individual veterans and the Senate conferees agreed to accept this section without change. A hearing is provided before the Committee on Waivers of the Veterans' Administration.

At the hearing before the Committee on Waivers provided for by this section, the school or schools involved shall be given opportunity to appear and present evidence bearing upon the question as to whether or not the overpayment resulted from the willful or negligent failure of the school to submit the reports required by this section.

In the case of any overpayment to a veteran, the Veterans' Administration shall continue to make every reasonable effort to recover the amount of such overpayment from the veteran, and to reimburse the schools wherever possible.

SECTION 8

This section provides for sections 5 and 6 to become effective the first day of the third calendar month following the date of enactment. The remainder of the sections shall be effective from the date of enactment.

SECTION 9

The provisions in Public Law 266, which now govern many of the subjects contemplated by this act, are repealed effective the date of enactment of this act. Previously the provision had been in both bills that it would be repealed August 24, 1949.

JOHN E. RANKIN,
A. LEONARD ALLEN,
OLIN E. TEAGUE,
BERNARD W. KEARNEY,
GLENN R. DAVIS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. RANKIN (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the statement of the managers on the part of the House instead of the report be dispensed with.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the gentleman going to take some time to explain some of the provisions of the conference report?

Mr. RANKIN. It is a unanimous report.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Well, it may be, but it does deal with subjects which came up in connection with appropriations for the Independent Offices Appropriation bill, and I think there should be a matter of record as to some of the things this does before consent is given. I have no objection to dispensing with the further reading of the statement, but I would like to have the chairman answer a couple of questions as to what the report does.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, there will be objection unless the chairman answers some questions.

Mr. RANKIN. I will yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TEAGUE], to answer the questions of the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE. What does the conference report do with respect to the absentee problem which was so flagrant that it appeared in the testimony given before the Committee on Appropriations, that the Government would be called upon to pay a great deal of subsistence and tuition for enrollees who actually did not appear in school, and even when they did make a first appearance they subsequently were seldom to be found in the class rooms or in attendance.

Mr. TEAGUE. The Senate accepted the House amendment that schools be held responsible for such payment as the gentleman has mentioned. I will quote from the bill:

(b) In any case where it is found that an overpayment to a veteran of subsistence allowance (which overpayment has not been recovered or waived) is proved in a hearing before the Committee on Waivers of the appropriate Veterans' Administration regional office to be the result of willful or negligent failure of the school to report, as required by applicable regulation or contract, to the Veterans' Administration unauthorized or excessive absences from a course, or discontinuance or interruption of a course by the veteran, the amount of such overpayment shall, at the discretion of the Administrator, constitute a liability of the school for such failure to report, and may be recovered by an off-set from amounts otherwise due the school or in other appropriate action: Provided, That any amount so collected shall be reimbursed if the overpayment is received from the veteran. This amendment shall be construed as applying only to matters arising after the effective date of this amendment, and shall not preclude the imposition of any civil or criminal action under any other statute.

It is in almost exactly the same form the President recommended. We did give a school the right of appeal to the committee on waivers of the appropriate Veterans' Administration regional office.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. But it does require the schools to report attendance?

Mr. TEAGUE. It does.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. And it permits the Government to deduct where the schooling was not actually given?

Mr. TEAGUE. Yes; provided the committee on waivers of the Veterans' Administration regional office approves.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is aware, of course, that in some instances absenteeism ran to 30 percent of the alleged enrollees?

Mr. TEAGUE. I am aware of that. I am also aware of the fact that if the student drops out of school on the second day of the month the Veterans' Administration does pay him in some cases for the full month, regardless of when it is reported.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does the conference report then protect the Government?

Mr. TEAGUE. I think the report protects the Government amply.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. What does the report do with reference to the recognizing of schools as to standards? Does it have any protection for the Government there? Does the State agency or the Veterans' Administration in any way check the qualifications?

Mr. TEAGUE. The State agency must approve the standards of the school before the school is recognized to accept GI students.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman perfectly satisfied with the conference report?

Mr. TEAGUE. It is almost the same as it passed the House.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I am delighted. I voted for it when it was before the House.

Mr. TEAGUE. I know you did, and I sincerely appreciate the help you gave all the way through.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA EMERGENCY RENT ACT

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 3776) to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. NO. 2354)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3776) to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent

Act, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "That section 1 (b) of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended (D. C. Code, 1940 edition, sec. 45–1601 (b)), is hereby amended by striking out 'June 30, 1950' and inserting in lieu thereof 'January 31, 1951, unless the Congress shall by joint resolution insert a later date'.

"SEC. 2. Section 2 of such Act is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"'(5) (a) After June 30, 1950, the provisions of this Act shall not apply to, and no maximum rent ceiling or minimum service standards shall be prescribed for, any furnished nonhousekeeping housing accommodations which are rented as rooms without kitchen privileges or facilities for cooking (but not in a suite of two or more rooms), and when and for such period as any of the housing accommodations in any building used as a rooming house are decontrolled under this paragraph (a) the provisions of this Act shall not apply to, and no maximum rent ceilings or minimum service standards shall be prescribed for, such building.

"'(b) After June 30, 1950, self-contained family units (as defined by regulations issued by the Administrator) located in hotels shall continue to be housing accommodations subject to maximum rent ceilings and minimum service standards unless the Administrator issues an order decontrolling them, or any of them, which he shall issue if he finds that such hotel is primarily engaged in furnishing accommodations for transients.'

"SEC. 3. Subsection (b) of section 4 of such Act is hereby amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a colon and the following: 'Provided further, That the Administrator may by order adjust the maximum rent ceiling or minimum service standard hereunder although the landlord fails to produce evidence of facts occurring in the period from January 1, 1941, to December 31, 1945, if the landlord proves circumstances which in the opinion of the Administrator excuse the failure to produce evidence of such facts'."

And the House agree to the same.

JOHN L. MCMILLAN,
T. G. ABERNETHY,
JOS. P. O'HARA,
Managers on the Part of the House.

ESTES KEFAUVER,
EDWARD L. LEAHY,
MARGARET CHASE SMITH,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3776) to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute amendment. The conferees have agreed to a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. Except for clerical changes, the following statement explains the differences between the House amendment and the substitute agreed to in conference.

The Senate bill added a new subsection (5) (a) to section 2 of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, decontrolling furnished nonhousekeeping housing accommodations which are rented as rooms without kitchen privileges or facilities for cooking (but not in a suite of two or more rooms), and decontrolling any building in which all of the housing accommodations consist of rooms so decontrolled. The House amendment contained a similar provision and also provided that where rooms or accommodations are decontrolled under the new subsection (5) (a), the building in which the rooms or accommodations are located should also be decontrolled. The conference substitute adopts the provisions of the House amendment in principle, rewriting the provisions relating to decontrol of buildings under subsection (5) (a) to make it clear that where any housing accommodations in a building used as a rooming house are decontrolled under subsection (5) (a) the building should also be decontrolled.

The House amendment amended the provision of section 5 (b) (2) of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act which places certain limitations on evictions by cooperatives, so as to remove those limitations in the case of housing accommodations renting for more than $85 per month. No similar provision was contained in the Senate bill. The conference substitute omits this provision.

The provision of the House amendment terminating rent control at the close of January 31, 1951, unless Congress by joint resolution fixes a later date, was retained in the conference substitute.

JOHN L. MCMILLAN,
T. G. ABERNETHY,
JOS. P. O'HARA,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain what difference there may be between the provisions of the conference report and the bill as passed by the House?

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. The only difference is that the House, as the gentleman will remember, passed the bill terminating rent control on January 31, 1951, and the other body terminated rent control on the same date as the national bill, namely December 31; also with the provision that the individual States might continue rent control for 6 months longer; in the discretion of the governor. The House made it necessary for the Congress itself to continue rent control in the District of Columbia after January 31. If in its discretion it feels that rent control is necessary.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Does the power of the Congress as provided in the House bill, to extend or to allow it to terminate in the District of Columbia remain in the Congress?

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is clear that the Congress is the governing body in the District of Columbia?

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. That is correct.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KOREA

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, President Truman's firm stand on Korea has been almost unanimously applauded in Congress. The use of American planes and ships in support of a United Nations resolution was a bold step that will hearten the small non-Communist nations of the world and will weaken Russia's prestige, even among her own satellites.

It is my opinion that Russia would not dare risk war now. It is clear that Russia encouraged the northern Koreans to make the attack. They have been arming them and supplying them just for such an attack. But the Russians did not want to provoke a war, they just wanted to find out how far they could go without stirring up firm resistance.

Now they know. They know that the United States will resist any direct act of aggression made by a Communist state against its neighbors.

Russia will be forced to back down, just as she backed down in Berlin, in Greece, in Turkey and in Iran.

All in all, the northern Korean attack on southern Korea may turn out to be a set-back for the Communists and a victory for us.

For one thing, it may unify the people of America in support of our foreign policy. It is amazing now to remember that a few short months ago a bill for aid to Korea was defeated in the House of Representatives, and was finally passed only after a strong fight by those who saw the danger in abandoning our friends to the tender mercies of the Communists.

I was one of those who fought for aid to Korea on the floor of the House both times it was up for consideration. I believe that what I said then is as true today as when I said it. Let me repeat a couple of paragraphs:

The issue of Korea is not a distant issue. Korea may be thousands of miles away, but it is close to the interests of every American. It is close to our interests because it is one of the many complicated situations which affect the peace of the world, and whether we are to have peace in our time, or war in our time, is a question that no American can treat with indifference.

The question is not one of altruism and idealism; it is a question of vital concern to every one of us. Our own interests are at stake, for it is in our interest to see that free, peace-loving nations can maintain their independence in the face of internal Communist terrorism and external Communist threats. If such nations can remain free, our position in the world will be much more secure and the chances for peace will be much brighter.

That is what I said February 7 on the floor of the House of Representatives, and I still believe that it is true.

I said a while ago that Russia probably would not go to war now, and that the Korean attack might turn out to be a set-back for the Communists. I believe these statements are true, but at the same time let us not overlook a few other facts that are not so pleasant.

Let us bear in mind that Russia has 147 divisions under arms. That is over two and a half million men—many, many times the strength of our own Army. And that figure does not include her air force and her vastly expanded navy.

Russia has opened 10 new naval bases in the Baltic area, 10 in Poland, and several in the Far East.

If Russia would enter the war now she would have an immediate advantage in Europe and Asia. What Russia lacks is the industrial capacity to sustain a long war. I do not believe she will risk war until she builds up her production to a safe point. But I do not rule out the possibility that she might decide to gamble on a quick victory.

Even if Russia does not openly enter the war on the side of North Korea, our task still will not be easy.

We will continue to have several other parts of the world to worry about.

Indochina is one of the worst spots. There Ho Chi Minh, Communist leader, is disputing the authority of the independent native government recently recognized by the French and American Governments. He is fighting both the French and Bao Dai, the leader of the government we recognized.

I was one of the five Congressmen from the United States who first met with Bao Dai's cabinet to talk over arrangements for settling the conflict in that war-torn country. We were interested in backing a true independence movement that would force communism out of Indochina. The Communist newspapers called us the five tentacles of imperialism that were stretching into Asia.

The Communists threw two hand grenades into a building across the street from us when we were standing on the sidewalk. They wounded some Frenchmen. Here in Indochina is where quite a bit of the money has been going that we gave to France.

Reliable reports say that Bao Dai's opponent—Ho Chi Minh—is receiving aid from Communist China, just across the border.

If Ho Chi Minh should receive enough aid to take over all of Indochina, the Communists would be in possession of one of the key areas of southeast Asia, and would be in a position to threaten the nearby Philippines, Malaya, Indonesia, Burma, and India.

Eight hundred million people would be close to their grasp.

If we can stabilize these two areas—Indochina and Korea—we would be rid of two of the most disturbing situations threatening world peace.

As I said before, the President's decision on Korea has been almost universally applauded. But mixed with that applause were a few questions. For one thing, some people wondered why we did not use the same tactics in Greece—where we finally won—or in China—where we finally lost.

I think you can see the answer to that one without much difficulty. The situation in Korea is entirely different from the others we were faced with.

The northern Korean attack on South Korea was a clear case of external aggression—the armed forces of one state invaded the territory of another state. It was clearly an illegal act calling for action under the United Nations Charter, and no amount of Russian interpretating could make it anything else. As a matter of fact when the question came up in the Security Council Russia was not around, which made it much more convenient for us. If Russia had not gone away mad a few months ago, she would have vetoed any action the Council tried to take against Communist North Korea.

But the affair was so obviously a case of aggression that, even if Russia had been around to use her veto, our military action would have been perfectly legal and proper.

In the case of Greece and China, the Communists were revolutionists within the nations concerned, even though they received aid and encouragement from Russia. We could send supplies and other aid—as the Russians were doing—but we could not give direct military aid to the governments we backed without interfering in the internal affairs of another country—something that is illegal and would be setting a dangerous precedent. If we did such a thing, it would give Russia a legal right to give direct aid to Red insurgents in any of her neighbors. We did work through the United Nations in Greece, however.

Many of the superficial critics of our foreign policy completely overlook that factor. It is not a factor to be ignored.

In China, we had an additional complication. The Nationalists' government was simply too corrupt and too weak to use the aid we gave them. We made repeated efforts to persuade the Nationalist leaders to institute reforms, but they would not be reformed. They continued to enhance their personal fortunes at the expense of American military and economic aid, while the Communists continued to advance against their poorly equipped and demoralized troops.

There was nothing the United States could do. Nationalist China was dying from internal decay. We had to concentrate our efforts elsewhere, in areas where there was some hope of success.

China has been lost, with the exception of Formosa. But now a definite line has been drawn. The Communists have been warned: this far, and no farther. In no other region of the world—with the possible exception of Indochina—can the Communists acquire more territory and pretend that they are doing so because of internal unrest. From now on, any Communist expansion will be considered an act of aggression, and will be treated as such by the United States.

Other nations have adopted the same attitude. Britain, France, and Australia have followed the American example and have committed themselves to use force against Communist aggression. They have already dispatched some of their forces to the trouble spots.

If the same attitude had been taken against the Axis powers in the 1930's, World War II might have been avoided.

The situation is grave. It is full of danger. But I am confident that we are doing what is necessary to increase our chances of peace.

If you are in the path of a forest fire you might be safer—temporarily—if you would curl up in a hollow log and go to sleep. But in the long run you would run a good risk of being barbecued. In the long run, you would be far better off if you would get to work and build a firebreak.

Our foreign policy has a similar objective. We want to build a firebreak against Communist aggression.

I think we are going about it in the right way, and I think President Truman is to be congratulated on his firm and courageous stand.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA DAY NURSERIES

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 3258) to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2374)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3258) to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"That section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act to authorize and direct the Board of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia to establish and operate in the public schools and other suitable locations a system of nurseries and nursery schools for day care of school-age and under-school-age children, and for other purposes', approved July 16, 1946, as amended, is amended by striking out 'until June 30, 1950, and no longer' and inserting in lieu thereof 'until June 30, 1953, and no longer'.

"SEC. 2. Section 3 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 3. The Board is authorized to make and enforce rules and regulations governing admission to and use and enjoyment of said nurseries and nursery schools, including the fixing of fees to be charged parents for care and maintenance therein of their children; which fees shall, as near as practicable, equal the expenditures of the District of Columbia for personal services, labor, food, and supplies in the operation and maintenance of such nurseries and nursery schools or to enter into contracts with any private or public agency or agencies for such care and maintenance: Provided, That the Board may, in cases where parents are unable to pay for such care waive all or part of such fees. All fees collected under the provisions of this Act shall be paid to the Collector of Taxes of the District of Columbia and deposited into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of an account to be known as "Miscellaneous trust-fund deposits, District of Columbia—Day Care Nurseries", said fund to be available, in addition to appropriations made pursuant to section 4 of this Act, for expenditure for the purposes of this Act: Provided further, That such fund shall be audited and disbursed in the same manner as other trust funds are audited and disbursed by the District of Columbia: And provided further, That any balance remaining in such trust-fund account after June 30, 1953, shall be covered into the Treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts of the District of Columbia.'

"SEC. 3. Section 4 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 4. There is authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for each of the two succeeding fiscal years, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia not otherwise appropriated, not exceeding $100,000 to carry out the purposes of this Act.'

"SEC. 4. Section 2 of this Act shall take effect upon enactment."

And the House agree to the same.

JOHN L. MCMILLAN,
W. K. GRANGER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

LESTER C. HUNT,
ESTES KEFAUVER,
MARGARET CHASE SMITH,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3258) to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute amendment. The conferees have agreed to a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. Except for clerical changes, the following statement explains the differences between the House amendment and the substitute agreed to in conference.

The Senate bill would have continued the present system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia on a permanent basis. The House amendment would have continued such system until June 30, 1951, and no longer. The substitute agreed upon in conference continues such system until June 30, 1953.

JOHN L. MCMILLAN,
W. K. GRANGER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. As I understand it, this program is still on a temporary basis and is to run for 3 years.

Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina. That is correct, with the understanding that the Commissioners will place this program on a self-sustaining basis within the next 3 years.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Of course, the gentleman will remember that this was a wartime measure originally.

Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina. That is correct.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And it was not expected to last beyond the duration of the war.

Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina. That is correct.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And here we are, 5 years after the war, extending it for another 3 years. I doubt the wisdom of that extension. I had hoped the extension would be for only one more year.

Mr. MCMILLAN of South Carolina. We held out as long as we could for a 1-year extension, but we had to compromise somewhere, so we compromised on 3 years.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RESERVE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. WILSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 5002, an act to incorporate the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment as follows:

Page 4, line 8, strike out "assist in" and insert "promote."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TO AMEND SECTION 14 (B) OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT, AS AMENDED

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 3527) to amend section 14 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right, may I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to briefly explain this bill?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, this bill continues in effect a power now possessed by the Federal Reserve to purchase directly from the Treasury obligations of the Government. It will prevent the Treasury from maintaining large balances, and will afford an available source of funds for emergent needs.

This power has been very sparingly used. The last time this power was continued it was continued for 3 years. This bill continues it for an additional 2 years. I think it was used only once this year. It was used twice last year, and for 3 or 4 years before that it was not used at all. It is only used to make up deficiencies in the Treasury before tax time, and the securities which they purchase are often for 1 day or 2 days—short-time securities that it would be very advantageous to have a market for. Otherwise, there would have to be a flotation of securities in the market.

Mr. MCCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. MCCORMACK. The present law expires when, unless this is extended?

Mr. SPENCE. It expires June 30.

Mr. MCCORMACK. At least in a few days.

Mr. SPENCE. Yes. It expires tomorrow, and it would then be exhausted.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. RABAUT. Does this come from the committee with a unanimous report?

Mr. SPENCE. This is the unanimous report from the committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 14 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1946 edition, title 12, sec. 355), is amended by striking out "July 1, 1950" and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1952" and by striking out "June 30, 1950" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1952."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was land on the table.

House Resolution 684 was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JENSEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. MILLER of Maryland asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. PATTERSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address by Samuel F. Pryor, vice president of Pan-American Airways.

Mr. VELDE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. AUCHINCLOSS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in one to include an address by Mrs. ST. GEORGE.

Mr. TOLLEFSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. RICH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a quotation by famous Americans on liberty.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. ENGLE of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter.

Mr. BOGGS of Louisiana asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. O'TOOLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter addressed to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. DAVENPORT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. CHUDOFF asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. FLOOD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a resolution.

Mr. RABAUT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. MORRISON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter.

Mr. BIEMILLER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in one to include an address by the President of the United States.

Mr. HOWELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in one to include a speech.

Mr. MADDEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. THORNBERRY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. PRICE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address by Secretary of Defense Johnson.

Mr. GORSKI asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in one to include a speech by James A. Farley.

Mr. CLEMENTE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. DONOHUE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. TEAGUE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous material.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include excerpts from an address by the Canadian Minister of Finance.

Mr. WOLVERTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. CANNON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a statement.

Mr. RICHARDS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a resolution from the American Cotton Shippers' Association.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. VURSELL asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. KLEIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. DOYLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include appropriate material

Mr. WOODRUFF asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. LEFEVRE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial from the Herald-Tribune.

Mr. ANDERSON of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address, notwithstanding the fact that it is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $205.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article.

Mr. SHORT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and to include an address by Hon. FRANK FELLOWS.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech he made on the Town Meeting of the Air program on Tuesday night.

Mr. HART asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include several short addresses.

Mr. ROONEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article by Harry H. Schlacht.

Mr. WICKERSHAM asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

PARTICIPATION OF FOREIGN NATIONS IN FIRST UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL TRADE FAIR AT CHICAGO

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 681 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 453) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair, to be held at Chicago, Ill., August 7 through 20, 1950. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the resolution to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 681 makes in order House Joint Resolution 453 authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair to be held in the city of Chicago, Ill., August 7 through August 20, 1950.

Last Saturday the great Chicago fair of 1950 was opened. It will continue during the months of July, August, and September. In August another great fair will open its doors—the First United States International Trade Fair. It will be the first of its kind ever held in the United States. Although this is a trade fair for the nations of the world, the United States will have more participating business firms than any other one nation. For these 2 weeks Chicago becomes the world's market place, as 40 nations will be displaying their wares and competing for sales. While this international trade fair is designed primarily as a trade show for commercial purposes, its exhibits will be of interest to all. The city of Chicago, as the market, transportation, commercial, geographical, and cultural center of the United States gives to you an opportunity you cannot afford to miss.

In behalf of the mayor of Chicago, Hon. Martin H. Kennelly—yes, in behalf of all the people of Chicago—I extend an invitation to all of you and to the people of our country to be with us during the summer to witness these two great fairs. I hope that you will accept and that you will attend. You are assured of hospitality that will surpass even the famed southern brand of which we have heard so much.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I want to thank the gentleman from Illinois for the invitation. I expect to attend the fair. I want to congratulate the business people of Chicago for financing this fair without any aid from the Federal Government.

Mr. SABATH. I thank the gentleman for his remarks. Chicago never asks any contribution.

The official invitation will reach you shortly and I hope that all of you will avail yourselves of same and visit our wonderful city during the summer. When you come, do not limit yourselves to a few days or a week, because I know such a short visit will not allow you sufficient time to see all of the extraordinary exhibits and the many things of interest which will be on display for your enjoyment and edification and to see the real Chicago.

Mr. Speaker, we have a great city on the delightful shores of Lake Michigan, composed as it is of people from every nation in the world—people who believe in progress—people who through their understanding and foresight, their industry, thrift, and ability have made Chicago the great metropolis that it is.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. FELLOWS. Is Chicago known as the Windy City?

Mr. SABATH. I may say to the gentleman from Maine, yes; not because of the vagaries of the weather but because from the founding of the city our leaders have called attention to the opportunities Chicago offered. Because of the slightly jealous nature of some New Yorkers in those days, they started to use the phrase "the Windy City" in referring to its budding rival of the West. But we have always said about Chicago has been true.

The motto of Chicago—which is "I will"—typifies the spirit of its citizens and leaders. Chicago, the great airport, lake port, river port and above all, railroad terminal, is surrounded by the richest area of nature's bounty and man's unbelievable handiwork. It is the capital of an incalculable empire—the great

Midwest. It is the trading, industrial, manufacturing, and financial center for millions of our inhabitants. To its trade marts, stockyards, rolling mills, and manufacturing plants come the raw products of the land, and from the ingenuity, industry, and activity of its people the finished products go forth to all the reaches of the globe.

In addition to the interesting exhibits at the fair, I know you will be thrilled with our great skyline along Lake Michigan's shores, with its imposing business structures, our wonderful boulevards and outer drive, our park system unsurpassed for its beauty.

One hundred years ago Chicago numbered about 9,000 people. It grew steadily with the expanding West when it was almost wiped out by the great fire of 1871. Undaunted by this catastrophe, its citizens set about immediately to build a new and greater Chicago, and each succeeding generation carried on this pioneer spirit, determined to make this central western community one of the truly great cities of our growing Nation until today it is the second largest city in these United States and the fourth largest in the world. We have a population in the city alone of 3,670,000. In addition we have adjoining cities and towns, such as Evanston, Oak Park, Austin, Berwyn, Cicero, Riverside, to mention only a few, which are actually a part and parcel of Chicago. If we were to do as New York or Los Angeles does, by including them in our population, we would have about 5,000,000 people.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. While I am at a loss to understand why Chicago is such a great city, and Chicago is a great city, why is it necessary to promote this fair or to otherwise advertise the city of Chicago? I have asked for this time, however, to say that I do not believe there is any disagreement between the gentleman from Illinois and myself as to the fact that Chicago does have representing it in the Congress of the United States one of the greatest and most illustrious legislators this Nation has ever had, the dean of the House, the gentleman who is now addressing us.

Mr. SABATH. I am indeed grateful to the gentleman from Ohio, with whom I frequently disagree, but today I cannot disagree with him. I must concede everything he said to be true and I hope I will be able to agree with him on many other things.

We in Chicago are proud of our major institutions of learning, the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, Loyola University and the rapidly-expanding Roosevelt College. From these halls of knowledge have come many of the great leaders in our political, governmental, social and economic life throughout the years. These halls of learning have become world famous.

Our $300,000,000 medical center surpasses any in the world. Many of the outstanding new developments in the medical field are the result of years of labor therein.

Chicago also boasts of the greatest art institute in the world. The Adler Planetarium on the lake front has attracted visitors from all points of the compass. A visit to Chicago is not complete without passing through this marvelous structure.

In the Merchandise Mart we have the largest commercial building ever built. It is a city almost in itself. The Chicago Board of Trade is the largest grain mart in the world.

Our great outdoor stadium, Soldier Field, holds more people than any other similar structure. Within its walls have been held many of the great spectacles of all time. Our indoor Chicago Stadium, seating some 30,000, has served as the meeting place for many large conventions and gatherings of national and international origin, as well as serving the community in its many sports, civic, and business activities.

A very interesting sight is our Navy Pier, extending three-quarters of a mile out into Lake Michigan, greater even than the well-known Atlantic City Pier. In normal times this pier is dedicated to amusement, with pleasure craft of all sizes and descriptions utilizing its facilities. In wartime it has been a tower of strength to our Armed Forces in the training of naval personnel and in the transportation of vital war matériel.

Without fear of successful contradiction I believe we have the finest bathing beaches of any city. Extending for miles along our lake shore, from one end of the city to the other, the cooling waters of Lake Michigan are teeming with bathers and pleasure seekers on the warm days of our pleasant summers.

We even have the great Chicago stockyards which in years gone by we always looked upon with pride. It includes the massive stockyards pavilion where the largest stock shows are held each year. Within its enclosure each year we honor the farming youth of America, lending encouragement and spirit to the development of our future farmers by giving prizes to those who excel in the raising of fine livestock, and for outstanding accomplishment in other necessary detail of farm life.

We have within our borders some of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, such as the International Harvester Co., Stewart Warner, and Hart Schaffner & Marx, and a great many others. In fact, to you in doubt, Chicago is the greatest manufacturing city in the world. Its products reach every port and nation on the globe. You name the manufactured product you need and Chicago will furnish it. Yes, when we talk about the great progress Chicago made following the disastrous fire of 1871, through the unbounded energy and zeal of such men as Marshall Field, the Potter Palmers, Pullmans, Leiters, Swifts, Armours, and others, we are really proud of our accomplishment.

In the early days when the West was rapidly expanding, Chicago became the railroad center of the Nation, and it still retains that position. Twenty-two of the outstanding trunk-line railroads radiate from our city. In addition it is served by 17 belt-line railroads. It is the hub of rail, air, water, and bus transportation as I mentioned earlier. Yes, Chicago built at its own expense a canal connecting the Great Lakes with the Mississippi and the Gulf, at a cost of over $250,000,000.

Being in the heart of the finest agricultural section of our country, known as the bread basket of the world, coupled with our huge manufacturing output, our varied transportation facilities expedite the shipment of all products to their far-flung destinations. I presume that is the reason my good friend and colleague from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] expresses his interest in visiting our city and fair—because he and other leaders in the productive surrounding areas appreciate the facility with which their bounteous farm products are transported to the waiting markets by these efficient transportation arteries. Our vast fruit and vegetable markets, receiving hundreds upon hundreds of carloads of fruits and vegetables daily, adds to the tremendous volume of business transacted daily in this bustling city.

Then too, Mr. Speaker, our post office handles a greater volume of mail than any other city. It was in our progressive city that the system of delivering mail by helicopter to substations was inaugurated. This has served to speed up mail deliveries considerably. Because of all the up-to-date facilities made available, Chicago became the great mail order center of the Nation, with these giant institutions serving people from every State in our Union as well as in foreign lands. Our stores along State Street are looked upon with bewilderment by visitors to our fair city. Our retail stores have no equal—establishments such as Marshall Fields, Carson Pirie Scotts, Mendel Bros., Goldblatt's, The Fair, and many others.

Our newspapers have long been leaders in the field of news dissemination.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Is it not true that Chicago has the greatest newspaper in the world?

Mr. SABATH. Yes; Chicago has great newspapers. It is true I have disagreed with some of them but unfortunately, they have not always concurred in my beliefs; but aside from this they have been a powerful influence in the continued progress of this gateway to the West.

Our local government has been extremely active and alert in improving our roadways, boulevards, and parkways. We have broadened many of our main streets. Under construction at the present time is the great Congress Street superhighway, in addition to our passenger and freight subway and the extension of our elevated railways. Our boulevards extend from the Indiana State line to the Wisconsin State line, connecting with the Lincoln, Jefferson, Washington, Jackson, Garfield, Columbus, McKinley, Douglas, Humboldt Parks and Parkways, and many others. All these I hope you will see and visit.

I almost forgot to mention that our Chicago women have been recognized and are known to be the most beautiful and charming to be found anywhere.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, Chicago did suffer as a result of the great fire of 1871, and again for 8 years during the Republican administration of Mayor Bill Thompson, during which time we received some unpleasant publicity.

Mr. REDDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. REDDEN. The gentleman has dwelt on the great accomplishments of the city of Chicago, and I heartily agree with him. Surely the gentleman will concede that a greater portion of these accomplishments were under Democratic rule. The gentleman omitted saying that.

Mr. SABATH. Well, I have not concluded. Since then, under succeeding Democratic administrations, I am proud to say, the record shows it is the healthiest and most law-abiding city in our land—its women and men liberty-loving and progressive. Chicago is a great place to visit and I am pleased that all of the Members realize this fact.

So I hope you will all avail yourselves of the invitation to enjoy with us these two great fairs during the pleasant summer days ahead with the refreshing Lake Michigan breezes to add to your comfort and pleasure even on the warmest of days.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Naturally, after the great compliment paid me by the distinguished Member from Ohio earlier in my remarks, I cannot help but yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Of course, I do not desire to involve the gentleman from Illinois in any possible violation of the Anti-Lobbying Act or to have him appear before our committee. But would the gentleman state on the floor of the House whether or not, if this resolution should be enacted, the Members of the House who may have an opportunity to visit Chicago and attend this fair, can look forward to being guests of the gentleman now addressing the House for at least one evening of their visit?

Mr. SABATH. I assure my colleague that it will give me a great deal of pleasure to be the guest—I mean to act as host, to any Member; if you will make it known to me when you arrive I will endeavor to the best of my ability to see that you are properly received and properly treated.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts, who also comes from a large city.

Mr. McCORMACK. We all recognize that the gentleman is making a great speech for the passage of this resolution. Before the gentleman took the floor the resolution would have had extreme difficulty in being adopted, but I am satisfied now that our distinguished friend from Chicago, Ill., has dissipated all opposition. I am confident that as a result of his logic and eloquence the resolution will now be adopted by unanimous consent.

The gentleman has spoken of some of the fine things Chicago has. It is a great city. One of its finest possessions is one of the most lovable characters any one of us has ever met, the gentleman from Chicago [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. I thank my friend for that extraordinary compliment, but I accept it, naturally.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The last part of the gentleman's remarks was rather of a political character.

Mr. SABATH. No; I do not think so.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is this to be a nonpolitical fair or just a Democratic fair?

Mr. SABATH. No; this will be a fair for all the people.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Republicans, too?

Mr. SABATH. Yes. They have contributed their share in many ways in years gone by, and I extend due credit to them, as I mentioned before. Such men as Marshall Field, Mr. Leiter, Mr. Potter Palmer, Mr. Swift, Mr. Armour, Mr. Higginbotham, and others were not Democrats. They, too, helped build Chicago. I am not trying to deprive the Republicans of any credit which is due them. However, in view of the fact that someone asked whether this was a Democratic or Republican fair, I had to answer the question. I always try to answer any questions that are asked me whenever I am able to do so. Sometimes I cannot.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. REED of New York. The Republicans will not be taxed for going to the fair, will they?

Mr. SABATH. I assure the gentleman that they will not be taxed any more than others that come to our city day in and day out, by the thousands. Prices will be reasonable, the treatment will be right, and no one will regret visiting Chicago to participate in these two great fairs.

Mr. REED of New York. The gentleman will remember that the Republicans helped to get this legislation.

Mr. SABATH. I appreciate that. I always appreciate whatever good Republicans do. There is no question about that. I hesitate to say more, because I do not want to start an argument.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I can assure one and all that adequate accommodations will be available, as we have some of the most spacious and finest hotels ever built right on the lake front. Our restaurants are noted for their good foods the world over and will satisfy the most particular epicure, and at moderate prices. And for amusement we offer you the finest of golf courses, horse racing, baseball, and every other summer sport. And speaking of baseball, our White Sox and Cubs are doing very nicely. I am sure your visit to Chicago will be more interesting, pleasant, and satisfying than any trip you can possibly plan for this summer to any other section of our country or to foreign lands. In Chicago you can see everything that is to be seen.

You will be welcomed with open arms. Chicago's hospitality will be yours.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] the former lieutenant governor of the State of Ohio and one of the most active Republicans in the House.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, after consultation with and at the suggestion of the distinguished ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN], who somehow or other also seems to be just a bit prejudiced in favor of the State of Illinois and the great city of Chicago, in view of the nonpartisan approach that has been made to this great problem in the address delivered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], and as a tribute to the great city of Chicago and to the gentleman from Illinois, who is the dean of the House and a great legislator, as well as a great wit and a great Democrat, the minority yields back the balance of its time. I do so in the hope this resolution will be adopted unanimously so we may all soon repair to Chicago to become the guests of the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

PAUL LEACH

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes and ask unanimous consent that I may proceed out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there any objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, having served as a Member of this body for more consecutive years than any other Member in the history of the House, 44 years, to be exact, I feel it fitting and proper to call attention to the fact that another Chicagoan has established a similar record in the Fourth Estate, namely, our good friend Paul Leach, chief of the Washington bureau of the Chicago Daily News. Paul Leach this month is celebrating his fortieth anniversary with the Chicago Daily News, coming to Washington only 4 years after me.

Although the Chicago Daily News has changed hands several times during this twoscore years, Paul Leach has been retained by each new owner because of his personal ability, foresight, and faithful service to the traditions and ethics of the reporting service.

When I was just beginning to know my way around as a Member of the Sixty-first Congress, Paul Leach was a young fellow back in Chicago, starting out on his first job as a cub reporter for the real-honest-to-goodness-factual Chicago News, belonging to Victor Lawson. Since the Harding and Cox conventions in 1920 he has covered every national convention of both major political parties, and since 1934, a period of 16 years, he has worked with us in Washington, representing the Chicago Daily News. Yes, Mr. Speaker, for twoscore years, four decades, Paul Leach has gained the respect and love of everyone in this body, and, indeed, all of official Washington.

It is a privilege and a pleasure to congratulate him, and the Chicago Daily News as well, on the occasion of his fortieth year with the same newspaper. Paul Leach is an honor to his profession and to the city of Chicago.

I know that all of you who know Paul Leach must agree with me that he is a gentleman of high ability and fair-mindedness, and that, further, you will concur in all that I have, with deference, said about him.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, as a newspaper publisher and as a lifelong friend of Paul Leach, I am happy to join in the tribute being paid him by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]. Paul Leach is an exceptionally able newspaperman and a great American.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Speaker, whenever I have occasion to refer to the occupants of the Press Gallery, a certain stanza of verse invariably comes to my mind, the author of which I do not presently recall:

Some day I'll pass by the Great Gates of Gold,
And see a man pass through unquestioned and bold.
"A Saint?" I'll ask, and old Peter'll reply:
"No, he carries a pass—he's a newspaper guy."

Paul Leach, who is celebrating this month his fortieth year with the Chicago Daily News, is one of the ablest, finest and best "newspaper guys" it has been my privilege to know. Knowing him as I do, he does not need a pass to get him anywhere he may wish. I have never known him to take an unfair advantage of anyone or any situation. As a newspaper correspondent, Paul has always reported the news accurately and objectively.

In the fullest sense, Paul Leach has upheld the highest traditions of the fourth estate. The mere fact that he began with the Chicago Daily News 40 years ago as a sports reporter and has continued with that same great newspaper to be today its chief correspondent speaks more eloquently than any words of mine the merit of the man.

In his newspaper career, Paul has filed copy from every State in the Union. Since 1920 he has covered every national election as correspondent for the Chicago Daily News.

With this broad experience and inexhaustible knowledge of governmental affairs, Paul writes a weekly news analysis column for the four Knight newspapers—the Detroit Free Press, the Chicago Daily News, the Akron Beacon Journal and the Miami Herald.

And I think Paul has another accomplishment that ought to be mentioned. Shortly after he began his newspaper career he acquired a helpmate, who has been a constant source of inspiration to him. Their son and daughter have brought four grandchildren to the family circle. The boy served with distinction as an infantry captain in the Pacific during the last war, and the daughter's husband was a Navy officer in the submarine service.

In more ways than one, the Paul Leach family has made a real contribution to this great country of ours. I pay my respects to all of them. I congratulate the Chicago Daily News. To Paul, I would say, as Emerson at one time said: "The reward of a thing well done, is to have done it." And Paul has accomplished what is accomplished by few men. I am proud to claim him as a personal friend.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to address the House in support of House Joint Resolution 453. As a Chicagoan I, of course, take considerable pride in the initiative Chicago is taking in organizing the First United States International Trade Fair. But as an American who is vitally interested in seeing every possible step taken to encourage a sound foreign trade, I feel that every possible encouragement should be given to the First United States International Trade Fair.

It was my honor and pleasure to sponsor this resolution in the Committee on Foreign Affairs. A special subcommittee consisting of myself as chairman, my colleagues, Mr. MANSFIELD, of Montana, and Mr. JAVITS, of New York, considered this resolution and unanimously recommended that the resolution be reported favorably. The full committee concurred in the subcommittee's recommendation and also reported the resolution unanimously.

The House should understand fully the scope of this resolution. A fair like the one in Chicago usually requires legal authorization to permit exhibitors to bring in their exhibits and dispose of them by proper procedures outside the customary operations of the customs laws. This authority was given by the Congress on May 18, 1950, in Public Law 517.

The resolution now before the House authorizes the President to invite foreign nations and States of the Union to participate. It involves no financial obligation to the Government. What the resolution proposes is to lend the prestige of the United States to the fair by authorizing the President to issue invitations.

Although the purpose of the resolution is simple, the principle involved is of great importance. The expressed aim of the fair is to bring buyers and sellers together so as to encourage commercial relationships, the sale of goods, and the business contacts so necessary to good trade relations.

The passage of this resolution would give the President an opportunity to apprise the world of the importance of the fair and its part in those actions for which this Government stands. Good trade relationships are the lifeblood of commerce, and the encouragement of a healthy foreign trade is essential to this country and the nations of the world.

The trade fair emphasizes this point in encouraging buyers and sellers primarily, and governments as well.

It should be noted that the fair in Chicago is the "First United States International Trade Fair." Others will be held in years to come. It is most important, therefore, that the first one have the full support of the Government and people of the United States. The passage of this resolution will give that necessary support. I urge its adoption.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN) there were—ayes 389, noes 0.

So the resolution was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, since it seems there is no opposition to the joint resolution, and since no money is involved, I call up the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 453) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair, to be held at Chicago, Ill., August 7 through 20, 1950, and ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to invite by proclamation or otherwise, or in such manner as he may deem proper, the States of the Union and all foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair, to be held at Chicago, Ill., from August 7 to 20, 1950, inclusive, for the purpose of exhibiting industrial products; machinery, equipment, supplies, and engineering; and the exhibiting of the newest developments in metals, plastics, chemicals, oils, textiles, and other manufactured products; and bringing together buyers and sellers for promotion of foreign and domestic trade and commerce in such products.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "all foreign countries" and insert "foreign nations."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

IMPORT CONTROLS ON FATS AND OILS AND RICE AND RICE PRODUCTS

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 680 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3550) to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter), and rice and rice products. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order the bill S. 3550, and it has been agreed by the Committee on Banking and Currency that S. 3550 will be offered as a substitute for H. R. 8737, so that the same could be passed without any delay. The Committee on Banking and Currency has agreed to that so that the bill will not have to go to conference. The only question that has arisen was the question of coconut-oil and coconut exemptions.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. SPENCE. I do not think we agreed to the provisions of the bill. We agreed that it would be advisable to adopt the rule in order that the matter might be considered by the House.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. This is not a substitute or anything of that sort. We simply gave a rule permitting the Senate bill to be brought up at this time rather than the House bill. The difference between the House bill and the Senate bill is that the Senate bill excludes from the provisions certain coconut oil, which the House bill included. The agreement was made to go ahead with the Senate bill.

Mr. SPENCE. That is correct.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. So this is an original resolution.

Mr. SPENCE. It is an open rule and the bill is subject to amendment.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. But it is to expedite action that you are taking up the Senate bill because the dead line is tomorrow night at midnight.

Mr. SPENCE. That is right.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3550) to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils—including butter—and rice and rice products.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 3550, with Mr. GRANGER in the chair,

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] is recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Banking and Currency reported out the bill H. R. 8737 and went before the Rules Committee to obtain a rule and made our argument in behalf of the rule on that bill. The Rules Committee, however, with peculiar generosity, gave us a rule on a Senate bill. The question that then presented itself was whether or not we would accept the rule. We have accepted the rule because it is absolutely essential if these controls on fats and oils are to continue that some affirmative action be taken before tomorrow night.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Under what stretch of the imagination does rice come under fats and oils?

Mr. SPENCE. It comes under the bill; whether it comes under a strict definition of "fats and oils" is immaterial. Rice is expressly mentioned in the bill, and the question as to whether it is a fat or an oil or neither would not make much difference. The only difference between these bills is that the Senate excluded coconut oil from the quantitative controls which the President may exercise; the House bill included it.

This power is given to stabilize our economy, balance our international trade, and to protect these agricultural commodities, and incidentally to protect the stocks of these commodities which have been obtained by the Commodity Credit Corporation in order to support their prices. I think it is very essential that these controls continue. The last time we continued them for 3 years. This bill continues the controls by the President for one additional year.

The question is whether you want coconut oil controlled or decontrolled. I will admit that there are some advantages in accepting the Senate bill, because if there is a delay and this matter goes to conference and no decision is rendered by tomorrow night, which would be impossible, all of these controls are lifted. It is a matter of a good deal of importance to those sections that produce cottonseed oil, soybean oil, and peanut oil. When I gamble I like to gamble with my own property—not the other fellow's. I do feel I should not gamble with his interest in this legislation, and I am willing to be guided largely by the opinion of my colleagues who represent the producers of these products. I think there is a real peril if you do not pass the Senate bill because there will necessarily be a conference and there may be a delay; and the President cannot control the importation of these commodities if there is a delay, for the power to control them will expire tomorrow night.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. The Senate bill just extends the present law?

Mr. SPENCE. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. The only difference is with regard to the one item, coconut oil, one commodity.

Mr. SPENCE. That is true.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER. Is coconut oil controlled or decontrolled at the present time?

Mr. SPENCE. I understand that no controls have been exercised over coconut oil for the last 3 years.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER. What was the reason for the elimination of coconut oil in the Senate bill, allowing its importation, allowing it to stay decontrolled?

Mr. SPENCE. That is a question that must be answered by the President.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER. It has been delayed up to this time so that we are now in the position of either having to swallow the fly or get no soup.

Mr. SPENCE. We are between the devil and the deep blue sea right now, and the question is whether you want to take a chance on having all controls lifted by prolonging the discussion, or whether you will accept the Senate bill which will continue these controls; and you may be assured that they will continue for 2 years.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. GROSS. What assurance does the gentleman have that if we pass the bill the Senate will take action on it before tomorrow night?

Mr. SPENCE. This is a Senate bill and if passed will go to the President for his approval.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I understood the gentleman to say that the Senate bill provided for an extension of the present law for 2 years.

Mr. SPENCE. Yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As I read this bill, it runs to July 1, 1951.

Mr. SPENCE. I made a mistake. It is 1 year. I confused this with the last bill we passed here today.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I introduced a bill to extend it for 2 years and I had hoped that is what it would be; but under the circumstances I do not see how we can do anything about it.

Mr. SPENCE. This is an extension for 1 year. I would like to correct that.

Mr. Chairman, the Members are familiar with the operation of these controls and what they have done. The matter is submitted to the House.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. In case anything should happen to this bill, under section 22 of the AAA Act the President has the same powers that he has under this act?

Mr. SPENCE. I am not too familiar with that, but he has some powers of control. How far they go I do not know.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Under section 22 he would have to do it by issuing an executive order, which would be public information to everybody, but under these provisions it is done through the back door and other countries and other peoples do not know about it.

Mr. SPENCE. I think probably he has some powers of that kind, but how far they go I do not know.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As I understand it the existing law which we are continuing by this bill gives the President discretionary authority and is not a mandatory proposition?

Mr. SPENCE. I do not think the Congress ever issues any mandate to the President. He is head of a coordinate branch of the Government and the powers we grant him are always discretionary.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. But the gentleman and I have seen much legislation here that requires the doing of certain things; instead of saying "may do certain things" it is provided that "he shall do certain things," but this bill gives the President discretion?

Mr. SPENCE. It gives the President discretionary authority, yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. He can put on an embargo?

Mr. SPENCE. It is quantitative control. It can be done by embargo or by any method he wants to pursue as long as it is quantitative control.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MURRAY].

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, this bill is just one of the regular merry-go-rounds that takes place between the State Department, the Department of Agriculture, the Banking and Currency Committee and so forth and so forth.

In the first place, under section 22 of the AAA Act the President has this power now. In the second place, it does not make much sense to pass this bill yet turn around and let coconut oil come in, because that is the biggest import. It looks to me as if in presenting this bill all we are trying to do is to deceive ourselves or deceive somebody else because without the coconut oil provision in there there is not much use passing this bill. Coconut oil, it so happens, is recognized as the best vegetable oil there is so far as oleomargarine is concerned and so far as these other edible foods are concerned. In this bill provision is made that it is exempted.

Having been here as many years as I have and having watched the peanut oil people and the cotton people always looking after their own interests as they have been all these years, I cannot understand their submitting to a piece of legislation like this that allows coconut oil to be exempted. Coconut is the origin of the coconut cow. The dairy industry is already faced with catastrophe.

We are faced with another problem and that is the matter of the coconut cow. They can skim milk and coconut oil and sell it in competition with evaporated natural milk. As near as I can find out there was at least 10 times as much of that made last year as was made 10 years ago. It is just one more step downward for the dairy industry. I figure that the Eighty-first Congress has done enough to the dairy industry of this country for one session without being a party to ruining the evaporated milk industry of this Nation, which is a very important part of the dairy industry in many parts of our country.

Still, regardless of whether it is going to take a day or two longer, as far as I am concerned, I do not want to vote for this bill and give special privileges, if you please, to the coconut oil people, and I am sorry to see the soy bean people and the cottonseed people take the position that they want to have these coconut oil interests have the advantage over them because this kind of legislation is not based on fairness or equity or justice. I am not going to spend any time on the rice business at all; it has nothing to do with fats and oils. Rice has a tariff, it has good protection, and it could come under section 22. I am personally getting tired of having people come on the floor and telling about the wonderful features of reciprocal trade treaties, and every chance they get come in and ask for special privilege legislation which they ask for in connection with rice and other special privilege crops. I represent a district that tries to farm their farms and not the United States Treasury. In all the years I have been here, I have never asked for one thing for the farmers of my district that I did not want every other farmer in the United States to have, and it gets rather discouraging to see this double talk and this hypocrisy, of people going around and talking for reciprocal trade treaties and what a wonderful thing it is, and then talk about gadgets or legislation that sets it up for the few at the expense of the many. This rice gadget is another one of them.

So, the first thing we should do is to take out that provision for coconut oil. I am willing to pass up the rice, because it is an insignificant crop anyway. I realize that under this program, sure, we will stop the importation of butter, but you are not stopping the importation of butterfat. Millions and millions of pounds of batterfat are coming in here in other forms, in the form of cheese, which is a good deal more important than the rice industry of this country. We brought in 32,000,000 pounds of butterfat last year, and it caused just as much trouble as far as disturbing our domestic economy is concerned as if it came in in the form of a pound of butter.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. ANGUST H. ANDRESEN. I was going to mention the cheese proposition. If this bill should be amended at all, it should be amended to include cheese, and exclude cheese from coming in.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. It should have cheese included. As far as that is concerned, under section 22, how do you think we got the embargo on cotton coming into this country? By executive order. How about the embargo on wheat? That was done by executive order. There is no reason why this whole situation cannot be handled the same way if and when they want to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKINNON].

Mr. MCKINNON. Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to oppose this bill, although there are certain things about the inequity of the situation that I think should be borne in mind. I think all of us subscribe academically to the principle of free trade, but we all realize from a realistic standpoint that it cannot be flung open and operated completely without undermining our own economy. A number of us from the West sit here and watch certain commodities that are politically strong come in and get exemptions on certain articles they are interested in. I have no particular quarrel with that. It is only natural that we represent our commodities to the best of our ability, but I think this should be borne in mind, too, that complete free trade can hurt the little commodities just as much as it can hurt the big commodities. When you start making exceptions on the big powerful commodities, even though you do have the political strength to do it, we must realize that if we are going to have free trade we should not ask the little commodities to bear the complete brunt of a free-trade policy.

Out in our section of the country we have such items as lemons that are suffering pretty heavily now from imports from Italy. Our producers of canned fish are suffering from imports from South America. They are particularly threatened in the future by imports from Japan. The imports of Japanese canned tuna practically ruined our industry on the west coast in the thirties.

We have almonds and walnuts and fruits, and they are greatly damaged by the completely free-trade policy. Yet we do not have the political strength to protect ourselves. In passing this sort of a bill we are going to give an exception to certain items. I simply ask the other Members of the House to give consideration also to the little commodities that are likewise being hurt by this sort of policy. If it is right to make an exception on certain of the more politically powerful commodities, then I think we should also take into consideration some of the smaller commodities that are being damaged by a free-trade policy.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCKINNON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. JOHNSON. I concur in the gentleman's argument, and mention one or two products that affect my people very vitally in this reciprocal-trade program. One is the almond industry. A large part of it is in my home county. They are all individual, rather small farmers, and they are in continual jeopardy because of this agitation to modify the schedules. Another is wine. We have hundreds of wineries out in my area. Whenever you hurt the wine industry it percolates right down to the grape crop, and many of these producers have very small ranches, as the gentleman knows.

It seems to me when we go before these reciprocal trade committees we do not get any comfort whatever in presenting our arguments. They are just cold to our appeal. Once you wreck the wine industry you have wrecked the whole grape industry of California. We raise 3,000,000 tons of grapes a year, and it goes into thousands and thousands of families.

I want to compliment the gentleman on the argument he is making.

Mr. McKINNON. I thank the gentleman. I might also point out that when it comes to the almond grower, the walnut grower, and the citrus grower, these men are in the position that it takes several years to bring an orchard into bearing. If in one or two particular years the crop does not bear out they take the loss. They cannot transfer over into another crop. They are stuck with their groves. The same thing applies all through the West, and I think it applies to the citrus industry in Florida. We cannot make a quick transfer. Those things should be borne in mind as we write these reciprocal trade treaties. They should protect the little man, the little farmer who invests. It means everything to him, although his investment may be small compared to the national economy.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKINNON. I yield.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. The gentleman is making an excellent statement. I think it is a good thing to have attention focused on the problem of the special commodities he has mentioned. At the same time, I am pleased that he is not going to oppose the bill; that is, the plight of some commodities should not restrain the Congress in its effort to protect those that apparently this legislation is logically designed to protect.

With reference to some of the basic crops, I might add that the purpose of this bill is not limited to protection of American producers. I am thinking of rice, for example. I am not an expert in this field, but my district is close enough to the rice area that I think I can speak authentically on this point. Without these controls there might be a movement of rice to some local markets away from countries that need it. It is in consideration to some extent of the dietary and other standards rather than price considerations that the controls on rice should be extended.

I am glad that the gentleman developed the points on trade problems. He knows that many of us on the Committee on Banking and Currency are concerned on this score. I agree with him that we have not reached a solution. Free trade is an ideal that must be pursued, but it must be pursued with consideration for the little producers.

Mr. McKINNON. I am glad to have the gentleman's statement. Since he is a good Baptist deacon, naturally I would expect him to agree with the principle of the Golden Rule.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HULL].

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, unless this bill is amended by striking out "and coconuts" on page 1 and on page 2, as well, as "and coconut products," I shall feel constrained to vote against it regardless of the consequences. This House cannot be held responsible for this unwarranted situation.

There is no more dangerous element introduced into our economy than this matter of foreign oils in competition with the oils produced in our own country and in great competition with our dairy industry. The bill, if it is passed in its present form, will remove all import controls over coconut oils. It will allow large volumes, possibly millions of tons, to be imported into this country.

We know that because of the recent war there have not been so many new coconut plantations brought to bearing. But they will be, and there will be millions of tons of this coconut oil brought to this country to displace the cottonseed oil, peanut oil, soybean oil, and other oils produced in this country. I have a copy of a letter from the American Soybean Association addressed to the chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, which reads as follows:

HUDSON, IOWA, June 10, 1950.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, Banking and Currency Committee, House of Representatives, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN SPENCE: It is our understanding that your committee will start consideration of a bill adopted by the Senate last week, basic purpose of which was to extend the import controls on fats and oils for an additional period of time. We also understand that this bill includes an amendment adopted in the Senate specifically exempting coconut oil from these controls.

The American Soybean Asssociation favors the continuation of import controls on fats and oils, but we violently oppose the Senate bill, which specifically exempts coconut oil. With this exemption the bill becomes meaningless. The exemption defeats the very purpose for which the bill was written. It gives advantage to the major oil import, discriminating against all others. It is our contention that this exemption should be removed from the bill, and that it should then be passed and become law. Representing the major source of edible vegetable oil in the United States, soybean growers have more at stake than any one other group of producers. We would prefer nonpassage of import controls to passage of a bill containing special-privilege controls, legislation of the type sent to your committee by the Senate after adoption of the Bricker amendment.

We urge your committee to take immediate action to remove from the bill this exceedingly preferential and damaging provision. We further urge you to give immediate impetus to passage of the bill after removal of this exemption for coconut oil, thus continuing authority for import controls on all fats and oils on their present basis.

We further ask that this letter be presented to your committee and that it be placed in the record of testimony on this subject.

Respectfully yours,
AMERICAN SOYBEAN ASSOCIATION,
By GEO. M. STRAYER,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Chairman, that, in brief, is the sentiment of the farmers engaged in the business of raising soybeans in the Northwest and millions of other farmers as well. Many of you will remember that in the last few years and throughout the recent war the Government has paid subsidies to get the farmers to raise soybeans. That was done during the war and the acreage was increased in certain States, including Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, to some extent Minnesota, and in some other States. The soybean acreage was increased accordingly.

Now we are in competition with other vegetable oil interests. At this time a large part of the coconut oils imported into our country is made into soap. The soap monopoly which controls about 80 to 85 percent of all the soaps made and sold in this country is in control of the coconut oil trade of the world, one of those European cartels that we hear so much about. It is one of those corporations that apparently reaches out farther and farther as time goes on in order to compete with the American vegetable oil products.

Very recently, in the past year or so, $600,000,000 of American money has gone to Britain and Africa to develop many millions of acres of plantations which will produce vegetable oils and be in competition with soybean and cottonseed oils and all the other oils of our country. Of course, the idea is to extend the power of the cartel which manufactures such a large part of the products from vegetable oils, including probably two-thirds the oleomargarine made in our own country.

I shall offer an amendment at the proper time to strike out "and coconuts," in line 10 on page 1, and "coconut products," in line 1, page 2, from this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HULL] has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, in fairness to the Committee on Banking and Currency and its chairman, I am obliged to state that they did appear before the Committee on Rules and did desire a rule on their bill H. R. 8737 before the law expires tomorrow. We felt that if we should grant a rule on the House bill it would be a different bill than the bill which the Senate already passed. The Senate passed a bill excluding coconuts and coconut products and petroleum and petroleum products. In the hope that we would eliminate the appointment of conferees and perhaps delay the consideration of this legislation, the majority of the Committee on Rules felt a rule should be granted on the Senate bill in lieu of the House bill.

I do not wish you to understand that originally Chairman SPENCE of the Committee on Banking and Currency was willing to agree to it, but he was in this position, namely, that he must take the Senate bill or no bill at all, because, if we had granted a rule on the House bill, the chances are there would have been no legislation because of serious disagreement and the law would have expired. So the Committee on Rules felt that the only thing to do was to grant a rule and let the Banking and Currency Committee agree to take the Senate bill instead of no bill at all.

As to the complaints that have been made by my neighbors and friends from Wisconsin, I want to say this: You gentlemen have not been injured or hurt, as you maintain. Of course, I appreciate your efforts in behalf of the people of your district and the great State of Wisconsin, but Wisconsin, the farmers, and the dairy people of that State have been more prosperous, notwithstanding the legislation you complain of, than ever before in the history of our country. I hope they will continue to be prosperous, but I hope too that they will reduce their high prices on milk, cheese, and cream which we the public are obliged to pay.

Now, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HULL] complains about soya beans. May I call attention to the fact that in Illinois we grow large quantities of soya beans, more than the farmers in the State of Wisconsin. In the western section and the northern section of Illinois we have the finest farms and the finest dairies, and raise a great deal of soya beans; I have not heard a single soya-bean grower complain, because soya beans today are selling at $3 and as high as $3.15. Consequently, they cannot complain that they are suffering due to legislation when they can get $3, $3.10, or $3.15 for soya beans, as I said before. I realize the farmers themselves do not get it all. I know that this high price that has been brought about by speculation will not inure to the benefit of the farmers, but still they will have their portion of the high price, and that they are entitled to.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I think it is for the best interest of our country that this law be extended; and the only way it can be extended, because we are going to adjourn today, is to adopt the bill as passed by the Senate. I know there are men in the Senate who are interested in our country and in the farmer; not perhaps to the extent that the gentleman from Wisconsin is, but there are some men over there who at times are interested in the farmers of the Nation.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. If 85 percent of the vegetable oil which came into the United States this last year was coconut oil, would the gentleman still be in favor of this legislation or not?

Mr. SABATH. I do not know the percentage of coconut oil that comes into this country.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Of the total oil, I mean.

Mr. SABATH. But I understand that the bakers and the candy makers are very much interested in obtaining some of these coconuts and coconut oil at a price which will permit them to remain in business. Because of the protests from these two industries that came to the Committee on Rules and to the members of that committee we felt that we would safeguard their future and also bring about legislation that would extend this law which is about to expire tomorrow.

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TALLE].

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, I want to express keen regret at the fact that the Committee on Rules did not see fit to grant a rule on the House bill, because in the House bill there are no words that would have aroused the controversy we are spending our time on now. I think it was a mistake, and I shall point out why.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TALLE. Yes; briefly. My time is very short.

Mr. GROSS. Would the world come to an end if we failed to pass this bill today and the law expired for a few days, a week or so?

Mr. TALLE. I will deal with that in a moment. I thank the gentleman.

What may occur in the event that we leave the gates wide open as far as coconuts and coconut oil are concerned? Let me call attention to the statement of a distinguished scientist, Dr. John L. Coulter, in connection with the hearings on the House bill the 12th of June. He pointed out the following:

> The fact is that imports during the past 3 years, 1947 to 1949, have averaged more than during any other 3-year period in our history.

So you see the imports are increasing. In 1947 the imports amounted to 877,000,000 pounds.

I inquired about the conditions of production and I found that they are much improved in the areas where coconuts and coconut products are produced. War damages have been repaired, and revolutionary forces are not so active as formerly. Production is going ahead at a rate higher than prewar.

The next question is: Who are the users? Some of the testimony given to the Banking and Currency Committee was sweetened because it came from the confectionery industry, but if you will examine the hearings you will discover that as of 1947, 70 percent of the coconuts and coconut oil imported into the United States was used not by the candy people, not by the bakery people, but by the soap industry. The controversial words in this bill—S. 3550—relate principally to the interest of the soap industry in a foreign product which competes with products produced by our own people. American producers should have first claim on the home market.

What is the difficult position we are in? We are on a spot? Here is the situation: Suppose we pass the Senate bill and the gates are opened wide. Oil will flow in to compete with our domestic producers. Suppose we amend the bill. Then there must be a conference of the two Chambers, and, as you know, the parliamentary situation in the two bodies is such that a conference cannot be held prior to midnight tomorrow.

As has been pointed out, existing safeguards relating to fats and oils will die tomorrow at midnight. Suppose we kill the bill? Then the safeguards will die, too.

In the last two situations, what difference does it make? Suppose we let the current law expire tomorrow and take our time about further legislation. This is what will happen: The big users, and they are the soap people, suspecting that controls might be put on imports would immediately proceed to make large contracts for supplies. All right. After those contracts were made, whatever law we might pass on the 12th of July or the 15th or 30th of July would be nullified because the contracts had already been made. So in order to protect ourselves in this awkward situation I suspect we will be better off if we pass the bill.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, my distinguished colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. MURRAY] has pointed out that the President and the Secretary of Agriculture were granted certain powers relating to imports under the Commodity Credit Corporation Act which became law just a few days ago. The gentleman referred to section 22. It is my opinion, and I believe it is the gentleman's opinion, that if the provisions of that section are properly administered, whenever imports endanger the price of lard, butter, and so forth, or fats and oils generally, the President and the Secretary of Agriculture can stop further importation.

As I stated at the outset, I regret this sort of legislation, but I am not going to take the responsibility of removing all safeguards on the ground that the Senate bill contains a provision with which I disagree.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman one additional minute.

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, I repeat that I believe we will be better off if we pass this bill. There is not sufficient time for a conference with Members of the less numerous branch of the Congress.

Inasmuch as the administration leadership is responsible for this awkward and unfortunate situation I feel that the administration should take a look at section 22 in the Commodity Credit Corporation Act, and then resolve to bolster up the weakness that is very apparent in the pending bill.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TALLE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Did Dr. Coulter's figures show the percentage of coconut oil being imported? Nearly all of the imports are coconut oil percentagewise?

Mr. TALLE. That may be true. Dr. Coulter testified in behalf of seven national organizations. His complete statement is in the hearings on the House bill.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Therefore, if the bill is not passed it is not going to do much harm because there is not much cottonseed oil, peanut oil, or any other vegetable oil coming into the United States, is there?

Mr. TALLE. Up-to-date figures are not available to me but production, and importation are increasing. I want to protect our domestic producers of fats and oils.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARDY].

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, I want to address my remarks particularly to the comment made by the two gentlemen from Wisconsin. In my opinion, their point is well taken. There is a defect in this legislation in the exemption provided for coconut oil. However, under the circumstances that confront us, I sincerely hope we will pass this legislation as it is and without amendment; otherwise we will wake up tomorrow night and we will not have any controls over these oil-bearing crops. The situation, as I understand it, is that if we do not extend this authority by passing this legislation today on July 1 we will have foreign-produced peanuts—perhaps foreign-produced soybeans—moving freely into competition with our domestic production.

On yesterday I had a telephone call from one of my constituents who is in the peanut business. He said, "I would like to know what is going to happen to this extension of the authority to control these imports. There are now in Mexico oriental peanuts which I can buy for delivery on July 1. There are also in certain foreign-trade zones, in storage, peanuts ready for immediate movement." He said he was further informed that there were orientally produced soybeans ready for immediate unloading in west coast ports. I was also informed that there are large quantities of flaxseed in Soviet-controlled ports ready for immediate shipment to this country.

Now we are faced with a problem. Unless we pass this legislation as it is, we are going to have no controls and we are going to immediately feel the effect of the elimination of these controls, and we will feel it on the following day. I think we should eliminate or find some way to eliminate this coconut-oil proposition, and I would suggest that the Committee on Banking and Currency give consideration toward further legislation which will be more equitable and might even take into account some other commodities that are involved.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Just to keep the record straight, the facts are that pretty nearly all the imports are coconut oil at the present time.

Mr. HARDY. I understand that that is true, but the imports of peanuts would show up immediately. There was an intensive effort made only a few months back to have this restriction lifted on peanuts, and peanuts are now waiting to come in.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN].

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, this type of legislation really has the Members over a barrel. We are really forced to take it, and if we do not, then our country will be flooded with imports of foreign fats and oils and the competitive products covered by this bill. Now, it is apparent that Congress during the past, and even the Eighty-first Congress, has delegated authority to the President to say what should happen on imports and exports; in fact, we learned here only this week that the President possesses the power to declare war, or get the country into a state of war, or send our troops into war and bypassing Congress. This legislation is about on a par with that. We do not know today, if we pass this bill, whether the President will continue embargoes and quotas which have been in effect or will be in effect up until tomorrow night. He may or he may not; it is in accordance with his discretion. We will find ourselves in the situation which we are in where we are really forced to take this bill or take nothing and then trust to the President that he will try to protect the American producers of this country.

Now, what has happened in the case of butter? Well, the President under discretionary authority given him by Congress—I did not vote for it—reduced the duty on butter from 14 cents a pound to 7 cents a pound. He did that in January of this year under agreements made over in France when they had a trade conference. So the duty on butter has been cut in half.

Last year in August and September the President urged all these countries like France and Denmark and other countries who are getting our grants and gifts to devalue their currencies, and most of them did, by 30 percent. It really knocked out the 7-cent duty we have on butter, and the other tariff duties that have been cut by the President under his discretionary authority. Butter today can be laid down in New York from any country in the world, duty and transportation paid, at less than 50 cents a pound, and here we have a support price of 60 cents a pound, with the Government buying a great deal of the butter produced in the surplus-producing areas of the country, like the States of Iowa and Minnesota.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. The fact is that butter is coming into this country by the millions of pounds.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. It is not coming in yet, because we still have this law that is in effect and will remain in effect until 12 o'clock tomorrow night. When the President cut the duty on butter he fixed a quota on imports of 60,000,000 pounds a year that can come in under the 7-cent duty, which is about two times as much butter as we have imported at any time in the history of our country during the past 25 years.

Mr. JENSEN. That is what I said; it is coming in.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Yes; it will come in, unless we pass this bill and continue the law for another year. I am satisfied that the President will not exercise the authority he has under section 22. He did not do so on potatoes. Our market will be flooded with butter. This means that the Commodity Credit Corporation will have to step into the market and buy more and more American butter, that will go into storage in this country, to provide a market for the butter that is shipped here from foreign countries. So we are facing a reality here when we deal with this legislation.

Mr. JENSEN. In addition to the smack that we took on the oleo bill.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. That is true.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Granting at least that the gentleman is right on his approach to butter, and all that they want to control is the butterfat that is in the butter, would the gentleman be agreeable to an amendment that would include cheese, because cheese has pretty nearly half as much butterfat in it as butter does?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I recognize that. I will say to the gentleman we should also include all kinds of cheese. We should also include potatoes. We should include eggs that are shipped in here from Communist China, and we should include hams that are shipped in here from behind the iron curtain. There are many other items that should be included in this legislation because of the authority that has been conferred by this and other Congresses on the President to use his discretionary power. So that this legislation really does not solve anything. It temporarily tries to correct an evil. I hope the day is not far distant when we can have a Congress here that will try to protect the American market for the American producers in all lines of agriculture and industry.

Mr. KEARNS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KEARNS. Is it not possible to have some kind of peril clause here such as we tried to have in the reciprocal trade agreements bill?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I am for the peril clause. We had that in law passed by the Eightieth Congress, but that was knocked out when they passed the Reciprocal Treaty Act last year. The peril clause would have given protection to American producers.

But I would go further than that, because when you have a peril point in tariff legislation, immediately you are up against the political situation where there is a discretionary power lodged in the President or the Commission which is to pass on it, and if the policy is continued on a free-trade basis, as we have been doing since 1934, it will not do much good. What we must have here is mandatory legislation enacted by the Congress under the power provided in the Constitution, and then the Administration will know just exactly what should be done without any question whatsoever.

I do not like to see coconuts in this bill. What are we going to do? I feel like the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TALLE]. We are just behind the eight-ball. Unless we pass this legislation we probably will not have any legislation whatsoever, and then these imports will be coming into this country, 60,000,000 pounds of butter, which will knock the bottom out of the dairy market. The Government has 150,000,000 pounds of butter now and they probably will have two hundred and twenty-five or two hundred and fifty million pounds of butter. They do not know what to do with it now. In fact, they are not doing anything to find a place for that butter, but probably with the war on, and our forces being engaged in hostilities in the Pacific, perhaps they may find some use for these surplus foods, like butter, cheese, and other products which have been accumulated under the support-price program.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. HARDY. Then the gentleman has arrived at the same conclusion I have, that the only thing we can do is to pass this bill in its present form, otherwise we will have no controls?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. That is right. I am glad to hear the gentleman mention that. Several Members have spoken today who voted for the reciprocal-trade program, and now they are pleading for protection. I feel, however, that we should keep the record straight and therefore I have given certain pertinent facts in regard to the reciprocal-trade program and the manner in which the Truman administration is administering the law.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LARCADE]

Mr. LARCADE. Mr. Chairman, I realize that this legislation should have been presented to the House before this time, however, the fact remains that a rule was only obtained on June 16, and while the House bill would protect some of the industries that obtain in my district, as explained by the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], since the existing law expires on tomorrow, June 30, it was found advisable to present the Senate bill S. 3550 rather than consider the House bill, for if any amendments were made to the House bill the bill would have to be referred to a conference between the House and Senate which would have required probably some time, and in the meantime, the existing controls on the items covered would lapse, and as a result there would be great harm to some of the commodities and industries covered under the existing law.

Mr. Chairman, the Senate bill covers all of the commodities included in the House bill. However, the Senate has added a provision to make the same applicable to coconuts and coconut products, and while some of the Members have the opinion that this item should not have been included, and others that additional commodities should also be included, and have announced that they will offer such amendments, while I am sympathetic to some of the amendments, I join the chairman of our committee in asking that the bill, in order to be effective at the expiration of the present law, that is, June 30, be passed so that there will be no interim in the protection to those commodities covered in the bill. I am greatly interested in the protection provided in the bill under consideration as my district produces cottonseed oil, fats, and rice. I represent one of the largest rice-producing dist.icts in the United States, and as an example of what may happen in the event that we do not pass the bill under consideration, and if the controls on rice should expire tomorrow—I am informed that Siam is ready to start shipping 200,000,000 pounds of rice to the United States at a price 2 cents per pound below the prevailing price of American rice. The United States consumption of rice is about 50 percent of the amount of rice produced in the United States, and since the rice to be shipped by Siam is of the lower grade, used principally by breweries, the American producers would be deprived of this market for nearly one-fourth of the American crop at one swoop.

Mr. Chairman, my good friend the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MURRAY] referred lightly to the rice industry in the United States as not being of much importance. While it is true that only four States in the United States produce rice, this is one of the most important industries in my State and the other States named, and I wish to say to my friend that I consider the rice industry most important, and unless we continue these import restrictions on rice, as well as the other commodities included under the bill, my district and State and the other States will be very adversely affected from an economic standpoint. I trust the Members of the House will approve this emergent legislation.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, as it has already been pointed out, because of the parliamentary situation, and the fact that the control powers now existing on the importation of fats and oils will expire tomorrow, it is necessary that some action be taken today. I can understand that the bill does not meet the approval of all of the Membership. Possibly it does not cover some commodities which should be covered. Again, from my own point of view, it does not go far enough. I would like to see some affirmative or mandatory instructions to the administrative authorities provided in the bill, and not leave the matter entirely discretionary. The trouble is that the discretionary powers provided are not exercised often enough.

With your permission I would like to illustrate briefly what I have in mind: There is an infant industry in this country, largely in my particular area, the tung oil industry. Tung oil is primarily a Chinese product; but, due to the fact that it is a strategic war material, the industry was begun in this country following World War I. Tung oil is now one of the commodities, the importation of which can be controlled under existing law; but the fact remains that those in charge of the administration thereof have not seen fit to do anything toward stopping the importation of this cheap, inferior grade of tung oil on the domestic market in competition with the oil produced in this country.

We have, as I pointed out the other day on the commodity credit bill, an unusual situation, in fact, an almost unbelievable one. This Congress last year passed legislation making it mandatory upon the Secretary of Agriculture to support domestically produced tung oil at approximately 24 cents per pound. That support price is in effect today, and yet, we are permitting the shipment of more than 50 percent of the tung oil used in this country largely from Communist-dominated China, free of duty. It is unthinkable that we should permit these oil brokers to bring this Communist oil from China into this country at opportune moments so as to run the market down below the support price that Congress provided for domestic oil. It simply does not make sense that one agency of the Government should reach into the taxpayer's pocket to pay the support price on domestically produced oil and at the same time another agency of the Government should permit this foreign oil, produced by Communist-dominated coolie labor, to be imported and dumped upon the market so as to run the price of the domestic oil down.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that those in charge of the administration of this law will understand from the action of the Congress today and from this debate thereon that this action is a mandate to them to do something about this intolerable and nonsensical situation.

Mrs. BOSONE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to the distinguished lady.

Mrs. BOSONE. I wonder if the gentleman from Mississippi, along with the tung oil and soybeans and peanuts, would mix up a little lead and zinc and copper. We from the West would appreciate that because it would help us a great deal.

Mr. COLMER. I am sure I get the full import of the lady's remarks. Unfortunately, in 3 minutes I had to confine myself to one commodity. What I am trying to say is that I hope the Administration will use the authority that is granted it to protect this and other similarly situated industries and commodities, and thus save the taxpayers some money.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] has expired.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, it has been very refreshing this afternoon to hear my friends on the Democratic side of the aisle argue for some good old-fashioned American doctrine, namely, some protection for American agriculture and American business. This is sound Republican doctrine also.

I am going to offer an amendment to the bill to add cheese. When we are considering the question of placing an embargo on the control of imports on fats and oils, we must not forget cheese which contains 30 percent fat or oils covered by this bill. My farmers are entitled to this protection. The only protection as the bill is written is for the soybean farmers, the peanut farmers and the big business firms that are importing coconut oils.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Do we get cheese from coconut oil?

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Not yet.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Well, that is all there is in this bill—coconut oil.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. The gentleman has apparently not read this bill. There is plenty of oil in cheese, and it ought to be included in this bill. I call attention to the fact that at the present time the Commodity Credit Corporation has on hand 63,000,000 pounds of cheese. I talked to a man in the Department, and he said, "We do not know what to do with it." In 1949 we imported 32,000,000 pounds of cheese, and in May of this year one of the large cheese distributing firms in this country imported from Australia 5,000,000 pounds of Cheddar cheese at 21 cents a pound. The Commodity Credit Corporation is paying a support price of 31 cents. Now, how long are we going to continue with that situation? Our farmers must have more protection than they are getting and I intend to fight for their interests, Mr. Chairman.

So at the proper time, Mr. Chairman, I will offer an amendment to insert the word "cheese" on line 9, after the word "butter."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH] has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time, 3 minutes, to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN].

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, America produces annually in the neighborhood of 10,000,000,000 pounds of fats and oils, yet in the past few years fats and oils have been coming into this country by the hundreds of millions of pounds.

It is noteworthy that up until about a year ago this Government had an embargo against the exportation of fats and oils, both edible and inedible. Fats and oils were piling up in this country no end, bringing the price of all of our fats and oils away down to about 50 percent of their actual value. Lard was brought down to a point of about 15 cents below the price at which it should actually sell. Hence, it was necessary for the packer to charge more for the pork chops in order to make up the great loss which he sustained on lard. About a year ago a number of Congressmen, including myself, took this matter up with the Commerce Department; and I am happy to say that a short time afterward inedible fats were decontrolled; that is, the administration permitted the exportation of inedible fats, and a short time after that edible fats were placed on the exportable list.

Now, Mr. Chairman; I have been told that the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Sawyer, is married into the Procter and Gamble soap family. If that be the case, it is, of course, mighty nice and profitable to have very cheap fats and oils, for his folks, but mighty tough on our producers of fats and oils. If Mr. Sawyer and his family are profiting in this manner, then I think Mr. Sawyer should be investigated.

It is necessary to have coconut oil to make fine candies? The answer is "No," because many of the finest candies are made of good pure hog lard; and coconut oil is a substitute for good pure hog lard; lard is not a substitute for coconut oil. A short time ago our dairymen took a terrific jolt from the oleo combine, now our hog raisers are about to take a like jolt, from foreign producers. I ask; what next?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, title III of the Second War Powers Act, 1942, as amended, and the amendments to existing law made by such title shall continue in effect until July 1, 1951, for the purpose of authorizing and exercising, administering, and enforcing of import controls with respect to fats and oils (including oil-bearing materials, fatty acids, butter, soap and soap powder, but excluding petroleum and petroleum products and coconuts and coconut products) and rice and rice products, upon a determination by the President that such controls are (a) essential to the acquisition or distribution of products in world short supply or (b) essential to the orderly liquidation of temporary surpluses of stocks owned or controlled by the Government: Provided, however, That such controls shall be removed as soon as the conditions giving rise to them have ceased.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin: On page 1, line 9, after the word "butter", insert the word "cheese."

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, this is a very simple amendment, and I do not believe it ought to be objected to by the committee. Neither should it cause the calling of a conference, for it merely includes an item which should be included when we are considering the question of import controls on fats and oils. Cheese should be in this bill. I am offering the amendment in the hope that the committee will not object.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, without going into the merits of this amendment, the amendment will simply send the bill to conference which will take time, and inasmuch as the controls expire tomorrow night, delay will destroy the very purpose for which we have accepted the Senate bill. Should you vote for this amendment you are taking a chance of having all the controls that are in the bill lifted.

I am sorry that this condition exists, but it does exist, and we must take that fact into consideration when the amendments are offered.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that this amendment be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin) there were—ayes 31, noes 49.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HULL: On page 1, line 10, and on page 2, line 1, after the word "products", strike out "and coconuts and coconut products."

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I well realize that what the Chairman says as to the situation is probably correct, but I do not think the House of Representatives should take the responsibility of passing a bad bill because the Senate has forwarded this measure over here at this time in the shape it is in. It does seem to me that it is rather wicked to ruin the marketing facilities for products of millions of farmers in their surplus period with the idea of catering to the demand of some big corporation lobbyist who may be back of this whole proposition. I realize if we vote for the amendment we may not cure the situation, but it is our responsibility, and I shall vote for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HULL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HULL) there were—ayes 36, noes 54.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GUILL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GUILL: On page 1, line 10, strike out "petroleum and petroleum products and."

Mr. GUILL. Mr. Chairman, I do not know why line 10, excluding petroleum and petroleum products, was placed in this bill unless it was so that we could continue importing oil from Saudi Arabia, South America, or any other foreign country. But I would like to make this statement that, notwithstanding what pictures appear in Life magazine and other publications, everyone in Texas is not a millionaire, and all the oil and gas wells in Texas do not produce and spray oil all over the countryside. We have many little wells down in Texas producing four and five barrels a day or less. We have thousands of people working in the oil industry, and some of them are being laid off today because of the fact that we are importing so much oil from foreign lands. We do not mind letting them import some oil, but let them import only as much as we export. We are not only being hurt in Texas, but you are being hurt in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and many other States. I think it is time we gave these small, independent oil people some protection. I do not mean the big boys; I am not worrying about them. They can look after themselves. They operate over a period of many years, but the little man who operates today pays his stuff out in 5, 6, 7, or 8 years.

As I said, I am not certain of the reason behind the specific omission in line 10, but I suggest we consider striking it out. I respectfully ask this House to give this amendment some thought.

I personally think our own small producers deserve more consideration from this House than producers in distant places beyond the seven seas.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, petroleum and petroleum products have been excluded from controls for the last 3 years, and we left the law as we found it in that respect.

Mr. TACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to use this time just to ask the chairman or some member of the committee some questions. I asked some of them a while ago on the floor and off the floor about whether or not petroleum and petroleum products were excluded from import controls, and I was assured that this bill did not have anything in the world to do with petroleum and petroleum products, even though this language in line 10 is there. It does seem that it has got something to do with it; is that right?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, that is right. It is excluded from controls now.

Mr. TACKETT. And this bill just keeps it excluded?

Mr. SPENCE. It is excluded from controls now. The law remains as it now exists.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. If it is excluded now, why is it in here? Why is it necessary to write it into this legislation?

Mr. TACKETT. I understood that the President was authorized to make agreements with various nations and countries concerning the importation of oil and gasoline, but under this bill he has no authority to deal with anyone, and I think the President of the United States ought to have some authority to deal with these countries that are exporting gasoline and oil into the United States and putting these small oil people out of business.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield to my colleague from Arkansas.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I believe the gentleman understands the situation. If he wishes to support the gentleman from Texas, of course, that is his privilege, but as the chairman has indicated, for 3 years Presidential controls under the War Powers Act have been nonexistent, and this bill is to continue the controls over the other commodities. It does not affect petroleum or petroleum products. It neither takes from or adds to existing powers. These agreements that the gentleman refers to are being made, as I understand, under other executive powers. I hope the committee will not disturb this legislation because no testimony was offered along the line suggested by the gentleman from Texas, and it would certainly complicate our situation. It would undo all of the accomplishments of the committee so far in the consideration of the basic idea.

Mr. TACKETT. I may say to my colleague from Arkansas that the House bill did not have this provision in it, and for that reason no one came before his committee to testify. This is something the gentleman's committee did not know anything about this morning. If it is in the House bill, I cannot find it.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. If the gentleman will look in that portion of the report, on page 3, that complies with the Ramseyer rule he will find the answer. I want to answer the gentleman's question as intelligently as I can. I am simply trying to emphasize the fact that this is an extension of existing law.

Mr. TACKETT. I think the gentleman is right. I do not doubt that, but I do not want any provision going in here that will preclude the President under some other authority from dealing and making agreements with other countries.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. The gentleman is right, and he can have every assurance on that point, that this will not impair other laws with reference to the importation of petroleum. I assure the gentleman of that.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield so that I may ask a question of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Assuming the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas was adopted, what would be the effect of it?

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I am not sure. I want to be very careful here. I do not know that it would affect the President's powers. The point I wish to make is this, that since we are forced in view of the fact these controls end tomorrow to adopt legislation in the form adopted by the Senate then of course we can make no predictions at all regarding the continuation of these controls if amendments are added.

Mr. TACKETT. What I would like to find out is this. Petroleum is not under control now.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. TACKETT. If this is adopted will it bring it back under control?

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. No. I believe I answered the question when I said that it leaves it to the President's discretion. The effect of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas would be to leave it to the President's discretion. I do not intend to enter into a discussion of the merits of the controls over petroleum or the wisdom of any executive orders and policies with reference to it. I have simply pointed out that if we are to accomplish what we desire to do here with reference to the other commodities that were considered by the committee we will simply have to avoid a conference with the Senate, by rejecting the gentleman's amendment, whatever its merits, independently considered.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. TACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. TACKETT. I want to be sure that petroleum would be regulated. That is the main thing I am after. Knowing that this bill is so important, is there any reason why we waited until the day before the law is to go out of existence, and then have to rush in here and pass this bill, and then say we have to take this or take nothing? Is there any particular reason for that?

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I could say with reference to that, if the gentleman implies that the Committee on Banking has been derelict, that this report was filed on June 16, and we did not get a rule until yesterday.

Mr. TACKETT. Did the candy companies and the soap companies have anything to do with his coming in here with this Senate bill rather than the House bill?

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I think, of course, the answer to that would have to be given by members of the Committee on Rules, but, in all fairness, of course, it is a matter of public information that the confectioners are favorable to the Senate action.

Mr. TACKETT. To the Senate bill; that is right.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I do not see anything to be gained by entering into a discussion on that point. But the users of coconut oil, of course, are largely the confectioners and the candy manufacturers and the baking interests. They have presented their case vigorously. I am not questioning that.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GAVIN. Those of us who are concerned over the importation of these tremendous quantities of oil, amounting to some 821,000 barrels a day, feel that if we could strike out the word "excluding" in line 10, and insert the words "including petroleum and petroleum products", we would be giving protection to the independent producer and the small operator against this tremendous influx of foreign oil.

Mr. TACKETT. I agree with the gentleman except for one thing. They say if we do not pass the bill today it will not do any good if it is passed tomorrow. I want to ask just one more question with reference to that. If the bill is passed today with some amendments and it is necessary to go to conference, would it hurt anything if the bill became law 2 or 3 days later?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. I come from an oil-producing State and that I am certainly not indifferent to the interests of the oil producers. I know of course that the getnleman's district is an oil-producing district. But the question cannot be resolved on the basis of the merits or demerits of any Presidential controls over the imports of petroleum or petroleum products as far as this legislation is concerned. I give the gentleman that assurance.

With reference to the specific question the gentleman asked me, and speaking as one member of the committee—if any amendments are added to this legislation, I could not make any predictions regarding the action of the other body. It is obvious, in view of the history of this legislation that if any amendments are added a conference is inevitable and the future of this legislation is entirely unpredictable. It would be impossible for us to give the House any assurance that the controls which the vast majority of us understand are necessary in the case of these other oil products, would be continued. Since this legislation does expire tomorrow, it seems to me on that basis we are justified in voting down these amendments. That was my only purpose in making that point.

Mr. GUILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield.

Mr. GUILL. I would like to ask the gentleman one question along the line of the question asked by my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, whether striking out the word "excluding" and inserting the word "including" would give protection to the independent producers and the small operators in the oil industry.

Mr. HAYS of Arkansas. No, in my opinion it would not. And may I point out to the gentleman that insofar as the prevention of importation of petroleum products is concerned, and the prevention of the disruption of the American market, in which the gentleman is interested, the powers of the President are exercised under other laws which are not involved here.

I believe, if I may say so, and I know the gentleman from Texas is seeking to protect the interests of his people, that his recourse would be with executive agencies and with other committees now investigating the oil import situation not the Committee on Banking and Currency and not by typing his proposal onto this bill.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLSON. May I point out to the gentleman from Arkansas that there is nothing in this bill which has anything to do with petroleum products. All this bill concerns is fats and oils, and that is vegetable oils and fats. It has nothing to do with petroleum. I agree with the gentleman from Texas as well as the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I am an old Yankee protectionist. I do not believe in free trade or anything. But there is nothing about that in this bill. All that this bill involves is vegetable oils. They have never used that discretion which they had to set up a quota on coconut oil imports. We do not have any in this country. We do not raise any and we are not in competition with them. But it came from the Senate that way. As has been pointed out by the chairman of the committee and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAYS] nothing is going to be hurt if we put this through, because it has never been used anyway. If we have to go to conference, it will never be passed.

Mr. GUILL. We have been told that these things are not going to be used, time and again; that this had to be crammed down our throats by the veto of the Kerr bill. I think it is time we had some laws where we knew what was going to happen, instead of saying, "We will never use it."

Mr. NICHOLSON. In reply to the gentleman, because it has never been done we think it never will be, has not anything to do with the bill before us. We are asked to vote for a Senate bill that has been sent in by the Rules Committee, and that is all we can vote for.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. NICHOLSON] has expired.

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words in order that I may get the floor in support of the amendment so ably presented by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. GUILL].

I want to commend the distinguished gentleman from Texas for bringing this important matter to the attention of the Membership of this House, this question of importation of oil and oil products.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. GUILL] has made every effort he could during the short period he has been in Congress in an attempt to secure legislation that would help curb this ever increasing importation of oil.

I have had considerable experience also in trying to secure legislation on this subject matter, but up to this time, I regret to say, have met with little success. Why the administration should oppose the curbing of importation of oil and oil products to the detriment of the independent oil producer, is difficult to understand. I believe if his amendment were adopted some effort would be made on the part of administrative officials to curb the ever increasing importation of oil and oil products. This House ought to give attention to the problem that has been so well portrayed by the gentleman from Texas. This is a problem that not only concerns the State of Texas, a great producer of oil, but it also affects other States in the Union who have a similar problem.

I say to you that unless action is taken with regard to this matter, a good many independent oil producers will go out of business and many workers will go on the unemployed list, all because this country has allowed an over importation of oil and oil products into the United States, from foreign countries.

I trust the membership of this Committee will give its support to the amendment that has been so ably presented by the distinguished Member from Texas [Mr. GUILL].

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman who has manifested great interest in this problem.

Mr. GAVIN. I cannot see any reason why this would not be proper in this bill. Here is an opportunity for the Representatives of the oil States who have been suffering from these tremendous imports of foreign oils to control the imports.

Mr. REES. And the gentleman knows the little attention we have received from the committees in this Congress where we have appeared requesting legislation on this subject matter.

Mr. POULSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. POULSON. Does not the gentleman from Pennsylvania realize that this is the way the administration gets over all their program? They wait until the last minute and then come in and use the stock answer, "We have got to put it over or it will expire."

Mr. REES. That is indeed, very unfortunate, because undoubtedly those in charge must have known that this act was going to expire. Surely, they should have brought it here in sufficient time so that it could have the proper consideration to which it is entitled.

The production of crude oil is not only one of the basic industries in the State of Kansas and Texas but it is one of the important and basic industries of this country. I feel that this Congress should provide legislation that would protect the domestic oil producing industry against the ever increasing imports of crude petroleum presently playing havoc with the oil producing industry in this country.

While the market at home is shrinking, imports of crude petroleum are increasing every month and every year. I call your attention to some facts that I think are of extreme importance to this committee and to this Congress.

During the period from 1936 to 1940, the average importation of crude oil and refined products was 153,000 barrels per day. During the war the average imports amounted to approximately 200,000 barrels daily. In 1946 imports were 370,000 barrels. In 1947, 437,000 barrels. In 1948 513,000 barrels per day, and at the end of 1949 importations reached the high of 580,000 barrels. I do not know what the imports are for 1950, but I understand they are now running at the rate of 750,000 barrels per day.

Now let me call your attention to the manner in which these importations have affected the production of oil in the State of Kansas. It is estimated by those engaged in the production of crude oil that in the year 1949 there was a decline in the State's daily production of approximately 25 percent. The decline was from 300,000 barrels of oil daily to a low of 245,000 barrels, or a loss of 65,000 barrels of oil per day of the market demand for Kansas produced oil.

The situation is similar to that of Texas and other oil-producing States. It is estimated that the loss to the economy of the State of Kansas alone amounted to approximately $30,000,000 last year. Think what it amounts to in the great State of Texas. I would remind you that this loss is not sustained by big oil companies, because 70 percent of the oil produced in the State of Kansas is by independent producers, and the loss is distributed not only among the producers themselves but among land owners, where oil is produced, and especially among employees who produced the oil.

It is estimated that the reduction in the sale of oil in the State of Kansas alone represents the employment of approximately 5,000 people engaged in various phases of oil production.

I would like to call your further attention to the fact that although 2,500 new oil wells were completed in Kansas in 1949, the output is less than it was in 1948. I think you understand that our oil production is held down on a pro rata basis. In other words, under proration agreement all oil production is given a chance for the market on an allocated basis so that the oil production in our State, as well as in other States, is extremely small compared with the potential production of these wells.

Mr. Chairman, this is an economic problem. The hundreds of thousands of persons who earn their living by drilling and operating oil wells, who operate pipelines and refineries, have a direct and vital interest in the production of crude oil. It affects the farmers who share in the proceeds of the sale of oil. It affects the merchants in the hundreds of oil-producing communities throughout the country.

It does not make sense that the economic benefits of the domestic oil industry of the State and Nation should be transferred to foreign lands and foreign dictators and to a small group of powerful companies, which, though domiciled in the United States, give the appearance of willingness to sacrifice domestic welfare and increase their foreign position. It cannot be right that our own independent producers should be required to further cut their allocations or go out of businesswhile our Government sanctions increases in imports of oil from foreign countries.

We should have legislation that will curb the importation of crude oil and its products. These importations should be on a quantitative restriction basis, and should be limited to not more than the amount needed to supplement domestic production.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GUILL].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: Page 2, line 1, after "rice products", insert "potatoes, cheese, hams."

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield before he starts?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield briefly.

Mr. HARDY. I just wanted to call attention to the gentleman's consistency. He admitted a while ago that an amendment would kill the bill and that the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Yes, if the Chair please.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard on the point of order because I think the amendment is germane. Furthermore, I want to keep some of these products out. That ought to make it germane. I call the Chair's particular attention to the fact that on page 2, line 1, rice and rice products are included. All that I am doing is to add additional products. Certainly rice and rice products are food; and the commodities I mentioned, potatoes, cheese, Polish hams, eggs from Communist China, are all food products and are in line with rice and rice products. Even butter is mentioned in the bill. I think the chairman should find that the amendment is germane.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. GRANGER). The Chair is prepared to rule.

The body of the bill as well as the title enumerates commodities in addition to fats and oils. Rice is mentioned. It would be in order to add other commodities.

The Chair overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I thank the Chair for that wise ruling.

Mr. Chairman, the reason I have offered this amendment is to have the RECORD show that large imports of potatoes, cheese, eggs, and hams are coming into this country. Approximately 32,000,000 pounds of cheese have been imported into the United States at a time when we have a support price program for cheese in this country. The Commodity Credit Corporation now owns 63,000,000 pounds of cheese. We imported 32,000,000 pounds in the last year. For every pound of cheese that comes into this country as long as we have the support price program you will find that the Commodity Credit Corporation has to buy 2 pounds of American cheese.

We have heard a great deal about potatoes during the past 2 years and particularly now, since April 7, 1949, when the famous utopian Brannan plan was presented to the Congress. During the past year approximately 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels of potatoes have come in here from Canada. Canadian growers of potatoes have been encouraged to increase their production by 30 percent so they could ship potatoes into the United States while we have a support price on potatoes in this country. Nothing has been done either under this law or under section 22 to stop these imports. The consequence is that the Government has had to buy 2 bushels of American potatoes for every bushel of potatoes imported into this country to carry out the support program.

Then we have had hundreds and hundreds of thousands of pounds of eggs which have come into this country from Communist China that are flooding this market at a time when we have a support price program for eggs. In fact, we are encouraging the Communists in China to produce more eggs to ship into the United States in competition with the eggs produced by American producers.

Oh, yes; they all come from behind the iron curtain. They send Polish hams into this country, sell them for dollars, take the dollars out of the United States, which go into the coffers of Russia with which to buy implements of war to be used against us. They may be using them against us even now over in Korea this very minute, as the gentleman from Iowa suggests.

I think something ought to be done about this matter, especially at a time when we have a support-price program. There certainly is no reason in the world why we should permit the importation of eggs, hams, and other commodities from behind the iron curtain in order to furnish Russia with a market in this country, using the money that we give them for their products sold in competition with American-produced products to buy war materials to be used against our soldiers and our sailors over in the Far East or in any other part of the world.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. If the gentleman's amendment is agreed to will it lessen the support-price program to the taxpayers of the country?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Oh, yes. I think it would materially cut the cost of our support programs. The farmers throughout Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota are getting from 20 to 26 cents a dozen for their eggs. Of course, we are paying from 50 to 60 cents a dozen for them in Washington. If we are going to have a support program why, then, we should be consistent about it in supporting prices only in this country. They are not doing that now. They are supporting the price of eggs and potatoes for the entire world. So it goes.

I do not suppose this amendment will pass.

Mr. CURTIS. Oh, yes; it will.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will it? I am glad to hear the gentleman say he will support it because we ought to protect our American producers in the United States as well as the Treasury.

I hope the gentleman from Maine will support my amendment because he represents one of the biggest and finest potato-growing areas in this country next to Minnesota, and he knows what it is to have this kind of competition coming at a time when we need this protection. In the 1948 crop his State sold millions of bushels of potatoes to the Government, at the same time the Canadians were shipping them in here and taking the market away from American producers.

I am offering this amendment to keep the record straight and ask for a vote.

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the Maine potato gets the publicity, and cotton, corn, and peanuts get the cash. I am very glad to say a word on behalf of Maine potatoes. We do raise some sixty to seventy-five million bushels, and, strange as it may sound, the Canadians are permitted each year to import some eleven to fifteen thousand carloads into the United States. They want to give us the Brannan plan; a scheme by which the producer gets the top price, the consumer pays the bottom price, and they make up the difference to each other in taxes. That is the New Deal scheme. So I am going to support this amendment because if we are going to have support prices and at the same time destroy the support program by bringing in some 15,000,000 bushels of foreign potatoes, we will in the end destroy ourselves.

I think it would be a very good thing to put this amending language in here so that we can read it, and it will not be left to some agency to use its own judgment. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] is an excellent thought, and I hope it will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FELLOWS and Mr. GAVIN) there were—ayes 32, noes 51.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GAVIN: Page 1, line 9, strike out "but", and in line 10 strike out the word "excluding" and insert the word "including."

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NICHOLSON. I make the point of order that the amendmenent offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule. It is the same proposition on which the Chair ruled previously. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, a further point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPENCE. I make the point of order that the question has been decided. An identical amendment has been voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. I will say to the gentleman from Kentucky that this is a different amendment entirely. It has not been determined by the House.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the bill and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the Chair state how many amendments are at the desk?

The CHAIRMAN. For the information of the gentleman, this is the only amendment on the desk.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, this is a very simple amendment. We have heard a great deal lately about the tremendous imports of foreign oils which have now reached the gigantic figure of 821,000 barrels a day. This has had a terrific impact on the small independent producer of oil who is making the very fight of his life for his existence against this tremendous flood of imported oil. This amendment just simply changes the word "excluding" to "including", so that it will read: "for the purpose of authorizing and exercising, administering, and enforcing the import controls with respect to fats and oils (including oil-bearing materials), fatty acids, butter, soap and soap powder, including petroleum and petroleum products."

So now those who have been clamoring for the administration to effect some curb on imports of petroleum or some tariff medium to protect the small independent producer, here is an opportunity to express their thinking and their opinion so as to give that protection which is so necessary and essential to the small producers throughout the Nation, if he is to stay in business. If we fail to curb these oil imports, and dampen the ambition of these men who are seeking oil to build up our reserves, and we suddenly find ourselves catapulted into a war, with these imports from Saudi Arabia, Asiatic countries, and the South American countries cut off, and we have not built up our reserves in this country to meet the needs and demands of fighting a war, we will find ourselves in a very critical position. The Pennsylvania crude oil industry, in my opinion, will have a difficult time if these heavy imports of crude are permitted to come into this country. It is a stripper field and the average production is less than one-half barrel a day and is unable to compete with cheap South American or Saudi-Arabian crude.

The Pennsylvania grade crude industry has existed since 1859 and has contributed greatly to the economic growth and prosperity of the Nation. However, with steadily mounting imports, it is a question how long it can survive against this severe competition. And this goes for all the small independent producers all over the United States. Legislation must be enacted to curb importation of foreign oil.

Nobody would object to a reasonable amount of crude being imported, but if the big operators can get away with 800,000 barrels a day, in 2 or 3 years I presume they will be up to 2 or 3 million barrels a day which would wreck the oil industry of this Nation, and the coal industry as well.

This is a splendid opportunity to enact legislation to enforce controls on the importation of oil. The representatives from the oil States certainly ought to be pleased to vote for this amendment. My amendment is simple, it is understandable, it is clear and concise. It is an excellent opportunity for those representatives to express their thinking on this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GAVIN) there were—ayes 22, noes 51.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, a recent publication, issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, entitled "New England, Its Economic Importance and Prospects," that has just come to my attention, carries a message that sustains the conviction I hold in common with many other New Englanders, that this great industrial and commercial area of the country is looking forward to a very bright future.

The part that New England has played as the pioneer industrial area of the United States is well-known to every American and recognized all over the world. What is not generally appreciated, is that New England today has a remarkable record of outstanding leadership in a great variety of important types of manufacture and there is little evidence that we are losing our dominant position in any number of these well-known products.

There is conclusive proof that New England's economic importance is increasing, not declining, and the census proves that it is growing in population and labor force. Personal income and bank deposits of New England citizens are sharply increasing and this is reflected in a substantial advance in the volume of retail sales, particularly in the last 10 years.

The predominance of industrial New England is indicated by the following facts, recently published by the Federal Reserve Bank. Of the total volume of the United States, New England manufactures 85 percent of wool scouring and combing; 80 percent of packaged fish; 62 percent of silverware; 61 percent of woolen and worsted fabrics; 61 percent of thread; 59 percent of newsprint paper; 57 percent of textile machinery; 56 percent of footwear cut stock; 52 percent of felt hat bodies; 50 percent of wrapper and binder cigar tobacco; 49 percent of nails and spikes; 45 percent of cutlery; 45 percent of typewriters; 44 percent of cardboard; 42 percent of hand saws and blades; 41 percent of maple sirup and sugar; 38 percent of narrow fabrics; 37 percent of ophthalmic goods; 37 percent of needles, pins, and fasterners; 37 percent of ball and roller bearings; 37 percent of jewelry; 34 percent of copper rolling and drawing; 33 percent of footwear; 32 percent of leather tanning and finishing; 30 percent of glue and gelatine; 30 percent of abrasive products; 30 percent of insulated wire and cable; 28 percent of children's vehicles; 27 percent of fine papers; 27 percent of machine tools; 26 percent of rayon and nylon broad woven fabrics; 25 percent of cut stone products.

While agriculture in New England is naturally limited by the relatively small area of the region, nevertheless, 62 percent of the cranberries and 48 percent of the blueberries raised in the United States, come from New England; and I am sure that everyone is familiar with our potato and apple crops, which have such a world-wide market.

Here are a few more pertinent facts from the same source that throws further light on New England's position at the present time. With 2.1 percent of the Nation's land area and only 6.3 percent of the Nation's population, we have 3,189,000 persons steadily employed in nonagricultural jobs, and of this number 1,337,000 workers are engaged in manufacturing, and 1,852,000 in service establishments or similar occupations.

May I also point out that the average annual income of New England citizens is $1,500 as compared with a national average of $1,180. The thrift of the New England people is shown by the fact that the average liquid savings for the entire area is $1,780 per person, compared with a national average of $1,180.

We are very proud of the good labor-management relations that have prevailed in New England for many years. We have 7.3 percent of the Nation's nonagricultural workers and yet the time lost through strikes by these workers is only 4.2 percent of the national total.

New England is growing and let these facts from official sources prove the case. According to the Bureau of the Census and other Federal agencies, in 1930 our population was 8,166,000; in 1949 it was 9,298,000; in 1930 our labor force was 3,431,000; in 1950 it is 4,239,000. This is typical of New England's growth through the years, a steady, constant growth. Lacking the spectacular percentage increases of newer sections of the country, this has largely escaped the attention of the American people, in the light of more startling increases elsewhere.

New England's industrial economy is in a state of transition, in common with other nearby industrial States, stimulated by new revolutionary technological and scientific advancements, developed since the war, and a host of new and improved products that are rapidly reaching the markets.

Old New England industries, for which we are famous all over the world, are rapidly changing their processes of production and readjusting themselves to the new order. Many new factories are being established to make new products, and while during these vital changes we are suffering a considerable volume of temporary industrial unemployment, there is every good reason to expect an unprecedented increase in production and wealth in the near future.

There is plenty of vitality in New England's industrial life and while we do not often shout our own praises from the rooftops, we do adjust ourselves to the ever-changing conditions of modern life quietly and after due deliberation and study. If economic changes reduce production and employment in any given field, this decline is almost always quickly absorbed by industrial growth in other directions, thus we react to the immutable laws of growth. A large, well-known company moves its headquarters from Boston to California. Immediately there is raised a hue and cry claiming New England is slipping. Magazine and newspaper articles spread the tidings all over the country, but while this company was moving part of its plant away from New England, another much larger company moved into the same area, creating several times the number of jobs that were lost, with no publicity.

This is change, the symbol of growth, and we of New England and for that matter all of the great industrial areas of the eastern seaboard expect it, and eventually profit by it.

New England fights against the handicap of not being a great raw material producing area, but this disadvantage is more than overcome by the skill, stability, and intelligence of our working people, the efficiency of the servicing establishments that surround our industrial life, and the great advantage, that our cities and towns have grown up as industrial centers.

New England is attacking the problems of scarcity that restrict our growth, vigorously, whole-heartedly, and intelligently. The governments of the six New England States, aided by the New England congressional delegations, representative of both parties, are all working in the same direction to formulate plans that will take full advantage of the new sources of iron ore from Labrador. Plans are under way to bring natural gas to New England within the next year and surveys are to be undertaken at once to make full use of our water power for hydroelectric development.

When we have iron ore coming to our ports, natural gas providing inexpensive heat, and hydroelectric power stations providing us with low-cost power, and all of these advantages should be available in New England in the next few years, watch New England rapidly expand in production and wealth through its 350 research laboratories and its more than 20,000 industrial plants.

Massachusetts, which has more than half of these industrial plants, and is the most widely diversified manufacturing State in the country, is already leading the way in this movement to a greater usefulness and prosperity.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GRANGER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (S. 3550) to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils—including butter—and rice and rice products, pursuant to House Resolution 680, he reported the bill back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time and was read the third time.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies.

The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin moves to recommit the bill S. 3550 to the Committee on Banking and Currency with instructions to report the same back forthwith with the recommendation that in line 10, page 1, and line 1, page 2, the words "coconuts and coconut products" be stricken out; and in line 9, page 1, after the word "butter", insert the word "cheese."

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the "noes" appeared to have it.

Mr. WITHROW. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] A quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 72, nays 264, not voting 94, as follows:

[Roll No. 190]

YEAS—72

Andresen, August H.	Gross	O'Hara, Minn.
Barrett, Wyo.	Gwinn	O'Konski
Beall	Hagen	Potter
Bennett, Mich.	Hale	Poulson
Biemiller	Hill	Reed, Ill.
Bishop	Hoeven	Reed, N. Y.
Brown, Ohio	Hoffman, Mich.	Rees
Byrnes, Wis.	Hope	Rich
Cannon	Horan	St. George
Case, S. Dak.	Hull	Scrivner
Chiperfield	Jackson, Wash.	Scudder
Clevenger	James	Short
Cotton	Jennings	Simpson, Ill.
Crawford	Jensen	Smith, Kans.
Curtis	Kearns	Smith, Wis.
Dague	Lovre	Stefan
Davis, Wis.	Lyle	Stockman
Fenton	Martin, Iowa	Taber
Fisher	Merrow	Velde
Ford	Meyer	Vursell
Gavin	Miller, Md.	Weichel
Goodwin	Miller, Nebr.	Withrow
Graham	Moulder	Woodruff
Granger	Murray, Wis.
	Norblad

NAYS—264

Abbitt	Battle	Brehm
Abernethy	Beckworth	Brooks
Addonizio	Bennett, Fla.	Brown, Ga.
Albert	Bentsen	Buchanan
Allen, Calif.	Blackney	Buckley, Ill.
Allen, Ill.	Boggs, Del.	Burke
Anderson, Calif.	Boggs, La.	Burleson
Andrews	Bolling	Burnside
Angell	Bolton, Md.	Burton
Aspinall	Bolton, Ohio	Camp
Auchincloss	Bonner	Canfield
Baring	Bosone	Carlyle
Barrett, Pa.	Boykin	Carnahan
Bates, Mass.	Bramblett	Carroll

Case, N. J.	Jonas	Pfeiffer,
Celler	Jones, Ala.	William L.
Chatham	Jones, Mo.	Philbin
Chelf	Jones, N. C.	Phillips, Calif.
Christopher	Karst	Pickett
Chudoff	Karsten	Poage
Clemente	Keating	Polk
Cole, Kans.	Kee	Powell
Colmer	Kelly, N. Y.	Preston
Combs	Kilburn	Price
Cooley	Kilday	Priest
Cooper	King	Rabaut
Coudert	Kirwan	Rains
Crook	Klein	Rankin
Crosser	Kruse	Redden
Cunningham	Kunkel	Regan
Davenport	Lane	Rhodes
Davies, N. Y.	Lanham	Ribicoff
Davis, Ga.	Larcade	Richards
Davis, Tenn.	Latham	Robeson
Dawson	LeCompte	Rodino
Deane	LeFevre	Rogers, Fla.
DeGraffenried	Lichtenwalter	Rogers, Mass.
Delaney	Lind	Rooney
Denton	Linehan	Sabath
D'Ewart	Lodge	Sadlak
Dollinger	Lucas	Saylor
Dolliver	Lynch	Scott,
Donohue	McConnell	Hugh D., Jr.
Douglas	McCormack	Secrest
Doyle	McCulloch	Shafer
Durham	McDonough	Shelley
Eaton	McGuire	Smathers
Eberharter	McKinnon	Smith, Va.
Elliott	McMillan, S. C.	Spence
Elston	McSweeney	Staggers
Engle, Calif.	Mack, Ill.	Stanley
Evins	Mack, Wash.	Sullivan
Feighan	Madden	Sutton
Fellows	Magee	Tackett
Fernandez	Mahon	Talle
Flood	Mansfield	Tauriello
Forand	Marcantonio	Taylor
Frazier	Marsalis	Teague
Furcolo	Marshall	Thomas
Gamble	Martin, Mass.	Thompson
Gary	Michener	Thornberry
Gathings	Miles	Tollefson
Golden	Miller, Calif.	Towe
Gordon	Mills	Trimble
Gore	Monroney	Underwood
Gorski	Morgan	Van Zandt
Granahan	Morrison	Vorys
Grant	Morton	Wadsworth
Gregory	Murdock	Wagner
Gwinn	Murray, Tenn.	Walsh
Hand	Nelson	Walter
Hardy	Nicholson	White, Calif.
Hare	Nixon	White, Idaho
Hart	Noland	Whitten
Havenner	Norrell	Whittington
Hays, Ark.	Norton	Wickersham
Hays, Ohio	O'Brien, Ill.	Widnall
Hedrick	O'Brien, Mich.	Wier
Herlong	O'Hara, Ill.	Wigglesworth
Herter	O'Neill	Williams
Heselton	O'Sullivan	Willis
Hoffman, Ill.	Pace	Wilson, Tex.
Holifield	Passman	Winstead
Holmes	Patman	Wolcott
Howell	Patten	Wolverton
Huber	Perkins	Woodhouse
Jacobs	Peterson	Yates
Javits	Pfeifer,	Young
Johnson	Joseph L.	Zablocki

NOT VOTING—94

Allen, La.	Fugate	Kean
Andersen,	Fulton	Kearney
H. Carl	Garmatz	Keefe
Arends	Gillette	Kelley, Pa.
Bailey	Gilmer	Kennedy
Barden	Gossett	Keogh
Bates, Ky.	Green	Kerr
Blatnik	Hall,	McCarthy
Breen	Edwin Arthur	McGrath
Bryson	Hall,	McGregor
Buckley, N. Y.	Leonard W.	McMillen, Ill.
Bulwinkle	Halleck	Macy
Burdick	Harden	Mason
Byrne, N. Y.	Harris	Mitchell
Cavalcante	Harrison	Morris
Chesney	Harvey	Multer
Cole, N. Y.	Hébert	Murphy
Corbett	Heffernan	O'Toole
Cox	Heller	Patterson
Dingell	Hinshaw	Phillips, Tenn.
Dondero	Hobbs	Plumley
Doughton	Irving	Quinn
Ellsworth	Jackson, Calif.	Ramsay
Engel, Mich.	Jenison	Riehlman
Fallon	Jenkins	Rivers
Fogarty	Judd	Roosevelt
Sadowski	Sims	Wheeler
Sanborn	Smith, Ohio	Whitaker
Sasscer	Steed	Wilson, Ind.
Scott, Hardie	Stigler	Wilson, Okla.
Sheppard	Vinson	Wood
Sikes	Welch
Simpson, Pa.	Werdel

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Garmatz for, with Mr. Macy against.

Until further notice:

Mr. Mitchell with Mr. Corbett.
Mr. Hobbs with Mr. Simpson of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Rivers with Mr. Arends.
Mr. Roosevelt with Mr. Patterson.
Mr. Heller with Mr. H. Carl Andersen.
Mr. Heffernan with Mr. Dondero.
Mr. Irving with Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall.
Mr. Sasscer with Mr. Hardie Scott.
Mr. Hébert with Mr. Cole of New York.
Mr. Cavalcante with Mr. Ellsworth.
Mr. Sikes with Mr. Riehlman.
Mr. Harris with Mr. Sanborn.
Mr. Bates of Kentucky with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Sims with Mr. Engel of Michigan.
Mr. Barden with Mr. McGregor.
Mr. Harrison with Mr. Mason.
Mr. Allen of Louisiana with Mr. Fulton.
Mr. Gilmer with Mr. Hinshaw.
Mr. Stigler with Mr. Leonard W. Hall.
Mr. Whitaker with Mr. Halleck.
Mr. Murphy with Mr. Harvey.
Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania with Mr. Jackson of California.
Mr. Breen with Mr. Jenkins.
Mr. Welch with Mr. Judd.
Mr. Dingell with Mr. Kean.
Mr. Fallon with Mr. Kearney.
Mr. Multer with Mr. Keefe.
Mr. Keogh with Mrs. Harden.
Mr. Fogarty with Mr. Jenison.
Mr. McGrath with Mr. Wilson of Indiana.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Phillips of Tennessee.
Mr. Wilson of Oklahoma with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. O'Toole with Mr. Smith of Ohio.
Mr. Kennedy with Mr. Werdel.
Mr. Fugate with Mr. Burdick.

Messrs. MOULDER, CANNON, GRANGER, GUILL, AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, HOFFMAN of Michigan, BENNETT of Michigan, COTTON, STEFAN, HILL, and WOODRUFF changed their votes from "nay" to "yea".

Mr. JONAS changed his vote from "yea" to "nay".

The result of vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

The question was taken; and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The bill H. R. 8737 was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

PROGRAM FOR THE BALANCE OF THE WEEK

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a brief announcement for the benefit of the Members.

It was hoped that we might be able to dispose of the program today, but it now appears that we will not be able to do so. Therefore, we will have to meet tomorrow.

There is a conference report to be taken up next; then the Puerto Rican bill. Then there is Reorganization Plan No. 24, which expires next week. Of course that is a matter of high preference. Following the Puerto Rican bill, that will be taken up. Then, following that, the security bill.

There will be some opposition to the Puerto Rican bill, and it looks as though we might not be able to dispose of this program today, so I wanted to announce that we will be in session tomorrow.

For next week, as I announced heretofore, there will be no program. Unless something of an emergency should happen, which is not expected, the Members can govern themselves with the knowledge that as of now there is no legislative program for next week.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Is it the plan of the majority leadership to finish the Puerto Rican bill today?

Mr. McCORMACK. No, not necessarily. If we can, we would like to do so; but if not, it will go over until tomorrow.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. You are going to take up the conference report first?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The gentleman spoke about Reorganization Plan No. 24. Would it not be possible to bring that up before the Puerto Rican bill? It would not take more than 20 minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, I assumed we had made an arrangement. I thought I had suggested to the gentleman from Michigan that plan No. 24 would be called up after the Puerto Rican bill was out of the way, and I assumed that we had a meeting of the minds.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. It is immaterial to me. I thought possibly you could take that up and get through with it this afternoon.

Mr. McCORMACK. If the gentleman has no objection, we will take up the Puerto Rican bill first.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. To be sure you finish the program tomorrow, has the gentleman considered meeting at 11 o'clock?

Mr. McCORMACK. No. That will not be necessary. I think we will meet at 12 o'clock.

MERCHANT SHIP SALES ACT OF 1946

Mr. HART submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 3571) to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ships Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2434)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3571) to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes having met after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 14 of the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 14. No contract of sale shall be made under this Act after January 15, 1951, and no contract of charter shall be made under this act after June 30, 1950, except as provided for charter under subsections (e) and (f) of section 5 hereof, as amended.'

"SEC. 2. The fourth sentence of section 11 (a) of such Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows: 'A vessel placed in such reserve shall in no case be used for any purpose whatsoever except that any such vessel may be used for account of any agency or department of the United States during any period in which vessels may be requisitioned under section 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, and that any such vessel may be used under a bareboat charter entered into pursuant to authority vested in the Secretary of Commerce on July 1, 1950, or granted to the Secretary of Commerce after such date.'

"SEC. 3. Section 5 of such Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof subsections to read as follows:

"'(e) (1) Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 11 and 14 of this Act, as amended, war-built dry-cargo vessels owned by the United States on or after June 30, 1950, may be chartered pursuant to this act for bareboat use in any service which, in the opinion of the Federal Maritime Board, is required in the public interest and is not adequately served, and for which privately owned American-flag vessels are not available for charter by private operators on reasonable conditions and at reasonable rates for use in such service. No charters shall be made by the Secretary of Commerce under authority of this subsection until the Federal Maritime Board shall have given due notice to all interested parties and shall have afforded such parties an opportunity for a public hearing on such charters and shall have certified its findings to the Secretary of Commerce. The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to include in such charters such restrictions and conditions as the Federal Maritime Board determines to be necessary or appropriate to protect the public interest in respect of such charters and to protect privately owned vessels against competition from vessels chartered under this section: Provided, however, That all such charters shall contain a provision that they will be reviewed annually by the Federal Maritime Board, with recommendations to the Secretary of Commerce, for the purpose of determining whether conditions exist justifying continuance of the charters under the provisions of this subsection.

"'(2) A charter existing on June 30, 1950, with respect to a war-built dry-cargo vessel may be extended to October 31, 1950, if application is made within ten days after the enactment hereof for the charter of such vessel under subsection (e) of this section and if the Secretary of Commerce deems such extension is justified in accordance with the provisions of section 5 (e) (1): Provided, however, That a new voyage under such extended charter shall not be begun after October 31, 1950, unless it has been determined prior to such date, in accordance with the procedure set forth in this subsection, that the continued use of the vessel in the service is required. The Federal Maritime Board shall conduct all hearings on applications made under this paragraph immediately upon receipt thereof and shall promptly certify its findings to the Secretary of Commerce, provided that all such certifications shall be made not later than October 31, 1950.

"'(f) (1) Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 11 and 14 of this Act, as amended, the Secretary of Commerce may charter any passenger vessel, whether or not war-built, owned by the United States on or after June 30, 1950, pursuant to title VII of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended.

"'(2) Charters existing on June 30, 1950, with respect to passenger vessels may be continued until December 31, 1951, or until expiration thereof by the terms of their provisions.'

"SEC. 4. Section 2 of the joint resolution entitled 'Joint resolution authorizing the Commandant of the United States Coast Guard to waive compliance with the navigation and vessel-inspection laws administered by the Coast Guard,' approved March 31, 1947 (Public Law 27, Eightieth Congress), as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 2. The authority granted by this resolution shall remain in force only until January 15, 1951: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize the Commandant of the United States Coast Guard to grant a waiver permitting a vessel to sail with less than its specified complement on board.'

"SEC. 5. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 27 of the Act of June 5, 1920 (41 Stat. 999), as amended by Act of April 11, 1935 (49 Stat. 154), and by Act of July 2, 1935 (49 Stat. 442), or the provisions of any other Act or regulation, vessels of Canadian registry shall be permitted to transport iron ore between United States ports on the Great Lakes during the period from the date of enactment of this Act to December 31, 1950, or until such earlier time as the President by order may designate, and such vessels shall be permitted during the period from the date of enactment of this Act to December 31, 1950, to transport coal to Ogdensburg, New York, from other points in the United States on the Great Lakes, or their connecting or tributary waters."

And the House agree to the same.

EDWARD J. HART,
HERBERT C. BONNER,
ALVIN F. WEICHEL,
Managers on the Part of the House.

WARREN G. MAGNUSON,
ERNEST W. MCFARLAND,
JOHN J. WILLIAMS,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3571) to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment to the bill strikes out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause. The committee of conference recommends that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, with an amendment which is a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment, and that the House agree to the same.

The conferees agreed to the bill as amended by the House with the following amendments:

In section 2 the conferees agreed that in lieu of the date "January 31, 1951," the date "January 15, 1951", should be inserted. Thus while sale authority will expire after the end of this Congress there will be some time during which the Congress may give further consideration to extension of the authority if circumstances warrant same after the convening of the Eighty-second Congress.

Section 3 of the bill was further amended by changing the date in paragraph 2 of section 5 (e) to read "October 31, 1950", in lieu of "September 30, 1950", in each case in which said date appeared in the House bill. This change is to provide additional time for hearings by the new Federal Maritime Board which is still in process of reorganization.

Section 4 of the bill regarding authority of the Commandant of the Coast Guard to waive compliance with navigation and vessel inspection laws was further amended to conform with said section as passed by the Senate with the exception that the authority will expire on January 15, 1951, in lieu of December 31, 1950, and with the exception that authority to grant a waiver for the employment of alien seamen will continue until said date. The change in date will give the new Congress an opportunity to consider further extension of authority if such extension should at that time be warranted. Moreover, as agreed by the conferees, the Commandant will not be authorized to grant a waiver permitting a vessel to sail with less than its specified complement aboard.

HERBERT C. BONNER,
EDWARD J. HART,
ALVIN F. WEICHEL,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. HART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (S. 3571) to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ships Sales Act of 1946.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

(The Clerk read the statement of the managers.)

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman briefly explain the report?

Mr. HART. There were only three changes in the House bill, and they are minor. For instance, with respect to the continuation of the authority to sell vessels the change is from January 31, 1951, to January 15, 1951.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. And I understand from the ranking minority member of the conference committee that it was a unanimous report.

Mr. HART. It was the unanimous report of the managers on the part of both Houses.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, there is no objection on this side.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZATION TO PRINT ADDITIONAL COPIES OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY ON THE IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SYSTEMS OF THE UNITED STATES

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration, I call up Senate Concurrent Resolution 88 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 10,000 additional copies of Senate Report No. 1515 of the Eighty-first Congress, second session, which is a report of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, pursuant to Senate Resolution 137, Eightieth Congress, first session, as amended, on the immigration and naturalization systems of the United States. Such additional copies shall be for the use of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SECRETARY TO THE SERGEANT AT ARMS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration I call up the following House Resolution 494 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That, effective March 1, 1950, there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, until otherwise provided by law, compensation for the employment of a secretary to the Sergeant at Arms at the basic rate of $3,800 per annum.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. NORTON. I yield.

Mr. LECOMPTE. This resolution, as I understand, increases the salary of the secretary in the office of the Sergeant at Arms.

Mrs. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. LECOMPTE. The only objection to that resolution appears to be that it increases the salary of one employee. It was stated before the committee that there are a good many others asking for an increase at this time and that this bill will very probably create a very difficult situation. I merely submit that information for the benefit of the House, and I ask the gentlewoman from New Jersey if that is not correct.

Mrs. NORTON. Yes; the gentleman is quite correct. But I thought we had made an agreement that the others would be considered at a future time.

Mr. LECOMPTE. I am not sure but what that is right.

Mrs. NORTON. This is rather important at this time.

Mr. LECOMPTE. I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration I call up House Resolution 624 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the expenses of conducting the studies and investigations authorized by House Resolution 617, Eighty-first Congress, incurred by the Committee on Armed Services, not to exceed $10,000, including expenditures for the employment of clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by such committee and signed by the chairman of the committee and approved by the Committee on House Administration.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration I call up House Resolution 637 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the expenses of further conducting the studies and investigations authorized by House Resolution 137, Eighty-first Congress, incurred by the Committee on the Judiciary, acting as a whole or by subcommittee, not to exceed an additional $45,000, including expenditures for the employment of such experts, clerical, stenographic, special counsel, and other assistants, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by said committee, signed by the chairman thereof, and approved by the Committee on House Administration.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "$45,000" and insert "$25,000."

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I have tried to get a copy of the resolution and I would like to know what it is all about.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from New Jersey can probably explain the resolution. The committee amendment is to reduce the amount to $25,000.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Reduce it? It started out too high. Will the gentlewoman from New Jersey yield?

Mrs. NORTON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Is there any way that the Members can learn how much is involved in these various resolutions and how many there are of them? I recall a time when there was put through a pension for Congressmen and we were criticized because we did not object. I do not like to see something go through that I do not know anything about and be criticized later on.

Mrs. NORTON. This matter has been fully considered by a subcommittee of the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Are there any Republicans on that committee?

Mrs. NORTON. Oh, yes. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LECOMPTE] will explain it to the gentleman.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I would like to know one thing. I was not here the other day. Someone said there was a resolution here to increase the compensation of Congressmen. Is that here, too?

Mrs. NORTON. No; that is not here. I am sorry to say it is not here at present.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I am very happy it is not here.

Mrs. NORTON. I do not think the gentleman's view is shared by very many Members.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, this is a resolution, I think, providing money for the investigation of monopolies by the Committee on the Judiicary, is it not? A previous resolution by the House provides for such investigation.

Mrs. NORTON. That is correct.

Mr. LECOMPTE. It has been reduced $20,000 by the committee?

Mrs. NORTON. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE PAINTINGS, THE GRAND CANYON OF THE YELLOWSTONE AND THE CHASM OF THE COLORADO

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 170.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the painting, The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and the painting, The Chasm of the Colorado, by Thomas Moran, now located in the United States Capitol Building, be, and the same are hereby transferred to the permanent custody of the United States Department of the Interior for display in the Department of the Interior Building, and the Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to effect the actual transfer of such painting from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PLASTER CAST OF THE STATUE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 171.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the plaster cast of the statue of George Washington, now located in the rotunda of the United States Capitol, executed by William J. Hubard from the original statue in marble by Jean Antoine Houdon, be, and the same is hereby, transferred to the custody of the Smithsonian Institution, and the Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to effect the actual transfer of such statue from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPLICAS OF STATE SEALS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8112) to provide for the transfer to the States of the replicas of the State seals removed from the Chamber of the House of Representatives of the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Architect of the Caiptol is authorized to transfer to each State the replica of the seal of such State which was removed from the Chamber of the House of Representatives of the United States during the renovation of such Chamber in 1949. Upon application of an agent of a State, the Architect of the Capitol shall prepare the seal of such State for shipment and, at the expense of such State or its agent, shall ship such seal in accordance with such application.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this act—

(1) the term "State" includes, in addition to a State of the Union, the Territory of Alaska, the Territory of Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands;

(2) the term "seal" includes, in addition to the seal of a State, a seal of a former Territory which has been admitted into the Union as a State and a former seal of a State; and

(3) the term "agent" means (A) the official who, under the law of a State, is charged with the care, custody, and control of the official seal of such State and furnishes the Architect of the Capitol with satisfactory evidence that he is so charged, or (B) in the event that there is no such official, the governor of the State.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN DOCUMENTS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 484.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized to transmit to the Abraham Lincoln Association at Springfield, Ill., photostatic copies of certain Abraham Lincoln documents as described in a four-page list deposited with the Clerk, the cost of such photostatic copies to be paid by the Abraham Lincoln Association.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8958) relating to the policing of the buildings and grounds of the Library of Congress.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the title does not give us any information. May we know something about its contents? What is the purpose of the bill is what we are trying to ascertain.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, this is a bill designed to give to the guards of the Library of Congress certain police authority that they do not now have and which they need, similar to that given to the Supreme Court guards recently.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LECOMPTE. And without extra cost to the Government.

Mr. ALBERT. That is right.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Librarian of Congress may designate employees of the Library of Congress as special policemen, without additional compensation, for duty in connection with the policing of the Library of Congress buildings and grounds and adjacent streets.

SEC. 2. Public travel in and occupancy of the Library of Congress grounds is hereby restricted to the sidewalks and other paved surfaces.

SEC. 3. It shall be unlawful to offer or expose any article for sale in the Library of Congress buildings or grounds; to display any sign, placard, or other form of advertisement therein; or to solicit fares, alms, subscriptions, or contributions therein.

SEC. 4. It shall be unlawful to step or climb upon, remove, or in any way injure any statue, seat, wall fountain, or other erection or architectural feature, or any tree, shrub, plant, or turf in the Library of Congress buildings or grounds.

SEC. 5. It shall be unlawful to discharge any firearm, firework, or explosive, set fire to any combustible, make any harangue or oration, or utter loud, threatening, or abusive language in the Library of Congress buildings or grounds.

SEC. 6. It shall be unlawful to parade, stand, or move in processions or assemblages in the Library of Congress buildings or grounds, or to display therein any flag, banner, or device designed or adapted to bring into public notice any party, organization, or movement.

SEC. 7. (a) In addition to the restrictions and requirements specified in sections 2 to 6, inclusive, of this act, the Librarian of Congress may prescribe such regulations as may be deemed necessary for the adequate protection of the Library of Congress buildings and grounds and of persons and property therein, and for the maintenance of suitable order and decorum within the Library of Congress buildings and grounds.

(b) All regulations promulgated under the authority of this section shall be printed in one or more of the daily newspapers published in the District of Columbia, and shall not become effective until the expiration of 10 days after the date of such publication.

SEC. 8. Whoever violates any provision of sections 2 to 6, inclusive, of this act, or of any regulation prescribed under section 7 of this act, shall be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than 60 days, or both, prosecution for such offenses to be had in the municipal court for the District of Columbia, upon information by the United States attorney or any of his assistants: Provided, That in any case where, in the commission of any such offense, public property is damaged in an amount exceeding $100, the period of imprisonment for the offense may be not more than 5 years.

SEC. 9. The special police provided for in section 1 of this act shall have the power, within the Library of Congress buildings and grounds and adjacent streets, to enforce and make arrests for violations of any provision of sections 2 to 6, inclusive, of this act, of any regulation prescribed under section 7 of this act, or of any law of the United States or of any State or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto: Provided, That the Metropolitan Police force of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to make arrests within the Library of Congress buildings and grounds for any violations of any such laws or regulations, but such authority shall not be construed as authorizing the Metropolitan Police force, except with the consent or upon the request of the Librarian of Congress or his assistants, to enter the Library of Congress buildings to make arrests in response to complaints or to serve warrants or to patrol the Library of Congress buildings or grounds.

SEC. 10. In order to permit the observance of authorized ceremonies within the Library of Congress buildings and grounds, the Librarian of Congress may suspend for such occasions so much of the prohibitions contained in sections 2 to 6, inclusive, of this act as may be necessary for the occasion, but only if responsible officers shall have been appointed, and arrangements determined which are adequate, in the judgment of the Librarian, for the maintenance of suitable order and decorum in the proceedings, and for the protection of the Library buildings and grounds and of persons and property therein.

SEC. 11. For the purposes of this act the Library of Congress grounds shall be held to extend to the line of the face of the east curb of First Street Southeast, between B Street Southeast and East Capitol Street; to the line of the face of the south curb of East Capitol Street, between First Street Southeast and Second Street Southeast; to the line of the face of the west curb of Second Street Southeast, between East Capitol Street and B Street Southeast; to the line of the face of the north curb of B Street Southeast, between First Street Southeast and Second Street Southeast; and to the line of the face of the east curb of Second Street Southeast, between Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast and the north side of the alley separating the Library Annex Building and the Folger Shakespeare Library; to the line of the north side of the same alley, between Second Street Southeast and Third Street Southeast; to the line of the face of the west curb of Third Street Southeast, between the north side of the same alley and B Street Southeast; to the line of the face of the north curb of B Street Southeast, between Third Street Southeast and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast; to the line of the face of the northeast curb of Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, between B Street Southeast and Second Street Southeast.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

OFFICIAL PAPERS RELATING TO THE TERRITORIES OF THE UNITED STATES

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2348) to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentlewoman explain the bill?

Mrs. NORTON. I will yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TRIMBLE] to explain it.

Mr. TRIMBLE. This is a bill increasing the appropriation for the publication of historical documents and is an extension of the program since 1925, when it was first instituted. It was unanimously reported by the committee and recommended by the Secretary of State and various Territorial and State officials. It is in accord with the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I understand that this calls for an additional appropriation of something better than $1,000,000.

Mr. TRIMBLE. The appropriation is for $50,000.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, this is a Senate bill. The printing of this material is a regular annual affair, and it increases the authorization from $30,000 to $50,000.

It is not $50,000 additional, it is an increase in the authorization from $30,000 to $50,000, I believe.

Mr. TRIMBLE. That is correct.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Would not an appropriation have to be made later by the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. TRIMBLE. That is right.

Mr. LECOMPTE. This $50,000 was provided for on the belief that additional copies of the histories of the Territories are to be printed, and the cost of printing is somewhat higher than it was 20 years ago when the law was enacted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of July 31, 1945 (59 Stat. 510; 5 U. S. C. 168d), is hereby amended by deleting the amount of "$30,000" contained therein and inserting in lieu thereof "$50,000."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JEFFERSON NATIONAL EXPANSION MEMORIAL, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8591) to provide for the construction of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial at the site of old St. Louis, Mo., in general accordance with the plan approved by the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

Mr. LECOMPTE. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this bill, it occurs to me, ought to have a little bit of attention. I think it might be said the bill involves a good many million dollars.

A memorial at St. Louis has been proposed for 15 years. The city of St. Louis has deeded to the Federal Government land that is estimated to be worth approximately $30,000,000. The bill before the House provides for the erection of a Jefferson Memorial, or a memorial to the Louisiana Purchase, and the Lewis and Clark expedition to be completed by 1953, which will be the sesquicentennial of the Louisiana Purchase by President Jefferson, at a cost of about $8,000,000, of which the Government is to furnish $3 to each dollar furnished by the city of St. Louis.

There is considerable to be said, however, in favor of this bill. The land for the memorial has been deeded to the Federal Government by the city of St. Louis. For some years the Federal Government has spent at the rate of $10,000 a year for employing a guard or guards to police the ground, which is now vacant and not well taken care of.

There are a good many phases to the memorial proposition, but it occurs to me that in the interest of economy, and due to the fact that the cost of construction is at an all-time peak, this is a measure which could well go over to a later date.

I think the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REGAN] knows more about this bill, perhaps, than anyone else in the House. I imagine he can straighten out some points that may be in doubt in the minds of some of the Members.

Mr. REGAN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, about 1933 our Government authorized the establishment of the Jefferson Memorial on the banks of the Mississippi River in the heart of old St. Louis. This calls for $3 of Federal money to $1 of St. Louis money. St. Louis estimated the cost would be $30,000,000 for the improvement of the property. They have prepared a bond issue of $7,500,000, to be supplemented by $22,500,000 of Federal money. On that program about $8,000,000 has been spent.

They have cleared off all the buildings, residences, and business properties, and so on, on some 42 blocks of St. Louis property in the heart of town, consisting of more than 80 acres of land. In addition, the city of St. Louis deeded to the Federal Government two more blocks in the shape of a "T" there, on which the old courthouse at St. Louis is located.

They have improved the old courthouse in some respects by creating a museum park there, with some pioneer work depicting the St. Louis River and the old Mark Twain days on the Mississippi. The property has been there now for 15 years deeded to the Federal Government. It is worth more than $30,000,000. St Louis gets no taxes on that. Not even an automobile can be parked on the property. The Government has maintained a man at the courthouse there to look after the property and the courthouse at quite an expense for these 15 years. The entire delegation of officials from the city of St. Louis was here recently. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SULLIVAN] introduced the bill. They were here to ask us to do something about it. A few years ago they spent something like $250,000 in a competition for various artists throughout the country to devise some means of appropriately establishing this memorial. A man by the name of Saarinen, won the award. Among his recommendations was a huge stainless steel arch a few feet higher than the Washington Monument. The idea was that they would have an elevator there. But they have not been able to get the mechanical end of the elevator to work.

We have spent about $8,000,000. The property is deeded to the Government. They wanted about $15,000,000 more to complete the program and we were assured that that would complete this stainless steel arch. The property abuts the St. Louis River and right between the property and St. Louis itself is the St. Louis terminal which has three sets of tracks and two elevated tracks which have to be removed or depressed in order to make the property reasonably attractive. The property is rough, a sort of a dump yard with weeds and so on. It would cost about $2,500,000 to depress the railroad tracks and get them out of the way; a million dollars to level it off to make it presentable; and about $600,000 for landscaping and another $1,250,000—or something like that—for the restoration of the old courthouse.

Our committee asked the Park Service to give us an itemized statement of the requirements which totaled about $15,000,000 and they gave them in the order of their importance.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGAN. If the gentleman will permit me to finish my presentation, I will be glad to take the bridle off.

The requirements for this park are contained in 10 items. The first five are things which seem necessary, and which would not quite cost $5,000,000 of Federal money. That is the bill before us. It provides for an expenditure not to exceed $5,000,000. But the authorization calls for $4,905,000, and we believe the estimates are more than liberal.

Mr. Speaker, the Government owns this property. St. Louis is collecting no taxes from it. We have owned it for 15 years. During the war we could do nothing about it. They plan to have a sesquicentennial celebration there in 1953 celebrating the Louisiana Purchase. Nowhere in or near the immediate vicinity of St. Louis is there any national memorial of any sort, a park or otherwise. I think it is up to the Congress either to do something with the property or return it to the city of St. Louis. I believe this program is well justified and that this money should be authorized regardless of how soon they may get it. This is merely an authorization bill to be sent to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the gentleman from Texas meant when he spoke about taking off the bridle. There is no bridle on me and I do not know if he meant that he had a bridle on him. But if the gentleman from Texas says that this is a good thing, coming from Texas and knowing more about Missouri because there are so many Missourians who represent their State well, I do not find any fault with the bill; and I think, as I said before, you have a good proposition and I am going along with you.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact it is the customary rule when we are dealing with bills on the Consent Calendar that bills which involve a cost exceeding $1,000,000 should be objected to, I object to the present consideration of this bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. McDaniel, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 1437. An act to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5368. An act to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes.

ORGANIZATION OF A CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE OF PUERTO RICO

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 678, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3336) to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Public Lands, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and sixteen Members are present; a quorum.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. DELANEY] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER] 30 minutes. I now yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order S. 3336. This bill would authorize the people of Puerto Rico to adopt their own constitution and to organize a local government which, under the terms of S. 3336, would be required to be republican in form and contain the fundamental civil guaranties of a bill of rights. Specific provision is made for an island-wide referendum in which the people of Puerto Rico will be given the opportunity to accept or reject this legislative proposal.

A provision also is made in the bill for submission to, and ratification by Congress, of any proposed constitution before it becomes effective, and the bill specifically provides that it shall not become effective until it is approved by a majority of the voters participating in an island-wide referendum.

In 1917 the Congress established the framework of Puerto Rico's government by enacting the Organic Act of Puerto Rico. This act created a popularly elected legislature with broad powers in local legislative matters, and provides for an executive branch and judicial branch of the government.

The people of Puerto Rico were authorized to elect a Resident Commissioner, accredited to the Department of State and to be recognized as such Commissioner by all departments of the United States Government. Besides, he has been extended the privileges of membership in the House of Representatives, with power to serve on committees, to introduce legislation, and to be heard on the floor of the House.

The people of Puerto Rico and their representatives have expressed their overwhelming support in favor of legislation which would permit them to adopt a constitution. In the recent election in Puerto Rico the Popular Democratic Party which specifically campaigned in favor of such legislation received approximately 62 percent of the Puerto Rican votes cast in the election, thereby decisively defeating the opposition, including the party running on a platform for the independence of Puerto Rico, and the coalition running on a platform for statehood for Puerto Rico.

This bill has been passed by the Senate and was unanimously reported by House Committee on Public Lands. The Rules Committee has granted an open rule providing for 1 hour's general debate.

Mr. ROONEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELANEY. I yield.

Mr. ROONEY. Did the Resident Commissioner appear before the Rules Committee in favor of the bill?

Mr. DELANEY. He did.

Mr. ROONEY. What position did he take with regard to this legislation?

Mr. DELANEY. He said that in his opinion there was an overwhelming majority of the people of Puerto Rico in favor of this bill.

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELANEY. I yield.

Mr. KLEIN. Did I understand the gentleman to say that even though we pass this legislation it would still be up to the people of Puerto Rico to decide whether they want it or not?

Mr. DELANEY. That is right.

Mr. KLEIN. So that what we are doing here today is simply to give them an opportunity of deciding this matter for themselves.

Mr. DELANEY. That is what we are doing, giving them this right.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELANEY. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. What government departments and agencies appeared and testified for it?

Mr. DELANEY. Of course, before the Rules Committee we heard only the Resident Commissioner and the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, Mr. Peterson. If the gentleman wants an answer to his question I will yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PETERSON] for that purpose.

Mr. PETERSON. The Department of the Interior was heartily in favor of this. The Governor of Puerto Rico appeared before the committee and testified strongly in favor of it. The Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico was in favor of it, and 76 of the 77 mayors in Puerto Rico were in favor of it.

Mr. JAVITS. Was there any opposition?

Mr. PETERSON. There is some opposition to the bill. The opposition comes from those who want independence and some who want statehood. I may say that many safeguards have been thrown around the bill. Before this bill—not before the constitution, but before this bill—takes effect it must be voted upon in an island-wide referendum, and in that island-wide referendum a majority of those participating must approve the bill; in other words, there is a referendum on the bill ahead of the constitution.

Mr. JAVITS. It is a fact, is it not, that under this bill only the constitution of a possession of the United States can be voted on; it cannot be a constitution for statehood or for independence, or for anything else.

Mr. PETERSON. No; it cannot be a constitution for statehood.

There is a provision in the bill that the constitution shall provide a republican form of government and shall include a bill of rights. Then it is submitted to the President, and if he finds that it conforms to our Constitution he submits it to the Congress and the Congress must aprove it. The Congress gets another bite at this too.

Mr. JAVITS. As I recall, there is a provision which says that it can be approved either by laying on the table or directly by Congress; and that is one feature of the bill I must say I think should be corrected.

Mr. PETERSON. The bill provides:

The said constitution shall provide a republican form of government and shall include a bill of rights.

SEC. 3. Upon adoption of the constitution by the people of Puerto Rico, the President of the United States is authorized to transmit such constitution to the Congress of the United States if he finds that such constitution conforms with the applicable provisions of this act and of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. JAVITS. There is no provision for having it lie on the table or approved as in the original draft?

Mr. PETERSON. No. It must be approved by the Congress.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and fifty-eight Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 191]

Allen, La.	Granahan	Morris
Anderson, Calif.	Green	Multer
Andresen, August H.	Gregory	Murphy
	Hagen	Noland
Angell	Hall, Edwin Arthur	Norblad
Arends	Hall, Leonard W.	O'Neill
Barden	Halleck	O'Toole
Barrett, Pa.	Harden	Pace
Bates, Ky.	Harris	Patman
Blatnik	Harrison	Patterson
Bolling	Harvey	Phillips, Tenn.
Bolton, Ohio	Hays, Ohio	Plumley
Breen	Hébert	Quinn
Brooks	Heffernan	Ramsay
Bryson	Heller	Rich
Buckley, N. Y.	Hinshaw	Riehlman
Bulwinkle	Hobbs	Rivers
Burdick	Hoeven	Roosevelt
Byrne, N. Y.	Hoffman, Ill.	Sadowski
Carroll	Irving	Sanborn
Cavalcante	Jackson, Calif.	Sasscer
Celler	Jenison	Scott, Hardie
Chesney	Jenkins	Scudder
Chiperfield	Jonas	Shafer
Christopher	Judd	Sheppard
Chudoff	Kean	Sikes
Clevenger	Kearney	Simpson, Pa.
Cole, N. Y.	Keefe	Sims
Corbett	Kelley, Pa.	Smathers
Coudert	Kennedy	Smith, Ohio
Crosser	Keogh	Spence
Dingell	Kerr	Steed
Dondero	Linehan	Stigler
Doughton	McCarthy	Thompson
Eaton	McConnell	Tollefson
Engel, Mich.	McGrath	Vinson
Engle, Calif.	McGregor	Walsh
Fallon	McMillen, Ill.	Welch
Fogarty	Macy	Wheeler
Frazier	Magee	Whitaker
Fugate	Martin, Mass.	Wier
Fulton	Mason	Wilson, Ind.
Garmatz	Mitchell	Wilson, Okla.
Gillette	Morgan	Wolcott
Gilmer		Wood
Gossett

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 296 Members have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

ORGANIZATION OF A CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE OF PUERTO RICO

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. DELANEY] is recognized.

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

(Mr. MARCANTONIO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include a statement he made before the committee which had this bill under consideration.)

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, this bill has been rushed through from the very beginning. The people of Puerto Rico have been deprived of an opportunity to express themselves on this question. The indecent speed with which this bill has been rushed is evidence that the administration and the ruling clique in Puerto Rico seek to deny the people of Puerto Rico a hearing on this bill. Many have requested to be heard and have not been granted a hearing. The committee has refused the request of representative Puerto Ricans to be heard. Unfortunately, the whole Puerto Rican picture, as a result of restricted hearings, is not being presented here, nor has it been presented to the committee that had this bill under consideration.

This bill is being heralded up and down the island of Puerto Rico by its Governor and in New York City by Democratic Party politicians as a bill that would give to the people of Puerto Rico a constitution. They convey the impression that the people of Puerto Rico are given the right to legislate for themselves. That is a fake. It is a snare. It is a delusion. All efforts to convey that impression, that we are giving home rule to the people of Puerto Rico, is part of a gigantic fraud that is being perpetrated upon 2,500,000 people of Puerto Rico. The people of Puerto Rico are getting a bad enough deal as it is. The least we can do is to be honest with them.

Let us analyze what is being proposed here. We are told that the people are given the right to legislate for themselves; that they are going to have a constitution. This is a grotesque distortion of the truth.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. DELANEY] who read his statement here obviously has forgotten that the Constitution of the United States provides that Congress legislates for the Territories and that Congress cannot delegate that power to anyone. That alone unmasks this bill as a political fake.

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Not at this time. The gentleman promised me 5 minutes and then refused to keep his promise. I cannot yield.

Mr. DELANEY. By causing the roll call for the purpose of delay——

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I decline to yield.

Mr. Speaker, I have a perfect right to make a point of no quorum when you call up this bill at this late hour when so little attention is given to something which is so important to 2,200,000 people. Since we are going to meet tomorrow, the leadership and the gentleman could have called it up tomorrow; he did not have to call it up at this late hour. This demonstrates the contempt in which the House leadership holds the people of Puerto Rico. Since when does the leadership bring up any important bill at this late hour? It does so because we are dealing with Puerto Rico. I had a perfect right to make the point of order that a quorum was not present in order that the bill might have gone over to tomorrow to obtain for it proper attention from the membership. But I submit that the gentleman did not have a right to deny me the 5 minutes that he promised to me. I do not want to be discourteous to the gentleman, even though he refused to yield me 5 minutes. If he wants me to yield, I will yield. If the gentleman wants to ask me a question, I will yield to him now.

Mr. DELANEY. The gentleman caused this House to be inconvenienced to the extent of 40 minutes by calling the roll. We have this legislation to be considered. I have been waiting here since 12 o'clock to call this matter up. It is late now. It is obvious that the gentleman from New York has no intention, absolutely no intention of giving the Members of the House an opportunity to vote on this question. His tactics are dilatory. Therefore, I have a right to see that this legislation is presented to the Members so that they can exercise their right to vote on it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I do not think my tactics are dilatory; I am merely making an endeavor to have this bill called up at a time when the Membership of this House can give it the attention it merits. I think I was entirely within my rights, and I was acting in the interest of the Puerto Rican people and of orderly procedure in endeavoring to have this bill put over until tomorrow. By what reasoning do you insist on bringing this bill up now? I say that the leadership of this House wants this bill rushed through. This is wrong and not in the best interests of the people of Puerto Rico who are entitled to serious and careful consideration of their problem and not the indecent and hasty treatment they are being accorded here. On that basis I made the point of no quorum. The gentleman should have kept his word and should have given me the 5 minutes he promised me.

Now, as to the bill itself; as I was saying, the Constitution provides that Congress shall legislate for the Territories. How can you delegate that power to anybody else? No matter what kind of constitution you pretend you are giving to the people of Puerto Rico, can you delegate the power to legislate for the Territories to any other body? There are only two ways you can do it—one is by statehood, the other is by independence.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I think the gentleman is a little confused, after all.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The record will show who is confused.

What you are doing today is to amend the organic act, and that is something else. It is an empty gesture. This bill should be entitled "A bill to amend the organic act." Stop calling it a bill to set up a constitutional government. This is dishonest. You cannot by this bill give to the people of Puerto Rico any sovereignty over their own affairs. That is what should be stated to the people of Puerto Rico, not that you are projecting a constitution for the people of Puerto Rico. Stop trying to fool them. The word "constitution" in this bill is a misnomer; it means nothing under this bill, for you cannot delegate to the people of Puerto Rico the right to legislate for themselves under our Constitution except by statehood or independence.

Further, its very proponents have admitted that this bill is neither a step toward statehood nor a step toward independence. It is a device by which the ruling clique in Puerto Rico escapes its responsibility of solving the colonial question and perpetuates the colonial status in Puerto Rico.

Pursuant to permission granted me, I include a statement presented by me before the House Committee on Public Lands in opposition to H. R. 7674, June 8, 1950:

Mr. Chairman and colleagues, I appear here in opposition to H. R. 7674. I hereby ask that the speech I delivered on the floor of the House on March 16, 1950, in which I discussed the historical background of the Puerto Rican situation and the political motives behind H. R. 7674, be included in the records of these hearings as part of my testimony. Here is a copy of the said speech.

At the outset I strongly urge that hearings be held in Puerto Rico by this committee on this bill. There are many distinguished Puerto Ricans who hold a contrary view to the bill to the one expressed here by the official authors and supporters of the measure, but who cannot appear here because they cannot afford the expenses of coming to Washington. Only the bureaucrats are financially able to appear before this committee, here in Washington, in support of the measure. In a matter so vital to the well-being of 2,200,000 people, subjected since 1898 to a colonial status by us, a people which since then has been clamoring for their liberation, I cannot see how this committee can make any well advised recommendation to the Congress without holding hearings in Puerto Rico, where all the people, rich and poor, can participate.

This legislation affects primarily the people of Puerto Rico. The purpose of H. R. 7674, as expressed by the Secretary of State in a letter addressed on April 24, 1950, to the distinguished chairman of this committee, is to obtain "formal consent of the Puerto Ricans to their present relationship to the United States." If that is the case, the Puerto Rican masses should have an opportunity to express themselves, personally, on such an important matter. Furthermore, the Secretary of State said in his letter to the chairman of this committee that the approval of bill H. R. 7674 "would be in keeping with our obligations under the Charter of the United Nations to take due account of the political aspirations of the people in our Territories." How can we ascertain if this bill is in line with the political aspirations of the people of Puerto Rico if we hold hearings in a place 1,600 miles away from Puerto Rico and without giving opportunity to the impoverished Puerto Rican people to appear before you and communicate to you their hopes and their demands?

I am afraid that our State Department and our Interior Department are too anxious to have this bill passed hastily, without due consideration and without giving all Puerto Ricans, without distinction, an opportunity to express themselves on the propriety of this measure. Why is that? Isn't this bill for the Puerto Ricans? Isn't it intended to discharge in part our responsibility as a colonial power? If that is so, how can we discharge such responsibility without affording the Puerto Rican people an opportunity to be heard.

We certainly would not give serious consideration in the Congress to any bill affecting so profoundly any of our States without holding hearings in our constituencies, in addition to the hearings held here in Washington. Why give Puerto Rico this discriminatory treatment?

If this committee does not hold hearings in Puerto Rico on this measure, we will be in fact denying the people of Puerto Rico their right to express their views to the Congress on a matter so important to their lives and destiny. If we do not hold hearings in Puerto Rico on this measure, we will be proclaiming to the world that we intend to continue treating Puerto Rico as a colony and that we intend to continue ignoring the wishes of the Puerto Ricans.

Serious consideration cannot be given to the measure without consulting the people of Puerto Rico. This committee must remember that we have held hearings in Puerto Rico on matters of less importance, the last of which I can remember were held last November, hearings held by a subcommittee of the House Labor Committee.

The argument has been made that this bill was approved by the Puerto Rican people in the 1948 elections. That is a gross misrepresentation. Here are the facts on that election.

In the 1948 elections 640,714 persons voted out of a total of 873,085 registered voters; that is, 73 percent of the registered voters participated in the elections and 27 percent, or 232,371 persons did not participate, some of them because they deliberately abstained from the polls and others for other reasons. This was 9 percent lower than in 1944, where 82 percent of the registered voters participated in the elections, or 591,978 voters out of 719,759. This decline in the number of voters took place even though in 1948 the Puerto Ricans were electing a governor for the first time.

In the 1948 elections the Popular Party cast 392,386 votes, which amounts to 44 percent of the total registered vote and 61 percent of those voting. The opposition parties cast 39 percent of those voting, amounting to 248,328 votes. In spite of this big vote carried by the opposition parties, and due to electoral gerrymandering and electoral tricks, there is a one-party government in Puerto Rico, the opposition having been allowed to elect only two Senators and one Representative and to carry only one municipality. This municipality was won by the old Liberal Party, called in 1948 the Reformista Party, which cast only 29,140 votes and did not qualify as an official party. After the elections the Reformista Party was dissolved.

The vote counted in Puerto Rico to give official status to the parties is that cast for the Resident Commissioner, which was as follows: Popular Democratic Party, 392,033; Statehood Party, 88,189; Independence Party, 66,141; the Socialist Party, 64,121; and the Reformist Party, 28,203. The figures I previously mentioned were for the election of the governor. It is well to point out that the Independence Party is a new party, organized on May 14, 1948 as an official party, 6 months before elections and 4 months after general registration time, when they had no representation in the registration polls. Since the last elections, the Independence Party has been very active.

In the 1944 elections the Popular Party cast 53 percent of the total registered votes, or 383,280 votes out of 719,759 registered voters, which was an absolute majority. In 1948 the proportion was 9 percent lower for the Popular Party. In 1944 the Popular Party cast 65 percent of those voting, or 383,280 out of 591,978, 4 percent more than in 1948. Besides, the opposition parties in 1944 had only 208,516 votes, or about 40,000 votes less than in 1948, distributed in the following way: Republican Party, 101,799; Socialist Party, 68,107; and Liberal Party, 38,630. In addition to that the Popular Party claimed in the 1944 elections 95 percent of 86,000 votes which were stricken out from the registration lists for technical reasons and were not allowed to vote, in spite of the strenuous protest of the Popular Party, which took the case to the courts and lost. At that time the Popular Party was in control only of four districts out of seven in the island, and the Coalicion (coalition of the Republicans, Socialists, and Liberals) had three districts and the Resident Commissioner, Mr. Bolivar Pagan, president of the Socialist Party. The Popular Party cast 214,857 votes in the 1940 elections, and the Coalicion 222,423.

The above picture shows that the Popular Party is on the decline. And if we consider that the Popular Party made its campaign on the basis that the ultimate political status of Puerto Rico was not an issue on the elections and that this must be decided in a plebiscite to be held on a special election; and if we consider that the Popular Party was born as a result of the expulsion of the radical independence leaders of the old Liberal Party (those leaders headed by Gov. Luis Muñoz Marín, with the avowed promise that it—the Popular Party—was going to see to it that the colonial status of Puerto Rico be ended, then we must conclude that the people in charge of the government of Puerto Rico violate the pledges they made the Puerto Ricans when they come here and try to give the impression that the independence issue and the statehood issue are not fighting issues of the people of Puerto Rico. By the way, at the time of the expulsion of the actual leaders of the Popular Party from the Liberal Party, Resident Commissioner FERNÓS-ISERN was un independentista radical (a radical pro independence man). He waged a campaign in El Mundo, one of the leading Puerto Rican newspapers, in 1936 and afterward, and in La Democracia, at that time a pro independence paper, in favor of independence. In 1940 he was nominated as candidate for Resident Commissioner by the Popular Party, backed by the independentistas. At that time, his speeches in favor of independence were very similar to the one I made in the House last March 16, and which I offered as part of this testimony. I have in my files clippings of many of those articles written by Commissioner FERNÓS. At that time, Senator Victor Gutierrez Fanqui, who has announced in the Puerto Rican press that he will answer my testimony today, was also an ardent independentista. He, Attorney Ernesto Ramos Antonini, the speaker of the House of Representatives of Puerto Rico, were the attorneys for the members of the Nationalist Party of Puerto Rico who were indicted on charges of murder as a result of the Ponce massacre. They were innocent and were acquitted by the jury. He and Ramos Antonini used their participation in the Ponce massacre and their attacks on ex-Governor Blanton Winship, as well as their attacks on the colonial regime to win votes for the Popular Party in the 1940 campaign. Now, after they are in power, they have changed. I think they were right then, and wrong now.

Let me add that before the expulsion of his group from the Liberal Party, Muñoz Marín founded the Accion Social Independentista (Social Independence Action) which was substituted in 1938 by the Popular Democratic Party, with an independence platform. In 1939 Muñoz changed his approach, saying that the status would not be an issue in the elections, but he, in the name of the Popular Party, made the promise to hold a plebiscite on independence and statehood in a special election called for that purpose. The Popular Party in the general convention held in the Sixto Escobar Park in 1940 in the month of August officially approved a political plank where it said that the colonial regime of Puerto Rico had to be liquidated, that independence and statehood were the alternatives to end the colonial status, and that the Popular Party thought that independence was the best solution to the status of Puerto Rico, although the status question was not going to be an issue in the 1940 elections, but this was to be decided in a special election. Muñoz Marín wrote a Catecismo del Pueblo (People's Catechism) and published a newspaper, El Batey (The Front Yard)—the meeting place of the jibaros or peasants in the country—where he made a bitter attack on the colonial status and held correctly that the economic problems of Puerto Rico could not be solved under the colonial regime. He took the position that the status question should not be an issue in the elections, because they were primarily concerned with the organization of the colonial government, and that special elections should be held to allow the people to express their preference on independence and statehood. I think he was wrong, as the Philippine experience shows. His strategy allowed him to fool into his camp both the upholders of statehood and independence, so that later he could better betray them both, as he did.

In the 1944 elections the 1940 plank was ratified and the promise was made to the people, that in the event of victory, the Popular Party would hold a plebiscite not later than the time when the world peace would be negotiated on the question of independence and statehood. The people gave Muñoz an overwhelming majority, but he did not keep his promise to the people.

In 1948, scared by the advent to the political battlefront of the Independence Party, Muñoz reiterated his promise that he was going to see to it that the colonial status be ended in Puerto Rico and that those in favor of independence or statehood would have an opportunity to vote on the status question in due time.

I reiterate that neither Governor Muñoz nor Commissioner FERNÓS have any mandate from the people of Puerto Rico to back measures of colonial reforms.

The official position of the Government of Puerto Rico in this matter was expressed in a concurrent resolution passed by a unanimous vote by the Legislature of Puerto Rico in its ordinary session of 1943 condemning the colonial regime and demanding that the people of Puerto Rico be granted the right of self-determination. This policy was ratified by another concurrent resolution passed on February 20, 1945 by the Legislature of Puerto Rico. A permanent Commission to carry on the official policy of the legislature was set on 1943 and $80,000 was appropriated, so that this Commission could come to Washington to ask for the final determination of the ultimate political status of Puerto Rico. But Muñoz sabotaged the work of that Commission.

Puerto Rico has never consented to its present colonial status. On the contrary, from 1898 to this date, the people of Puerto Rico have been consistently asking for the ending of the colonial regime and the recognition of the right of self-determination.

It is not true that Puerto Rico is in a voluntary association with the United States, as the Secretary of State states in his letter and Muñoz Marín and his men say now. The present regime was imposed on Puerto Rico by force of arms as a result of the Spanish-American War, of which Puerto Rico was no part, and has been maintained without consulting with the people of Puerto Rico. Even American citizenship was imposed on the Puerto Rican people, in spite of the protest of the House of Delegates of Puerto Rico and Resident Commissioner Luis Muñoz Rivera, father of Governor Muñoz Marín, who asked the Congress in a speech made in the House in 1916, his last speech in the House—he died shortly afterward—not to impose American citizenship on the Puerto Rican people. He asked the Congress to allow Puerto Ricans to retain the Puerto Rican citizenship allowed to them by the Foraker Act, and make of Puerto Rico later a free and independent nation, as he said, in a prophetic mood, "You will have to make later of the Philippines."

That is the true history of Puerto Rico, as expressed by the Populares themselves to this Congress from 1943 to 1946. The attorney general of Puerto Rico, then floor leader of the senate, Attorney Vicente Geigel Polance, appeared before the Bell committee, the Chavez committee, and the Committee on Insular Affairs of the Senate, when it was presided over by Senator MILLARD E. TYDINGS, and there he expressed in the most vigorous terms everything I have said so far against the colonial system in Puerto Rico, against the imposition of the American citizenship on the Puerto Ricans and the imposition of the present system of government and in favor of the right of Puerto Rico to its independence.

Most of the members of the House and the Senate of Puerto Rico, and most of the mayors of Puerto Rico and most of the members of the municipal assemblies of the island were members of the Congreso Pro Independencia (Puerto Rico Congress for Independence) from 1943 to 1946 and sent, as you can see by an examination of the records of the hearings on the Tydings independence bill, cables and letters of support of the independence bill and of condemnation of the colonial regime. Senator Gutierrez Franqui was not at that time a member of the legislature.

All of them sent messages expressing their vigorous opposition to the so-called dominion status, autonomy or any other form of colonial reform.

Will anyone dare to deny the above?

The new colonial position of Muñoz Marín has been officially and openly adopted since his inauguration as colonial Governor of Puerto Rico in January 1949. Since then he has been saying that Puerto Rico is not a colony, but "a new kind of State," in open violation of the program, history and tradition of his own party, the Popular Democratic Party, whose members he has betrayed, and in open violation of the commitments he made before the 1948 elections.

What are the commitments made by Muñoz Marín in the 1948 elections? In this respect, the Secretary of State says in his letter to the Chairman of this committe that "in the elections held last November for the elected Governor of Puerto Rico, in which 73 percent of the registered voters participated, 63 percent elected the candidate who proposed that Puerto Rico defer at this time determination of its ultimate political status and seek a relationship with the United States which would permit of a constitution for Puerto Rico."

This is definitely a most grotesque distortion of the truth. The elected candidate, Muñoz Marín, promised the people, after a vigorous condemnation of the colonial status, to work for the approval of a law allowing Puerto Rico to draft a constitution of its own with complete self-government, the prohibition limiting the amount of sugar that Puerto Rico can refine having been eliminated by the Congress, and he promised also to ask Congress to include in the same law authorizing Puerto Rico to draft a constitution a provision authorizing the Legislature of Puerto Rico to submit to a vote, at any time the Legislature of Puerto Rico would think it feasible from the economic viewpoint, the alternatives of statehood of independence to solve the political status of Puerto Rico, on the promise on the part of the Congress, that it would approve the alternative selected by the people of Puerto Rico. This was the proposition submitted by Muñoz Marín to the people of Puerto Rico, on the basis of which he won the 1948 elections, aided, of course, with fraud and the use of huge amounts of money.

Let us see if I am right. The first time that Muñoz Marín mentioned the word "constitution" in his political campaign, in fact the occasion when he made the commitment to the people was on July 4, 1948, when he delivered the Fourth of July address. He said at this time:

"All of us, absolutely all of us, wish that this obsolete system which we call colonial system be ended. * * * The form of political relationship in which the United States holds Puerto Rico is not just. Neither is it intelligent. It is unjust and unintelligent (torpe).

"I want to be able to say so, in the name of all of you, to the good confused friends of that government and that people. As it is unjust it must be corrected from their point of view and our point of view. And because it is unintelligent (torpe), it must be corrected from their point of view. The colonial system is obsolete and should disappear from Puerto Rico and from the whole world."

And then he made the following pledge:

"In order to achieve this end I think that the people of Puerto Rico should authorize with their votes the following commission (gestion) before the Congress of the United States: That the Congress of the United States approves a law completing self-government in Puerto Rico to the point this may be possible, without being a State, in the constitutional structure of the United States. In other words. that the Congress authorize the people of Puerto Rico to draft its own constitution, in the same way as new States are authorized to do so; that the economic relations between Puerto Rico and the United States should continue basically in the same way as they are now, correcting the only grave error now existing, which is the prohibition which does not allow Puerto Rico to produce all the sugar it produces.

"In addition to that, in the same law Congress should authorize the Legislature of Puerto Rico to submit to the vote of the people in a plebiscite, in any moment that the legislature would decide that the economic development of Puerto Rico permits it, the consultation (consulta) on the following alternative: If the people want the establishment of independence without any special economic condition, with the pledge on the part of the Congress of effectuating the will of the people. Independence and statehood are the two principal solutions that historically have been endorsed in Puerto Rico.

"If that law is passed by the Congress, Puerto Rico itself would be the sole judge of the time when it thought that by its own effort the economic conditions to make feasible either statehood or independence had been established. It would judge that, first, through its legislature, and immediately afterward, through a plebiscite. That would place the responsibility and the authority directly on the shoulders of the people of Puerto Rico, which is the place where they should be."

And he ended his speech with the following:

"I am going to ask the people of Puerto Rico to authorize with their votes to work in this manner with their difficult problem of political status and of life, with their hard problem of political status and of complete liberty. I am going to ask the people of the United States, if the Puerto Ricans allow to do it with their votes, to establish this high precedent to finish in the world the liquidation of the colonial system which began to be liquidated the 4th of July of 1776."

Thus spoke Muñoz Marín. That is the commitment he made with the people of Puerto Rico. That is the proposition he submitted to a vote of the people. That is the pledge he made to 392,386 voters who, out of 873,085 registered voters, voted for him.

Let us analyze H. R. 7674 in the light of this commitment. Where is the provision allowing Puerto Rico to refine all the sugar it produces? The answer is: Nowhere.

Where is the provision allowing the legislature of Puerto Rico to call a plebiscite on independence or statehood any time it would deem that the economic conditions justify doing so and giving in advance the approval of the Congress to the preference expressed by the people of Puerto Rico at the time that any such plebiscite would be held? The answer is: Nowhere.

Then it is clear that H. R. 7674 is not in line with the promise made to the people of Puerto Rico.

Then it is clear that neither Commissioner FERNÓS nor Governor Muñoz have any mandate to push forward H. R. 7674.

Then it is clear that both those gentlemen are acting in violation of what they promised the people.

Then it is clear that H. R. 7674 is a fraud and a sham.

Then it is difinitely not true, as stated by the Secretary of State, that the people of Puerto Rico elected a candidate who proposed that Puerto Rico defer at this time determination of its political status.

But both Commissioner FERNÓS and Governor Muñoz have been holding that, in spite of the above, they are authorized to push forward H. R. 7674 as the program of the Popular Party approved in its general assembly on August 15, 1948.

Let us see if that is so. The platform of the Popular Party adopted the 15th of August 1948, says to that respect:

"The Popular Democratic Party, with the authorization of the majority votes of the people of Puerto Rico, would submit to the Congress of the United States the proposition that the political problem of Puerto Rico be solved according to legislation which provides as follows:

"1. That preserving the economic and fiscal relationship existing at the present time between Puerto Rico and the United States, the people of Puerto Rico, through action of the legislature, or through action of a constitutional convention called by the said legislature, be authorized to make its own constitution in accordance with the structure which it may judge more in consonance with the democratic administration of the public interests.

"2. That the Legislature of Puerto Rico be authorized to call the qualified voters of Puerto Rico, at any time that they deem to be in existence the necessary conditions, to a plebiscite, so that they may decide with their votes:

"(a) If they would like Puerto Rico to establish itself as an independent republic under the most favored conditions that the United States now extends to independent countries; or

"(b) If they want that Puerto Rico be admitted as a State of the American Union under the same conditions now covering the other States of the Union; or

"(c) If they are in disagreement with the legislature on the point that the existing conditions make it feasible for Puerto Rico to establish itself as an independent republic or to be admitted as a State of the American Union.

"3. That the Congress expresses its agreement to act in accord with the preference shown by the people of Puerto Rico in the aforesaid plebiscite."

Commissioner FERNÓS holds that the above program is to be effectuated in two stages:

(1) In the first stage, he says, the people of Puerto Rico ask the Congress to allow it to draft its own constitution; and

(2) In the second stage, he adds, the people of Puerto Rico ask the Congress to authorize its legislature to put to the vote of the people of Puerto Rico in a plebiscite, whenever they deem it proper, the question of whether Puerto Rico wants to establish itself as an independent republic or be admitted as a State of the Union.

I think that interpretation is absurd. The text of the platform is in line with the speech delivered by Muñoz on the Fourth of July. It is clear that the program envisions the approval of a law to solve "the political problems of Puerto Rico," as it states in the preamble, at the same time.

The political promises of a party are to be made good during the time of the incumbency of its elected officials; in this case, during the period 1948–52. If Commissioner FERNÓS is right, when is he supposed to fulfill the second part of the above-quoted program? What reasons, if any, do exist, to divide the fulfillment of the program in two different stages?

It is evident that the position taken by Governor Muñoz and Commissioner FERNÓS is the result of an afterthought. Because the trut' is—the historic truth is—that Muñoz himself proposed the political platform of his party, in the general assembly of August 15, 1948, in line with his speech of the Fourth of July, more than that, in order to fulfill his promise made in that speech.

The said speech had been distributed house by house, in every county, village, barrio, town, and city of Puerto Rico, thousands of copies; it had been recorded, and thousands of records had been handed free to the people and played on the radio and in thousands of stores and through the streets.

Muñoz said at the time of proposing the plank that the political problem of Puerto Rico would be solved through the adoption by the Congress of the law referred to.

At no time during the political campaign did their Muñoz or any of his coworkers speak of two different tempos, two different stages to fulfill their promises. They spoke of one single law where the whole political problem would be considered and solved.

H. R. 7674 as it stands now is a colonial measure; means nothing to the Puerto Rican people; leaves without solution the Puerto Rican problem and is a violation of the mandate asked directly to the people of Puerto Rico by Muñoz Marín in the 1948 elections.

As Muñoz realizes that, he has dodged public discussion of H. R. 7674. So has Commissioner Fernós. So has every leader of the Popular Party in the Muñoz group. As a matter of fact the social science circle of the University of Puerto Rico organized a forum to discuss H. R. 7674. The forum could not be held because, notwithstanding the fact that representatives of the Statehood Party and the Independence Party agreed to participate in such forum, not a single man in the Popular Party dared to participate in the discussion. Attorney Jose Trias Monge, legal adviser to Muñoz Marín and coauthor of the bill, refused to participate. So did refuse Attorney General Geigel Polanco. And a public invitation to participate addressed to to Muñoz Marín and Commissioner Fernós went without answer.

Also the Political Science Section of the Ateneo Puertorriqueno, an organization devoted to the promotion of culture, has invited in vain a representative of the Popular Party to appear in their forum in defense of H. R. 7674. Dr. Juan B. Soto, leader of the Statehood Party delivered a lecture in opposition to the bill and the leaders of the Independence Party announced that they are ready to deliver another lecture in opposition to said bill, but the "populares" dodge public discussion of the measure. They simply refuse to discuss the bill.

The people of Puerto Rico are against H. R. 7674. The Statehood Party and the Independence Party are militantly against the bill. Attorney Bolivar Pagan, president of the Socialist Party made a bitter attack on the measure on the floor of the Senate. After denouncing the bill as a fraud, he voted for it because he felt that if approved it amounted to the approval of two amendments to the Organic Act which he approved—the extension of power to the Governor of Puerto Rico to appoint the judges of the supreme court and the auditor. Yet he pleaded for the approval of an amendment to allow the Puerto Ricans to hold a plebiscite on the status question, which was defeated.

El Mundo and El Imparcial, the leading Puerto Rican newspapers, edited in San Juan, and El Dia, another important newspaper edited in Ponce, have written several important editorials condemning in the most vigorous and uncompromising terms, H. R. 7674.

On March 16, 1950, El Mundo wrote a brilliant editorial entitled "The Next Generation," in which it commented and condemned the testimony offered by Gov. Muñoz Marín before this committee where he said that the problem of statehood is a problem for the next generation of Puerto Ricans and ignored completely the question of independence.

El Mundo said that H. R. 7674 amounted merely to an amendment to the Jones Act and was no constitution; that it solves nothing and does not change an iota the fundamental situation of the relations of Puerto Rico with the United States and of the personality of Puerto Rico among the free countries of the world. El Mundo said Gov. Muñoz Marín left that problem "to the future generation."

El Mundo said:

"In the meanwhile, the Governor should make no reference to any previous election because at no time the status problem has been submitted openly to the people. It is confusion to try to interpret the last elections as if all those who voted for Mr. Muñoz Marín voted at the same time 'to postpone until the next generation' the case of the political status. The other considerations involved in the election—economic program, personal sympathies, disintegration of the old parties, were factors considered by the people to give their votes. It is a fact that the electorate did not divide itself on party lines, between defenders of statehood, defenders of independence and upholders of the status quo."

El Mundo ended saying:

"It is time to end the juggling and double play with the future of this country. If we want the Congress to treat us in a level of equality and to respect our dignity, let us talk to it like a mature country who knows what it wants and not as a vacillating kid who wants to eat his cake and have it."

The State Department concurs in the same confusionist attitude condemned by El Mundo, when it affirms without any basis whatsoever in its letter to the Chairman of this committee, that the people of Puerto Rico voted in the last election to "defer at this time determination of its ultimate political status."

When Senator Bolívar Pagán asked the Senate to insert in its records the quoted editorial of El Mundo, Senator Gutierrez Franqui, characterized it as "a monstrosity," and opposed its insertion in the record on the unjust basis that "the minutes of the Senate should not be tainted with such editorials." The Senate refused to allow the editorial to go into the record.

In answer to that exabrupto of Senator Gutierrez Franqui, El Mundo wrote another editorial the 18th of March entitled: Such finesse, Senator. This is a clear, vigorous and brilliant editorial where El Mundo says that what constitutes a blot is to go on passing the buck in the status question from generation to generation. El Mundo adds that for 52 years the Puerto Ricans have been living under the same uncertainties, postponing the fundamental issues for unimportant things of the moment.

On March 28, 1950, El Mundo wrote another editorial entitled "Clear Words" where it said:

"Clear words were those uttered by Secretary Oscar L. Chapman, Department of the Interior, in an interview broadcast recently.

"In his statement, Mr. Chapman has reaffirmed truths which we had pointed out in an editorial; truth which had not pleased those who love to play with words when dealing with one of the most serious things pertaining to a people: their political future.

"Chapman has reaffirmed that Alaska and Hawaii know they want statehood, and they have shown they want statehood.

"Chapman has reaffirmed that Puerto Rico does not know what it wants, since the Puerto Ricans have not even had a referendum on such a vital question.

"In Puerto Rico no referendum has been held on the polttitical status. No election in the past can be taken as the vote of the people for independence, for statehood or the status quo.

"Yet there are people who insist on affirming that Puerto Rico has already decided herself for the status quo, at least until the coming generation.

"There is another statement made by Mr. Chapman which is of the utmost importance for the Puerto Ricans.

"The Secretary of the Interior says that the Puerto Ricans can have a referendum whenever they wish it themselves.

"Puerto Rico does not need an authorization from Congress to determine which is the path she wishes to follow.

"Puerto Rico has not decided to walk the path of Statehood, but she could so decide were the matter submitted to her in an independent election.

"Puerto Rico has not decided to walk the path of independence, but likewise she could so decide in an election made to solve such a vital issue.

"If the Island decided herself for statehood or for independence the administration and Congress would understand clearly which are the insular aspirations.

"To wish for statehood, the Island does not need to be in an optimal situation, nor is it necessary that Congress have previously decided to grant her statehood.

"Hawaii and Alaska know that their aspirations have to meet objections and in part of the American people. But this has not stopped their public figures and representatives from hammering on the idea. Sooner or later, Hawaii and Alaska will see themselves admitted as States of the Union.

"To wish for independence, Puerto Rico does not need to be in a situation which will allow her to assume her independence immediately. The Philippine Islands knew they wanted independence, and at last they had it, after a 20-year readjustment period fixed by Congress. And later, during the initial years of life as a republic, the Philippines have had the help and the advice of the American people.

"Once Puerto Rico knows, without speculation, which way she is going, then a period of preparation and readjustment can be very beneficial. But we cannot grow and advance toward a goal, until we have fixed that goal.

"This is light which Puerto Rico needs.

"We cannot walk toward statehood and toward independence at the same time within the limbo of the status quo.

"Puerto Rico will not know which way she is going as long as the politicians (yesterday's, today's, tomorrow's) continue to fish for advantages in the troubled waters of the uncertainties of the status quo.

"According to Muñoz' words in Washington, the Fernós bill does not lead to statehood. According to Fernós words at Fordham, the bill does not lead to independence. It is a pact, a consent of the Puerto Ricans to their union with the United States. It is a consecration of the status quo.

"It is about this we want more light.

"Upon supporting FERNÓS' bill before Congress, is the island pledging herself to continue the present relations with the United States? Is she pledging to continue to postpone ad infinitum the referendum about her future?

"If the people of Puerto Rico, under the provisions of the Fernós bill converted into law, should adopt what some have insisted in calling a constitution, would the final political aspirations of the Pureto Rican people be determined in this constitution?

"If the status issue were evaded, the Fernós bill will not be anything else but an amendment to the organic act, as we have maintained, and the so-called constitution, a political convenience, but not a political solution.

"And Puerto Rico will remain not knowing what she is or what she wants to be.

"Why not take advantage of the clear words of Secretary Chapman and accompany them with other clear words and clear deeds as well?"

El Mundo wrote several other editorials, among them one written on March 31, 1950, entitled "Muñoz Speaks More Clearly," where it says:

"Mr. Muñoz Marín said that for the time being we do not have to think either of statehood or of independence.

"He stated further that he imagines that the Puerto Rican people will tend towards a permanent union with the United States. He gave as an example the fact that our economy is completely integrated with that of the Union and that this relationship is mutually beneficial.

"In this way he discards independence.

"Later he adds that statehood is too expensive, pointing out that the island will have to pay Federal taxes in an amount almost as high as the present insular budget.

"These statements coincide in their orientation with former words of the Governor, but this time his position is more clearly stated.

"Now he does not speek of statehood for the coming generation.

"Now he says plainly that we must not think of statehood or independence. He states that Puerto Rico is right now practically a new kind of State, and that to put this fact into a law would be profitable for both Puerto Rico and the United States.

"This would solve the issue of the political status," the Governor says, "which now does not allow us to dedicate our energy to the very difficult and more essential task of solving our economic problems.

"In other words, the consecration of the status quo, or the new State, is the Governor's formula for the solution of the political status problem.

"And when the voters of Puerto Rico vote for the constitution that Muñoz Marín proposes to the people, they will be accepting and confirming that Puerto Rico is content to maintain the present relations as an adequate political status.

"Independence and statehood are not postponed for the coming generations. They are postponed for eternity.

"It has been useless for the island to have been preoccupied all these years regarding the problem of her political status, when the problem had the simple solution of consecrating the status quo, a solution that is so evident and clear to Mr. Muñoz Marín and to Dr. FERNÓS.

"Is it equally so to all the Puerto Ricans?

"Is it equally so to the whole world?"

El Imparcial in its editorial of March 2, 1950, entitled "We do not want intermediate solutions," said in part:

"Since Gov. Muñoz Marín has so great an influence in the United States, why does he not try to liquidate the system of colonial government which prevails?

"The constitution which Muñoz upholds is no constitution at all, since the so-called constitution is no different from the Campbell bill and the free associated state bill, which caused so much political noise in Puerto Rico in the past.

"The constitution is only a new colonial modality.

"The people do not want a little more liberty. They want full liberty. They want the problem to be solved in its essence, either with complete independence or with statehood.

"They do not want colonialism in disguise, wearing the mask of a constitution."

In an editorial dated March 17, 1950, entitled "With a Different Collar," El Imparcial said:

"ANTONIO FERNÓS-ISERN and Luis Muñoz Marín have needed 2 years to write the 541 words of the bill which they have presented before Congress, and through which they confirm, consolidate, and consecrate in the uttermost expression of servitude, or colonial state.

"Does this bill presented to Congress fulfill the political pledge Muñoz and his party made to the voters? No. The bill ridiculously called constitution bill, does not do anything except allow the legislature to subscribe as hers, as if of her own making, the very same provisions of the present organic act, and for that we would have to go through the humiliating farce of a constitutional assembly that will not constitute anything, and which will only ratify the antidemocratic basis of our political relations with the United States, which will continue to be fundamentally the same as they are now.

"The so-called constitution only shows that Muñoz Marín has placed himself against the will of the people; he has deserted the independence ranks; he does not waste an opportunity to discredit statehood: the two great aspirations of political dignity shared by the Puerto Rican masses.

"His political mission seems to be that of assuring a penalty of 50 more years of colonialism for Puerto Rico.

"It is the same dog with a different collar."

El Dia has written many brilliant editorials against H. R. 7674 in the same vein as those written by El Mundo and El Imparcial and which I have quoted.

On the occasion of the refusal of the leaders of the Popular Party to discuss at the university, H. R. 7674, El Dia said in an editorial the following:

"A MAN IS NEEDED

"Our colleague El Mundo reported yesterday that the Fernós constitution bill may not be discussed in an open forum at the university since a man was needed to undertake the defense of the constitution bill before Dr. Juan B. Soto, who would defend statehood, and before Prof. Rafael Soltero Peralta, who would defend independence.

"The Circule of Social Studies of the University of Puerto Rico, presided over by university student Sergio Pena, Jr., an organization which sponsors the said open forum, has endeavored to see the bill discussed before a university audience by three representatives of the three named political aspirations with followers in this country:

"(1) Statehood; (2) independence; (3) semicolony with additional franchises, as proposed by the constitution bill of Resident Commissioner Fernós-Isern.

"Dr. Juan Bautista Soto and Dr. Rafael Soltero Peralta, both professors at the University of Puerto Rico, the first one affiliated to the Statehood Party, and the second affiliated to the Independence Party of Puerto Rico, accepted with pleasure the invitation to appear at the proposed forum to defend their respective political ideals.

"The third speaker was missing. The principal speaker, since without him there could be no public discussion of the Constitution. The Circle of Social Studies 'turned to a number of university teachers who are members of the Popular Party, hoping that one of them would accept to discuss the bill from the point of view of the Populares, but no one accepted,' so El Mundo informs.

"The university then turned to the attorney general, Vicente Geigel Polanco, one of the outstanding leaders of the Popular Party, and to attorney Jose Trias Monge, known to be one of the coauthors of the constitution bill, but neither the former nor the latter accepted the invitation.

"So it is that 'a man is needed.' One who will defend the semicolony of Dr. FERNÓS' constitution bill. One who will say as did Senator Samuel R. Quinones: 'Why keep on talking about independence or about statehood?'

"An intellectual is needed that face-to-face with the intellectuals Juan B. Soto and Rafael Soltero Peralta, repeat to the people—as Mr. Muñoz Marín and Dr. Fernós-Isern are saying that Betances and de Hostos, Barbosa and de Diego, Iglesias and Martinez Nadal were sadly mistaken in their pleas for the solution of the sovereignty issue: some asking for independence with international separation, others pleading for independence within the Federal Union.

"The professor members of the Popular Party do not wish to accept such a request.

"Neither does Attorney General Geigel Polanco.

"Nor coauthor of the constitution bill Trias Monge.

" 'A man is needed.'

"But the university students are not discouraged. El Mundo also informed that they will possibly turn to Governor Muños Marín 'asking him to choose someone to accept the proposition and defend the point of view of the upholders of the bill.'

" 'A man is needed.'

"Who will accept the task?

"Mr. Muñoz Marin and Dr. FERNÓS-ISERN will surely be very grateful to the spirited 'popular' who undertakes to face two free men to defend the semi-colony, to defend a little more political power for whichever fellow countryman be at the head of the government of Puerto Rico.

"Professors Soto and Soltero Peralta will will surely show Christian understanding toward anyone having the courage to appear before the students at the University of Puerto Rico to maintain that there is no need of struggling for liberty and dignity; that the urgent thing is to get a safe hold on a dish of lentils.

" 'A man is needed.'

"The man needed will be sure to get any place of honor or a well paid position in the present Puerto Rican government if he does not have it already, because that man will be entitled to the deep gratitude of the regime for answering yes where popular-democratic professors Geigel Polanco and Trias Monge said 'no' with upset spirits."

The political writers of the most important magazines of the Island have also expressed themselves against H. R. 7674.

So have the students of Puerto Rico.

So have the General Confederation of Workers (Authentic), (Confederacion General de Trabajadores (Autentica), presided over by the respected labor leader, Attorney Francisco Colon Gordiany.

So has the General Union of Workers (UGT) presided over by Mr. Juan Saez Corales, cofounder with Mr. Colon Gordiany and others of the government-controlled General Confederation of Workers. The General Confederation of Workers had a split in 1945 and gave growth to two labor organizations, the one headed by Mr. Colon Gordiany and the government-controlled group. The leader of this group is Speaker Ernesto Ramos Antonini, at one time law partner of Senator Gutierrez Franqui.

Any observer of the political situation in Puerto Rico will come readily to the conclution that the opposition in the island to H. R. 7674 is profound and widespread, extending from San Juan (in the north) to Ponce (in the south), and from Luquillo (in the east) to Mayaguez (in the west).

In New York, where so many Puerto Ricans live, the sentiment is overwhelmingly against H. R. 7674. There have been public demonstrations organized against the bill. Various groups have requested permission to testify in opposition to this bill.

The Spanish press in New York has published the protests in the island and in the city against the bill, and the daily Spanish newspaper, Diario de Nueva York, has written several well-reasoned and documented editorials against H. R. 7674.

I do not think that the Congress of the United States should allow itself to be made part of the perpetuation of a fraud. H. R. 7674 is a fraud. I address myself to the lawyers in this committee, and ask them, Does H. R. 7674 authorize in fact the people of Puerto Rico to frame a constitution of their own?

What is a constitution? A constitution is the supreme law of the land. Who drafts a constitution? The people. On what authority? On the authority derived from its power of sovereignty. And what is sovereignty? Sovereignty is the supreme authority or ultimate power. The sovereignty comes from the Latin summa potestas, which means supreme power.

The power of sovereignty is in our modern world the power of the people to draft its own constitution. This means that the people cannot draft a constitution if they do not have sovereignty.

Is the Congress relinquishing its sovereignty over Puerto Rico in favor of the island if it approves H. R. 7674? The answer is no. Therefore, Congress is not giving ultimate power to Puerto Rico over its local affairs.

If H. R. 7674 does not give Puerto Rico the right to draft a constitution which cannot be revoked, amended, or suspended by the Congress of the United States or by any other power, then it is not giving the island the power to draft what is called a constitution in international law and in our constitutional law.

I think we all agree, gentlemen, in the proposition that if H. R. 7674 is passed, the Congress of the United States can exercise at any time the power to revoke, amend, or suspend the so-called constitution drafted by the people of Puerto Rico.

Any student of constitutional law will affirm that there are only two ways through which the Congress can recognize sovereignty to the people of Puerto Rico, to wit, either by admitting the island as a State of the Union or by recognizing their independence. Only through these two methods can the Congress authorize the people of Puerto Rico to draft a real constitution, one that cannot be revoked by the Congress of the United States nor by any other power.

Under our constitutional system the Congress has power, inherent power, to legislate for the Territories and to revoke, amend, or suspend any law passed by the said Territory. Usually the Congress inserts a reserve clause in the organic laws approved for the Territories. But our Supreme Court has held that the clause referred to is unnecessary as the Congress has the inherent power to do that.

If H. R. 7674 is passed, does the Congress relinquish its right of annulling, amending, or suspending any law approved by the Legislature of Puerto Rico? Certainly not.

And that is so because of the inherent power of the Congress over the Territories. Because of that inherent power, even though H. P. 7674 is passed, the Congress of the United States will retain the power to annul all legislation approved by the Legislature of Puerto Rico, even though H. R. 7674 in its section 5 (2) provides for the repeal of section 34 of the Jones Act, which reads as follows:

"All laws enacted by the Legislature of Puerto Rico shall be reported to the Congress of the United States, as provided in section 23 of this act, which hereby reserves the power and authority to annul the same."

Even though the above is the case, H. R. 7674 was drafted by a smart attorney to perpetrate a fraud.

Why do I say that? In the first place I say that because of the elimination from the Jones Act of the reserve clause contained in section 34 to give the impression to the people that the Congress is relinquishing the said power.

In the second place, I say that because section 2 of H. R. 7674 says that the law, if passed, will be in the nature of a compact between the Government and people of the United States and the government and people of Puerto Rico.

What is the meaning of that phrase, "in the nature of a compact"? Compacts are bilateral agreements which obligate both parties. Does the above phrase in the bill mean that once the law is passed, Congress will not have power to annul the laws approved by the legislature of Puerto Rico? Does it mean that once the bill is passed, the Congress will not be able to legislate for Puerto Rico except as agreed by both parties in the compact?

Of course, as an attorney, I know that the phrase "in the nature of a compact" in the bill means nothing, that it constitutes surplus language and imposes no additional obligation upon the Congress of the United States nor takes away any power it now has, but it is used to deceive the people of Puerto Rico.

The use of the word "constitution" is also deliberately employed to cheat the people of Puerto Rico. In international and constitutional law words have a precise meaning. That is why the smart authors of the bill used the word "constitution," inserted the word "compact," and repealed section 34 of the present organic act.

H. R. 7674 is a deliberate attempt to deceive the people of Puerto Rico.

In the debate which took place in the Puerto Rican senate on H. R. 7674 the president of the senate, Attorney Samuel R. Quinones said that once the bill is passed, the Congress would not have the power to annul the constitution because of the meaning of the word "compact," which imposes bilateral obligations on the parties involved.

Yet it is well known that this Congress has no power to make irrevocable any law approved by it, because of the well-known principle that no Congress can limit or abridge the power of another Congress to discharge its responsibilities.

If this Congress should approve H. R. 7674, a point which I do not concede, it would do it in the exercise of the power given it by article 3 of the fourth amendment of our Constitution, and in the exercise of that same power a future Congress could annul, amend, or suspend the same, as well as any so-called constitution drafted on the basis of the power granted by the approval of H. R. 7674.

H. R. 7674 has no other effect, if passed, than to amend the Organic Act of Puerto Rico to allow the Governor of Puerto Rico to appoint the judges of the supreme court and the auditor of the island. If that is the case, why not call things by their right name and not use a misnomer? Why try to give the impression that we are relinquishing our sovereignty in favor of the people of Puerto Rico? Why try to confuse the people and deceive them? Why make the people of Puerto Rico undergo the electoral process leading to a constitutional convention and make them meet in such a convention for such an innocuous purpose as the one contained in H. R. 7674?

Under H. R. 7674 Puerto Rico would continue to be a Territory of the United States. All the provisions of the present Organic Act which represent an exercise of sovereignty in any sense whatsoever are preserved in the statute as a so-called law of Federal relations of Puerto Rico. The Congress of the United States would retain its power to legislate for Puerto Rico and the Constitution of the United States would be paramount, the same as it is now, and would continue to be the supreme law of the land in Puerto Rico, not only in Federal matters but also in local affairs. The so-called constitution, once approved by the Congress, would be only a law enacted by Congress and subject to the will of this Congress and every future Congress. It is clear, as I said before, that H. R. 7674 does not give the people of Puerto Rico the power to draft a constitution in a real sense, nor does it give Puerto Rico any power of sovereignty.

The position of Commissioner FERNÓS is based on extravagant speculations which have no basis in our constitutional law, in our history, or our mores and traditions, and is against the best interests of the people of Puerto Rico.

Not a single economic power is given Puerto Rico by H. R. 7674.

No additional jurisdiction is given Puerto Rico in the organization of its judicial system.

No extension of the jurisdiction of the people of Puerto Rico over its territory, its air and waters, and the life and liberty of its people is given by the bill.

No representation is given the Puerto Ricans in the Congress.

In short, the colonial system remains intact in Puerto Rico.

It is a fact, as I demonstrated in my speech delivered before the House on March 16, 1950, and made a part of my testimony, that Puerto Rico is a colony of the United States.

In an article written in the March 1948 issue of the Newsletter of the Institute of Ethnic Affairs, Inc., published at 500 Otis Building, 810 Eighteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C., Attorney Felix S. Cohen, former associate solicitor of the Department of the Interior, now in private law practice in Washington, and working as visiting lecturer at Yale Law School and at the College of the City of New York, shows that the colonial status is at the root of all the problems of Puerto Rico. Mr. Cohen entitles his excellent article, "Puerto Rico's Problem-Colonialism."

In the said article, Mr. Cohen says: "The problem of colonialism will continue so long as Puerto Rican workers are prohibited by the act of a Congress in which they have no vote, from refining the sugar they grow. The problem of colonialism would continue even if Puerto Ricans should cease to love their wives, their children, and their country as passionately as they now do, and thus bring into being a stationary or even a declining population figure. * * * The wealth of Holland, like the wealth of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, sprang from its people, from their love of freedom, political, economic and spiritual, and from their willingness to make every sacrifice to achieve that freedom. These resources of Holland are also the resources of Puerto Rico."

The government of Puerto Rico took that same position in the case against the continental sugar refineries. In the brief filed as intervenor in the United States Court of Appeals, District of Columbia, No. 9769, against the Secretary of Agriculture and Porto Rican American Sugar Refinery, Inc., and the American Sugar Refining Co., on May 19, 1949, the government of Puerto Rico said:

"The question presented here is simple and clean-cut. Has the Congress the power to convert Puerto Rico into a plantation, to limit its industry to the production of raw materials, to exclude it from all processing and manufacture for mainland consumption? Has the Congress the power to abridge the rights and liberties of the citizens of the United States living and doing business in Puerto Rico in order that it may confer special privileges upon a favored group of citizens of the United States who live and do business on the mainland? Has the Congress the power to impose upon Puerto Rico, its economy and its citizens, the iron fetters of the old colonial system?

"Section 207 (b) of the Sugar Act of 1948 should be declared null and void as abridging the liberty of persons without due process of law, as running contrary to the intent and spirit of the Constitution, and as seeking to impose upon a group of citizens of the United States a permanent colonial status."

In the final plea before the conclusion, the government of Puerto Rico said, page 93 of the brief:

"The issue before this court is a matter of life and death to Puerto Rico. Its economy, its chance at industrial development, its capacity for advancing the standard of life of its people, hang on the decision presently to be made. The Government of Puerto Rico can say in all sincerity that here is as serious a matter as could come before a court of justice. For the issues reach far beyond the immediate question presented by the accused section of the act. They involve alike the political status of Puerto Rico, the position of that Territory in our Federal system, and the relation of the insular to our national economy. For, if it should be held by this court that the Congress has the power to fix a maximum for the number of tons of direct-consumption sugar which refiners in Puerto Rico may market in the continental United States, it follows as of course that the Congress has the power completely to exclude sugar refined in Puerto Rico from the mainland market. If such an unrestricted power belongs to it, the Congress has adequate authority to decree the amounts of rum, plywood, textiles, chinaware, glass bottles, furniture, and soap of island fabrication which can be marketed upon the mainland. And if the Congress may fix maxima in respect to each of these and all other fabricated or processed goods, it possesses the power, at its pleasure, to exclude any or even all articles of merchandise produced in Puerto Rico from the mainland market. The rights and liberties at stake are not limited to the Puerto Rican refiners and their employees. The Government of Puerto Rico is under an obligation by encouraging manufacturers, to afford opportunities for employment to masses of its citizens. The capacity of its agricultural resources to care for its population has been fully exploited. Its only chance at salvation lies in the fabrication of goods for mainland markets. The threat of the new Colonial system hangs over it more heavily than the pressures of the old Colonial system upon the people of the North American Colonies. For in 1776 the frontier beckoned, and a wide open continent was there to relieve the pressures of British policy. Its population density allows to the people of Puerto Rico no escape save through the development of processing industries. To find the power of the Congress in question to be lawful is to deliver the liberties of the people, their industrial opportunities and the economy of Puerto Rico into the political control of the Congress.

"The peril is the more ominous, because there is no political avenue for the redress of grievances. Although its citizens are citizens of the United States, only local suffrage has been extended to Puerto Rico. Its people, their governor, their officials, the members of the two houses of their legislature. But the acts of its legislature are subject to Presidential veto and to the revision or the annulment of the Congress. The island is represented in the Congress by a single Resident Commissioner, who sits in the House of Representatives, participates in discussion, but has no vote. * * * Against the doom of consignment to a colonial status, the people of Puerto Rico have no defense except to ask judicial protection of the rights and liberties guaranteed to them by the Constitution. If this court fails them, there is no other way to salvation."

And the court failed them. Not only the district court of appeals but the Supreme Court as well. On February 1950, the Supreme Court recognized the right of the Congress to limit the amount of Puerto Rico's own sugar she can refine for sale in interstate commerce.

Commenting on the decision, the bulletin of the Office of Puerto Rico, Puerto Rico, published every month at 1026 Seventeenth Street NW., here in Washington, official publication of the Government of Puerto Rico, said:

"Denying the insular government's appeal that such limitations be declared unconstitutional, the Supreme Court upheld the 1948 Sugar Act. Justice Felix Frankfurter, who read the decision, said in effect that Congress has the right to adjust insular sugar production, refining, and marketing to suit the national and local interest.

"The Court's decision means that Congress can continue to tell Puerto Rico that she can only refine 126,033 tons of the 910,000 tons of the raw sugar the Sugar Act allows her to sell on the mainland. This means an annual loss to the island of an estimated 4,000 jobs and $20,000,000 in income."

The Puerto Rico Public Service Commission estimated the loss at $30,000,000 and some economists estimate the loss at $40,000,000.

In view of what I have said, I submit the following amendments to H. R. 7674:

Section 7: Section 207 (b) of the Sugar Act of 1948 is hereby declared null and void. (This is in keeping with Muñoz Marín's promise to the people to see to it that the restriction limiting the refinement of Puerto Rican sugar be eliminated.)

Section 1: It should be rephrased in order to strike out the clause "in the nature of a compact."

Section 8: The Legislature of Puerto Rico is hereby authorized to call the people of Puerto Rico to a plebiscite at any time that the said legislature would deem it convenient, so that they may decide with their votes:

(a) If they would like Puerto Rico to establish herself as an Independent Republic under the most favored conditions that the United States now extends to independent countries; or

(b) If they want Puerto Rico to be admitted as a State of the United States under the same conditions now covering the other States of the Union; or

(c) If they are in disagreement with the legislature on the point that the existing conditions make it feasible for Puerto Rico to establish itself as an Independent Republic or to be admitted as a State of the United States of America.

The Congress of the United States hereby agrees to act in accord with the preference shown by the people of Puerto Rico in the aforesaid plebiscite.

Section 9: Section 7 to be renumbered section 9.

Further, there must be written guaranties against the use of public funds to influence any plebiscite or referendum.

Mr. Chairman, I feel most strongly that the enactment of this bill will be a direct disservice to the people of Puerto Rico. I have come here today to urge that H. R. 7674 be voted down in committee as legislation which can only hinder and not help the Puerto Rican people as they try to work out their economic and political problems in a democratic manner.

I will present to this committee what I know to be some of these problems and what I—and thousands of working men and women of Puerto Rico—believe to be the only realistic solution to them.

I want to make clear at the outset that this is no simple bill merely permitting local self-government or a local constitution in Puerto Rico. It is in fact much more—and the sponsors of the legislation have made this clear in their statements. It is these deeper implications of this legislation which I urge this committee to recognize and to reject as inimical to the best interests of the people of Puerto Rico.

Both the Resident Commissioner and the Governor, as I have heretofore stated, have had occasion to describe this bill simply as a legislative recognition of the existing political and economic ties between Puerto Rico and the United States mainland.

It is that.

In fact, the Resident Commissioner stated quite explicitly, while discussing H. R. 7674: "We in Puerto Rico may be mindful of our basic economic and political relationships (with the mainland). We do not want to dissolve them; we do not want to disturb them," etc.

I would put it more explicitly and positively. This bill not only recognizes but it accepts and acclaims the present economic and political ties; and if enacted, this bill would further solidify these relationships which are essentially disastrous and humiliating to the Puerto Rican people.

This is my basis for opposition.

In this bill we can see an attempt to get the people of Puerto Rico to register their consent and agreement to the past 50 years of economic exploitation by mainland interests—and do this under the guise of enacting a local constitutional government.

Gentlemen, it is most edifying to read the statements supporting H. R. 7674 that have been made by the Resident Commissioner and the Governor. For both these gentlemen have been most anxious to state what the bill is not—what it does not aim to accomplish.

It is not a first step toward statehood; it is not a step in the direction of independence. It is something new altogether. In fact, to quote the sponsor of this legislation:

"We are developing a new pattern of federation, applicable to our circumstances, which do not permit us at the present, nor in the foreseeable future, to develop along the classical lines and the uniform pattern followed by former and present Territories in their ascent to statehood."

Under this so-called new pattern of federation, H. R. 7674 would permit the adoption of a local constitution, while leaving undisturbed the entire network of economic control that has spelled unspeakable poverty for the Puerto Rican people over the past 50 years. This is the crux of the problem.

I cannot emphasize too strongly that legislation which only formalizes the local self-government that now exists in Puerto Rico under the organic law—that in fact formalizes the facade of political democracy—while recognizing and leaving undisturbed the whole economic structure of this one-crop economy which is sucked dry by mainland financial and business interests is bad legislation. It is undesirable legislation.

It is undesirable from the point of view of the aspirations and needs of the people of Puerto Rico. It is undesirable from the point of view of the democratic tradition of the United States.

For the past 52 years, since United States troops landed in Puerto Rico, that country has been under the political and economic control of the United States.

In this brief span a complete revolution has taken place in the economic and political life of the island. What was once a fairly thriving, diversified, agricultural economy has become a sick-one-crop economy which brought uncounted millions to the absentee American owners of the sugar crops and privation, misery, and poverty to the Puerto Rican people. What was once a community taking its first bold steps in the direction of self-government and independence has become a colonial appendage of the United States.

This committee should have these facts in mind when it measures this bill in the balance of what has been and what is in Puerto Rico.

Puerto Rico was not discovered when General Miles landed in Ponce in 1898.

For almost 450 years these people have been living in Puerto Rico, with a culture, a language, and a tradition completely their own. Under the Spanish Empire Puerto Rico was for many years a province with representation in the Parliament in Madrid. And in 1897, because the people of Puerto Rico were themselves on the move and reaching out for the kind of freedom and liberty they could see on the United States mainland, Spain was forced to concede dominion status and to permit the creation of a self-government constitution.

In 1897 Puerto Rico was on the verge of achieving complete independence from Spain.

But by 1899 after the treaty of Paris had been ratified, Puerto Rico was placed under military government. It was an American military governor who suspended the self-government constitution, and the United States War Department was the dominant voice in the affairs of Puerto Rico up to 1934. Since then the Interior Department has taken over.

I believe that an examination will show that the first organic act of 1900, the more liberalized act of 1917, and the subsequent amendments, even to including the right to election of the governor (passed in 1947) have not yet restored to the Puerto Rican people the level of independence they had already reached in 1897.

This may appear like ancient history to this committee—but it is not to the people of Puerto Rico.

Essentially a most profitable economic exploitation of the people and the resources of Puerto Rico has developed in the past 50 years. Profitable, but not for the people themselves. It is an economic exploitation which could only have taken where political freedom and political expression were circumscribed. Today vague gestures are being made in the direction of political democracy and political freedom. But the essence of the control, the economic domination of Puerto Rico by the United States, continues undisturbed.

And what is most shocking, the proponents of this legislation come here and try to curry support for their bill by proving that they have no intentions of disturbing the economic shackles that tie Puerto Rico. What a farce.

Sugar has spelled economic tragedy for Puerto Rico.

A steadily growing population, a bare subsistence standard of living, maldistribution of wealth, concentration of land holdings in the hands of a few, these are some of the most pressing problems of Puerto Rico. And these problems are linked with the structure and operation of the sugar industry.

The sugar industry is the largest single employer of labor, it does more business each year than all the other industries of the island combined, it dominates the external trade of the island.

Puerto Rico is sugar. And Puerto Rico is a sick island.

I will not burden the record of this committee with the statistics of the wealth and influence of the sugar industry. I think that no one would disagree with the statement that today the economic structure of the island is the sugar industry, and little more.

Nor will I repeat in detail the poverty and misery which is the lot of the common man and his family in Puerto Rico today. These facts have been repeatedly recorded by congressional committee after congressional committee. Yet in all their detail and in all their statistical dryness and accuracy, they give no inkling of the bitterness and emptiness—the hopelessness—of the lives of these people.

It was from this horror of unemployment and insecurity that 10,000 workers and their families are fleeing in unsafe, overloaded planes to work on farms on the mainland. The plane crash on Monday, June 5, with the loss of 28 lives, is not the first of such incidents. It happened because these unhappy, exploited people have no alternative but to accept seasonal work on the mainland. There is little prospect for them in Puerto Rico. And they are packed into planes and sent into the harvesting areas with a callousness that is hard to imagine.

In the past 50 years, Puerto Rico has been changed into a sugar island. To the thousands of workers who earn their living in the sugar fields or in the sugar mills, the in-industry furnishes only spasmodic employment. From the height of the cutting period to the period of mill shut-down, thousands upon thousands move from intense hard labor to complete idleness. And this cycle, year in and year out, is reflected in every other part of the Puerto Rican economy.

Concentrating on the production of sugar, the island of course must import practically every major item of consumption and living.

Rice, beans, and dried codfish. A few clothes. A shack. This is the life of the Puerto Rican worker. And it all comes from the mainland, with every article priced far above the mainland prices.

It does not take much thought to conclude that only through industrialization and through diversification of agriculture, with higher wages all around, can the Puerto Rican people hope to raise their standard of life.

But I am convinced that a healthy industrialization and diversification of production and a real economic growth can never come about until after the present economic shackles and domination by the mainland are both destroyed.

So long as the sugar economy produces profits for a few selfish and greedy mainland interests, so long will the status of the island continue as it is—for these feed on each other—and a program for industrialization and diversification in the interest of the people will never come to life. Only industrialization which exploits these people as the sugar industry always has in the past will grow in Puerto Rico under these circumstances.

And the so-called operation bootstrap, the widely heralded program of industrialization, holds out about as much economic hope for the Puerto Rican people as H. R. 7674 holds out political hope.

Both are self-defeating because they accept the present economic and political status of Puerto Rico as fixed and healthy rather than as they truly are—the center of the whole cancerous problem.

This identication of operation bootstrap with H. R. 7674 is not mine alone. The sponsor of this bill has himself described H. R. 7674 as "an expression of the same program of advancement which is embodied in operation bootstrap."

Let us look at this for a moment.

A subcommittee of the House Labor Committee recently held hearings in Puerto Rico on minimum wages and education in the Island. Runing over a week's time during the latter part of November, 1949, these hearings made clear how complete a failure this operation bootstrap has been.

"Operation Bootstrap" hopes to attract industrial operations by offering cheap, unskilled labor and substantial tax savings to mainland businessmen.

The concern whose movement to Puerto Rico recently received most press notice has been, of course, the textile corporation known as Textron. Senate hearings were held on Textron's decision to shut down their Nashua, New Hampshire operation, and open up in Puerto Rico, and these, of course, are available to the committee. They should be read carefully.

With the rate of pay approximately 60 percent of what workers on the mainland obtain for the same work, it is not surprising that a few American firms are beginning to move factories to Puerto Rico. But the net result to date of these attempts to picture Puerto Rico as the businessman's paradise have so far been slim.

In the House Labor Committee hearings to which I have already referred, Mr. Teodoro Moscoso, Jr., president and general manager of the Puerto Rico Industrial Development Co. summed up the history of the operation.

The Industrial Development Co. was established by the Puerto Rican Legislature late in 1942. Up to June 30, 1949, $22,000,000 had been appropriated for the use of this company in industrializing Puerto Rico.

During the 6 years of operation a total of 7,233 jobs were created by plants operated by businessmen attracted from the mainland by "Operation Bootstrap." And of this number 3,440 or almost half were home-work jobs.

That is some record in a country where each year for the past 3 years the labor force has increased by 22,000 men and women.

That is some record in an area in which out of a population of 2,200,000 over 300,000 are unemployed.

The problem of the worker in Puerto Rico is not to find a well-paying job, but to find any job whatsoever.

To read the statements of these gentlemen who are guiding the industrialization program is to be convinced of its ultimate failure. They, of course, put the blame for the failure upon the Puerto Rican people who, to believe these gentlemen, are slow, stupid, not mechanically minded and all the rest.

Mr. Moscoso, to whom I have already referred, made clear how low his sights are set, when he told Congressman KELLEY:

"Well, in Puerto Rico proper we believe that a lot of jobs, from which people shy away in the States, might eventually come down here, and of course, it is not a too hopeful picture to think that these kinds of jobs are the ones that will eventually get here, but we have to start somewhere."

This from the director of "Operation Bootstrap." Puerto Rico is to become the source of labor for the jobs which employers cannot convince mainland workers to fill; the lowest paid, the drudgery jobs, these are to be for the Puerto Ricans.

I see no need to say more about "Operation Bootstrap." It should be clear to this committee that this is no program to industrialize Puerto Rico, to raise the standard of living and make fuller and happier lives for the Puerto Rican people. It is instead a program to peddle the Puerto Ricans to the highest bidder from the mainland.

It has not worked and it will not work.

Puerto Rico has arable land, it has some mineral resources, it has many people. With all these resources directed in a program clearly in their own interests, these people can begin to solve their own problems.

And these economic problems, like these political problems, can only be solved if the people of Puerto Rico can exercise their own sovereignty as an independent State.

I am not so naive as to think that independence would overnight end all the problems of the Puerto Rican people. But I know that independence would release the energy and the creativeness of these fine people to meet their problems and to solve them by their own efforts.

Without independence I see no solution. And since H. R. 7674 represents another obstacle in the road to independence, I oppose it completely and urge upon you that it be voted down in committee.

CONCLUSION

Our country is a signatory to the Charter of the United Nations.

The President in his most recent report on the United Nations to Congress, dated May 22, 1950, described the Charter as "express(ing) our fundamental aims in the modern world."

Chapter XI of the Charter states that member nations recognize that the interests of non-self-governing territories are paramount and that the member nations pledge "to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, etc."

I submit that it is time some of this high-sounding language be brought down to earth around home and a taste of the real meaning of these pledges given to the people of Puerto Rico.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] is, as far as I know, the only Member of the House who is opposing this rule or the bill.

The bill is brought before you through the unanimous report of the Committee on Public Lands, and the unanimous report of the Committee of Rules.

From all the testimony that was given to the committee, the great majority of the people of Puerto Rico favor the bill, the only dissidents being the splinter parties who want either statehood or independence.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. HERTER. I shall be pleased to.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. For the sake of correcting an impression which has been evident here, there are two leading newspapers in Puerto Rico, and they are conservative newspapers; nobody can charge them with being radical in any sense of the word. I refer to the newspapers El Imparcial and El Mundo. In my remarks that I make before the committee and which you will see in tomorrow morning's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD you will find that both of these leading newspapers are protesting almost daily editorially against the enactment of this bill and have given their reasons, reasons which I shall advance during general debate; so that it is not true there is no opposition to this bill. The leading public opinion as expressed by the press of Puerto Rico is against this measure.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Speaker, I still maintain that the testimony that came before the Rules Committee contradicts the evidence that the gentleman has just put before the House.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DELANEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER] is recognized for 15 minutes.

THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, the American Medical Association is now holding its annual meeting in San Francisco. The AMA is the country's largest scientific organization. By its very nature, the AMA must play a major role in the advancement of the national health. The delegates to its convention carry a tremendous responsibility to the welfare not only of this country, but the world. Those delegates represent the finest health facilities and the greatest fund of technical knowledge in medical history.

It is only natural that a good many Americans should have looked to San Francisco this week for guidance in many matters. If they heard the inaugural address of Dr. Elmer Henderson, incoming president of the AMA, they must now be looking elsewhere.

Just this Tuesday, with the United States in the midst of crisis, facing the possibility of a major war, Dr. Henderson ignored the urgent need to shore up our national health defenses in the shortest possible time. Instead he delivered a cliche-packed, reactionary tirade against the elected Representatives of our Government.

He attempted to ally the doctors of America, many of whom oppose Dr. Henderson's personal political beliefs, with the most extreme elements of right-wing conservatism.

Standing directly under Sir Luke Fildes' famous picture of a physician and patient with the AMA motto "Keep politics out of this picture," Dr. Henderson not only put politics into the picture, but did it with an unseemly violence and a resort to political mudslinging unmatched in the ordinarily dignified behavior of medical meetings.

Dr. Henderson's address rang with the patent insincerity of the huckster slogans and phrases of the publicity team which now speaks for America's doctors in the name of the AMA. He attacked our Government as "sick with intellectual dishonesty, moral laxity, and with reckless excesses," and charged the administration with a campaign to gain control over all fields of human endeavor to make this a socialistic state. These wild charges and political mudslinging ill become the head of an organization whose objective should be scientific progress.

The rest of Dr. Henderson's talk bears out the fact that scientific truth is not the goal of the present leadership of organized medicine. An analysis of his remarks will show that he used the same misrepresentations and distortions that many doctors and other thoughtful Americans have unhappily come to associate with the AMA. Here are a few examples:

First. In attacking national health insurance as socialized medicine, Dr. Henderson is merely repeating the same scare phrase that was used to characterize old-age and unemployment insurance, and other measures passed by the administration with the enthusiastic support of the American people. The American people know that national health insurance is in fact the best protection against state medicine.

Second. In extolling American health records as the best in the world—which they are—Dr. Henderson proudly cited declining death rates resulting from tuberculosis, diphtheria, and small-pox as an achievement of American medicine. He neglected to add that the AMA fought against reporting communicable diseases, compulsory vaccinations for small-pox, and public provision for immunization against diphtheria—measures that made the campaign against these diseases possible. The AMA also called these measures socialistic. The decline in infant mortality also cited is largely due, as Dr. Henderson ought to know, to local and State public health departments and to the Children's Bureau of the Federal Security Agency.

Third. Dr. Henderson denies that there is a doctor shortage. Politicians, he says, are attempting to "create a crisis over an alleged shortage in this country; the ratio of doctors to population is higher than anywhere else in the world except Israel." But the AMA's own propaganda admits that there is a serious doctor shortage in many areas. Right now to bring every State up to the present standards of the 12 best equipped States, we need 20 percent more doctors—and that is just the basic minimum. The deans of the leading medical schools support Federal aid to enable their schools to enlarge their student bodies. And our Armed Forces have never been able to get the necessary numbers of doctors to meet a real crisis.

Fourth. Dr. Henderson points to our growing hospital system, stating that there are 1,500,000 hospital beds in this country now serving 16,000,000 patients. Is it a mere oversight that he did not also say that over two-thirds of these beds are operated by Government—local, State, and Federal agencies—because private hospitals have never met our needs.

But what is even more important, certain areas of this country are woefully lacking in hospital facilities. Dr. Henderson must know that only 14 counties in every 100 meet the minimum accepted standard of 4½ general hospital beds per 1,000 population. Four out of 10 counties where 15,000,000 Americans live have no acceptable general hospital.

Fifth. Dr. Henderson states that voluntary health insurance is the way to take the economic shock out of illness. He predicts that in a few years the problem will be largely resolved. What problems? Why the problem whose existence he spends so much time denying, the problem of adequate medical care for all. Dr. Henderson did not mention that Blue Shield plans with their limited coverage protect only 9 percent of the population and provide little other than protection for some types of surgery. He failed also to point out that only 2 percent of the American people have complete insurance protection such as they would get under national health insurance—because only 2 percent can afford such protection at the high rates charged by existing voluntary and commercial insurance plans.

Millions of Americans know from bitter experience that high-priced voluntary plans automatically exclude those who need protection most, the aged, those with chronic diseases, and those who simply cannot afford the high cost and the low benefits which the voluntary plans offer.

Dr. Henderson did not mention the AMA's own shabby record of opposing any voluntary plans which it cannot control—consumer, farm and labor cooperatives. In 1943, the Supreme Court convicted the AMA of monopoly practices in fighting one health cooperative and two more cases are before the courts right now for the same reason. The AMA's real attitude toward voluntary health insurance was summed up when the voluntaries first began, when they were described in an editorial in the AMA Journal as socialism, communism, inciting to revolution. For 20 years, the AMA took this official stand despite pressure from its own members to change. The change took place only when the AMA officialdom saw they must offer some substitute for a good comprehensive national health plan.

The charges levelled by Dr. Henderson this week might carry more weight if organized medicine had shown any inclination to work out a sound, constructive program for solving our health problems. So long as organized medicine turns its energies away from scientific advancement and toward irresponsible political attacks on our elected Government, so long will the AMA have to be regarded as a reactionary, self-seeking interest.

The oath of office which Dr. Henderson took Tuesday night over a Nation-wide hook-up adjured him to "promote public health and welfare, to improve health standards of the American people, and to devote himself to the task of bringing improved medical care within the reach of the American people." How can Dr. Henderson live up to that solemn oath when he refuses even to admit that public health and welfare is a genuine concern, that health standards need improving, or that adequate health care is now beyond the reach and the pocketbooks of millions of Americans?

Dr. Henderson might well read carefully the address of one of his fellow speakers at the AMA convention, that of Brig. Gen. James Stevens Simmons, dean of the Harvard School of Public Health.

In his talk as reported in the New York Times, General Simmons pointed out that in the present uncertain international situation "all problems of health assume a dominant role."

In addition to the general problems of public health, he warned, we must be prepared to meet the entirely new threat of unannounced atomic and biologic warfare.

General Simmons might have added that we badly need more doctors and more nurses to meet these new conditions. Yet, the AMA continues its stubborn opposition to legislation to help failing medical schools meet their growing obligations.

As the general concluded, and I quote:

> I am also sure that the American physician now has his greatest opportunity to serve the Nation by giving his complete support not only to good medical care, but to preventive medicine and public health. The future security of the country will reflect the manner in which he fulfills this responsibility.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FURCOLO] is recognized for 15 minutes.

(Mr. FURCOLO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include a chart of figures from appropriation bills.)

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

Mr. FURCOLO. Mr. Speaker, I am proceeding on the assumption that everyone in the Nation is interested in trying to economize wherever possible. I am basing my remarks on the assumption that, in our present financial condition, money should be spent on only the most essential items.

Assuming that every expenditure is for a good purpose—a highly debatable assumption but nevertheless assuming it for the sake of argument—at least one other qualification should also be met before there be any expenditure: namely, Is it also absolutely essential at this time? In other words, every expenditure should be not only for a good purpose but should also be so necessary at this time that men of good judgment and reason would not want to postpone it in preference to deficit spending.

WHO IS SPENDING THE MONEY?

Having in mind that people seeking economy usually impose those two qualifications for any expenditure—first, Is it for a good purpose? second, Is it essential right now?—I have made a study of all money appropriations voted by the Congress over the past 10 years. I think the figures are illuminating and should be brought to the attention of the people of the Nation, because the actual figures show very clearly that the people of the Nation have overlooked perhaps the most important point of all, namely, Who is spending the money?

If there be any lack of sound economy in appropriations, the people naturally want to exert their omnipotent influence against it. Before they can do so, they must know where to direct their efforts.

The figures I have studied do not reveal whether the expenditures that have been made were wise or unwise. They do not indicate whether too much or not enough has been spent for the benefit of the people of the Nation. They do not in themselves show whether the governmental servants of the people have practiced economy or extravagance. They show none of those things because figures and statistics are notoriously ineffective to prove anything. It is a truism that figures and statistics can be interpreted to reach opposite conclusions.

THE FIGURES SHOW

However, the figures and statistics do establish something beyond any peradventure of doubt. They show who is spending the money—and that result is not inconclusive or subject to different interpretations. It is a cold, proven fact on which every person in this country can agree. Which is the reason for my talk today.

It is not my purpose to analyze the reasons for the figures or to determine whether the figures have been based on sound or unsound practices. My aim is merely to let the people of the Nation know who is spending the money. Then the people can praise or condemn those responsible for such expenditures.

I have one further purpose for the consideration of those who believe expenditures are too high and I shall outline it in a few minutes. First I want to give the actual figures which will then speak for themselves.

I am listing them year by year for the past 10 years. The left-hand column, under each year, shows the purpose for which the expenditure was made. The column under "Passed House" shows the amount of money voted by the House of Representatives for such purpose. The column under "Passed Senate" shows the amount of money voted by the Senate for such purpose. The column under "Law" shows the final amount agreed to by both bodies of Congress, often after conference. Regular appropriations are given first, followed by deficiency and supplemental appropriations. Every expenditure that has been made is included in these first charts for the convenience of those who may wish to see the actual figures for each item. A little later I am inserting a very short over-all chart from 1940 to 1950 that merely gives the total amount expended each year.

The charts detailing all expenditures for every year are as follows:

1939–40	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1939–40
1. Department of Agriculture, Farm Credit Administration	$835,118,613.00	$1,218,666,572.00	$1,194,498,633.00
2. District of Columbia	46,915,207.00	49,524,985.00	48,002,347.00
3. Independent Offices	1,651,087,340.00	1,668,218,340.00	1,668,218,340.00
4. Interior	159,538,815.23	174,975,288.33	172,679,765.23
5. Labor	30,535,770.00	30,747,780.00	30,536,170.00
6. Legislative	21,636,278.00	21,985,779.00	21,851,779.00
7. Navy	773,420,241.00	773,049,151.00	773,049,151.00
8. State, Justice, and Commerce	121,399,120.00	122,624,410.00	122,177,220.00
9. Treasury and Post Office	1,700,591,354.00	1,701,189,114.00	1,700,615,054.00
10. War Department:
(a) Military	499,857,936.00	513,188,882.00	508,789,834.00
(b) Civil functions	305,188,514.00	305,267,984.00	305,188,514.00
Total	6,145,289,188.23	6,579,438,285.23	6,545,606,797.23
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Emergency Relief, 1939 (fiscal year 1940)	$1,735,600,000.00	$1,808,900,000.00	$1,755,600,000.00
2. Emergency Relief, 1939	725,000,000.00	725,000,000.00	725,000,000.00
3. Emergency Relief, 1939	100,000,000.00	100,000,000.00	100,000,000.00
Total deficiency and supplemental	2,989,549,508.51	3,239,892,897.16	3,173,651,669.98
Grand total	9,134,838,696.74	9,819,331,182.39	9,719,258,467.21

1940–41	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1940–41
1. Department of Agriculture, Farm Credit Administration	$713,896,084.00	$922,911,213.00	$918,603,918.00
2. District of Columbia	48,291,717.00	49,697,890.00	48,765,080.00
3. Independent Offices	1,100,187,267.00	1,139,783,528.00	1,120,243,528.00
4. Interior	118,578,187.05	137,256,834.05	135,383,330.05
5. Labor and Federal Security	1,021,639,700.00	1,025,054,670.00	1,023,282,690.00
6. Legislative	23,907,744.00	23,707,720.00	23,671,220.00
7. Navy	965,779,438.00	1,302,014,038.00	1,308,171,138.00
8. State, Justice, and Commerce	107,225,660.00	107,079,000.00	107,149,000.00
9. Treasury and Post Office	1,032,154,612.00	1,052,784,115.00	1,032,801,095.00
10. War Department:
(a) Military	784,999,094.00	1,500,324,988.00	1,499,323,322.00
(b) Civil functions	203,472,567.00	223,636,517.00	222,718,717.00
Total	6,120,132,070.05	7,464,250,513.05	7,440,113,038.05
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Emergency Supplemental 1940	$264,611,252.00	$251,822,588.00	$252,340,776.00
2. Urgent Deficiency 1940	58,502,600.00	57,541,300.00	57,541,300.00
3. First Deficiency 1940	90,069,139.11	92,777,021.52	92,035,408.52
4. Emergency Relief 1941	1,111,754,916.00	1,224,791,357.00	1,157,711,357.00
5. First Supplemental National Defense 1941	1,381,917,147.00	1,488,353,027.00	1,479,777,147.00
6. Second Deficiency 1940	57,909,600.00	95,176,257.23	85,891,777.23
7. Second Supplemental National Defense 1941	2,234,191,957.00	2,374,158,277.00	2,497,016,392.00
8. First Supplemental Civil Function 1941	207,475,727.02	189,178,663.35	228,132,013.35
9. Third Supplemental National Defense 1941	1,311,493,636.00	1,324,193,636.00	1,324,193,636.00
Total deficiency and supplemental	6,717,925,974.52	7,097,992,127.10	7,174,639,807.10
Grand total	12,838,058,044.57	14,562,242,640.15	14,614,752,845.15

1941–42	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1941–42
1. Department of Agriculture	$890,824,037.00	$1,340,622,744.00	$1,060,500,063.00
2. District of Columbia	52,547,081.00	54,785,686.00	54,183,106.00
3. Independent Offices	1,404,576,838.00	1,415,991,838.00	1,414,626,838.00
4. Interior	177,027,078.00	185,119,813.00	188,325,923.00
5. Labor and Federal Security	1,191,776,000.00	1,200,511,100.00	1,195,861,940.00
6. Legislative	24,846,047.00	25,087,486.00	25,002,256.00
7. Navy	3,415,457,250.00	3,415,521,750.00	3,415,521,750.00
8. State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary	212,087,200.00	279,416,547.00	279,142,477.00
9. Treasury and Post Office	1,146,394,496.00	1,151,156,632.00	1,147,624,384.00
10. War Department:
(a) Military	9,826,509,492.00	10,384,821,624.00	10,384,821,624.00
(b) Civil functions	221,272,228.00	234,805,863.00	228,601,828.00
Total	18,563,317,747.00	19,687,841,082.00	19,394,212,189.00
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Urgent Deficiency 1946	$3,524,000.00	$1,933,800.00	$3,347,200.00
2. Second Urgent Deficiency 1946	128,550,000.00	364,114,807.00	364,114,807.00
3. Second Deficiency 1946	233,157,293.37	63,285,930.02	61,601,337.02
4. Coast Guard 1947	114,216,000.00	118,236,000.00	116,226,000.00
5. Third Urgent Deficiency 1946	661,520,810.89	661,847,988.89	661,847,988.89
6. Government Corps 1947	45,546,287.00	67,292,287.00	60,086,287.00
7. Third Deficiency 1946	724,571,909.33	2,784,485,270.68	2,652,860,866.98
8. First Supplemental 1947	2,479,663,210.45	2,796,612,917.45	2,636,489,417.45
Total deficiency and supplemental acts	4,390,749,511.04	6,857,809,001.04	6,556,573,904.32
Grand total	25,485,403,752.70	28,300,573,043.20	27,524,535,703.48

1942–43	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1942–43
1. Department of Agriculture	$648,170,517.00	$680,395,695.00	$665,742,646.00
2. District of Columbia	56,129,351.00	56,329,161.00	56,306,031.00
3. Independent Offices	2,096,048,875.00	2,126,042,890.66	2,090,885,128.00
4. Interior	162,157,965.00	186,924,998.00	178,099,712.00
5. Labor and Federal Security	1,058,951,660.00	1,157,598,426.00	1,071,574,318.00
6. Legislative	27,463,866.00	27,884,588.00	27,570,708.00
7. Military	42,820,003,067.00	42,820,003,067.00	42,820,003,067.00
8. Navy	17,722,565,474.00	23,738,865,474.00	23,738,865,474.00
9. State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary	221,078,100.00	425,703,235.00	426,281,885.00
10. Treasury and Post Office	1,112,926,899.00	1,113,321,439.00	1,113,321,439.00
11. War Department, civil functions	333,950,826.00	367,039,826.00	343,938,826.00
Total	66,259,446,000.00	72,700,108,799.66	72,532,589,234.00
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Fourth Supplemental National Defense, 1942	$12,556,672,474.00	$12,556,672,474.00	$12,556,672,474.00
2. First Deficiency, 1942	160,412,611.43	163,806,854.77	163,780,819.77
3. Fifth Supplemental National Defense, 1942	29,720,901,900.00	30,412,737,900.00	30,412,737,900.00
4. Sixth Supplemental National Defense, 1942	18,156,961,345.00	19,062,373,260.18	19,001,197,010.18
5. Seventh Supplemental National Defense, 1942	654,999,740.00	655,074,740.00	655,074,740.00
6. Emergency Relief, 1943	282,584,000.00	282,584,000.00	282,584,000.00
7. Second Deficiency, 1942	53,513,099.84	53,721,999.74	53,721,999.74
8. First Supplemental National Defense, 1943	1,808,669,615.47	1,863,961,710.90	1,858,939,210.90
9. Second Supplemental National Defense, 1943	6,236,956,621.00	6,341,196,887.66	6,351,184,137.66
Total Deficiency and Supplemental	69,631,671,406.74	71,403,167,077.25	71,335,892,282.25
Grand total	135,891,118,006.74	144,103,275,876.91	143,868,481,526.91

1943–44	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1943–44
1. Department of Agriculture	$715,099,662.00	$875,680,709.00	$848,295,883.00
2. District of Columbia	54,789,434.00	55,568,210.00	55,466,565.00
3. Independent offices	2,620,824,379.00	2,621,539,379.00	2,621,366,879.00
4. Interior	72,861,316.00	127,989,991.00	104,608,921.00
5. Labor	1,086,059,499.00	1,186,367,512.00	1,137,167,010.00
6. Legislative and Judiciary	40,659,273.00	40,943,778.00	40,894,478.00
7. Military	59,034,839,673.00	59,034,839,673.00	59,034,839,673.00
8. Navy	27,463,087,198.00	24,850,427,198.00	27,637,226,198.00
9. State, Justice, and Commerce	189,629,400.00	226,105,758.00	221,405,400.00
10. Treasury and Post Office	1,098,840,960.00	1,102,381,425.00	1,100,691,275.00
11. War Department, civil functions	63,032,683.00	63,657,098.00	63,657,098.00
Total	92,440,323,477.00	90,185,500,731.00	92,865,619,380.00
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Urgent Deficiency, 1943	$22,410,000.00	$22,410,676.17	$22,410,676.17
2. First Deficiency, 1943	4,102,569,890.87	4,108,485,949.96	4,106,261,194.96
3. Naval Supplemental, 1943	3,816,206,583.00	3,851,176,119.00	3,836,176,119.00
4. Farm Labor Supply, 1943–44	26,100,000.00	40,000,000.00	26,100,000.00
5. Urgent Deficiency, 1943	2,911,700.00	7,246,700.00	7,246,700.00
6. Urgent Deficiency, 1943	134,096,279.86	143,630,591.56	143,430,591.56
7. Defense Aid Supplemental	6,273,629,000.00	6,273,629,000.00	6,273,629,000.00
8. National War Agencies	2,880,941,504.00	2,931,215,033.00	2,911,697,224.00
9. Second Deficiency	36,158,760.60	363,059,927.23	188,833,720.23
10. First Supplemental National Defense	166,754,124.32	308,340,019.23	188,833,720.23
11. Farm Labor Supply, 1944–45	27,000,000.00	[1]	[1]
Total Deficiency and Supplemental	17,488,777,842.65	18,049,194,016.64	17,769,041,405.64
Grand total	109,929,010,319.65	108,234,694,747.64	110,634,660,785.64

[1] Consideration not completed during first session; carried over to second session.

1944–45	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1944–45
1. Department of Agriculture	$535,244,192.00	$524,806,718.00	$562,145,918.00
2. District of Columbia	68,585,607.00	69,159,948.00	69,111,569.00
3. Independent Offices	8,500,590,352.00	8,561,391,764.00	8,485,099,785.00
4. Interior	87,652,580.00	123,629,345.36	103,239,796.36
5. Labor	1,104,972,514.00	1,114,920,609.00	1,112,644,464.00
6. Legislative and Judiciary	59,606,975.00	60,232,283.66	59,701,018.66
7. Military	15,436,031,795.00	15,434,814,795.00	15,434,814,795.00
8. Navy	27,572,202,936.00	27,569,798,301.00	27,569,798,301.00
9. State, Justice, and Commerce	231,304,700.00	242,766,700.00	241,937,700.00
10. Treasury and Post Office	1,318,321,980.00	1,332,376,669.00	1,330,846,169.00
11. War Department, civil functions	86,911,440.00	95,190,680.00	92,455,440.00
Total	55,001,425,071.00	55,129,087,813.02	55,061,794,956.02
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Farm Labor Supply	[2]	$36,359,200.00	$31,359,200.00
2. First Deficiency 1944	$500,103,748.38	530,773,754.97	489,762,870.04
3. National War Agencies 1945	1,030,858,367.00	1,031,100,367.00	1,030,937,242.00
4. Defense Aid and UNRRA	3,920,070,000.00	3,920,510,000.00	3,920,320,000.00
5. Second Deficiency 1944	232,385,058.92	245,630,992.58	241,270,992.58
Total Deficiency and Supplement	5,683,417,174.30	5,764,434,314.55	5,713,650,304.62
Grand total	60,684,842,245.30	60,893,522,127.57	60,775,445,260.64

[2] Passed House, 78th Cong., 1st sess.

1945–46	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1945–46
1. Agriculture	$576,432,700.00	$594,724,527.00	$589,931,520.00
2. District of Columbia	64,988,080.00	65,703,280.00	65,635,660.00
3. Independent Offices	3,218,876,477.00	3,145,658,626.00	3,121,900,230.00
4. Interior	101,242,628.00	140,392,432.00	111,690,258.00
5. Labor and FSA	1,086,210,337.00	1,132,093,241.00	1,115,617,256.00
6. Legislative	50,742,447.66	50,994,481.66	50,994,481.66
7. Military	21,376,283,400.00	21,496,902,030.00	21,496,902,030.00
8. Navy	23,400,502,133.00	23,603,775,868.00	23,601,136,064.00
9. State, Justice, Commerce, Judiciary, and Federal Loan Agency	255,853,700.00	270,180,838.00	265,521,700.00
10. Treasury and Post Office	1,342,813,090.00	1,343,094,670.00	1,342,958,105.00
11. War Department, civil functions	99,165,940.00	112,450,940.00	112,450,940.00
Total	51,573,110,932.66	51,955,970,933.66	51,874,738,244.66
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. First Deficiency, 1945	$2,338,877,125.62	$2,375,332,528.31	$2,373,837,128.31
2. National War Agencies, 1946	752,764,850.00	774,005,765.00	769,364,850.00
3. Second Supplemental, 1945
4. Second Deficiency, 1945	3,634,044,238.78	3,675,508,776.79	3,636,203,476.79
5. National War Agencies, 1946
Total Deficiency and Supplemental Acts	6,725,686,212.40	6,824,847,070.10	6,779,405,455.10
Grand total	58,298,797,000.00	58,780,818,003.76	58,654,143,699.76

1946–47	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1946–47
1. Agriculture	$573,601,949.00	$598,737,735.00	$581,240,121.00
2. District of Columbia	72,585,009.00	79,478,262.00	76,755,009.00
3. Independent Offices	5,593,262,626.00	5,095,365,177.00	5,094,976,677.00
4. Interior	179,426,847.00	341,890,768.00	247,167,036.00
5. Labor and FSA	1,136,500,238.00	1,157,155,365.00	1,155,015,670.00
6. Legislative	52,801,676.66	53,947,946.16	53,809,736.16
7. Military	7,091,034,700.00	7,595,449,868.00	7,263,542,400.00
8. Navy	4,139,718,000.00	4,100,009,100.00	4,119,659,300.00
9. State, Justice, Commerce, Judiciary, and Federal Loan Agency	365,178,758.00	453,042,983.00	437,703,212.00
10. Treasury and Post Office	1,604,556,940.00	1,616,067,840.00	1,604,862,140.00
11. War Department, civil functions	285,987,498.00	361,618,998.00	333,230,498.00
Total	21,094,654,241.66	21,442,764,042.16	20,967,961,799.16
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Urgent Deficiency, 1941	$388,140,000.00	$395,357,775.00	$393,687,775.00
2. Fourth Supplemental National Defense, 1941	1,376,277,202.00	1,376,464,602.00	1,376,464,602.00
3. First Deficiency, 1941	188,863,693.68	191,803,544.88	191,478,544.88
4. Defense Aid Supplemental, 1941	7,000,000,000.00	7,000,000,000.00	7,000,000,000.00
5. Fifth Supplemental National Defense, 1941	1,980,356,820.00	2,295,967,920.00	2,299,767,920.00
6. Additional Urgent Deficiency, 1941	173,749,630.00	174,409,630.00	174,409,630.00
7. Emergency Relief, 1942	885,905,000.00	936,395,000.00	910,905,000.00
8. Second Deficiency, 1941	879,321,270.80	1,042,565,565.03	1,041,444,529.75
9. First Supplemental National Defense, 1942	7,063,238,478.00	5,838,436,948.00	6,586,896,948.00
10. Second Supplemental National Defense, 1942	6,159,522,799.39	6,161,615,969.39	6,161,467,229.39
11. Third Supplemental National Defense, 1942	7,650,001,531.00	9,478,310,750.00	9,283,037,005.00
12. Additional appropriation, National Defense, 1942	512,000,000.00	512,000,000.00	512,000,000.00
Total deficiency and supplemental	34,257,406,424.87	35,403,327,659.30	35,931,559,184.02
Grand total	52,820,724,171.87	55,091,168,742.30	55,325,771,373.02

1947–48	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1947–48
1. Agriculture	$569,391,266.00	$662,205,426.00	$613,046,826.00
2. District of Columbia	95,930,310.00	94,947,504.00	95,504,737.00
3. Government Corps	36,097,580.00	31,746,918.00	35,040,000.00
4. Independent Offices	8,167,869,027.00	8,307,978,247.00	8,188,822,927.00
5. Interior	161,413,513.00	215,530,353.00	194,587,859.00
6. Labor and FSA	1,684,586,780.00	1,676,198,080.00	1,674,158,631.00
7. Legislative	54,895,005.00	55,631,908.00	55,294,435.00
8. Military	5,280,982,423.00	5,616,618,799.00	5,482,529,633.00
9. Navy	3,135,481,100.00	3,312,044,300.00	3,268,766,100.00
10. State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary	538,976,492.00	553,595,932.00	551,175,932.00
11. Treasury and Post Office	3,202,050,750.00	3,243,045,173.00	3,216,509,450.00
12. War Department, civil functions	339,186,869.00	539,927,449.00	502,123,912.00
Total	23,266,861,115.00	24,309,470,089.00	23,877,560,442.00
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Urgent	$139,360,000.00	$181,486,231.40	$179,645,668.40
2. Foot and mouth	9,000,000.00	9,000,000.00	9,000,000.00
3. Increase pay costs	243,255,607.00	243,255,607.00	243,255,607.00
4. First Deficiency, 1947	2,827,526,186.35	2,835,199,009.32	2,835,161,509.32
5. Second Deficiency, 1948	170,478,658.70	210,418,858.70	192,438,858.70
6. Second Urgent Deficiency, 1947	70,856,257.87	72,236,257.87	72,236,257.87
7. Emergency Appropriation, 1948	6,180,000.00		6,180,000.00
8. First Supplemental	1,603,199,094.47	1,680,793,697.22	1,658,802,197.22
9. Supplemental Government Corps	35,500,000.00	35,500,000.00	35,000,000.00
10. Second Supplemental	100,059,200.00	112,334,200.00	106,695,100.00
Total deficiency and supplemental acts	5,205,415,004.39	5,380,223,861.51	5,338,915,198.51
Grand total	28,472,276,119.39	29,689,693,950.51	29,216,475,640.51

1948–49	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1948–49
1. Agriculture	$545,533,453.00	$580,400,278.99	$577,546,953.00
2. District of Columbia	101,164,983.00	99,567,983.00	99,729,483.00
3. Government Corporations	37,979,061.00	43,422,061.00	38,479,061.00
4. Independent Offices	991,518,551.00	967,705,551.00	967,442,551.00
5. Supplemental Independent Offices	5,795,048,931.00	5,855,308,851.00	5,819,659,851.00
6. Interior	375,692,591.00	422,179,098.00	407,836,974.00
7. Labor and Federal Security	905,405,250.00	890,751,440.00	890,139,000.00
8. Supplemental Federal Security	969,050,000.00	983,227,319.00	975,914,700.00
9. Legislative	55,859,690.00	56,362,726.00	56,140,401.00
10. National Military Establishment:
(a) Military Functions	6,447,689,000.00	6,853,426,052.00	6,705,418,163.00
(b) Civil Functions, Department of Army	606,558,766.00	708,586,666.00	641,575,666.00
(c) Department of Navy	3,686,733,250.00	3,812,170,250.00	3,749,059,250.00
11. State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary	503,590,263.00	516,029,937.00	511,129,662.00
12. Treasury and Post Office	1,981,722,350.00	2,010,601,200.00	1,996,313,425.00
13. Treasury and Post Office, supplemental	248,414,255.00	248,414,255.00	248,414,255.00
Total	23,251,960,394.00	24,048,153,667.00	23,684,799,395.00
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Urgent Deficiency	$131,015,365.67	$137,489,385.67	$136,368,385.67
2. Foreign Aid, Welfare of Indians, and tax refunds	555,125,000.00	555,125,000.00	555,125,000.00
3. First Deficiency	339,160,952.33	780,962,279.84	778,768,845.84
4. Supplemental National Defense	923,100,000.00	958,200,000.00	949,000,000.00
5. Foreign Aid	5,980,710,228.00	6,125,710,228.00	6,030,710,228.00
6. Second Deficiency	485,204,240.42	605,792,130.36	549,774,876.36
7. Supplemental	15,000,000.00	15,300,000.00	15,300,000.00
Total, deficiency and supplemental acts	8,429,315,806.42	9,178,579,023.87	9,015,047,335.87
Grand total	31,681,276,200.42	33,226,732,690.87	32,699,846,730.87

1949-50	Passed House	Passed Senate	Law 1949-50 (1st sess.)
1. Agriculture	$701,122,079.00	$723,083,249.00	$715,601,607.00
2. District of Columbia	98,923,621.00	103,142,153.00	102,754,447.00
3. Independent offices	7,103,506,553.00	7,663,429,323.00	7,617,739,361.00
4. Interior	536,461,908.00	595,262,257.00	584,098,797.00
5. Labor and Federal Security	2,210,694,085.00	2,409,408,765.00	2,387,381,385.00
6. Legislative	62,200,705.00	62,262,110.00	62,262,110.00
7. National Military Establishment	13,272,815,800.00	13,165,803,089.00	12,949,562,498.00
8. National Security Council and National Security Resources Board	3,700,000.00	3,700,000.00	3,700,000.00
(a) Secretary of Defense	189,000,000.00	202,230,000.00	191,450,000.00
(b) Department of Army	4,481,834,200.00	4,570,907,089.00	4,380,644,298.00
(c) Department of Navy	4,375,327,600.00	4,388,079,000.00	4,285,382,200.00
(d) Department of Air Force	4,222,954,000.00	4,000,887,000.00	4,088,386,000.00
9. Civil functions, Department of Army	593,292,270.00	751,440,690.00	664,178,190.00
10. State, Justice, Commerce, and Judiciary	684,616,102.00	671,782,281.00	677,972,102.00
11. Treasury and Post Office Departments	3,072,817,903.93	3,113,068,503.93	3,090,528,903.93
Total	28,336,451,026.93	28,824,713,809.93	28,852,079,400.93
DEFICIENCY AND SUPPLEMENTAL ACTS
1. Disaster Relief	$500,000.00	$500,000.00	$500,000.00
2. Disaster Relief	500,000.00	500,000.00	500,000.00
3. First Deficiency	471,895,177.52	542,303,473.59	524,649,473.59
4. Second Deficiency	671,069,672.84	862,563,510.27	854,838,710.27
5. Veterans' Administration	595,890,000.00	595,890,000.00	595,890,000.00
6. Foreign Aid Appropriation	5,617,470,000.00	5,647,724,000.00	5,659,990,000.00
7. Third Deficiency	127,032,243.75	193,078,469.02	177,740,619.02
8. Grasshopper Control	1,500,000.00	3,500,000.00	1,750,000.00
9. First Supplemental	72,790,521.87	104,172,589.95	78,005,129.95
10. Second Supplemental	1,038,506,380.41	1,083,161,658.73	1,079,082,880.41
Total deficiency and supplemental	8,597,153,996.39	9,033,393,701.56	8,972,946,813.34
Grand total	36,933,605,023.32	37,858,107,511.49	37,825,026,214.17

Mr. Speaker, to find out who is spending the money, the people of the Nation should compare the column "Passed House" with the column "Passed Senate."

SENATE SPENT OVER $18,000,000,000 MORE THAN HOUSE FROM 1940 TO 1950

The figures show that from 1940 to 1950, the Senate voted to spend approximately $18,390,210,943 more than the amount of money the House of Representatives was willing to vote. It is not my purpose in this talk to analyze the reasons why the action of the Senate in seeking to spend more money may have been wise or unwise, sound or unsound, economical or uneconomical. That is a matter of interpretation that may be subject to opposite conclusions being reached by different people. The cold fact that the Senate voted to spend over $18,000,000,000 more than the House is not subject to different interpretations. It is simply an established fact.

THE FIGURES CANNOT BE DENIED

Beginning with the year 1940, here are the figures that show the amount of money voted by the Senate over and above the amount voted by the House for the same purpose and the same year:

1940: $684,492,486 more than the House.
1941: $1,724,184,596 more than the House.
1942: $2,270,444,571 more than the House.
*1943: $8,212,157,870 more than the House.
*1944: $1,694,315,573 less than the House.
1945: $208,679,882 more than the House.
1946: $482,021,000 more than the House.
1947: $2,815,169,291 more than the House.
1948: $1,217,417,830 more than the House.
1949: $1,545,456,490 more than the House.
1950: $924,502,500 more than the House.

Total: Senate voted about $18,390,210,943 more than the House.

I have starred the years 1943 and 1944 because the figures for the military establishment for those years apparently caused a great part of the difference between the two bodies of Congress. It is probable that rapidly accruing events abroad caused the discrepancy, since the appropriations were considered at different times of the same year by the two bodies.

In the 11-year period of 1940 to 1950, the Senate voted well over $18,000,000,000 more than the House.

Not counting the 2 years, 1943 and 1944, the Senate voted over $12,000,000,000 more than the House in the 9-year period.

Counting every year except the one of 1944, the only year that the House voted more money than the Senate, the figures show that the Senate voted to spend over $20,000,000,000 more than the House in the 10-year period.

SENATE CONSISTENTLY SPENDS MORE THAN HOUSE

No matter how it be analyzed, the fact is that the Senate has consistently voted to spend more money than the House has been willing to spend. On an average, the Senate exceeds the expenditures wanted by the House by anything from $1,250,000,000 a year to a little over $2,000,000,000 a year.

SENATE HIGHER 170 TIMES OUT OF 196 APPROPRIATIONS

There were 212 appropriations voted upon by both bodies of Congress. Sixteen times the two bodies agreed upon the amount. Twenty-six times the House voted to appropriate more money than the Senate. One hundred and seventy times the Senate voted more money than the House. Or, to put it another way, the two bodies differed in the amounts to be appropriated 196 times. The Senate voted for more money than the House 170 times out of the 196 times on which the two bodies differed.

To answer the question, "Who is spending the money?" The admitted figures lead to one inescapable conclusion: The Senate is spending the money.

As I stated above, it is not my purpose in this talk to analyze the reasons for the expenditures. I want to prove not why the money is being spent, but merely who is responsible for the expenditures.

BRING SENATE EXPENDITURES DOWN FIRST

I also want to emphasize that I am not trying to make a point that the House of Representatives is not spending too much money simply because the figures show the Senate is spending more. It may well be that, even though the House wants a great deal less money spent, even the House figures may be too high. I merely want to point out to the people of the Nation that, if they want to cut down on expenditures, the first task is to begin with the Senate. In other words, if the people believe too much money is being expended, they should first try to bring Senate expenditures down to the House level and then take the next step after that.

"PORK BARREL"

Now I would like to spend just a few minutes discussing the appropriations for two specific functions—Interior and civil functions. When people speak of "pork barrel" and "logrolling" expenditures, the items criticized—whether justly or unjustly—are usually found under the headings of Interior and civil functions in appropriation bills.

There are many expenditures under those headings that the general public often criticizes as being unnecessary, uneconomical, and unsound. It is not my purpose today to arrive at any conclusion as to whether the general public is right or wrong in its opinions about extravagance in items under civil functions. I merely want to let the admitted figures prove who is spending the money for civil functions and Interior items.

Listing only the expenditures made under the headings "Civil functions" and "Interior"—the two headings that, among other things, include money expended by the Army engineers and other agencies for dams, rivers, harbors, and so forth—the following figures show that the Senate voted more money for such purposes than the House felt was necessary in every single year in the period from 1940 to 1950. The following chart illustrates it by showing under "Civil functions" the amount voted by the Senate each year over and above the amount voted by the House. Under "Interior," the chart is similar:

CIVIL FUNCTIONS

1941: Senate voted $20,000,000 more than the House.
1942: Senate voted $13,500,000 more than the House.
1943: Senate voted $33,000,000 more than the House.
1944: Senate voted $1,000,000 more than the House.
1945: Senate voted $10,000,000 more than the House.
1946: Senate voted $13,000,000 more than the House.
1947: Senate voted $76,000,000 more than the House.
1948: Senate voted $200,000,000 more than the House.
1949: Senate voted $102,000,000 more than the House.
1950: Senate voted $158,000,000 more than the House.
Total: Senate voted about $636,000,000 more than the House for civil functions from 1940 to 1950:

INTERIOR

1941: Senate voted $19,000,000 more than the House.
1942: Senate voted $8,000,000 more than the House.
1943: Senate voted $24,000,000 more than the House.
1944: Senate voted $55,000,000 more than the House.
1945: Senate voted $36,000,000 more than the House.
1946: Senate voted $39,000,000 more than the House.
1947: Senate voted $163,000,000 more than the House.
1948: Senate voted $54,000,000 more than the House.
1949: Senate voted $46,000,000 more than the House.
1950: Senate voted $58,000,000 more than the House.
Total: Senate voted about $502,000,000 more than the House for Interior from 1940 to 1950.

Grand total: Senate voted about $1,138,000,000 more than the House for civil functions and Interior from 1940 to 1950.

The figures for both civil functions and Interior show that it is the Senate expending the money.

For civil functions and Interior the grand total establishes the fact that the Senate voted to spend about $1,138,000,000 more money than the House believed should be spent for such projects. On a yearly basis, the figures prove that the Senate has consistently tried to spend over 100 million dollars a year over and above the amount the House felt was necessary.

Again let me emphasize that it is not my purpose in this talk to analyze the reasons for the expenditures or to determine whether the public is right or wrong in the descriptive terms it applies to such projects. Whatever the reasons be, whatever the projects are, the cold fact still remains that the money for such purposes is being spent by the Senate.

I do not know whether the public is familiar with the figures I have given but they are a matter of public record. I do not know whether the public is aware of who is spending the money, but that also is a matter of public record.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT?

I now want to discuss for a few minutes the following proposition: Assuming the people of this Nation want to cut down on expenditures, do I have any constructive suggestion as to what action they may take?

Of course, we are all familiar with the obvious measures the people already have been taking of making general protests to members of both the House and Senate, of sending articles to newspapers, and so on. But is there anything else that may help? I offer the following suggestion because, as far as I have been able to determine, it is new in the sense that it has not been used to try to cut down Federal expenditures.

"GRASS ROOTS" ECONOMY

I propose that the local governing bodies of towns, cities, and States become a part of a united effort to achieve Federal economy. I also propose that citizens' committees be set up to function as "watchdogs of the Federal Treasury." I am proposing what amounts to a "grass roots economy movement," in which the people of the Nation will join to achieve every sound and possible saving.

Let me apply the suggested solution to the two most criticized items, civil functions and Interior projects. Let me also use the Senate as an example because the figures make it readily apparent that more money can be cut from Senate appropriations than from House appropriations, assuming any cuts at all are possible.

THE SYSTEM NOW

Before I discuss my proposal, let me first try to give an analysis of the system as it now works. The average Senator does his best to obtain whatever dams, flood control walls, river and harbor improvements, highways, post offices, and other Federally financed projects that he believes are beneficial and necessary for the people of the Nation and the people of his State. Of course he scrutinizes such projects with an economy eye focused on real necessity and not with a political eye focused on the thought that an inpour of Federal money into a State means an outpour of votes for the person responsible.

As far as the Senator's own State is concerned, most Senators naturally try to represent the wishes and best judgment of their constituents when such opinion is not in conflict with the Senator's own conviction. Experience has shown that, as concerns work on highways, dams, rivers, post offices, harbors, and so on, usually a Senator's opinion is that the people of his State want Federal money spent on such projects in their own State. A Senator who seeks to obtain Federal money for such projects in his own State usually feels that, in addition to the fact that he himself is sincerely convinced of the necessity, the people of his own State want him to take such action, too.

A NEW SYSTEM

Under the proposal I am making, the Senator would not guess at the thoughts of the people he represents—he would know.

If he knew his people wanted the projects, he would fight for them as hard as he does now, because his own courage and opinion would be bolstered by political fortitude. The valor of any elected official is always enhanced by knowledge that his efforts meet with the approval of those who have the power to continue or discontinue him in office.

On the other hand, if the people he represents do not want worth-while projects at this time—if they prefer to postpone them because they want to balance the Federal budget or reduce taxes or practice austerity economy—that may make a difference to the Senator. Of course he may disregard their wishes. We all know that a Senator will not be swayed by political considerations and, in that situation, a Senator who still wanted to vote for projects his people did not want would undoubtedly vote according to his convictions, even though he knew it meant political suicide. But if we take the case of a Senator who was in doubt whether to vote for or against a project in his own State, then the opinion of the people of his State would be very helpful. In such a case, the Senator would undoubtedly be influenced by the wishes of his constituents. Let us help that Senator by the suggestion I now offer.

MEMORIALIZE THE CONGRESS

I propose that, at the beginning of each annual session of Congress, every Senator notifies his State legislature of the projects under civil functions and the Interior Department that he proposes to sponsor or support. Then let the State legislature memorialize the Congress in favor of or against that particular project.

GET TO THE PEOPLE

The Senator represents all the people of that State. So does the State legislature. The Senator tries to learn the wishes of the people of his State. So does the State legislature. The Senator tries to keep close to the people of his State. The State legislators are even closer to the people because they live and hold office throughout the year right in the districts they represent and they are in constant daily touch with the people. Most Members of Congress are away from home at least 6 months of the year. In addition, a Senator who takes a stand on a project may not come up for reelection until 5 or 6 years later—a long time for political memories. The members of the State legislature come up for reelection within a matter of months for the most part—a short time for those who disregard the wishes of their constituents.

MIGHT HELP ECONOMY

If the State legislature memorializes the Congress against a certain project in the State that will cost Federal money, the Senator has been put on notice that in all probability the people in his State prefer economy to the project. That might result in an economy vote by the Senator.

Of course, the State legislature might memorialize in favor of the project. Will that hurt economy? I believe an analysis of the votes in the Senate will show that it will not make any difference. Perusal of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD reveals very few votes against any project in any State that any Senator represents. In other words, those who advocate economy have everything to gain and nothing to lose if the plan I suggest to memorialize the Congress be put into effect.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

As far as the other body of Congress is concerned—the House of Representatives—a similar system could be inaugurated. Instead of working through the State legislature—because most Representatives in Congress do not represent an entire State but merely a district within it—the Representative of a district would merely notify the local governing bodies of the towns and cities in his district of any project under civil functions and Interior that he intended to sponsor or support. The city council or board of aldermen, for example, would then pass a resolution stating their stand on it.

ONE VOTE COUNTS IN THE SENATE

Of course, I think the figures I have given show beyond question that the money is being spent by the Senate. I also believe that the Senate is the body where the expressed opinion of the people may have great weight if any senatorial vote is influenced by it. That is where a single vote counts much more than in the House of Representatives. The result of balloting in the Senate would often be completely reversed if two or three Senators changed their votes. That is not true of the House where usually it would be necessary to turn over at least 20 or 30 votes to reverse the result of the balloting.

If the people of the State prefer economy so much that their State legislators ask a Senator to vote against a project that will bring Federal money into the State, I am inclined to think the Senators from that State will be greatly impressed. A Senator who votes against the expressed wish of the people who elected him will certainly have a great deal of explaining to do.

NO EXTRA WORK INVOLVED

The proposal I make does not involve any extra work on the part of anyone. Senators and Representatives in Congress know, or should know, about projects in the civil functions and the interior affecting their districts. They merely write one or more letters to the State governing bodies and outline what the projects are and ask them for an opinion.

QUESTION

There is one other point that bears investigation and I believe my suggestion will highlight it. That is: Do the people really want economy where they themselves will be affected by it? We all know they want economy for the other fellow. We all know they want "economy, but—." Maybe they really want economy when it affects them, too. Let us find out. It will make our task easier if we know.

LET'S FIND OUT

If the people are willing to pay for better conditions, if they will prefer to have worth-while projects right now rather than to postpone them in order to reduce the national debt or to cut taxes, let us know about it. On the other hand, if they would choose to do without some of the things they describe as pork-barrel legislation—not projects for someone else but for themselves—let us know that.

HOW?

The best way to find out, in my opinion, is by the people themselves. Only one in a thousand will write to us and we are often in the dark. The closer you get to the people, the more you know their feelings. State legislators, aldermen, councilmen, and selectmen are much closer to the people than anyone in Washington. In addition to what we ourselves may know or guess as to the opinion of the people on any project under civil functions or Interior, let us also have the opinion of their local representatives and governing bodies. Let us not only put ourselves on the spot—let us also put the people themselves there. Let us see who really wants economy—not "economy, but"—just plain old economy, period.

LET'S GET SPECIFIC

I had better add this: I realize there may be many other places where economy can be put into effect. However, I have found a tendency in people not to be specific about those other places. It is usually, "Well, you cannot cut down on this but there are other places to economize." They never can find those other places. Let us get specific and begin with civil functions and Interior items for a start. Those are the items usually described as a major part of the wasteful pork barrel. Maybe we can find out whether or not the people want pork barrel, logrolling, and back scratching. The best, quickest, and simplest way I know is by the memorializing plan I have suggested.

PRECEDENTS

As we all know, there is nothing involved or complicated about any State legislature memorializing Congress. They do it on countless occasions and on a variety of subjects, indicating not only the simplicity of the procedure but also the fact that there is no lack of precedent for my opinion that the people often express their views to the national governing body through the medium of their State governing body. The practice is recognized as an effective method of influencing legislation. Let us extend the practice to also include the people's opinion on economy measures that will affect themselves directly.

ONE OBVIOUS CRITICISM

There is one obvious criticism of my plan. It will be said that, even if the people of the State want economy enough to so memorialize their Senators on matters affecting their own State, they will hesitate in the thought: "If the Federal Government's going to spend money, why shouldn't we get our share, too?" That is a natural thought and, whether we agree with its logic or not, we must be practical enough to recognize its actuality.

ANSWERS

I believe there are two answers to that:

First. The Senator of a State is not compelled to blindly follow the advice of the State legislature in its memorializing petition. He can see whether or not other States are trying to take advantage of his own State, and then act accordingly.

Second. A system might be easily worked out in the Senate where, before any vote, Senators might rise and state that their State legislators had memorialized thus and so, and they intend to follow the dictates of the memorialization, provided other Senators were doing the same. There are many gentlemen's agreements and this could easily be another. Then, if a Senator saw that other Senators either intended to disregard the advice of their constituents or that the constituents of the other Senators wanted the Federal money for themselves, rather than economy, the Senator could act accordingly.

SUMMARY

To summarize, I believe I am correct when I state:

First. The facts show that the Senate is spending the money. The merits of the Senate's action may be subject to debate but the fact itself is not.

Second. It is probable that the Senate may reduce expenditures if the Senators believe the people who elect them prefer economy to projects for their own States.

Third. Memorializing by the legislative body of the Senator's State is a fairly strong indication to him of the wishes of the people of the State.

Fourth. The plan I have suggested will put it right up to the people themselves to take a clear-cut, honest stand either for real economy or for "economy, but—."

Fifth. The plan I have suggested may help and certainly cannot hurt efforts to achieve real economy.

"GRASS ROOTS" FOR ECONOMY

I mentioned earlier that the people themselves could act as "watchdogs of the Treasury" for forming "grass-roots-for-economy committees" for the items I have mentioned, at least for a beginning. It would be easy to establish such committees but I believe they are already functioning and it would only be necessary to advise them of and request them to take over this additional duty. I refer to the various committees already functioning in every State and community advocating the Hoover Report. Those committees could be kept informed of the Federal projects I have discussed and, in addition to exerting their influence on Federal Congressmen and Senators, they could also exert their influence upon their State governing bodies to memorialize Congress properly.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Let me again emphasize in conclusion that I am not saying expenditures made by the House are sound and proper. I do not want anyone to draw that conclusion simply because I have directed my remarks to the fact that Senate expenditures exceed House expenditures. My point is merely this: If too much money is being spent let us focus attention first on the body that is spending the most money, the Senate. If Senate expenditures can be reduced to the House level, then it may be possible to make still further reductions in the expenditures of both bodies.

WHY NOT TRY IT?

Perhaps the final argument in favor of the plan I have suggested is this: It will not cost one penny and it may save millions or billions of dollars. Why not try it and see?

FORWARD TO PEACE

Mr. TRIMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRIMBLE. Mr. Speaker, America is in one of the most critical periods of her history, perhaps the most critical period in her history, as a result of Russia's refusal to cooperate for peace. We find ourselves, therefore, confronted with a financial burden almost as great as that imposed by war as we inch forward in our efforts for peace.

Two things are necessary in these critical hours: First, America must be strong spiritually; second, she must be strong materially. If we lack either of these sustaining factors, the hopes for world peace are dim indeed.

Not long ago, I saw again a picture in my fifth grade history which I studied as a child. It showed a Pilgrim father with his musket on his shoulder, his Bible under his arm, with his wife on one side and his children on the other, wading through the snow of a New England village toward a small log church to worship. To me, that typified the spiritual awareness which our forefathers knew and exemplified the necessity for Divine guidance which they felt. If we in this day have lost that eagerness for guidance and that spiritual awareness, America has lost her strong right arm. If we have lost it, it is imperative that we regain it.

In the second place, and complementing spiritual awareness, is the strength of our own economy. It is necessary that we work and strive to prevent another depression. To do this will require the combined courage, cooperation, and common sense of all Americans.

In the great district which I am honored to represent northwest Arkansas, I believe we are laying out a pattern for the days that lie ahead. Our farmers have developed a fine diversified farm program centering around small grain, dairying, poultry, livestock, and the canning industry. Our farmers in the past 15 years have seen the benefits of electricity come to almost every farmstead through the efforts of the Rural Electrification Administration, and they are happy about it. They have embraced the soil-conservation program and are rebuilding the soil of their farms systematically and carefully.

We are a district of small businesses—a fine, upstanding, independent group who always look forward and are behind all the movements to develop our communities and surrounding farms. The people in our district—farmers, businessmen, laborers, and those in the professions alike—are patriotic, industrious, and God-fearing.

One of the greatest movements in our section, in particular, is the building of great flood control and hydro-electric dams. The White River and its tributaries traverse our district. Already Norfork Dam in Baxter County has been completed, and when all the generating units are ultimately installed, this great project will generate 328,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually. A few miles from this project, the great Bull Shoals Dam is under construction and practically 65 percent completed. When this dam shall have been completed and the generators installed, it will generate 1,528,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy annually. Table Rock Dam, just across the Arkansas line in Missouri, has been authorized by the Congress, and an initial appropriation is now pending in the Congress, looking toward the programing of it for early construction. When this dam is completed and its generating unit installed, it will generate 788,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually. The construction of this dam is assured.

There are four other dams in our Congressional district which are under consideration. Lone Rock in Searcy County has been authorized by the Congress for flood control, but it is being reconsidered by the Engineers for power also. I understand it will be favorably recommended to the Congress as both a flood-control and power project. When it is completed and all generators are installed, it will generate 144,000,000 kilowatt-hours annually. Also in Searcy County, Gilbert Dam is now under consideration and has been favorably reported by the Corps of Engineers as a flood-control and power project. When it is completed, it will generate 156,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually. In adjoining Van Buren County, I have asked the Corps of Engineers to restudy the Archey Fork project near Clinton with the hope that it, too, can be reported favorably to the Congress for construction as a flood-control and power project. If this is done, I am informed it will generate in the neighborhood of 75,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually. On the other side of our district in Benton County is the Beaver project, which has been approved by the district engineer and will be favorably reported to the Congress for approval as a flood-control and power project. When this dam is completed, it will generate 129,000,000 kilowatt-hours of power annually.

I shall do everything I possibly can to get Lone Rock approved as a power project and to secure the authorization for the Gilbert Dam, for the Beaver Dam, and for the Archey Fork Dam. When all these dams shall have been completed, it is easy to see the amount of electric energy we will have for disposal to the towns, cities, and farms of our district, and to the small industry which we hope to attract. In addition, the beautiful clear-water lakes which will be formed, as we know from our experience with Norfork, will make our section one of the garden spots of the whole country.

In addition to the construction of flood control and power projects, our district is in the forefront of the road-building program, which will insure better communication facilities between our rural communities. Without good roads, we cannot develop our rural sections properly. We are making great progress.

Another thing that we are doing in Arkansas, and especially in our district in northwest Arkansas, is to improve our school facilities. We are trying to see to it that every child in our district has an opportunity to attend a good school from the first grade through college.

Working together, we can achieve these things: A deeper sense of our spiritual responsibility; better education; all the electricity that is needed at prices that can be afforded; good roads. We are not going to fail in our quest for a strong economy at home, nor will we fail in our quest for a just and lasting peace throughout the world.

DEVELOPMENTS IN KOREA

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, developments in Korea, which unfortunately were not entirely foreseen by our Intelligence, constitute a real threat to world peace. The United Nation's resolution urging the combatants to cease and desist can apparently be implemented only by the United States. Whether we will have widespread moral support from other nations remains to be seen. Clearly, we will have to enforce our own decision to stop this unwarranted aggression.

Undoubtedly, southern Korea has been powerfully infiltrated by communism and that may account for the half-hearted, ineffective resistance of the defenders up to this time. Inadequate arms and equipment is another factor. There is some evidence that Russia has rendered substantial aid to the invaders.

We can supply the arms necessary to permit the Koreans to repel invasion but without the will to fight for and defend their country, these arms will have little effect. Perhaps the deadly Marxist fifth column has done its jobs so well that the will of the southern Korean people to resist has been overcome by propaganda. There is also a possibility that this attack is the forerunner of similar attacks elsewhere but I hope such fears are groundless.

Our Nation was left with no alternative but to oppose this sudden and unconscionable aggression. Thus the chain of appeasement which reaches back to the immediate postwar period is broken, and our country declares to the world that we are prepared to defend our free way of life against communism wherever the security of the Nation is threatened, wherever democratic rights are trampled.

It is the time, I think, for Americans to remain calm and free of hysteria. Let us have hope that the United Nations and all individual nations outside the iron curtain will stand with us. Above all, let us have faith in ourselves and be determined to stand by the decisions which have been made to check the further spread of the consuming fires of communism which are burning fiercely in so many parts of the world.

We must at this grave hour be prepared for any eventuality. While we hope and pray for peace, we must so gird our armed strength that it can be ready for instantaneous action, if needed, against the enemies of America and human decency.

Perhaps this episode will serve as a springboard for additional efforts to settle the fundamental problems relating to peace and war, infiltration, conspiracy, and subversion upon which our lasting world peace must ultimately rest. It is indeed later than we think.

LOBBYING AND PROPAGANDA

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced today in the House of Representatives a bill to prohibit Members of both branches of the Congress of the United States and employees and relatives of Members, during their tenure of office or employment, and for 2 years after their offices or positions terminate, from accepting more than actual traveling and hotel expenses for delivering personally or through another or by transcription, any of their speeches or other writings; from directly or indirectly accepting campaign aid from lobbying and propaganda agencies; prohibiting other persons, firms, or corporations from violating or conspiring to violate or aid, abet, or assist in the violation of this act; from permitting the franking privileges of Members of Congress to be used gratuitously or for pay by lobbyists and lobby and propaganda agencies; defining lobbying for the purposes of this act; and providing that any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of $10,000 and 10 years imprisonment, and shall also forthwith forfeit his right to his office or position, if he still retains same at the time of his conviction.

A fine of $10,000 and 10 years in prison was inspired by recent news items which disclosed that $10,000 was the all-time high figure ever paid to any Member of Congress for his claimed literary efforts.

The recent disclosures brought forth by the committee investigating lobbying activities locally and nationally shows the urgent necessity of such legislation. It is high time, I believe, for all Members of Congress and their employees to give all of their time and effort to their only real employer, the United States Government, instead of using their office and position to scab on the newspaper fraternity and other writers, and giving the reading public sometimes a very inferior brand of reading matter, and unwittingly, in their effort to make money, become the brazen and misguided tools of lobbyists and propaganda agencies.

I will discuss this matter more at length in the Appendix of today's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

AUTOMOBILES FOR AMPUTEES

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I rise to remind the House that the time expires for the leg amputees to apply for their automobiles on the 30th of June. The boys, therefore, who cannot receive those automobiles, will be the leg amputees who have been hospitalized the longest; the men who have been hospitalized since the time they were wounded during the war. I know that the House will be very glad to extend the time for another year. There are now, I think, some hundred and fifty veteran amputees who cannot secure their cars under the present authorization, because the appropriation, unfortunately, ran out. I am sure the House will not adjourn permanently without passing the necessary legislation to extend the time for appropriation of cars. At the most, only 500 in all, from the present date to June 1951, will come under the provisions of the legislation. This Congress has never in my recollection refused a matter of simple justice like this.

I enclose a copy of a letter and resolution sent to certain members of the Appropriations Committee:

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1950.

Hon. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS,
House of Representatives,
House Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MRS. ROGERS: Referring to our telephone conversation today in reference to House Joint Resolution 473, I enclose copies of my letters to Congressmen ALBERT THOMAS, ALBERT GORE, GEORGE W. ANDREWS, FRANCIS CASE, and JOHN PHILLIPS.

Sincerely yours,

MILES D. KENNEDY,
Director.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1950.

Hon. ALBERT THOMAS,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Independent Offices Appropriations, House Appropriations Committee, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: There now is pending before your subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House Joint Resolution 473, introduced by Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts, the purpose of which is to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to continue providing automobiles and other conveyances for certain disabled veterans and to provide funds therefor.

For your ready reference, I enclose copy of Resolution 85, adopted at the Miami, 1948, national convention of the American Legion, which is self-explanatory.

As I understand the situation, under legislation now in effect, these benefits were to expire on June 30, 1950, but unfortunately the funds allocated thereto were exhausted on or about April 30, 1950. As you know, there still are hundreds of disabled veterans in hospitals, as result of their wartime service, and in addition thereto, there are also hundreds of cases of veterans whose claims have not as yet been adjudicated in order to determine their entitlement to an automobile or other conveyance of the type in question. Actually, there are numerous cases in which the veteran's entitlement has been established but unfortunately, due to the lack of funds, they have been unable to avail themselves of the benefits intended by this legislation.

Hundreds of these men will not be discharged from their respective hospitals until after July 1, 1950, and as you can well appreciate, until they shall have been discharged and their claims adjudicated, they are not in position to apply, through channels, for these automobiles, etc.

In other words, we respectfully submit that a veteran should not be denied the opportunity to obtain an automobile or other conveyance due to the fact that he was not fortunate enough to be discharged or have his entitlement established prior to either June 30, 1950 (the date of expiration of the current legislation), or prior to April 30, 1950 (the date which we understand the fund became exhausted).

In view of the foregoing, and on behalf of the national organization of the American Legion, may I respectfully request your favorable consideration of House Joint Resolution 473.

Thanking you for your courtesy and cooperation in this matter, I am

Sincerely yours,

MILES D. KENNEDY,
Director.

(Copy to EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, Member of Congress.)

MIAMI, FLA., October 18–21, 1948.

Resolution 85

Resolution to extend time to apply for purchase of automobiles under Public Law 663

Whereas inasmuch as the time limit in which amputees may apply for the purchase of automobiles under Public Law 663 of the Seventy-ninth Congress has expired, and many of our veterans entitled to this benefit have been unable to apply therefor because they have not been granted a discharge from the service on account of being confined in hospitals; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the American Legion in national convention assembled at Miami, Fla., October 18–21, 1948, That the Congress of the United States be requested to so amend the present law as to make these benefits available to any veteran otherwise entitled thereto at any time within 1 year from the date of his discharge, or from the date of the contingency upon which entitlement is based, whichever is the later.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BIEMILLER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. DOLLIVER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech he recently made.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article on inflation, notwithstanding the fact that it will exceed two pages of the RECORD and is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $273.46.

Mr. DONDERO (at the request of Mr. KEATING) was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. LODGE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include extraneous material.

Mr. JAVITS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include certain extraneous matter.

Mr. McCULLOCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial from the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include excerpts from newspapers and letters.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 5002. An act to incorporate the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 3258. An act to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia;

S. 3527. An act to amend section 14 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended; and

S. 3776. An act to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended.

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill and joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 5002. An act to incorporate the Reserve Officers Association of the United States; and

H. J. Res. 492. Joint resolution making temporary appropriations for the fiscal year 1951, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, June 30, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1524. A letter from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill entitled "A bill to provide for a Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Armed Services.

1525. A letter from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill entitled "A bill to provide that personnel of the Reserve components of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States shall have common Federal appointments or enlistments as reserves in their respective services, to equalize disability benefits applicable to such personnel, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Armed Services.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. SABATH: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 673. Resolution rescinding the action of the House in passing House Joint Resolution 494; without amendment (Rept. No. 2397). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SABATH: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 643. Resolution to authorize the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries to investigate the recent explosion at South Amboy, N. J.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2398). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GARMATZ: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 7689. A bill to amend certain acts relating to the retired status of the Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; with amendment (Rept. No. 2399). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. Senate Concurrent Resolution 88. Concurrent resolution to print additional copies of the report of the Committee on the Judiciary on the immigration and naturalization systems of the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 2423). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. STANLEY: Committee on House Administration. House Resolution 494. Resolution providing for the employment of a secretary to the Sergeant at Arms; without amendment (Rept. No. 2424). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. House Resolution 624. Resolution to provide funds for the expenses of the investigations and studies authorized by House Resolution 617; without amendment (Rept. No. 2425). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. House Resolution 637. Resolution to provide funds for the Committee on the Judiciary; with amendment (Rept. No. 2426). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. Senate Joint Resolution 170. Joint resolution to provide for the transfer of the paintings The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and The Chasm of the Colorado from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior; without amendment (Rept. No. 2427). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. Senate Joint Resolution 171. Joint resolution transferring the plaster cast of the statue of George Washington from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution; without amendment (Rept. No. 2428). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. H. R. 8112. A bill to provide for the transfer to the States of the replicas of the State seals removed from the Chamber of the House of Representatives of the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 2429). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. House Resolution 484. Resolution authorizing the Clerk of the House of Representatives to transmit to the Abraham Lincoln Association at Springfield, Ill., copies of certain Abraham Lincoln documents; without amendment (Rept. No. 2430). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. H. R. 8958. A bill relating to the policing of the buildings and grounds of the Library of Congress; without amendment (Rept. No. 2431). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. S. 2348. An act to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 2432). Ordered to be printed.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. H. R. 8591. A bill to provide for the construction of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial at the site of old St. Louis, Mo., in general accordance with the plan approved by the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2433). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HART: Committee of conference. S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 2434). Ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 557. An act for the relief of the McCormick Engineering Co., and John E. Price, an individual doing business as the Okeechobee Construction Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2375). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1086. An act for the relief of the Dixie Margarine Co., a Tennessee corporation, of Memphis, Tenn.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2376). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2079. An act for the relief of Mrs. Lydia L. Smith; without amendment (Rept. No. 2377). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 661. A bill for the relief of Thomas A. Trulove, postmaster, and Nolen J. Salyards, assistant postmaster, at Inglewood, Calif.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2378). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1130. A bill for the relief of Hanna Mussbach; without amendment (Rept. No. 2379). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1611. A bill for the relief of Walter E. Miller; without amendment (Rept. No. 2380). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1616. A bill for the relief of S. L. Ayres & Co., Inc.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2381). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1618. A bill for the relief of Kenneth J. MacKenzie; with amendment (Rept. No. 2382). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DENTON: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1988. A bill for the relief of Leslie A. Fry; with amendment (Rept. No. 2383). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 2350. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Marion M. Martin; with amendment (Rept. No. 2384). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 3664. A bill for the relief of Bruce M. Stern; without amendment (Rept. No 2385). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE: Committee on the Judicary. H. R. 3919. A bill for the relief of John S. Steber; with amendment (Rept. No. 2386). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4045. A bill for the relief of Katherine L. Anderson, a civil-service employee, permanently injured through negligent treatment at the Army Advisory Group Station Hospital in Nanking, China; with amendment (Rept. No. 2387). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. JENNINGS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4142. A bill for the relief of Ralph D. Kinney; with amendment (Rept. No. 2388). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DENTON: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4221. A bill to provide for the adjudication of a certain tort claim of Patricia Joyce Dunn, a minor, against the United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 2389). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4832. A bill for the relief of Graphic Arts Corp. of Ohio; without amendment (Rept. No. 2390). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4989. A bill to provide for the payment of just compensation to John Ii Estate Ltd., a Hawaiian corporation, for the taking by the United States of private fishery rights in Pearl Harbor, Island of Oahu, T. H.; with amendment (Rept. No. 2391). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6020. A bill for the relief of Richard H. Sears; without amendment (Rept. No. 2392). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6052. A bill for the relief of John M. Vick; with amendment (Rept. No. 2393). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6885. A bill for the relief of E. Elmer Mynatt; with amendment (Rept. No. 2394). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DENTON: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7202. A bill for the relief of Alexander Newman; without amendment (Rept. No. 2395). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DENTON: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7810. A bill for the relief of M. S. Davis; without amendment (Rept. No. 2396). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1503. A bill for the relief of George Washington; with amendment (Rept. No. 2400). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1585. A bill for the relief of Leilah begum Alaoui Mullin; with amendment (Rept. No. 2401). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 3921. A bill for the relief of Nicholas G. Hadjipateras, Pipitsa N. Hadjipateras, and Costas N. Hadjipateras; with amendment (Rept. No. 2402). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4014. A bill for the relief of Maria Hoffman; with amendment (Rept. No. 2403). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4601. A bill for the relief of Jeannette Passayanni-Capodistria; with amendment (Rept. No. 2404). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FELLOWS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6578. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Gunnborg Janzon Hamilton; with amendment (Rept. No. 2405). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FELLOWS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6657. A bill for the relief of Georges Jules Louis Sauvage; with amendment (Rept. No. 2406). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6707. A bill for the relief of Sirius Proestopoulos; with amendment (Rept. No. 2407). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GOSSETT: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7613. A bill for the relief of Miyako Horikoshi and her minor daughter; with amendment (Rept. No. 2408). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FEIGHAN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8061. A bill for the relief of Yuki Sugimoto and her minor son; with amendment (Rept. No. 2409). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FELLOWS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8069. A bill for the relief of Michiko Kohga; with amendment (Rept. No. 2410). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GOSSETT: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8073. A bill for the relief of Kimiko Iso and her minor daughter, Midori; with amendment (Rept. No. 2411). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8134. A bill for the relief of Elona Schwietza; with amendment (Rept. No. 2412). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FEIGHAN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8153. A bill for the relief of Chiyoko Akashi; without amendment (Rept. No. 2413). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8284. A bill for the relief of Nicolae G. Caranfil and his family; without amendment (Rept. No. 2414). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FELLOWS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8450. A bill for the relief of Raief Neahem, Iffef Neahem, and Ihsen Neahem; with amendment (Rept. No. 2415). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8584. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Tokie Sato Keating, Terry Yoichi Keating, and Betty Jean Keating; with amendment (Rept. No. 2416). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8759. A bill for the relief of Rev. Andrew Chai Kyung Whang; with amendment (Rept. No. 2417). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8741. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Nobuko Yonashiro Martin and Gerald Philip Martin; without amendment (Rept. No. 2418). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8751. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Yoshiko Ogiso Peterson; without amendment (Rept. No. 2419). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GOSSETT: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8794. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Eiko Yoshizawa Lendrum and Charles Robert Lendrum, Jr.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2420). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committtee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8824. A bill for the relief of Tokuko Murayama; without amendment (Rept. No. 2421). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8956. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Claude Morita and Rodney Morita; without amendment (Rept. No. 2422). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOUGHTON:

H. R. 8992. A bill to eliminate the additional internal revenue taxes on coconut oil coming from the trust territory of the Pacific islands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GREEN:

H. R. 8993. A bill relating to the classification of registration officers in the Veterans' Administration; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. McGUIRE:

H. R. 8994. A bill relating to the classification of registration officers in the Veterans' Administration; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. MACK of Washington:

H. R. 8995. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, as amended, by providing that employees engaged in forestry or lumbering operations shall not be exempt from the wage and hour provisions of such act; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. MORTON:

H. R. 8996. A bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act to eliminate union-shop elections required by such act; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. YOUNG:

H. R. 8997. A bill to amend section 22 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code to exclude from the gross income of employees the value of meals and living quarters furnished to them for the convenience of the employer; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KEOGH:

H. R. 8998. A bill amending section 34 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. STOCKMAN:

H. R. 8999. A bill to designate the lake created in the States of Oregon and Washington by the McNary lock and dam as Lake Umatilla; to the Committee on Public Works.

By Mr. WHITE of Idaho:

H. R. 9000. A bill to assist and promote the development of the mineral resources located within the national forests of the United States, authorizing the construction of roads by the Secretary of Agriculture for the use of the owners or operators of mining properties, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. O'SULLIVAN:

H. R. 9001. A bill to prohibit Members of both branches of the Congress of the United States and employees and relatives of Members, during their tenure of office or employment, and for 2 years after their offices or positions terminate, from accepting more than actual traveling and hotel expenses for delivering personally or through another, or by transcription, any of their speeches or other writings; from directly or indirectly accepting campaign aid from lobbying and propaganda agencies; prohibiting other persons, firms, or corporations from violating or conspiring to violate or aid, abet, or assist in the violation of this act; from permitting the franking privileges of Members of Congress to be used gratuitously or for pay by lobbyists and lobby and propaganda agencies; defining lobbying for the purposes of this act; and providing for penalties for the violation thereof; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RICHARDS:

H. R. 9002. A bill to make certain increases in the annuities of annuitants under the Foreign Service retirement and disability system in view of the increased cost of living; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. TEAGUE:

H. R. 9003. A bill to extend the provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 to those members of the military and naval forces who are actively engaged in combat with the Communist elements of the Korean Government and who are not entitled to the benefits of the afore-mentioned act; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

By Mr. WICKERSHAM:

H. J. Res. 495. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim April 12 of each year Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the thirty-first President on the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SABATH:

H. J. Res. 496. Joint resolution to permit articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the International Food Exposition, Inc., Chicago, Ill., to be admitted without payment of tariff, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DOUGHTON:

H. J. Res. 497. Joint resolution excluding from gross estate of a nonresident alien works of art on loan to the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DAVENPORT:

H. J. Res. 498. Joint resolution designating the third Sunday in September of each year as National Family Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SADOWSKI:

H. J. Res. 499. Joint resolution to authorize the issuance of a stamp to commemorate the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Detroit, Mich.; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. CLEMENTE:

H. Con. Res. 228. Concurrent resolution providing for the return to the United States of ships delivered to Russia under the Lend Lease Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GORSKI:

H. Con. Res. 229. Concurrent resolution relating to admission of certain representatives of the press to the Senate and House press galleries and to White House and departmental press conferences; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. FULTON:

H. Con. Res. 230. Concurrent resolution to establish the means for obtaining a valid expression of the will of the people of China and Formosa; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. JAVITS:

H. Con. Res. 231. Concurrent resolution to establish the means for obtaining a valid expression of the will of the people of China and Formosa; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CORBETT:

H. Con. Res. 232. Concurrent resolution to establish the means for obtaining a valid expression of the will of the people of China and Formosa; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MILES:

H. Res. 686. Resolution rescinding the action of the House in passing House Joint Resolution 494; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HAYS of Ohio:

H. Res. 687. Resolution authorizing an increase of $300 in the stationery allowance for each Representative, Delegate, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico for the second session of the Eighty-first Congress; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mr. PETERSON:

H. Res. 688. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 8221, a bill to encourage the conservation and development of the mineral resources of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. REED of New York:

H. Res. 689. Resolution to make a study and investigation of social-security programs; to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. GOODWIN:

H. R. 9004. A bill for the relief of Chester A. Macomber; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HAGEN:

H. R. 9005. A bill for the relief of Ella Henriette Nielsine Bonnerup; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HOPE:

H. R. 9006. A bill for the relief of Karl Chimani and Ada Chimani; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KENNEDY:

H. R. 9007. A bill for the relief of Eugene M. Doran; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KENNEDY (by request):

H. R. 9008. A bill to admit Luigi Morelli to the United States for permanent residence; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LYNCH:

H. R. 9009. A bill for the relief of Aba Abysz Warszawczyk; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MILLER of Nebraska:

H. R. 9010. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Jessie B. Fradeneck, Cynthia Blair Fradeneck, and Donna Jean Fradeneck; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROOSEVELT:

H. R. 9011. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Emi Yasuda and her minor son, Keichiro Yasuda; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

H. R. 9012. A bill for the relief of Masako Sato; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mrs. ST. GEORGE:

H. R. 9013. A bill for the relief of Anna Leonard, an American citizen, covering damages by American troops to her property located in Salzburg, Austria; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2232. By Mr. GOODWIN: Memorial of the Massachusetts Legislature, relative to the importance of stockpiling worsted fabrics instead of raw wool; to the Committee on Armed Services.

2233. Also, memorial of the Massachusetts Legislature, relative to including in the rivers and harbors bill the necessary funds to dredge Wellfleet Harbor; to the Committee on Public Works.

2234. By Mr. HESELTON: Resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, memorializing Congress to take immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

2235. By the SPEAKER: Petition of Serge Sarkis Besoyan, chairman, American-Armenian Reparations Commission, Washington, D. C., requesting that action be taken to have the Government of Turkey recognize the doctrine of the right of expatriation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2236. Also, petition of Rafael Arjona-Siaca, San Juan, P. R., relative to Senate bill 3336, a bill to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico; to the Committee on Public Lands.

SENATE

FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1950

(Legislative day of Wednesday, June 7, 1950)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, bowing for a hallowed moment at this shrine of Thy grace, we acknowledge before Thee that our lives are so often as restless pools; we are disturbed by the social turmoil of our times, burdened by many anxieties, tempted to cynicism by human cruelty and perversity, often disheartened by human folly which seems to profit so little by bitter reaping. We would lay our problems and tasks before Thee, not to escape them but praying for Thy empowering; so that with strength and courage we may carry them with a new gallantry. In a divided and violent world, may we be among those whom the generations to come shall call blessed, because our record, even when rampant evil compels us to unsheath a clean sword, shall write our names among today's peacemakers. We ask it in the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

DESIGNATION OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., June 30, 1950.

To the Senate:

Being temporarily absent from the Senate, I appoint Hon. CARL HAYDEN, a Senator from the State of Arizona, to perform the duties of the Chair during my absence.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
President pro tempore.

Thereupon, Mr. HAYDEN took the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. MCFARLAND, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, June 29, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, and he announced that on June 29, 1950, the President had approved and signed the following acts:

S. 1637. An act for the relief of Marie Henriette de Bruyn;

S. 2510. An act to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to issue to Anson Harold Pease, a Crow allottee, a patent in fee to certain lands;

S. 2511. An act for the relief of Dr. John R. Portaria;

S. 2551. An act to authorize the sale of certain allotted land on the Pine Ridge Reservation, S. Dak.;

S. 2552. An act to authorize the sale of certain allotted land on the Pine Ridge Reservation, S. Dak.;

S. 2714. An act for the relief of Thomas Pfeiffer;

S. 3029. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to Wilbur J. Scott;

S. 3128. An act to authorize the sale of certain allotted inherited land on the Winnebago Reservation, Nebr.;

S. 3130. An act to authorize the sale of certain allotted inherited land on the Winnebago Reservation, Nebr.; and

S. 3771. An act to provide transportation on Canadian vessels between Skagway, Alaska, and other points in Alaska, between Haines, Alaska, and other points in Alaska, and between Hyder, Alaska, and other points in Alaska or the continental United States, either directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the transportation.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 8112. An act to provide for the transfer to the States of the replicas of the State seals removed from the Chamber of the House of Representatives of the United States;

H. R. 8920. An act to reduce excise taxes, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8958. An act relating to the policing of the buildings and grounds of the Library of Congress; and

H. J. Res. 453. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair, to be held at Chicago, Ill., August 7 through 20, 1950.

AMENDMENT OF MUTUAL DEFENSE ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1949

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3809) to amend the National Defense Assistance Act of 1949.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the unanimous-consent agreement entered into yesterday, the junior Senator from Washington is recognized.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Washington in speaking this morning on Senate bill 3809 will use as his text:

Now, Mr. President, we must be realistic.

This provocative phrase is to be found on page 9119 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 23, 1950, where it was employed by the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] on the day, a week ago, when S. 3809 became the unfinished business of the Senate.

Mr. President, during the last 3 months of 1944 the junior Senator from Washington was assigned, as a soldier, to the Allied Control Commission with headquarters at Brindisi, Italy, on the shores of the Adriatic Sea. These months were cold, cheerless, and miserably dreary, but they were filled with conversations which predicted, in remarkably accurate fashion, the pattern of things to come.

A Russian mission, consisting of eight officers under the command of Vishinsky, was attached to that Allied Control Commission. These were the men who told us of what the Soviet had in mind for the years ahead.

I am now reminded, Mr. President, as I have been previously on innumerable occasions, of what these Russians said their Government intended to do. In answer to our questions concerning the likelihood of Russia taking part in the war in the Pacific we were told that after Russia had established itself in Europe Russia did not intend to be foreclosed from establishing itself in the Pacific. The Russians used to tell us that nobody, including the United States of America, could keep Russia from participating in the Pacific war, and from establishing her influence in that area when the war was over.

Nineteen forty-four, Mr. President, was a period during which our political leaders were leaning over backwards through UNRRA and every other device, to prevail upon Russia to agree to a course of action which Russia was going to follow whether the United States gave her anything, or promised her anything, or not. I knew of no soldier in the war—and most of them like myself had come from civilian ranks—who believed that Russia's might would be required to reach a decision in the Pacific. I knew of few in political life who were not of the opinion that Russia must be prevailed upon to enter the conflict in the Pacific. We who knew the Russians in a military way understood what Russia intended to do. Those in our country who had dealings with Russia in a political way either did not comprehend Russia's intentions, or history may well prove to us that they supported those intentions.

The past speaks plainly for itself, Mr. President, and there is no need presently to belabor the monumental mistakes which have been made in recent years. Our concern now is to think of the present and of the future. We are faced today with the continuing presence and influence of Russia in the Pacific and in Europe. We are confronted with an actual threat of war in the Pacific, where our defenses are extraordinarily limited, and with a threat of possible war in Europe where our defenses, while inadequate, are being established and strengthened. The pending bill, S. 3809, has been designed to create more rapidly a western European defense system which can retard and perhaps contain any act of aggression which might come from the east.

While many or perhaps most of us are preoccupied with news from Korea, my thinking is largely devoted to the North Atlantic area and to the Middle East. Though I do not pose as a military authority, nor am I prepared to believe that a world conflagration is about to break out, I think it to be a distinct possibility that the outbreak of actual warfare in Korea is a logical feint which could logically be followed some uncertain time from now by a major attack in western Europe or the Middle East. It is on this premise that I wish to expose the pending bill to criticism, not because of what it proposes but because of what it, and partly of necessity, leaves undone.

Every Senator, Mr. President, has the right to raise questions about Senate bill 3809, which would extend the mutual assistance defense program, which was first undertaken last year, and every Senator ought to exercise that right. Those who studied the question initially, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate Committee on Armed Services, have offered their best recommendations to the Senate, but I know of no member of either committee who assumes that he and he alone is qualified to know what ought to be undertaken and done. There ought to be a willingness on the part of all of us to admit that there is tragically little we know about what is really going on in the world these days. On last Friday the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], explained S. 3809 to the Senate and urged the Senate promptly to approve its proposals. I thought the Senator's presentation was a competent one in what it said, but it left many things unsaid and it said at least one thing which was utterly meaningless within the hours of the time it was offered. On page 9121 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 23d, the Senator from Texas made this observation:

One final word about South Korea. There we have a relatively new democratic state flanked on the north by the Soviet-dominated country of North Korea. The people of Asia are watching this situation very carefully to see whether the new Republic can stay alive and maintain its free government. Last July our occupation forces withdrew and the people of South Korea must now be able to protect themselves. Under this bill, the bill which is now the pending business, the President can extend Korea the kind of military aid it needs to preserve internal security and to deter possible aggression from the north.

The Senator from Texas made this sincere and well-intentioned observation last Friday. On Saturday, the next day, war broke out in Korea. How this came about in such a totally unexpected fashion I do not know, but I think we of this Congress, and everybody in America, ought to know, and I think the senior Senator from Texas and every other Senator close to the administration ought to tell us in minute detail just as soon as they can.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. Because of a limitation of time, the Senator from Washington would prefer to finish his statement.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I have before me two copies of the magazine called Time. The first is its issue of June 5, from which I wish to read only several paragraphs under the section entitled "Foreign News." I read:

Most observers now rate the 100,000-man South Korean Army as the best of its size in Asia. Its fast-moving columns have mopped up all but a few of the Communist guerrilla bands. And no one now believes that the Russian-trained North Korean Army could pull off a quick, successful invasion of the south without heavy reinforcements. Said a Korean private manning a foxhole along the thirty-eighth parallel last week—

Parenthetically, a private in a foxhole telling us of things to come which apparently this country was not prepared to know—

"We expect war to come. But we aren't afraid. For every round they send over, we'll send two back."

Only lack of air power might tip the scales against the South. The Communists' North Korean air force has been estimated to have anywhere from 50 to 200 planes. The smaller figure is probably more nearly correct. The planes include Russian Yak fighters and light bombers. South Korea has only 10 T–6 trainers and some Cub liaison planes; the United States has shown no interest in furnishing planes for the seventy-odd South Korean pilots who are ready for fast fighter training.

Out of the issue of Time of July 3, which date has not yet been reached, I read the following paragraph:

Both the United States and Russia withdrew their troops—

Parenthetically, this refers to some months ago—

Both the United States and Russia withdrew their troops from Korea. Both proceeded to train local armies. The Communist Army in the north was known to be at least 95,000 strong, to be equipped with heavy artillery tanks, and planes. The United States-trained army in the South, numerically about equal to the Northern force, had lately begun to look good to its United States advisers (Time, June 5). But it had virtually no military planes or tanks. Presumably somebody had thought that none would be needed.

Mr. President, during the several days of our debate Senators have pled with other Senators that we raise no questions concerning mistakes of the past. They have said this is a time for action and not for recriminations. This is a time, they say, to do but not to question.

If these Senators are talking about the wrong decisions which were made at Yalta and Potsdam and in other strange places throughout the world in recent years, the Senator from Washington is willing to agree that there is no time at the moment for discussing these mistakes and for establishing where the guilt ought to lie. But I hope no Senator will rise to suggest that we ought not to critically examine each step which resulted in an outbreak of war in Korea, which as far as the Senate and the Congress are concerned, was expected by no one.

Parenthetically, back in the early part of June an ordinary private in a foxhole in southern Korea said, "Sure, war is just around the corner, and we, the Koreans, are ready for it." But no one in the Senate was ready for it.

Mr. President and Members of the Senate, and men, women, and children of the United States of America, let me say this, though I have no pride of authorship in it, that if war can break out in Korea on an astonished America it can break out anywhere. If our intelligence cannot anticipate the actions of enemy forces in a narrow corridor like Korea, we can never be expected to be ready and prepared to resist aggression which might break out in larger areas of the world, without our knowing anything about it. If we expect to live in the future, we had better begin now to understand what is going on in the world, with particular reference to a tiny, isolated outpost like Korea.

Were I to assume, Mr. President, that our military intelligence did not know that the northern Koreans were mounting an attack, I would be forced to state to the Nation that we do not possess an intelligence service worthy of the name. If I truly believed that we possessed no intelligence service, I would be forced to believe that we would continue to be at the mercy of an enemy who would always be free to launch his attacks against us when and where he pleased.

I should like any Senator, be he a devotee or advocate of the administration or not, to stand up and, if he can do so, tell the Senator from Washington that his premise is incorrect.

Mr. President, to my mind the American people are not stupid. In my opinion, they are intelligent. I think they can always learn. They know, beyond question, that somebody or some people have recently betrayed their trust. How else could this feeling be expressed? A logical mind will say that if we have the might and the ability to repel an invader from northern Korea, we ought to have been prepared to stop that invader before he crossed the thirty-eighth parallel.

Of course, Mr. President, I can fully understand the desire on the part of some to put this bill, S. 3809, through the Senate in a hurry, in order that rational and needed and simple American questions shall not be raised.

I can only guess, Mr. President, but the information at our disposal justifies this guess. I take for granted that our intelligence service did know that the northern Koreans had been mounting an attack for weeks. I further assume that this knowledge was made available to people in high places here in Washington, D. C. These persons ought to be held accountable by the Congress and by the Nation for what they did not prepare our Nation to do in keeping the northern invader from crossing the thirty-eighth parallel.

The minority leader, the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] saw me not very many minutes before the Senate convened this morning, and said, "Senator, will you speak from my desk, because I have been invited to the White House, presumably to talk about the Korean situation." My response was, "Senator WHERRY, you are to be congratulated. All of us in the Senate are happy to know that you are going to a place from which conceivably you may get some information which the Senate needs and wants, but Senator WHERRY, do not become puffed up about it at the minute. Look at your calendar. You are being invited to the White House, as the minority leader of the Senate, on Friday, June 30, when war broke out on Saturday June 24. It is better to get information late than never. Get what you can and bring it back to the floor of the Senate, but do not lose sight of the fact that you, as the minority leader, along with the majority leader and other important Senators, because of their positions on the Armed Services Committee and the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, ought to have been invited last Saturday to stay, if necessary, to live in the White House, until you and they were prepared to come back to the floor of the Senate and advise your colleagues what reasonable, rational, legitimate steps should be taken in an effort to win this completely surprising war, which broke out a week ago in Korea."

Mr. President, the time is here when, if all of us wish to live in the future—and even if some of us, as Senators, do not care to live—we had better not forget we are representing 150,000,000 Americans, and if in their name we wish to live in the future, we had better begin to ask some questions now. One of the reasons why the Senator from Washington voted "present" rather than "yea" when the Senate committee reported S. 3809 to the Senate, was that he might ask some reasonable questions as a free agent. To my mind the greatest weakness America has had in recent years is that questions of a proper character have all too often been resisted and resented by the proponents of foreign-aid programs, military or economic. In light of my own four brief years in this Senate, it has seemed to me that the chief ambition of many a chairman, including some on my own side of the aisle, has been to secure a unanimous-committee vote which in itself would tend to restrict and curtail questions which arise in the minds of other Senators who were and are or ought to be worried and concerned.

The Senator from Washington is going to raise one of several questions, and do it now. On Wednesday the Senate administration leaders pressed for an agreement to vote on S. 3809. They said its immediate passage was important to the requirements of the hour. Today is Friday. Those Senators were saying on Wednesday: "It is no longer the time to talk. We want action. Let us pass this bill." They said its immediate passage was important to the requirements of the hour. They spoke as though the pending legislation would promptly end the war in Korea if only it were passed.

Let me say to those who made such statements, and to every other American, that S. 3809 deals with action to come, and not with results today. If, for example, we are to be seriously engaged in Korea—and I do not know, as one Senator, how seriously we are engaged, because up to date, after a week of debate, we have available to us only what we read in the newspapers—if we are to be seriously engaged in Korea, the passage of S. 3809, as the bill is related to Korea, is as meaningless and futile an instrument as the Senator from Washington has ever seen.

On last Friday the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] said:

> Under this bill the President can extend Korea the kind of military aid it needs to preserve internal security and to deter possible aggression from the north.

I ask any man who thinks if he has ever heard a better definition of futility than this sentence? How can S. 3809 deter the aggression from the north when that aggression has already gushed itself all over a startled world?

Senate bill 3809 provides $16,000,000 for South Korea and the Philippines. This meager sum was recommended in an effort to deter a possible evil which is before us today as a living evil and fact. Has any Senator, in the light of a situation which became totally different on Saturday from what it was the day before when the Senator from Texas urged approval of the bill, offered an amendment to provide adequate means to the southern Koreans to repel the invader? As yet no single Senator, to my mind, has even discussed the question. All we have been urged to do is to pass a bill to meet conditions which are completely dissimilar from what they were when it was brought up for consideration several short days ago.

Mr. President and Members of the Senate, if the appropriate committees of the Senate have even gathered to explore the need and reasons for extending additional aid to southern Korea the Senator from Washington has not been so advised, and in his own right he is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. For the better part of a week the Senator from Washington, because he is the "low man," to use an American slang expression, "on the totem pole" of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has been sitting quietly in hope and in anticipation that his elders would rise to discuss the problem of Korea against the facts which have developed since last Saturday. The Senator from Washington, in the absence of having had an opportunity to listen to such a discussion or to consider an amendment which some Senator might have offered but did not, will probably this afternoon offer a simple amendment. It will read like this:

> Delete from S. 3809 all of the benefits intended for Korea, with instructions to return those recommendations to the appropriate standing committees of the Senate in order that those committees might immediately call into session, executive or otherwise, those best qualified in our military and diplomatic and executive offices, to gain from them factual information to cover what we ought to do in the Senate really to help southern Korea.

When I have mentioned it quietly to some of my colleagues, they have been very frank in their response, one or two of them, and have said, "Senator, the submission of such an amendment might be misunderstood by the American people. They might conceive it to be a desire on the part of an individual Senator not to be of material assistance to Korea." Again my response to such observations would be, to use slang, "Don't be crazy and don't be silly." The American people can read and understand just as well as can the junior Senator from Washington. Ninety-nine and nine-tenths percent of the American people will be far ahead of some of us in understanding that if $16,000,000 for Korea and the Philippines was an adequate or reasonable sum before war broke out, it is a totally inadequate and meaningless sum the day after war broke out. Expressing only my own feeling, I say that if such an amendment is offered and accepted, the appropriate committees of the Senate will have returned an authorization recommendation to the Senate, and an appropriation, in adequate size, will have been secured before the Appropriations Committe will ever have returned their recommendations against S. 3809 to the floor of the Senate.

If we want to help Korea, if we are really in a jackpot in that part of the world, if we are serious in what we constantly say as to the necessity of our helping the Koreans, then, to use again the words of the distinguished Senator from Texas, "Let us be realistic," and let us not approve and pass an authorization for the benefit of Korea which has no substance and no meaning, and when all it includes are things which are misleading. At least this is a day in which I think a Senator ought to speak as strongly as he can, because I have something else to say about Korea and the military-aid program.

Last October $27,640,000 was made available for assistance to Korea, Iran, and the Philippines. Korea's share of this sum was a little more than $10,000,000. This sum was appropriated early in October of 1949. Can any Senator tell us what portion of the $10,000,000 has actually been employed in Korea in recent months? During the days of the last week when I have listened as patiently as I could to the debate, I heard the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] venture a guess. His guess was that based on the information he had received, only $200 out of the actual amount of $10,300,000 actually appropriated to Korea had been translated into action.

The situation is even worse than that, Mr. President, from my point of view. I have had no success in trying to ascertain accurately what we have been doing for Korea. I have tried to find out. The State Department has related to me that the amount of money that went to Korea was top-drawer secret information. They told me also that the amount of material contracted for Korea was top secret. They went on to state that the amount of matériel actually shipped to Korea since the appropriation was made available last October was top secret. In fact, the State Department has told me within the last several days that everything about anything which has thus far been done in South Korea is top secret.

Sometimes, Mr. President, on the basis of such information as this I am constrained to say, for I resent it deeply as a Member of this body and as an American, that the Senate of the United States is on occasion the least well-informed body on the face of the earth. We are more often asked to do what we do not understand, we are more often asked to take action when the facts are not before us, than was any association I have ever been a part of in my life.

Let any Senator stand up and tell me that I am wrong about that. However, no Senator can rise and make such a statement until he can tell all Senators how much has been done, and in what direction, for Korea, where war broke out unexpectedly last Saturday, although Time magazine went on to relate the story of a little guy in a foxhole who said—according to the June 5 issue of Time magazine: "We know that war is coming, we people who will fight it."

Mr. President, the best information I have been able to unearth is that very little defense material has been shipped to Korea. A fair guess—this is my guess, and it is far different from the guess made the other day by the Senator from Ohio; but, although there is a difference between our guesses, I think both of us are doing the best we can with the material available, which is very meager—a fair guess is that the value of the defense material which has actually been received by South Korea up to this time is about 10 cents on the dollar, in the case of the $10,300,000 appropriated and earmarked for Korea. Certainly it must be that more than 10 percent has been ordered or contracted for, but probably it has not yet been shipped. Is it not a reasonable question to ask, Mr. President, and to ask it of every Senator on both sides of the aisle: Why has so little been sent so late to South Korea, when the intention of the Congress months ago was to help Korea, and to do it then?

Mr. President, in October, when we approved an appropriation of $10,300,000 for South Korea, the Senate of the United States said to the world in effect, "The action, which we have just taken, is taken on our assumption that it will be translated into fact." Our assumption was that the money would have been used months ago to do what the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] said on last Friday the pending bill is intended to do—namely, to deter aggression.

If we have not complied with the promises made to South Korea, months ago, how can anyone maintain that the immediate passage of Senate bill 3809 will be of constructive and immediate benefit and assistance to South Korea? If we have spent approximately $1,000,000 of the $10,300,000 made available last October to Korea, then we had more than $9,000,000 available for use yesterday and the day before and will have tomorrow for Korea. If I am not mistaken, because of a joint resolution which was passed yesterday by this body, nonexpended funds of all kinds can be employed by the Government through July 31; or, at least, the joint resolution gives that authority. Korea is included under that joint resolution. That joint resolution by inference includes $50,000,000 which could be used for economic restoration in Korea. What have we been doing in recent months, Mr. President, when we have not used the economic aid made available by the Congress for the benefit of Korea? We used pitifully few dollars to try to prevent the outbreak of war which burst forth like a skyrocket last Saturday.

Mr. President, who is responsible for the neglect of the recent past? I do not know. I wish I might have been among those invited to the White House this morning or yesterday or the day before, so that I could say to the President of the United States, with all respect, in this particular instance: "Mr. President, tell us how we missed the boat, in order that we can advise the American people why we missed the boat. Let us admit our mistakes, in order to bring about the unity which you and your majority leader, the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois, and half a dozen Senators on this side of the aisle, and other Senators on both sides of the aisle have said in recent days we must have. They have said, 'Let us arise in support of the President.'"

Mr. President, if I had been there, I would have said to the President of the United States, "Of course we want to help you. This is our country, as well as yours; it belongs to all of us jointly. But in heaven's name, start telling the American people the truth. They can stand it. If any heads need to roll, if those who cannot anticipate the requirements of today and tomorrow and thereafter are in positions of high authority, tell us who they are, and get rid of them. Then the American people will support you, Mr. President, and my political party will begin to have some respect for you."

As war broke out last Saturday in Korea, some of those in authority must have known for months that such a war was likely. We would better serve the best interests of ourselves and of Korea and of humanity by understanding the reasons for this neglect, before providing for additional aid. It was not necessary to manufacture last year the equipment and the materials which were intended for Korea under the military assistance program of last year. Let any Senator who will, rise and say that it was necessary to make those materials then. On the contrary, we did not have to tool up new factories or hire new personnel and train them. Instead, all we had to do was to use what was already available. It was not necessary to have new equipment and materials manufactured or produced, because at least the Congress understood that such materials and equipment were to come out of surplus. Let anyone who has any doubt of that read the hearings. If what I have just said was not the fact, let someone in authority stand up and tell us what the fact was. If that was the fact, let someone in authority stand up and explain the incredible neglect and delay.

Mr. President, let me say parenthetically that despite that situation, today we are being asked to vote this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the arms-program bill. Why are we to vote at 2 o'clock on Friday? The bill is to be voted on today only because some Senators have opposed the persistent urgings of other Senators that the vote be taken on Monday or on Tuesday. In fact, some of us, Mr. President, some of us who are not satisfied this afternoon, did the best we could to stall off a vote as long as possible. Certainly it should be put off a great deal longer than 2 o'clock this afternoon, even though we are parties to the agreement to have the Senate take action at that time on a measure we do not understand, because if we in this body take our time and demand the answers to questions such as those I am raising this afternoon, at least the vast majority of the American people will have an opportunity to understand whether they may be faced with death in perhaps a remarkably short time.

Because of what someone did not do, because of a failure to forward equipment, materials, and supplies to southern Koreans, today the world stands on the brink of a possible catastrophe for all mankind. The President of the United States is having a meeting at this time, I suppose, in the White House. Certainly we compliment him and all those in attendance at that meeting for gathering to talk about the situation; but what are they talking about? One of the possibilities is that the conflict in southern Korea cannot be stopped. It is likely to start to spread. Because we did not stop what we had an opportunity to stop, before the outbreak of war last Saturday, perhaps now, as a result of what we did not do, we have started mankind moving down a road which quickly will lead back to the Dark Ages—where humanity will go without question, in my judgment, should war, whatever the reasons for it, ever come to this great land of ours and to the world.

Yet, Mr. President, we have been urged not to ask questions. Cannot we now begin to understand that if some of us had asked these sensible questions some months ago, probably there would be no war in southern Korea today? To my mind, the matter is just about as simple as that. If we had known, some months ago, and if we had required that what we had agreed should be a policy was carried out, no one can persuade me that war would have broken out in South Korea last Saturday. Mr. President, a great many people think this is a time for flag waving and for beating the drums and for martial music. However, I think this is a time for thought which will lead to action which is intelligent and premeditated and planned for, and about which all of us can understand what is going to be undertaken.

Before I ever vote again, Mr. President, for any military-aid appropriation to provide assistance to anyone, anywhere, I am first going to determine when that assistance will be made available.

In criticizing those in this body who resent questions being raised, the Senator from Washington is criticizing himself—and most deeply—for having failed to raise questions, not today, but in the past. The Senator from Washington is as guilty of this neglect as is every other Member of this body. Even from hindsight we ought to shudder from shame.

Mr. President, I wish now to address myself to the over-all problem and the procedures which are defined and recommended in Senate bill 3809. My overriding criticism of the bill is that its proponents are inclined to oversell their product. To my mind the bill offers a degree of hope and protection to us in America and to our friends around the world, particularly in the North Atlantic area, which simply does not presently exist. I think there are many fine proposals included within Senate bill 3809 but those proposals are completely inadequate to the assignment which faces America if we are attempting—I do not know exactly what we are attempting to do—but I shall stand on the assumption that we are attempting so to solidify and coordinate the strength of the free world so as to win a war against the forces of communism, should we be required to resort to a conflict of arms. If this is our intention—and certainly I believe it is—we ought to acknowledge, indeed, we must acknowledge, our shortcomings and seek more and better ways through which to prepare ourselves for the future.

The Senator from Washington, in support of his criticism, will call as his witnesses the maps of Europe and of the Middle East, which every Senator can view as they now hang in the Senate Chamber. I ought to say, without criticism implied or direct of anyone, that a few days ago the Senator from Washington requested that such maps be hung on the wall, where they could be read and understood and meditated upon by Senators, by members of the staffs, by members of the press, and by members of the public. He thought those maps should be thus displayed, because of his conviction that four out of five of us have not taken the time to think of the weaknesses which are obviously inherent in the Senate bill 3809. In recent days and months, in fact, I have had similar maps in my office, through which I try to understand the world in which I live, in the hope that I shall have a chance to live, if there is a world of tomorrow.

The other witnesses of the junior Senator from Washington are the committee report which accompanied House bill 5895, in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress, the report which accompanies Senate bill 3809, the statement offered by the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Friday, June 23, and certain comments by and about Nicholas Lenin, which point out, to my mind, the nature of the problem which confronts the world.

The Senator from Washington believes that today the masters of the Kremlin are simply acting as the disciples and followers of Nicholas Lenin, whose life was dedicated to launching a world revolution. As Nicholas Lenin, realistic opportunist that he was, and alert strategist—I doubt whether the world has ever known a better—recognized in World War I and its attendant confusion an opportunity, unparalleled as it was unexpected, to launch a world revolution, so the present leaders of the Soviet Union seek to take advantage of and to capitalize on the confusion and destruction and suffering which resulted from World War II. Where Lenin was unsuccessful—he died too soon—in achieving his evil ambition, Stalin hopes to be successful; and he may live long enough to be more successful than was his predecessor. The characteristics of the present Russian rulers are no different and no less determined than were those possessed by Nicholas Lenin and his kind only a few years ago. Before Lenin there was Karl Marx, Engles, and Bebel, the doctrinaires. Lenin followed them to apply their doctrine with fire and sword, first to Russia, and then in Spain, and in the entire world. As Marx directed against capitalism the weapon of criticism, Lenin employed the criticism of destructive weapons. Lenin had the same genius for making history that Marx had for explaining history. Stalin and his kind today are the followers, not of Marx, but of Lenin.

History tells me that Nicholas Lenin was the first to make communism a religion. Karl Marx was its divinity, Das Kapital and the Communist Manifesto, its inspired writings—its bible; and he, Nicholas Lenin, was its master missionary. "We are rock-ribbed Marxists," was his unvarying credo. On this human trilogy a faith was founded and propagated which, in its psychological reactions, supplied an earth-born substitute for that natural instinct and need which humanity feels for a divine revelation.

In the Times-Herald of this morning I read that the distinguished majority leader, the senior Senator from Illinois, was quoted as saying "We are going to pass the bill at 2 o'clock this afternoon, because of its psychological benefits." Let me suggest to the senior Senator from Illinois and to every other Senator that, if they want to know something about psychology, they will not find it at this time within the confines of Senate bill 3809. I ask them to go back and read what Nicholas Lenin did to make mankind understand psychology.

Years and years ago Nicholas Lenin became a personification of will power devoid of the control of conscience and consecrated to world revolution. His mind became a sealed book, except for three thoughts: Russia, revolution, the world on fire. "Unmoral" best describes his ethics, as human acts to him were only good or bad in the relation they bore to the inevitable class struggle, not to any objective norm of morality, which Lenin despised. "For Lenin," writes one who knew him well, "moral principles do not exist, just as there is no music for a deaf person. Morality or humanity did not exist in Lenin's vocabulary except in such phrases as 'capitalist morality,' or 'slobbering humanity.' "

Mr. President, if we believe that Stalin is a modern-day replica of Nicholas Lenin—and I so believe—we must gear our thinking, our conduct, and our defense preparations to the ever present and continuing desire of the Soviet to initiate a world revolution. If we agree that present-day Russian rulers live only to destroy freedom, wherever it may exist, we must overlook no single opportunity to utilize the resources and strength and join hands with those anywhere and everywhere who are willing and anxious to oppose and crush, if required, the evil of communism and its more evil ambitions.

Not many months ago the Atlantic pact was ratified by the United States and by 11 other nations. These nations joined hands in an effort to secure themselves against aggression and to preserve freedom for posterity. These nations pledged themselves that an armed attack against any one of the members was to be an attack against all the members. This pledge, in the words used recently by the Senator from Texas, has put any potential aggressor on notice that the combined power of the North Atlantic community will be available to defend our freedom and our civilization.

In my view the recent act of aggression in Korea requires that we recognize that the Atlantic pact, as it is now constituted, does not represent the combined power of the North Atlantic community. To maintain that it does is to be totally unrealistic and to lead the uninformed to believe in the prowess of a security instrument which will not be available should a world-wide crisis arise.

The member nations of the Atlantic pact are: The United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Luxemburg, The Netherlands, Italy, Portugal, Norway, Denmark, and Iceland. Perhaps, if someone be interested, he might begin to wonder about the map from this point on. If any person cares to maintain that these nations represent the potential combined power of the North Atlantic community he ought to have his head examined and be made to understand that he lives in a world of make-believe.

On page 26 of the report on S. 3809 there appears this sentence about the menace of communism—and I agree with every word of it:

> No nation can be neutral in the face of this threat, nor could any nation hope to remain neutral if a conflict were to break out.

That is what the committee report writes in order that every American shall be encouraged to read it. All it says is that if and when the forces of free peoples comes in conflict with the forces of communism, no nation on the face of the earth can remain neutral or stand on the sidelines.

This sentence, Mr. President, speaks the truth. It states only what we ought to recognize and seek to accomplish through enlarging the membership of the Atlantic Pact or through establishing other pacts to which other free nations may belong.

The Senator from Washington is not abusing the North Atlantic Pact. He voted for it, and he thinks it should be enlarged and that the question concerning that possibility ought to be raised on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. President, a very thoughtful man, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL], has just handed me——

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, it was brought to my attention by the administrative assistant of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. CAIN. I appreciate the fact that the Senator from Missouri has given me a small bit of the ticker tape. I had not seen it before. It must have something to do with what is going on at the White House. It says:

> The following is the text of the White House announcement authorizing the use of ground troops in Korea—

Why should I read any further, Mr. President? Why should any man read any further? It only means that what we did not anticipate one short week ago has come to pass. How seriously we are presently involved I do not know. A little later, when the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] shall have returned from their visit to the White House, perhaps they can tell us something more about it. But whether we successfully get out of that in which we are presently embroiled in Korea, the fact remains that we must anticipate, on the assumption that we are not too seriously overboard in Korea now, outbreaks somewhere else at some other time in the future, and perhaps coming upon us more rapidly than we know. That is why the Senator from Washington thinks it proper to raise questions about enlarging the membership of the present Atlantic Pact.

On last Friday the Senator from Texas said, in passing:

> We have cooperated fully with other countries in repairing the terrible damages brought by the war and in returning the world to some degree of economic stability. The Marshall plan and the technical assistance program stand as eloquent evidence of our good faith in this regard.

Mr. President, I feel that much of what we have done in this connection has been good, but I likewise feel that what we have not yet done, and what we now give no evidence of doing soon, is likely to result in tragic consequences.

On last Friday the Senator from Texas had this to say:

> At the recent London meeting of the Council it was agreed that the 12 treaty members should concentrate upon the development of balanced, collective forces in building up the defensive power of the area.
>
> Viewed historically, this decision is nothing short of amazing. In the past the countries of Europe have insisted upon maintaining a complete defense establishment with a separate army, navy, and air force. This has resulted in great duplication of effort, waste, inefficiency, and relative weakness.
>
> Now these piecemeal efforts have been abandoned, and there will be a practical division of labor. Each nation will make the contribution with respect to the kinds of weapons and forces which it is best equipped to make and which will fit into the common defense effort. In this way we shall have a much stronger combined common defense force at a smaller cost than we could possibly produce with each nation proudly pursuing its own independent objectives with its own independent forces.

Here again, Mr. President, we recognize the good which is being achieved. My main criticism is that we are stopping far short of what must be undertaken and accomplished if the so-called free world is going to reach and win an ultimate and healthy decision over the forces of communism.

One further reference, Mr. President, to the able presentation made last Friday by the Senator from Texas:

> The states we are helping today are those which faced and staved off totalitarian aggression from 1913 to 1917, from 1939 to 1941. They gave the United States time to gird itself for the war against totalitarianism which we knew was coming. These people valued freedom even more than their homes and their lives. They fought on when their lands were overrun. They are more familiar than we are with the darkness that would forever enshroud western Europe if Communist imperialism should envelop them.

Those words are brief, and they are promising and very good to read, but the observation in its entirety, Mr. President, undeniably overstates the case.

The Senator from Texas was referring accurately to some of the nations we are presently helping, but not to all of the nations we are presently helping. I think it a fine thing that Italy, for example, has now alined itself with the forces of freedom. It was not always thus. When the Senator from Washington and thousands of other Americans landed on the beach at Salerno it was at a time when Italy was changing from the status of an enemy to the role of a cobelligerent. The point here involved is that if we can become full-scale partners with a nation which very recently was an enemy of ours we ought to look for ways in which to become partners with other nations with whom we have had arguments or whom we have not always liked for any of a variety of reasons. I am about to suggest why, in my view, Spain could become a partner of ours and a member of the Atlantic Pact with resulting good to the North Atlantic community and to the world.

During the debate, questions concerning Spain, Germany, Turkey, and other areas of the world where we have relationships of one kind or another have been raised. I shall reflect on only Turkey and Spain, because my primary interest is with them and the study I have given to each perhaps qualifies me to make several observations.

Everyone understands that it requires a unanimous vote by each of the 12 members of the Atlantic Pact to take a new nation into membership. Neither the Senate of the United States nor the Congress can demand or require that a new nation is voted into membership. Members of the Congress, however, might be of some assistance in encouraging Atlantic Pact nations to consider the advisability of broadening as well as strengthening its membership.

Many a Member of this body, Mr. President, hesitates to talk too often or too long; many persons do not like it. During the course of this debate, hoewever, there has been no presentation of the capacities, capabilities, and resources of Spain and Turkey. The Senator from Washington wants to bring them to the attention of the Senate. He wishes he might have more time available for the purpose. If we think that the Atlantic Treaty nations are not considering the advisability of enlarging the membership or if we think that these nations for selfish and self-centered reasons do not anticipate enlarging the membership we ought to say so and ask why.

In the recent hearings, which the appropriate committees held on Senate bill 3809, the Senator from Washington tried to determine from administration witnesses if the treaty nations were discussing or giving consideration to the possibility of enlarging its membership. I was told by Mr. Harriman, for example, who is undoubtedly one of the best-qualified witnesses in America, that no consideration had or was being given to the question. Every other Government witness of whom I inquired either said the same thing or that he did not know. Here is another reason why I think, indeed, I am convinced, we are overselling the mutual defense assistance program, which is going to pass at 2 o'clock this afternoon, not alone to ourselves, but to the rest of the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURRAY in the chair). The hour of 12 o'clock having arrived, under the unanimous consent agreement entered into yesterday, the time between now and 2 o'clock this afternoon is subject to division, to be controlled respectively by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I have been authorized to say that until the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] returns to the floor, I am to have control of his time. Therefore until his return, sir, with the permission of the Chair, I shall continue.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, acting for the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], who is momentarily detained, it would be entirely proper for the Senator from Washington to proceed under that arrangement.

Mr. CAIN. I thank the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. President, we are leading people all over the world to believe that we are fully utilizing the defense potential and resources of the North Atlantic area, when this is actually not the case. What we are doing is a pretty good job with some of those resources. That we are completely ignoring and failing to use other resources is an obvious understatement.

Mr. President, the Senator from Washington can only outline why he thinks the resources of Spain ought to be available for the mutual defense preparations of the North Atlantic area. I am not talking now about the North Atlantic Pact. I am talking about the map. I am talking about the phrases used by so many and so often: "The North Atlantic area," "the North Atlantic community." Spain resides geographically within those areas.

A decision as to what may be done with the resources and manpower and capacity of Spain must be left to the nations of the Atlantic Pact Treaty, to which the United States is a party. I bother to make these suggestions merely because should a world war break out again the North Atlantic Treaty nations would desire to use everything Spain has to offer whether Spain is a member or not. I wonder if anyone thinks that if we became involved in a world war we would not take from Spain what she had to offer, if we could. Again I go back to the report which said that if war broke out against the Communist nations no nation could remain neutral. I believe that. Every nation must be either on one side or the other. If this conviction is recognized as being reasonable, we would be foolhardy indeed and plain foolish if we did not seek now and in the near future to coordinate and integrate the capacity of Spain with that of other nations in the North Atlantic community.

Mr. President, let us look at the map and consider the characteristics of Spain and Portugal. Portugal is a member of the Atlantic Pact. Spain is not. Look at it. Portugal is that little area on the map marked in yellow. Spain is not a member of the pact. Are Senators of the opinion that these two countries are dissimilar in characteristics and in resources? Would Portugal have more to offer in time of crisis than Spain? I cannot understand how it could. Had any of us to choose between joining forces with one or another of these two nations, which one would he select to fight with? Which would it be, Spain on the one hand, or Portugal on the other? It is difficult to dissassociate them even on the map. Which one would we choose to fight with? Which one? I do not know about any other Senator, but as for me I would take Spain. The point involved is and logic says that we had better have both.

If Portugal is deserving of membership in the Atlantic Pact—and we agree that she ought to be a member of the pact, though a great many Americans would not be able to tell us that Portugal is a member of the pact—what is there about Spain which ought to continue to preclude her from membership? The two nations of Spain and Portugal go up to make the Iberian Peninsula. Those two countries are inhabited by people of similar characteristics and have shared a common civilization. Spain's 28,000,000 inhabitants have long been known as a Christian and civilized people who have fought time and again against tyranny, and more recently against communism, which they expelled from the country during the civil war. One reason that I made a not uncomplimentary reference to Italy was that it would be easier to silence prejudice for the moment and raise a legitimate question about Spain. If we have forgiven Italy her grievous sins of less than a decade ago, I would take exception to any Senator's suggesting that Spain is guilty of sins which could not be overlooked. As Italy seeks now to pursue freedom Spain seeks the same objective.

If America is to spend billions of dollars for the common defense against communism—and we are doing it every day, and more of it at 2 o'clock this afternoon—and if it plans to equip foreign armies, as we are going to do, it seems out of place to ignore Spain and its strategic position. Spain controls the door to the Mediterraneon, namely, the Straits of Gibraltar. To control the Mediterranean is to hold the key to the Suez Canal. Should that vital region fall into the hands of an enemy, the North Atlantic Pact nations, except Canada and the United States, would be at its mercy. We have had debate on this question, for a week, and no Senator to my knowledge has risen to offer a layman's concept of things strategic. I trust that generally most Senators will not think it improper even at this late hour to talk about the obvious.

The morale of the inhabitants of the Iberian Peninsula must not be forgotten. Had Spain no army and were she not a country willing to fight for her liberty and freedom, if the people were not inspired by the common democratic ideals of the west, even then the land itself could not be overlooked. But the morale of these 28,000,000 people is strong and is an important factor in the North Atlantic community.

To my mind, it is impossible to separate Spain from a study of the North Atlantic Pact. Those responsible in our Army for strategic planning do not hide the fact that they believe that Spain is essential to the reliability and effectiveness of the North Atlantic Pact.

Spain links southwestern Europe with Africa. Washed by the Mediterranean on the east and the Atlantic on the west and north, it dominates the Straits of Gibraltar and can control all the sea traffic passing from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean and vice versa.

To all intents and purposes Spain is a huge airfield of 195,000 square miles surrounded by water. Its sea coast has many ports and natural first-class naval bases. In the strategic mid-Atlantic, Spain has the Canary Islands which are ideal for dealing with any submarine menace in that area.

The Pyrenees on the northern border with France is a strong barrier for both defensive and offensive actions. Someone ought to place this sort of material, which is accurate and deserving of consideration, in the RECORD, in the hope that some day it will be considered before the next war breaks out, because if we are not prepared to use the Pyrenees as a result of preplanning, we shall have to use them without being properly prepared so to do.

This barrier, narrow enough, only 250 miles wide, and with both flanks leaning on the sea, is the best bulwark in Europe for modern warfare. It seems to me that we are giving more consideration to things political than we are to things military by our continuing disposition to ignore obvious assets.

Numerous chains of mountains cross the peninsula and offer good antiaircraft defenses. Spanish climate and meteorological conditions make aerial navigation easy, I am told, although I have never been there, for Spain is never completely covered by bad weather at one time.

In order to get some of this material together I have had to go back to school. I was glad to have that opportunity. I had to study geography. I had to examine facts and statistics. There may be certain elements which I may have mentioned which are not accurate, and if so, I should like to have someone call the inaccuracies to my attention. I wish only to leave the truth in the RECORD.

The high central plateaus of Spain are excellent sites for large air bases; some of these are already constructed. Spain has organized airfields in the Balearic Islands, Canary Islands, in Spanish Morocco, in Spanish West Africa—Ifni and Cabo Jubi. These fields are in good condition and can be enlarged.

The Spanish Army today is organized in 8 army corps and 21 divisions, and its total effectives are 400,000 trained soldiers, with an officer corps of trained and experienced men.

At least our competent military authorities tell me, the officer corps of the Spanish Army is a first-class military instrument.

A few days ago 76 Senators, the Senator from Washington among them, approved an extension of the Draft Act, because we are expecting the time when we may have to utilize our manpower. Spain can call up on short notice a million men and if necessary three million through a draft, grouped in 15 or 16 army corps. This army's immediate requirements are better rail and road communications, up-to-date armored and signal corps and electronic material. Spain needs many things she does not possess. Spain's importance in military matters justifies assistance, for not only is its army of interest to the North Atlantic Pact as one which can be helped, but as one which is prepared and capable of defending its positions on its own.

The country can offer excellent potential naval bases at El Ferrol, Cadiz, Cartagena, Mahon, Las Palmas, Soller, and Tarifa. Compared to American standards the Spanish Navy is not large; however, its building program has stressed small destroyers and other fast units appropriate for antisubmarine work. There are 22,000 trained men in the navy today.

The Spanish Air Force has 5 light bomber groups, 3 fighter groups, 2 tactical cooperation groups, 4 all-purpose groups, totalling 350 aircraft. However, it must be realized that Spain has 2,000 trained combat pilots and can enlarge its air force quickly. The United States of America is rushing aircraft and material as fast as it can to Europe, but is bypassing a place where there is need for such materiel now.

Spanish plans have been made to equip 7 fighter groups with 500 aircraft, 3 assault groups with 220, a special fighter group with 66, 3 light bomber groups with 150, and 1 reconnaissance group with 48 planes. At the moment there are 36 equipped air bases, of which 6 have runways for the most modern and powerful aircraft. At Barajas, in Madrid, San Pablo, in Seville, and at Muntadas in Barcelona, Spain has the largest civilian airfields of Europe, which are constantly being used by international commercial airlines, and which could be improved to satisfy military aircraft requirements.

The strategic importance of Spain in the Atlantic Ocean area arises primarily from its geographical position. In its location at the southwestern extremity of the European land mass Spain is in a flank position astride the sea and air routes between the other European nations and North America, South America, and west Africa. She is astride the sea and air routes between the United States and southern Europe, northern Africa, and the Middle East. Spain shares with the British Isles the position of strategic dominance along the western approaches to Europe. Allied sea and air efforts from Spanish bases in protection and support of these lines of communication could improve the effectiveness and economy of these operations. With these bases under enemy control, the attempt to maintain these lines of communication, particularly through the Straits of Gibraltar and in the western Mediterranean, might prove disastrous until efforts to neutralize these bases succeeded.

Moreover, the terrain of Spain is peculiarly well suited for defense. The line of the Pyrenees Mountains runs east and west along the French-Spanish border. There are few north-south access routes through this mountain barrier, and these are suitable for relatively easy measures of interdiction.

Not very long ago I was privileged to have a conversation with General Omar Bradley, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. We were looking at and talking about a map. Without endeavoring to involve General Bradley, one of America's very great Americans, in any controversy of any kind, I believe I can safely tell what he said to me, that I was talking about political considerations. He said, "Senator, our job in the Military Establishment is to plan on the basis of what you in the Congress and those in the White House and those in authority in other high political offices in the United States and around the world give us to work with." General Bradley—and I say this in my own right—would by no means deny a solitary thing I have said in support of Spain thus far.

The strategic importance of Spain, however, is potential rather than actual. There are few airfields with runways sufficiently long and of sufficient strength to operate even present-day medium bombers I am told. The road network, although extensive, is not in good repair, and consequently is not suitable for rapid movement of heavy equipment. Rail communications are not good. The harbors require developing before they would be suitable for sustained naval operations.

But all of this indicates, Mr. President, that Spain possesses resources and capabilities which, when improved, will serve her purpose and ours as well. If most of what I have related about Spain is true, and I believe it to be true, we could accomplish a very great deal for the common good of everybody by spending and utilizing reasonable sums of money in Spain at this time. Spain has something to work with. All of us must agree to that. Some of the nations we are presently helping have nothing by comparison to offer. We all agree to that. Spain wants help, needs help, and is deserving of help. I wonder when we and the other Atlantic Pact nations will become realistic, and provide the assistance which is required.

Now, Mr. President, I wish to relate a very strange story which will take only half a minute. I am told that in the very recent past our State Department refused to give Spain a license which would have permitted her to buy 212 Rolls Royce engines in this country. These engines were manufactured in the early part of the war, and are now both surplus and obsolete to our American needs. There must be some reason why the license request was denied.

I wonder what the reason leading to that denial was. I hear it in the cloakroom rumors. The Senator from Washington is not going to repeat the rumors, but the Senator from Washington is going to say that he has reason to believe that rather than help Spain in any way, as we admit we are not doing, if the United States has recently denied Spain an opportunity to secure for itself, with cash on the barrel head, a small number of aircraft engines, obsolete to our own needs, we are hurting Spain, and that is pushing things a little far.

Mr. President, I know that time is very precious, because we seek to get this matter over with. We will vote at 2 o'clock, and I ask unanimous consent to have certain portions of what I wanted to say placed in the RECORD at the proper point, while taking several minutes, I say to the Senator from Massachusetts, to make some observations about Turkey which I had in mind; and I am trying to cooperate with the Senator, and I shall finish very rapidly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The matters, portions of Senator CAIN'S statement, are as follows:

Mr. President, every Senator wonders whether the present conflict in Korea may be the beginning of world war III. Every American citizen wonders about and is troubled over this possibility. Should a world war begin in the near future America would be required again to send green troops into action to die needlessly because of their lack of preparation and experience. The Senator from Washington has suggested that Spain has 400,000 troops under arms today who could be made available if a common effort had to be undertaken. Yet our leaders have told us that up to this time no consideration has been given to coordinate the Spanish capacity and potential with the resources of other nations.

I had a Senator suggest to me the other day that if Spain were taken into the Atlantic Pact it would frighten other members of the pact because they would assume that it was our intention to retreat behind the Pyrenees. My only reflection on the observation is that it would be good to have the Pyrenees to hide behind should that ever become necessary.

For as long as other nations in the Atlantic Community refuse to use and integrate the resources of Spain with their own we ought, in the name of accuracy and truth, quit talking about the balanced collective security force we are establishing in the North Atlantic area because we are attempting no such thing.

In one of the committee reports I find this interesting comment: "The committee believes it would generally be unwise for us to encourage any greater expenditures by the European nations for military purposes than those that have been planned, since to do so would, in the opinion of the United States and European experts tend to jeopardize economic recovery which is essential to military strength."

In my opinion this statement means that an integrated defense among our allies will result in each nation making the most effective use of every dollar spent for defense preparation. The integrated concept maintains that each nation will contribute those things which it is best qualified to develop and maintain. In consequence the United States, so far as I know, will be the only member of the Atlantic Pact to maintain a balanced security force within its own borders. All of the other nations will be specialists so to speak in one or more fields of security preparation. Not only is this concept defensible from a military point of view but it helps to reduce the burden of military expenditures in all of the countries involved. Let us examine this concept briefly as it relates to Turkey.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, Turkey raises another question in the consideration of which I would again refer Senators to the map.

Turkey is not a member of the Atlantic Pact, Mr. President, but Turkey benefits from the mutual defense assistance program through title II. The committee report states that—

Turkey must be given additional help to permit her to continue the combat effectiveness of her armed forces. American aid is enabling the Turkish people to improve their national defenses while concurrently taking measures which will ultimately strengthen our economy. It is clear that Turkey occupies a vital position in the security structure of the middle East.

Because Turkey is not a member of the Atlantic Pact, and even though she benefits from our military arms program, Turkey is required, so far as I know, to maintain a complete military establishment of her own. The result of this situation, as I see it, is that Turkish military expenditures are out of line with the national income and the general budgetary revenue.

If that assumption is carried to its logical conclusion, and if existing conditions long continue, it may follow that Turkey would either have to turn itself into a positive military dictatorship, or would be destroyed economically, leaving her without the power to fire a single rifle in a time of need.

Turkey is presently spending more than 35 percent of her total budget on expenses of a military nature, and few if any Atlantic Pact nations are laboring under such a heavy burden. I wonder—and I am raising questions—how far this percentage could be reduced if Turkey became a member of the Atlantic Pact, and shared her defense preparation problem with the other nations of the pact. One hazards a guess that if Turkey were a member her military expenditures could be reduced, and her domestic economic health would be improved. I wonder if any of those in political authority are thinking about this possibility.

If Turkey were to be attacked, Mr. President, who would go to her rescue? The nations of the Atlantic Pact say that an attack on one member is an attack on all members. If there is a commitment on the part of any Atlantic Pact nation, outside of the United States, to help Turkey in the event of trouble, I do not know what it is. I do not know that the United States has a written commitment to assist Turkey in the event of need, but the aid we extend to her signifies our intention to become involved if any serious trouble arises in Turkey. As an American citizen, Mr. President, I would feel better if I knew that an attack against Turkey would be considered as an attack against all of the nations of the Atlantic Pact.

There are those who say that everybody would become involved if Turkey were embroiled in war and I suppose that is true. The trouble with this result is that the Atlantic Pact nations, with the exception of the United States, would probably not have planned their defenses with a Turkish war in prospect. Here again we would have no integrated, balanced security force if war broke out.

All of us have complimented Turkey for the amazing progress it has made in recent years, but I think we ought to do more than this. We ought to look for ways through which to make Turkey a full partner with every other nation which is opposed to communistic aggression. For as long as Turkey is permitted to carry a major portion of her defense preparation and planning by herself she will be considered by many nations in the Atlantic Pact to be a second-rate nation. I think the Atlantic Pact nations are overlooking a great bet if they do not soon welcome Turkey at their common council table. As we have found it convenient and practical to restore fully equality to Italy, we can help to reassure ourselves about the future by promptly treating Turkey as an equal. Were it my task to sit with others in the Atlantic Pact to plan and prepare for the future, I would feel inadequate to that undertaking were I not able to turn for help and advice to Turkey. A casual glance at the map causes one to want to know more about the strategic role which Turkey will fill in any future major aggression. This is my thumbnail sketch of what the Senator from Washington thinks he knows about Turkey.

Turkey is in a vital position from a geographical viewpoint. Her location makes it possible from Turkish bases to control, to a great extent, all shipping in the eastern Mediterranean and the Aegean Sea, and to exert considerable pressure against any shipping entering or departing from the Suez Canal. Additionally, and of extreme importance, is the fact that Turkey controls absolutely the Dardenelles Straits—the only exits from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean. Thus from the strategic point of view Turkey could bottle up any naval forces in the Black Sea, including submarines, as long as she could resist outside attack.

Her geographical position is of equal importance with respect to other vital elements. Turkey either contains or flanks all rail and road communications from the USSR to the Middle East area. This area of itself is of great importance to us for a number of reasons, and, conversely, its importance to Soviet Russia is equally great. Here in the Middle East area are the great oil resources, without which the wheels of modern war machines cannot turn. Here also is a vital link in the sea lines of communications between east and west, the Suez Canal. Turkey could well be the key to this area—he who holds Turkey has a tremendous advantage in the battle for the Middle East.

Turkey's importance as a potential offensive base for operations against the U. S. S. R. in the event of war is unmistakable. For our navies there are good ports. For our armies a base for advances into southern U. S. S. R. is available. Such bases would be of equal value as a threat to Soviet operations in the Middle East area. As a potential air-base area, Turkey offers tremendous advantages to the west. It is very close to Russian oil-bearing areas and to a number of her greater industrial centers. As a base for escorting fighters, it would extend their coverage of western bombers to a considerable degree. As a way station for refueling or for emergency stops, Turkish air bases would be very valuable.

Turkey, however, is not merely a vital geographical factor in relation to the containment of communism. Turkey has proclaimed her intentions to resist communism publicly. She has resisted successfully Communist pressure in the east and in the west. She has refused Soviet efforts to gain control of the Dardanelles. Turkey has maintained armed forces independently of the United States to protect her borders. Her spirited stand against communism is sharp and distinct.

Turkey is fortunate in her defensibility. In addition to the straits in the west, back-up defenses in the mountains would make attack difficult. In the east the U. S. S. R. also faces difficult mountainous terrain with few rugged passes. A major offensive would be required for the Soviet to overrun this mountainous country.

Turkey is in need of American aid further to revitalize her armed forces to enable her to resist successfully in case of aggression. United States military assistance has gone far to build her armed forces into an effective modern fighting arm. However, much still remains to be done in this regard. For that reason the 1951 mutual defense assistance program includes funds to continue modernizing the Turkish armed forces through the provision of United States equipment and training.

Again, Mr. President, I can compliment what we have done for Turkey while criticizing what we apparently and presently have no intention of doing at any time in the immediate future.

I want now for just a moment to return almost to the beginning when I quoted from the conclusion of the committee report on S. 3809:

> No nation can be neutral in the face of this (Communist) threat, nor could any nation hope to remain neutral if a conflict were to break out.

I have been thinking this afternoon, Mr. President, of what will happen should bad things and war happen in the future. I have only tried to say that if we are really serious in the military assistance program which we began last year and in the mutual defense assistance program which is now before us we must recognize that we have just reached the end of the beginning—not the beginning of the end, but the end of the beginning—in our effort to secure from among the freedom-loving nations a balanced and integrated security unity and force. The so-called free nations of the world are not yet prepared to have a showdown with the Communist forces of aggression. We are still thinking more of ourselves as individual nations than we are of the collective needs and requirements of all free nations and the millions and millions of human beings whom these nations speak for and represent. We must not nor can we afford to be satisfied with what we have done. The only possible justification for basing much of our hope on things military is so to integrate and coordinate the military capacity and resources of all free nations that no aggressor who has ever lived or will ever live would risk a clash of arms. That none of us want to fight is obvious. At least the Senator from Washington says he has no desire to fight. But if fight we must—and the Senator from Washington would be perfectly willing to fight if that were required—it is even more obvious that we want to win the contest swiftly and completely. Our own best hope lies not in our ability to win a war but to prevent war. This I think can best come about by doing for and with all free nations what we have begun to do with and for the nations who are presently members of the Atlantic Pact.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to have the RECORD show my conviction that the amount which we are authorizing in this bill to assist in the defense of the nations who are members of the Atlantic Pact is now not large enough and that we must raise our sights. Before the aggression of Communist imperialism in Korea a few days ago I felt that the rate at which we were building up a strong front in Europe was too leisurely. Since the crisis has occurred in Korea my convictions on this subject have become even stronger.

And now, a few minutes ago, we have news of the decision of the President to send the Army into Korea, and that makes the conviction even more intense. In that decision, of course, the President is entitled to the support of all Americans.

In the issue of June 28 the Evening Gazette of Worcester, Mass., published an editorial entitled "For a New Scrutiny of Europe's Defense." The editorial is short, and I will read it out loud.

> Events of the past few days in the Far East will compel the United States to a severe reexamination of the defense situation in Europe. For the problem is not solely that of the thirty-eighth parallel in Korea. It is, so to speak, also that of the eighth to twelfth meridians, inclusive, between the channel and the curtain.
>
> We had a program of arms aid to South Korea. It obviously was not enough; what aid we did provide was of a token nature.
>
> We have a program of arms aid to the Atlantic Pact nations of Europe. It is larger than anything given Korea. Moreover, it moves as part of a treaty commitment. If an Atlantic Pact nation—Norway, for example—were attacked by Russia, we would immediately enter war.
>
> But the Korean experience has shown the acute danger of token assistance. We have therefore to ask immediately whether the Atlantic Pact aid program is enough. The answer may be that it is; but the question certainly must be asked, and bluntly.
>
> We and our allies in Europe face also the difficult question of defending Germany. The picture in Germany is not precisely that of Korea. We still have troops occupying both Germany and Austria, and Soviet invasion of western zones either country would bring instant war.
>
> Do we, however, have enough power in Europe to make a stand against a Russian drive in Germany, Austria, or elsewhere?
>
> A token defense is only enough for a token stand.

The editorial very rightly states that our experience in Korea has already shown the acute danger of token assistance. It speaks truly when it says that a token defense is only enough for a token stand. Let me repeat what I said here on Tuesday—that the free nations must rapidly develop enough military strength so that Communist imperialism will no longer be able to take the initiative at will anywhere it wants to on the vast world-wide periphery of the Soviet Empire. Only when we regain the influence which we lost with the utter disintegration of our armed forces in 1945 can the world go forward to lasting peace.

One of our most urgent tasks, therefore, is, as this editorial rightly says, a new scrutiny of Europe's defense. Of course, this argues for the immediate and unanimous passage of the bill which is now before the Senate. But it also means that there should be undertaken at once a new scrutiny of the situation in Europe by the proper officials in the executive branch and by the appropriate Members of the Senate. We must not forget, Mr. President, that Korea is closely related to Europe.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the President will have my full and unqualified support in all measures that are necessary to drive the northern Koreans out of South Korea. The clear-cut action of the United Nations was, in my judgment, the only course to pursue under the conditions existing.

The invasion of South Korea was a ruthless and cruel act and could only be met by the forthright action that has been taken.

It is my hope that other member nations of the United Nations will immediately join our forces in military action, so that a united front will be presented to those who would use aggression to increase the forces of communism.

The action of the United Nations, even though its legality is challenged by Russia, to my mind offers the only hope I have ben able to see that the United Nations may, and I earnestly hope will, become a strong agency to promote the peace of the world. This is the first instance under the United Nations of the use of armed force to preserve the peace. It must not and cannot fail; and, I repeat, the more nations that take part in this police action, the greater impress it will make upon the world and the more the deterrent will be to similar movements elsewhere.

If out of this should come a strong and virile United Nations, millions of people throughout the world would feel a security for the future, which is absent now.

Mr. President, this is a time for unity, for we must win. I have grave objections to certain sections of the pending proposed legislation; but inasmuch as it embraces aid to Korea, I shall cast my vote in favor of the bill.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, let me inquire how much time is available to my side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has approximately 47 minutes.

Mr. WILEY. I understood that the time was to be equally divided. I also understand that while certain of us were at the White House, the Senator from Washington took the floor and addressed the Senate, and that, as a result, 26 minutes was to be charged to the time, to be apportioned equally to both sides. I wish to ascertain the amount of time now available, because if there is any Senator who desires to have me yield time to him, I shall be glad to do so.

I desire to take perhaps 20 minutes to address the Senate, if I can determine exactly how much time is available to my side on this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator now has 45 minutes available.

Mr. CONNALLY. I should like to determine how much time I have.

Mr. WILEY. I assume that the Senator from Texas probably also has approximately 45 minutes; in short, both of us must conclude by 2 o'clock.

Mr. President, a little less than a year ago—to be exact, on July 21, 1949—the Senate of the United States by an historic vote of 82 to 13 overwhelmingly advised and consented to the ratification of the North Atlantic Treaty. At that time there was hope that probably, by means of the utilization of that treaty, and especially following its ratification by the United States, the consciousness of the Russian leaders would be so affected that they would realize that there was firmness in the hearts and minds of the nations who became parties to that pact, in their hope and desire for peace and that they wanted peace—but not at the price of surrendering their liberties.

However, Mr. President, since the open attack upon South Korea—and that is what it is—it is very evident that the Russians have regarded the Atlantic Pact as a mere gesture. So we have the Korean situation on our hands.

Mr. President, some of us were in conference with the President this morning. After the conference, the President issued to the press a statement which is of great importance; and I ask that it may be incorporated at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

At a meeting with congressional leaders at the White House this morning, the President, together with the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reviewed with them the latest developments of the situation in Korea. The congressional leaders were given a full review of the intensified military activities.

In keeping with the United Nations Security Council's request for support to the Republic of Korea in repelling the North Korean invaders and restoring peace in Korea, the President announced that he had authorized the United States Air Force to conduct missions on specific military targets in northern Korea wherever militarily necessary, and had ordered a naval blockade of the entire Korean coast. General MacArthur has been authorized to use certain supporting ground units.

Mr. WILEY. Among other things, Mr. President, the President has authorized the United States air forces to conduct missions on specific military targets in northern Korea, and has ordered a naval blockade of the entire Korean coast, and General MacArthur has been authorized to use supporting ground units.

So, Mr. President, on this little globe scenes are changing very quickly. Yesterday we were confined to the particular line which divides North Korea and South Korea; today our naval forces are to the north of that line, and perhaps our airplanes are bombing airfields in northern Korea.

Mr. President, it is obvious that we are sitting on a powder keg. The question is, Will it become ignited, with the result that we shall be exploded into world war III? We pray God that it will not.

However, Mr. President, there seems to be nothing, other than force, which the Russians understand. When I say "Russians," I do not mean the great mass of the people of Russia, but I mean the leaders of the Communist Party. The only thing they understand is the rule of force.

Therefore, I am supporting the military-assistance program, and I am supporting the President's statement. I am particularly happy that a great man, one of the greatest America has ever produced, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, is on the job in Korea. With his background, which is more than military, thank God, he understands the Asiatic mind. He has lived among the people of Asia; he knows how to deal with them. It is very fortunate for America and for the United Nations that Gen. Douglas MacArthur heads the armed forces for the United Nations.

Mr. President, it was a momentous step for the North Atlantic area and for the world when we ratified the North Atlantic Pact. In the light of its background, the North Atlantic Pact was no mere paper instrument, to be torn up and disregarded at will. The signatory powers were convinced that no less than their peace and security depended on that pact; and it was implicit in their minds, as well as in ours, that in order to be given effect it had to be implemented with arms.

When the United Nations took the action which was taken yesterday, it called for implementation with arms. I do not think there are many persons in this world who would welcome war. It seems to me that no one wants war. I do not think even the Russians want war. However, when we are handling powder, it is likely to explode. History demonstrates that wherever the powder kegs have been in Europe through the generations a lighted match may start a general conflict. We might as well recognize that we are in such a position now, Mr. President.

Therefore it is necessary that we implement the allied forces in Korea and that we implement the allied forces on the continent.

I repeat that the only thing the Russian leaders understand is physical force.

It is the judgment of many persons who are "in the know," if anyone is in that position, that if a sufficient demonstration of force is made, the Russians will understand it, and will not send their forces openly into the Korean conflict. If that is the case, then ere long the danger of a war conflict should be over.

The risk we are taking is a calculated risk, but one which we cannot refuse to take.

Mr. President, it is in connection with the implementation of arms that I wish to present briefly to the Senate my views on some important legal aspects of the military assistance program, which now is under consideration by the Senate. As is evident, I am addressing myself to the pending measure.

Let us first consider the obligations into which we entered under article 5 of the North Atlantic Treaty. Mr. President, when America enters into a treaty, America does not consider it a scrap of paper. I think one of the great things America has done for the people of the world in this particular instance is again to back up the moral force of humanity with a positive demonstration that a written undertaking means something, and that when we in America give a promise in a written agreement, we mean to keep it.

Article 5 of the North Atlantic Pact states that an armed attack on one of the signatory powers in the North Atlantic community shall be considered to be an attack against all the signatory powers. It further provides that in such a contingency each signatory party, in the exercise of the right of individual and collective self-defense recognized by article 51 of the United Nations Charter, shall forthwith and in concert with the other parties to the treaty take "such action as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force, to restore and maintain the security of the North Atlantic area."

Words could not more clearly set forth the fact that armed force in the last instance must be depended upon to assure security in the North Atlantic area in the face of a Communist threat. We can say that armed force anywhere must meet the Communist threat now. As has been said so aptly on the floor of the Senate many times, the line is drawn, and we want the Communists to know that the line is drawn, and that we are not ready for another Munich. This is no Munich, Mr. President. This is sober business and Russia should know it, and when we today pass this implementation bill we are again telling the leaders of Russia that we mean that we have retreated far enough. In fact, in my humble opinion, we have in many instances retreated too far. We have at least averted war for 5 years. But now it is Armageddon. America stands firm and, thank God, the other nations—particularly the smaller nations—have now felt a thrill and a sense of renewed strength and vigor in their very bones, knowing that we are standing firm and not simply uttering words. No; nor need we rely on words alone for our interpretation of the article and the obligation which I have just quoted. On April 8—4 days after the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty—the signatory powers requested military assistance of the United States for use with their own military contributions to carry out their responsibilities under the treaty. Thus, the words and actions of the parties to the North Atlantic Treaty leave no doubt about our obligation to maintain and carry through our share of the MDAP.

One more thought with regard to article 5 it seems to me is of importance. The new obligations which we assumed under that article were: First, in the event of an attack upon any party to the treaty to come to that party's assistance; second, to consult with the other parties whenever the territorial integrity, political independence, and security of any of the parties is in danger; third, to consider an armed attack against one of the parties to be an attack against all of the parties; and, fourth, to maintain and develop, separately and jointly and by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, the individual and collective capacity of the parties to resist armed attack. In the light of these obligations the United States has agreed to a military-assistance program which it must carry through. I repeat, an agreement with this Government is a valid obligation, and the nations of the earth must know it. We are telling it to them again, and we are telling it to Russia in particular. How else can states maintain and develop their capacity to resist attack? Need I say more in the face of the current aggression in Korea?

Let us next turn to article 3 of the treaty, for here lies the heart of both the treaty and the military-assistance program. It reads:

> In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this Treaty, the parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack.

Even to the naive, armed attack can only be resisted with arms. And the words "maintain and develop" clearly indicate that a program of rehabilitation of the military power of the signatory states was in contemplation. For in that rehabilitation rests the increased ability of the parties to develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed aggression. In this connection I recall the words of the eminent senior Senator from Texas, when he spoke of article 3, in urging the ratification of the North Atlantic Treaty:

> My own view is that we proceed forthwith to ratify the treaty and implement it by approving the military assistance program during the present session of the Congress. Time is highly important in this great enterprise, and we must let our partners know, as soon as we can, that not only words but deeds are a part of our policy.

I repeat the words embodied in the concluding sentence of the distinguished Senator from Texas—"not only words but deeds are a part of our policy." It is a matter of words followed by action—living promises which find fulfillment. That is what we are now engaged in, and that is what we are telling the world. Our action in itself is begetting renewed courage and renewed confidence, and, what is more, a great sense of the unification of the free nations of earth than probably anything else that has happened for a long time.

As you know, Mr. President, we can look at the dark side of things. But every cloud has its silver lining. I think that, until the United Nations took action a few days ago in its two swift moves, in the hearts of humanity there was beginning to be felt a sense of doubt, a sense of fear, that this organization was nothing but a paper one. Somehow or other, when the United Nations threw down the gauntlet and challenged the action of the North Koreans—which was provoked undoubtedly by Stalin—there came a great feeling of confidence which began to permeate the hearts and minds of the people of the earth they began to sense that once again the very spirit which renews strength and selfless devotion to principle was again being reborn in the hearts and minds of humanity.

So, Mr. President, when, pursuant to the action of the United Nations, America went into action, when we put MacArthur on the firing line, when we sent our Navy and our planes and when we have now ordered the Navy into action north of the thirty-eighth parallel and told MacArthur to send his planes to bomb the planes of the North Koreans on the field of North Korea—because that is where the nests are—again there was renewed strength, vitality, and unity among peoples who sense that, after all, liberty is worth fighting for, and that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

The words of the Senator from Texas did credit not only to the Committee on Foreign Relations, but they reflected how closely related, in the thinking of many Members of this body, were the treaty and the arms-assistance program. As Members will recall, the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949 was passed in October and became law on the 28th of that month last year.

It is not necessary to go further to show how closely interwoven are the North Atlantic Treaty and the mutual defense-assistance program. Together they constitute a single integrated defense system which rests upon the solemn pledge of the parties to work together to build up a solid defense system for the maintenance of their own security and the preservation of their freedoms and liberties. Surely there is nobody in this body who for a moment has questioned that the major burden of providing the materials and equipment, as well as much of the training, would fall upon the United States. Every act of the Congress and the overwhelming preponderance of the sentiments and views expressed on this floor can leave no doubt on that score.

What does the bill before us, Senate bill 3809, do? In the first place, it carries on the program of military assistance for another year. It will be recalled that at the time we discussed the Military Assistance Act of 1949, we agreed that it was impossible to accomplish the objectives of the North Atlantic Treaty in a year, and that the program would go on for sometime to come, no one knew how long, and we were frank to say so.

Why was it, Mr. President, that no one knew how long it would be? Because of Stalin and his crew we could not get any agreement or understanding, as his acts in the past have clearly demonstrated. Agreements were but scraps of paper. Consequently, we are now engaged in paying a premium on an insurance policy, which is the best insurance we have for the maintenance of peace.

We also recognized that even the most propitious progress during the first year or so would not make it possible for our friends and allies to achieve a position of armed strength sufficient to withstand Soviet aggression if it came. Every word uttered on this floor, every deliberation of the Congress, every statement by the President and the executive branches of the Government, made it clear that there would be a second year, a third year, and perhaps even more years of assistance before the defensive strength of western Europe would be an effective counterweight to the Russian threat.

In this sense, then, Senate bill 3809 not only keeps faith with our partners and is consistent with our own security interests, but it is also consistent with our expectations of the needs this year.

As the committee report shows, Senate bill 3809 authorizes the appropriation of $1,222,500,000 for aid to the North Atlantic countries, Greece, Turkey, the Philippines, Korea, and the general area of China. It also broadens certain types of assistance, which we are to provide, making it possible for our European partners to produce more of the arms and the equipment they need. Thus, under the terms of this bill, it will be possible to supply our partners with production machinery which we have been unable to supply under the 1949 act. In another respect the bill broadens the act of 1949 by giving the President greater freedom in determining which countries are to be assisted and which countries are important to the security of the United States. I think the vicious, unexpected aggression in Korea demonstrated that the Chief Executive of the United States needs this discretion.

I do not wish to take up your time with a review of the changes this bill makes in the 1949 act. They are set forth in the committee report in considerable detail. In addition to the two I have already referred to, for the most part they are devoted to the transfer of Iran from title III to title II of the act of 1949, the authorizing of additional grants of excess equipment for aid, the authorizing of the extension of unobligated balances of 1950 funds, amending the President's authority to delegate certain functions, and broadening the President's powers to transfer funds from one title to another.

The price of freedom and peace is always high in the face of aggression, but they are worth any price. "Give me liberty or give me death" is still a statement of the fundamental belief of the American people. The mutual Defense assistance program is a part of the price we pay for freedom. It is a small price indeed. Two world wars have taught us that aggression in the North Atlantic area, or in any part of the world, is a matter of immediate concern to the United States. Today in Korea we are experiencing that fact. When aggression rears its ugly head anywhere, this country is affected. We cannot escape that fact by appeasement or soft words. Only one guaranty is left to us and all the free peoples of the world. We are thrown back on the words of the builders of this Nation. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance. We must keep our powder dry and be ready to use it to defend ourselves against those who would enslave us.

In closing, let me point out that the mutual defense assistance program is but a link in the chain which supports our freedom and security in the world, and that it has a long and historic background.

When the United Nations Charter was being forged, article 51 was worked into its framework. That article recognized the inherent right of individual and collective self-defense if a state is subjected to an armed attack. Please note that the Charter recognized the right as inherent. When the North Atlantic Treaty was drawn up, it was made to rest squarely on the Charter and within the framework of the United Nations. The military assistance program was agreed to. It rested squarely upon the North Atlantic Treaty. Furthermore, the aid to Greece and Turkey were provided in such manner that there could at no time be any conflict between our obligations under the Charter and our aid to those countries. Aid to Korea grew out of our historic position in that country as a result of the Second World War and out of the position the United Nations took toward Korea.

It is perfectly clear to me that Senate bill 3809 is not only consistent with the security interests of the United States, but it provides for the discharge of obligations, which we have deliberately and openly entered into. It is the most recent step in the struggle of the United States for peace, security, and freedom for ourselves and for the world.

Mr. WILEY subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the remarks which I made half an hour ago there be printed what I think is a very interesting and a very well balanced article by William C. Bullitt, entitled "Can We Still Save America?" He says, among other things:

Stalin won't stop; he must be stopped.

In that article he makes a very clear analysis of the effect of propaganda between the years 1942 and 1947, the effect it had on our Government officials, and particularly those who represented us in foreign countries. I think that portion of his remarks should be "must" reading by every Senator. In fact, the entire article is of that character, and I again suggest that Members of the Senate read it.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the record, as follows:

CAN WE STILL SAVE AMERICA?

(By William C. Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union)

In 1939 Stalin controlled about 170,000,000 people. Today he directs about eight hundred million. This is an extraordinary advance toward his ultimate goal—the control of the entire human race. It is clear now that, short of this goal, the Communists will never stop. They can only be stopped.

Stalin sits in the Kremlin with the members of the Politburo who compose his planning staff for the conquest of the world. He prepares his advances on a world scale as carefully as the commander in chief of an army prepares plans for his attacks. He decides when and where to strike, and what forces will be needed to seize his objective. He is a careful and crafty leader who never takes great chances. He always remembers that the physical strength of the Soviet Union is the most important factor in the spread of communism, and he does not risk destruction of that primary source of strength. His tactics are many and varied. They deserve the attention of everyone who is a citizen of a free country and intends to remain so. Chief among the weapons which the Communists have used to achieve their present power are these:

1. Easy war: In 1939, 17 days after Hitler had disrupted the Polish armies, Stalin attacked Poland and seized eastern Poland. Similarly, in the Far East, after we had pulverized the military resistance of Japan, Stalin declared war on Japan, only 4 days before her surrender, and seized Manchuria.

2. Occupation by the Red army and gradual imposition of absolute Soviet rule: This was the method employed from 1945 onward in Poland, Rumania, Hungary and, with slight variations, in Czechoslovakia. Its effectiveness is demonstrated by the simple fact that Stalin has now been able to install a marshal of the Soviet Union as commander in chief of the Polish Army.

3. Alternate menace and blandishment: In 1939, under threats of war and promises of peace, Stalin persuaded the Governments of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania to accept the presence of Soviet garrisons at certain strategic points. The Soviet soldiers behaved themselves well, and many Balts believed their prospects for survival were good. However, when Stalin considered that the moment had come to close his hand on those countries, he closed it. He murdered or deported to slave labor his political opponents. He finally reduced his victims to a terrorized mass of despairing individuals whom he then compelled to go to booths and vote for Soviet-chosen candidates under penalty of losing their bread cards, which were nothing more nor less than permits to live.

4. Use of local Communist movements in areas where Communists have been strong enough to organize armed resistance to existing governments: The foremost example of the success of this method is China. By turning over to the Chinese Communists all the arms captured from the Japanese Army in Manchuria; by sending a few generals who were masters of strategy and tactics to plan the attacks of the Chinese Communists, Stalin succeeded in bringing the whole of continental China under Communist control.

5. Communist control of nationalist independence movements in colonial countries: At the present moment, Stalin is advancing by this method in the Vietnam area of Indochina and at other points in southeast Asia. The war in Vietnam is one of the saddest that has ever been fought. Three-fourths of the troops of Ho Chi Minh, the Moscow-trained leader of the Annamites, who are fighting the French and the forces of the Emperor Bao Dai, are not Communists but simple patriots who believe that they can achieve complete independence only by throwing the French and Bao Dai into the sea. Yet, in truth, the only result of such a victory would be that the Annamites would exchange the yoke of France—which has now become relatively light—for the terrible yoke of Stalin. If Indochina falls, Burma, Siam, and British Malaya—with its vast production of rubber and tin—will also fall. Then it will be India's turn.

6. The pledged word of the Soviet Union—given and broken: Stalin lulls his prospective victims to sleep by entering into all sorts of pacts and agreements with them, and breaks the agreements as soon as it becomes convenient for him to do so. Stalin's violations of the most solemn international agreements have exceeded in number similar violations by Hitler.

7. Propaganda: From 1942 until 1947 our Department of State was duped into treating the Soviet Union as a peace-loving democracy. Quite aside from Soviet agents in our Government departments and atomic-energy organization, we had in Washington and throughout the world a number of bamboozled Government officials who were not Soviet agents but served the Soviet Government as effectively as if they had been. Thus, officials of our Department of State were persuaded by Soviet propaganda to believe that the Chinese Communists were "mere agrarian reformers who had no connection with Moscow."

The Yalta agreements, including the secret one by which we promised Stalin control of the great Manchurian ports of Dairen and Port Arthur and the Chinese Eastern Railroad, were signed during the period when our Government considered the Soviet Union a peace-loving democracy. These were among the greatest triumphs of Soviet double-dealing. Had we acted in accord with the national interests of the United States and of our faithful ally, China, we would have done everything in our power to prevent the Soviet Union from entering the war against Japan. But our leaders had been beguiled into believing that the Soviet Union would work with us cordially to produce a world of liberty and peace, and in addition had been fooled into believing that we would need Soviet help to defeat Japan. So we secretly sponsored Soviet domination of Manchuria and enabled Stalin to arm the Chinese Communists.

8. Infiltration of respected organizations: One of Stalin's most effective weapons is the penetration of educational institutions, scientific societies, governmental bureaus, and trade unions by Soviet agents. In France, the government is far weaker than any French Government before the Second World War, and its entire governmental apparatus is riddled with Communists. Stalin used this weapon so effectively in both France and Italy that leadership of their great trade-unions was seized by the Communists and for a time it seemed that both countries might be paralyzed by Communist-led strikes. At the present moment, the non-Communist members of the trade-unions in France and Italy have set up their own organizations; but the Communist-led unions are still able to organize strikes of huge dimensions for purely political purposes. Fortunately for our own country, our unions have either purged their ranks of Communists or are in the process of purging them.

9. The final weapon employed by Stalin to disintegrate opposition to Communist advance is fear. The whole of western Europe is without defense, and everyone in western Europe knows it. Its cities cannot be protected against Soviet atomic bombs except by our Air Force, which today is not strong enough for the task. To oppose the 125 Soviet divisions, the French have in Europe six, the British one, the Belgians one. Now that Stalin has atomic bombs and plenty of bombers to deliver them to any spot in Europe, Asia, or North America; now that he has China as an ally and is increasing his military power much faster than we are increasing ours, his propaganda has taken a new line—the line of warning his opponents in Europe and in Asia that power is on his side and that time is on his side, and that unless they desire to meet the fate which he accords to defeated opponents they had better leave the camp of the United States and join the Soviet side.

By the relentless use of these and other related techniques, the Soviet dictator moves toward his goal of conquest of the world for communism. The world balance of power is swinging rapidly in favor of the Soviet Union. Asia is slipping into Stalin's hands. The Near East is threatened. Europe is defenseless.

The areas in which Stalin is now pressing his advance strongly are the following:

Iran, whose huge oil production plays such a large part in British economic life, is again threatened by Soviet-directed revolutionaries of the Tudah party. They have a fertile field in which to work. The poverty among the peasants of Iran is so grinding that they are close to revolt. Unless the United States moves rapidly to alleviate their suffering, Stalin may soon add Iran to his long list of satellites.

In Italy more than 20 percent of the workmen are unemployed; and the Communists, who gathered one-third of the votes at the last elections, are gaining in strength.

Western Germany, also under the pressure of unemployment, is beginning to listen to the Soviet propaganda which says: Side with the United States and you will have unemployment, underfeeding, shortage of raw materials, a divided country and, finally, Soviet atomic bombs on your cities. Side with the Soviet Union and you will have all the wheat and raw materials you want, no unemployment, and a united Germany.

Meanwhile, what is the real state of our own defenses against Soviet expansionism? Our military strength is falling behind the growing military strength of Stalin. The Soviet atomic-bomb threat to our homes is increasing each day. We have no radar warning net to detect the approach of enemy planes. We have only a fraction of the number of pursuit planes needed to make effective use of a warning net. The authoritative Finletter Commission in 1948 recommended as a minimum for national security 70 air groups. We have 44. Stalin has 350 long-range bombers capable of reaching any spot in the United States. His total air force outnumbers ours by three to one. His annual production of war planes is about three to our one. He has 125 army divisions to our 10—among them 30 armored divisions to our three. In addition, he has approximately 270 submarines—about 30 of the latest type against which we have not yet produced effective counterweapons.

Furthermore, thanks to his agent Fuchs, who transmitted to him all our secrets for production of both A-bombs and hydrogen bombs, Stalin may be ahead of us in production of H-bombs. The Communists are advancing, we are retreating. They are on the offensive, we are on the defensive. And no war, hot or cold, was ever won by forces which remained on the defensive.

Time is running against us and it will continue to run against us until we realize that Stalin will never stop, but can only be stopped. We must conceive and implement now an over-all plan for the defense not only of our own country but of all those countries which still remain outside Stalin's domain. Such a plan will call for sacrifices, and we must be prepared to make them. Today we should be living hard, as our forefathers lived hard in the days of Valley Forge. We are living soft. Our President has staked his political future on a program of handouts for crop support, housing, education, and other projects which appeal to groups of voters. To get more tax money for the handout program which produces votes, he has cut down the defense program which might produce survival.

An entirely patriotic American, he has not yet found within himself the intelligence and the spirit to take the offensive effectively against Soviet expansionism. Unless he will take the offensive, unless we—the American people—will let him know that we do not want to hear from him what we can get from our country, but do want to hear from him what we can give to our country, we shall suffer the fate that France suffered in 1940.

We restored the independence of France. There is no nation standing behind us to restore our independence.

Is it too much to hope that we will find in ourselves the courage and the will to save our Christian civilization? It is not too much. It is late—very late. It is not too late. We can begin today to take the offensive. We can increase vastly our expenditures for national defense and cut our expenditures for hand-outs. We can help the Annamites and the French throw the Communists completely out of Indochina—as we helped the Greeks throw them out of Greece. We can help achieve the federation of western Europe and make that federation a strong ally. We can give effective economic aid to Iran. We can help the Albanian exiles to rescue Albania from the Communists and thus give new spirit to all the enslaved peoples behind the iron curtain. We can give far greater aid than we have been giving to the resistance forces in all the Soviet satellite countries.

Those Americans who are still befuddled by Soviet psychological warfare will argue that such a course of action would produce an unbridgeable chasm between the free world and the Communist world. That chasm already exists. It was dug by the Communists. There is no bridge and there will be no bridge.

We face today not a struggle for security but a struggle for survival. We can stop Stalin only by keeping him constantly confronted by superior force, and by daring to use that force whenever and wherever he commits direct or indirect aggression. Today we are the last strong power on the side of liberty and Christian civilization. We have to find within ourselves the same courage and will that our forefathers found at Lexington and Concord. We have to be ready once more to give all that we have and all that we are to save the greatest adventure in human freedom that this earth has known—our America.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, how much time have I left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ANDERSON in the chair). The Senator from Wisconsin has 23 minutes left.

Mr. WILEY. I yield 20 minutes to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY].

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Nebraska would yield me 1 minute?

Mr. WHERRY. I shall be glad to yield 1 minute to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I shall vote in favor of Senate bill 3809, providing additional authorization for military assistance to various nations. I still disapprove the general policy of arming all the nations which are parties to the Atlantic Pact and the expenditure of billions of dollars for that purpose. However, the policy has been established by Congress, and under present conditions I do not believe it can be brought to an end at this time without more danger than its continuance will create. Furthermore, the bill contains authorizations for Greece, Turkey, Iran, and Korea, which I consider necessary at this time.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a sigh of relief has swept across the country that, at last, at long last, the President has accepted the suggestion of some of us that he draw a line, that he stop his vacillation in the Pacific.

The President's action is belated, and therefore it will be more difficult to protect countries threatened by the tide of communism.

The administration let China slip into the hands of Moscow-directed Communists, with one excuse or another. How many hundreds of thousands of lives were lost, as a result of this appeasement of Soviet Russia is anyone's guess.

These terrible, ghastly failures by the administration cannot now be swallowed up with a show of flag-waving and cries of emergency, hurry up, and do not question this or that.

It was high time that the President acted, because the breath of the Communist dragon has begun to breathe upon the Philippines, and the entire Pacific was and still is in jeopardy.

President Truman has acted to draw a line. At last, at long last, he says to the Communist hordes, "thus far and no further." But there is a long row to hoe, and much more to be done, very much more. This action by the President is only a beginning.

The American people long ago had lost confidence in Secretary Acheson. His resignation is now definitely in order. His appeasement policies now stand repudiated by the President.

The President having indicated his purpose to take a stand against the Red tide, certainly it would be inconsistent to put the implementation of that new policy in the hands of a man who has swallowed the Owen Lattimore propaganda, hook, line, and sinker.

At the same time, if the "new look" in our Far East policy is to take tangible form, all the remnants of what former Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle described as the Acheson-Hiss clique must be removed from the State Department.

Since sons of America are, at this very moment, engaged in combat in Korea, the wisdom of the Senate in directing the Committee on Foreign Relations to comb the Department of State, and other Government agencies, of subversives is indelibly portrayed.

The course that the President now has elected to take is the only honorable course that could be taken.

The courageous thing—and I say this with emphasis—that the President has done is to repudiate the Acheson appeasement policy in the Far East, and place in the hands of General MacArthur and the National Defense Department the responsibility for protecting the security of the United States.

Because of the repudiation of the Acheson policy in the Pacific—and because it should be repudiated in Europe—the time has come for Mr. Acheson, in all decency and fairness to the American people, to step out.

But the President has yet to repudiate Mr. Acheson's misguided policies in western Europe, policies based upon revenge, prejudice, and political partisanship.

In the face of the tremendous developments in the last few days, the utter futility and lack of wisdom shown in Secretary Acheson's attitude toward recognition of the Chinese Communist delegation by the United Nations, is made so clear that it should be obvious to everyone.

Think of it. The Secretary of State, who is supposed to be taking the leadership in winning the cold war, which may conceivably lead to a hot war, has taken a neutral position on seating the Chinese Communists and welcoming these usurpers of control over China into the family of nations.

The President and the State Department should take the leadership in resisting the seating of these delegates by the United Nations, and the United States should never recognize officially the Communist regime in China.

To do either would greatly enhance the prestige of Soviet Russia, and be utterly inconsistent with all of our efforts to resist possible attack with material means.

Recognition of the Moscow-directed Communist government of China would give to the Communists incalculable prestige, and all of our preaching of democracy, fairness, and representative republican way of doing things would be tremendously impaired.

The next step is for the President to call the Congress into a joint session, give the facts and a complete review of what has taken place, and give Congress his recommendations.

The junior Senator from Nebraska voted for the United Nations Charter when it was before the Senate for ratification. The junior Senator from Nebraska was assured on the Senate floor that the constitutional power of Congress to declare war was in no way modified by the Charter. Others have contended on the floor of the Senate that regardless of the provisions of the United Nations Charter the President had full authority to act in the emergency in Korea, and order our troops into action.

This point was argued by the majority leader, who gave precedents for the President's action. But I want to point out that in these precedents all the actions taken were for the protection of American lives and property. This was a very different situation than was brought about by the President's ordering air power and warships to southern Korea.

It seems to the junior Senator from Nebraska in all fairness the President should not have acted under the resolution passed by the United Nations without congressional authorization. Perhaps there was an immediate emergency. Perhaps time did not permit. I am not questioning the President's sincerity at all. However, Congress was in session, and this was a possibility. I refer to it only as a way in which I think it should have been done if it could possibly have been done that way.

But the practical side of this is whether the President acted within the constitutional processes, or whether he acted under the resolution adopted by the United Nations.

One thing he did not do, and that was to call the Congress of the United States, which is now in session, into a joint session, and there reveal to us the facts that he knew and make his recommendations at that time, so that the Congress, the legislative branch, could determine and assume the responsibilities, which the Congress should assume and thereby bring about the unity which must be had all along the line among not only Members of Congress but the American people. No doubt full authority and funds would have been voted by the Congress to prepare for the protection of American interests. At least I would have been one who would have given the President that assurance.

While it is too late now, and nothing would be accomplished by trying to amend what has been done, the junior Senator from Nebraska, calls attention to this as a notice for future conduct, in the event that this present situation develops into something much more serious than it is now.

While the President has made his decision without advising with and without obtaining the consent of Congress, it seems to the junior Senator from Nebraska that even now it behooves the President to call the Congress into joint session and give us and the country his views on the situation as it now exists, and his further recommendations. The Congress then should act on those recommendations within the constitutional processes. Certainly there is no partisanship in this situation, and I am absolutely sincere in stating that I do not want such an interpretation to be made. There was no partisanship in the appeals made again and again over the past years on the Republican side of the aisle for an end to the administration's vacillation in the Pacific, and the adoption of a forthright policy, drawing a line against the Communist aggressors.

The junior Senator from Nebraska is in favor of giving the President all the power and all the money he needs to combat Communist aggression against independent freedom-loving nations vital to the security of the United States. I am opposed to abdication by the Congress of its responsibilities and duties.

When we vote to give the President power to draft young men for the armed services and power to call the National Guard to regular duty, taking these men from their homes, their loved ones, and their jobs, we are granting very, very great powers. Certainly we should have more facts before us on the President's intentions than have been presented to us, because our whole foreign policy is involved.

Of the total appropriation allocated to Korea—$10,300,000 last year—none of it was actually spent.

That has been the Acheson-Lattimore policy in Korea up to this time. Their policy was to write off Korea, just as their policy has been to write off all of China.

Under the guise that the military assistance program is for the rescue of Southern Korea, we are told this bill must pass immediately. If that were its whole purpose the junior Senator from Nebraska would be as quick as anyone to rush it through. Out of the $1,122,000,000 in this bill, only $16,000,000 are for Southern Korea.

As I said before, Secretary Acheson should resign and the President should appoint as the Secretary of State one who is wholeheartedly for the new policy in Asia that he has just announced.

In Mr. Acheson, he will have very weak hands to help put the new policy into effect.

The junior Senator from Nebraska voted against the military assistance appropriation for nations in the North Atlantic Pact last year because the junior Senator from Nebraska believes that spending billions of dollars for ground forces alone is a waste of money.

Only $68,000,000 were included in appropriations for 1950 for air power, and an army without air power is like a soldier without eyes.

I also voted against it for the reason that the appropriation last year did not carry one dime to establish a military defense in Germany or in Spain. Some of the highest military authorities advise that the defense of western Europe hinges upon the defenses we have in Germany, and especially in Spain.

In Germany, there is a 700-mile corridor completely exposed. It is thinly held by our own American forces. It is an open invitation to Russia to walk right through the gate.

This bill is like putting a roof over your house to protect you against the rain, and the storms, and leaving a great big hole in the middle of it.

Why has not Spain been included in a military assistance program by the United States, either in this program or some other?

Oh, I know that in the bill 10 percent is allocated to be used by the President, if he deems an emergency exists, upon consultation with member nations, to spend it where he pleases. I think that provision should be in law, and it should be made mandatory. It should be part of the policy of this administration that Spain receive military assistance. In all candor and in all sincerity. Mr. President, I say that we are dealing not alone with western Europe under the North Atlantic Pact, but we are dealing with the security of the United States both in the Pacific and in the Atlantic. In the final analysis all our military appropriations must be guided by that fact.

Again I ask the question, Why has not Spain been given assistance?

Every Member of this body knows, and the people generally know, that the reason why Spain has not been included, is because of an appeasement policy toward the Communists, and the left-wingers, and the pinkoes at home and abroad.

And why has not Germany been included in the defense program of Europe which is so vital to our own security ultimately?

Every Member of this body knows—and let us speak very frankly on these matters now—that the policy of Mr. Acheson has been to cripple Germany, to dismantle her plants, to destroy her ability to earn her living and get on her feet.

Let me remind those who say that we should not go into the past that we are now dealing with the future.

High-ranking military men of this country advise that Germany be placed in a position to defend herself. This can be done, and must be done under supervision and direction by our allied command to see that the assistance is properly used.

If these constructive suggestions were adopted the junior Senator from Nebraska believes that action would strengthen our entire military position.

The junior Senator from Nebraska believes that the billion dollars in the pending bill to implement the Atlantic Pact could be spent more wisely by strengthening our Air Force at home, in Alaska, at Okinawa, in the Philippines, in Japan, in north Africa, in the Middle East, in Spain, in Great Britain, and in other strategic places.

Mr. President, the resources of the United States, great as they are, are simply not sufficient to arm and support half the world. The United States cannot build and maintain ground forces, navies, and air cover for every freedom-loving country on earth. We must not spread our defense dollars so thinly around the world that our defenses will not be adequate anywhere. We should tailor our defenses to fit our resources.

If we attempt to finance the building of land armies equal to the hundreds of divisions maintained by Soviet Russia, we shall go bankrupt in the effort. That is why the junior Senator from Nebraska puts so much faith in long-range bombing, planes strategically situated around the world, poised and ready to drop atomic bombs and other bombs upon the munitions plants and communications of Soviet Russia, if the despots of that country are so reckless as to start a war.

It is the opinion of the junior Senator from Nebraska that it is our Air Force, and the air forces of our allies, chiefly Great Britain, that are today the chief guardians of peace. But they need strengthening.

The President should forthwith release the $615,000,000 which Congress has appropriated to provide a 70-group air force. I have been for an adequate Air Force all the time, and now is the time to show strength in that direction.

Admittedly, it will take years to build western Europe defenses adequate for even a holding operation against the potential enemy. But in view of the action of the President in repudiating Mr. Acheson's misguided policies in the Far East, which should be soon followed by appointment of a Secretary whose chief interest is security of western Europe by including Spain and Germany in the defense network, the junior Senator from Nebraska feels justified in hoping that the pressure of events will see the imperfections of the military-assistance plan corrected.

The junior Senator from Nebraska opposed the military-assistance program for Europe last year on the ground that if war came it would involve World War I methods of mass ground combat against the vast Red army. This would be to Russia's advantage, and result in a terrific loss of American lives.

I am convinced there is a more effective and less costly way to fight Russia. The creation of an Air Force which would give us mastery of the air over Russia is better peace insurance and better insurance for victory than the administration's present military-aid program to Europe. If they were free to speak, the junior Senator from Nebraska believes our military leaders would agree with this stand.

The junior Senator from Nebraska is convinced that our own air defenses are sadly inadequate today, when war with Russia might happen at a moment's notice. We are not spending enough on our own air defenses. The President, himself, in order to make money available for the military-assistance program for Europe, has cut our air strength from 70 to 48 groups. I am opposed to letting the military-assistance program in Europe imperil our own security.

War in Korea, however, has altered the situation. The President must have our unanimous support. Refusal to give it to him would be interpreted in the eyes of our enemy as reflecting lack of unity in this country. And there must be no disunity in the face of a threat so imminent as that of today.

The junior Senator from Nebraska is going to vote for the pending military-assistance bill because it includes aid to Korea, the Philippines, and others in the Orient.

The junior Senator from Nebraska is voting for this measure in the hope that the war in Korea will awaken the administration to the total impotency of our present strategy against Russia; that it will lead to a new dynamic strategy, based primarily on American air supremacy as the best war deterrent, and the only way we can win if war comes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Nebraska has expired.

Mr. WHERRY. May I have 30 seconds more? Mr. President, I ask that the remainder of my remarks be included in the RECORD at this point.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the remainder of Mr. WHERRY's remarks were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The junior Senator from Nebraska votes for this measure in the hope that it will give a new Secretary of State the compelling prestige which can stem only from superior military might. With this prestige, we all hope that the new Secretary may lead this country to an honorable and durable peace.

The junior Senator from Nebraska casts his vote with the hope that the administration will clean every vestige of un-American thought from the Government branches; and with the hope that it will call immediately for the resignation of Secretary Acheson, whose foreign policies have completely failed, and who opposed consistently the action the President has now taken in Korea and Formosa.

Mr. President, it is with these hopes, and holding these views, that the junior Senator from Nebraska will vote for the pending bill, at the same time continuing his efforts to assure a dollar of defense for every dollar of the taxpayers' money that is spent for that purpose.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER], who is necessarily absent, desires to associate himself with the remarks which I have made, and on the basis thereof he asks me to state that on the final passage of the bill, if he were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield the Senator 30 minutes out of my own personal time.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished Senator. I asked for only 30 seconds, not 30 minutes.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield 5 minutes to me?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I shall support the arms implementation bill, Senate bill 3809, because I believe it is necessary to the defense of this country, and to the ultimate peace of the world. The menace of aggressive communism is global in character. It is no less destructive of human liberty in Korea or China than in the eastern European satellite nations.

It seems to me that at this critical hour in our Nation's history we need, more than at almost any other time, a united American public opinion and a united Congress upholding the hands of the President of the United States. By that I do not mean that at the proper time and place there will not be room for constructive analysis of some of the measures which have been taken or have not been taken, but, as one Member of the Senate on this side of the aisle, and as a member of the Committee on Armed Services, it seems to me that during the next 10-day period 13 men in the Kremlin are going to be making a decision fateful for themselves and for the world. I cannot help believing that in part their decision may be based on whether or not they believe the President of the United States has overwhelming support in the Congress and in the country for the necessary action he has taken.

Mr. President, certainly there are few who disagree that at some time a line had to be drawn in Asia, as one has been drawn in Europe. Certainly there are few who will disagree that had Korea been permitted to go down the drain, as Ethiopia was in an earlier year, as Manchuria was when the Japanese war lords invaded her, as Austria and Czechoslovakia were allowed to go, that would not have been the road of peace. As has been pointed out on the floor of the Senate many times before, the world should have learned then, as it should now, that appeasement is but surrender on the installment plan.

Mr. President, I am not one of those who dispute the powers of the President of the United States to take the necessary police action. I believe that he has been authorized to do it under the terms of our obligations to the United Nations Charter. I believe he has the authority to do it under his constitutional power as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Certainly the action which has been taken to date is not one which would have required, or one in which I believe it was desirable to have, a declaration of war, as such, by the Congress of the United States. What is being done is more in the nature of police action.

It is a well-known fact that when there are widespread disorders it is of great importance to bring them under control immediately, and to use sufficient force to bring them under control at the earliest possible moment. It is a fact well known by fire departments in this land that if a fire department can get to a fire in the first 5 or 10 minutes of a blaze it has a much better chance of saving the neighborhood than it has if it gets there half an hour late.

I wish to say that I was a little concerned by one statement of my distinguished friend, the junior Senator from Nebraska. I perhaps may have misunderstood him—I wrote it down—when he said, "Perhaps there was an immediate emergency." I do not think that there is any "perhaps" to the situation. The invasion of South Korea was a well-organized move. The invaders moved in a surprise Pearl Harbor type of attack. They were making rapid progress with armored forces down through the broad valley that leads to the city of Seoul, the capital of the Republic of Korea.

We must always keep in mind that in this age of the atom and the airplane minutes and hours count in a situation of this kind. I believe, Mr. President, that had not the President of the United States acted forthwith as he did after bringing the matter quite properly to the attention of the United Nations, which adopted its first resolution, the entire resistance in South Korea might have collapsed, and then, if we were to save the United Nations, we would still ultimately have had to take the action which the President of the United States took, but it might have meant an amphibious landing on a hostile shore. Any American who had any experience or who observed the difficulties of an amphibious operation either in the Pacific or on the Normandy shores, should know that that would have been very costly in American lives and in the lives of the men of other member states of the United Nations. So I think the President of the United States quite properly moved in to preserve so much of South Korea, to whom we had great obligations, that when the announcement was made today that additional American forces would go there, they would be able to land on friendly shores and not on hostile shores.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from California has expired.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas allow me one more minute?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield the Senator a half a minute.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California is recognized for 30 more seconds.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, the only additional statement I wish to add is that it is not quite correct to say that there is only $16,000,000 for Korea. As a matter of fact, Korea will be eligible for assistance from the $75,000,000 for the general area of China, and from the $250,000,000 of excess equipment. I am frank to say that I believe we have perhaps underemphasized the importance of the Far East, but certainly now is the time to pass this essential legislation.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS], and then I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Vermont.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I hope that the pending bill, on a yea-and-nay vote, will receive the unanimous approval of the United States Senate. It seems to me that this is the time for unity and for solidarity in support of the action the Government of the United States has taken with reference to the Korean situation. I understand that the ticker tape in the last few minutes has announced that ground troops are being sent or will be sent into Korea. That decision has been made.

Mr. President, it seems to me that the action taken by our Government and other governments of the world which are allied together against aggression, is the single most encouraging development in world affairs since World War I, contrasted with the lack of decision and lack of action that preceded World War II. In my opinion, a new decisiveness has been manifested which we ought to support. We have a new ability to act, a new ability to be heard, and a new ability to be felt. I am proud of the fact that we as a nation are taking the lead in this new development.

As I see the situation, 13 men in the Kremlin are going to make a decision within the next few days as to whether the Korean affair shall result in war or whether it shall be considered as a mere incident. As one who has the honor in part to represent the people of Mississippi, I want to say for them that they send a message to the 13 men in the Kremlin. I claim that Mississippi is a State which has fewer Communists and fewer communistic influences in it than any other State, although none of them are overrun by such influences. The people of Mississippi send to the men in the Kremlin the message that they are not going to stand by and see Russian aggression stamp out freedom in all the other countries of the world and create conditions in which freedom cannot continue to live in the United States. Speaking for the people of Mississippi I call for unity of action and solidarity of support for the cause upon which we have been obliged to launch.

I am very proud, Mr. President, that we are operating at this time through the United Nations. I believe we are creating precedents which will constitute new rules of international law; that we are providing a new method of meeting world emergencies and a new method of preventing war. In the situation which we now confront the precedents have been created and the incidents have occurred which are going to establish those new rules. The members of the United Nations should respond with men and with material.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I now yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Vermont.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont is recognized for 10 minutes.

ENDING THE COLD WAR—III

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 28, page 9329, will be found a colloquy between myself and the distinguished Democratic floor leader, Mr. LUCAS, which reads as follows:

> Mr. FLANDERS. About 2 hours ago on this floor I expressed the conviction that the President was within his rights in intervening in Korea, but that he would not be within his rights in pursuing the Korean forces or attacking Korean positions in any way north of the thirty-eighth parallel, which for some reason or other divides Korea.
>
> Mr. LUCAS. I agree with the Senator from Vermont. I wholeheartedly agree with him on that point. I undertake to say that in no circumstances can the United States of America be charged with being the aggressor so long as we stay within the boundaries the Senator from Vermont has just outlined.
>
> Mr. FLANDERS. I am glad to have the Senator from Illinois say that. I agree with him completely.

I wish at this time to say that I am now doubtful as to the wisdom of the question which I asked or of the reply to it which was given by the distinguished Senator from Illinois. I do not want the RECORD to leave him committed to the answer which he gave.

Further thought has convinced me that we have the right and probably the necessity for action north of the thirty-eighth parallel which can be sharply distinguished from operations in the nature of a counterinvasion to which we must not commit ourselves.

The first situation which may arise is that of following the enemy in hot pursuit, so-called. I sincerely hope that there will be hot pursuit, and should it chance that some of it takes place north of the thirty-eighth parallel, it will be entirely excusable to continue it so long as the purpose or the result is not that of invasion.

The second and most important and immediate contingency requiring action north of the thirty-eighth parallel is that of air attack on concentrations of troops and armament and stores of arms. That also would be a necessary type of action for achieving victory and is clear of the objectionable procedure of invasion.

There is still a third possibility which should be considered, and that is the destruction of war production potential north of the boundary. Since this is an operation undertaken in behalf and under the authority of the United Nations, it would seem to me that this additional step could properly be taken up with the Security Council in the form of a statement of purpose so that our action may be questioned and approval withheld should the Council so decide. We would very greatly hope that such a decision would not be handed down.

It is, to my mind, Mr. President, very important that we consider this whole action as one taken in behalf of the United Nations which itself lacks the police force to carry out its mandates. I do not at all agree with the suggestions that have been made by editors and commentators, as well as by leading Members on this floor, that the President has under any ordinary circumstances the authority to initiate military action as Commander in Chief and Executive of our foreign policy. It is true that that power has been tacitly recognized for generations and that it has been exercised more than once. But the times we live in are far more delicate and dangerous than those in which this right or privilege has been exercised in the past. Two or three generations ago we could land marines on a Central American beach without setting the world afire. The world we live in is not of that sort. It is inflammable; it is explosive; and our Chief Executive cannot safely take upon himself the responsibility for applying a match to it anywhere.

If the action of our President in this matter was on his own judgment, it gets its justification from the preservation of the usefulness and very existence of the United Nations. A quick review of the history of the last quarter century will convince anyone of that fact.

When the North Korean Army invaded South Korea on Saturday evening, our time, a new date in history was established. It was a new date for an old act, for history is found repeating herself again so far as the aggressive act is concerned.

On September 18, 1931, Japan took over Manchuria. Feeble protests were raised by the League of Nations, an investigating body was appointed, and an ineffective report was made. The report was ineffective largely because Japan was at that time an ally of Great Britain, and Sir John Simon of the investigating committee was unwilling to come out against the invasion.

Made bold by the success of Japan, the second totalitarian power, Mussolini's Italy, invaded and defeated Ethiopia. Again the League of Nations half-heartedly imposed economic sanctions, so-called, to restrain Italy in her career of conquest. But these were so devised as to bear more heavily on the Italian people than on the Government's conduct of the war.

A third totalitarian power, Hitler's Germany, having marched into the Rhineland unopposed, and into Austria unopposed—for by this time the League of Nations was dead as a door mat—marched into Czechoslovakia on October 1, 1938. This likewise was unopposed, since the policy of appeasement by Chamberlain, England's Prime Minister, removed all bars, barriers, and objections to this outrageous invasion. A year later Germany marched into Poland. But by this time it had become clear—and that, too late—that appeasement led only to military defeat and the destruction of human freedom.

Now history has repeated itself so far as the act is concerned. North Korea—armed, trained, and completely controlled by Soviet Russia—has crossed the thirty-eighth parallel which divides Russian territory from a free Korea. The capital of free Korea, Seoul, has been captured, the Government has fled to the south, our planes are engaged in attacking enemy air and ground forces, and a war is on, in which we are an active participant.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield briefly.

Mr. MILLIKIN. I do not wish to be captious. However, I would suggest that it is a police operation. If it is a war, prior congressional consent must be obtained.

Mr. FLANDERS. I accept the suggestion; this is a police operation, not a war.

Mr. President, what concerns us is the nature of our responsibilities in Korea and to the United Nations and the responsibilities of the United Nations itself in this serious crisis. We can talk about those questions without reference to the day-by-day changes in the military action going on in far-away eastern Asia.

Let us begin with the responsibilities of the United Nations. I have just given a rapid review of the decline and fall of the League of Nations, brought about by its unwillingness or inability to face the crises of the Japanese invasion of Manchuria and the Italian invasion of Ethiopia. If the United Nations is to survive, it must be prompt, forceful, and definite in meeting a situation of that sort. The invasion of Korea by the Red army is such a situation. Most fortunately it has been met by the United Nations promptly, forcefully, and definitely. Its Council was called together on Sunday morning. It made a demand that the invading armies should cease firing and retire to their own territory. That demand made by the Council, was authorized because Russia has been absenting herself from the Council over the Chinese question, and thus was unable to cast a vote in her own favor. This was a fortunate circumstance.

The next action of the United Nations was taken on Tuesday, when—in response to resolutions introduced by our Ambassador, Warren R. Austin—the Council went a step further, and requested the members of the United Nations to assist the Government of South Korea in every way possible in repelling the Red invasion.

It is at this point that history ceases to repeat itself. We have the invasion of the totalitarian power, according to the old pattern; but the United Nations is not following the pusillanimous policy of the League of Nations. It has acted. It could not fail to act if it were to preserve any useful possibility for protecting and maintaining the peace of the world in the future. Not to have acted would have been to commit suicide, as did the League of Nations.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I should have asked the Senator to yield when he mentioned my name in the earlier part of his remarks. I think that in theory the Senator and I are absolutely correct, so far as concerns having the American forces or any other forces drive the North Koreans back to the line of the thirty-eighth parallel. However, in practical operation, and in view of what we have seen happen in recent days, such a plan simply will not work. Certainly the South Koreans or anyone who comes to their aid should have the right to go above the thirty-eighth parallel for the purpose of bombing or destroying ammunition dumps, airplane fields, and other strategic spots which the North Koreans are using for the purpose of supplying to their troops in the South Korean section.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield before he takes his seat?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield, although I have only a very limited time.

Mr. MILLIKIN. I wish to express my satisfaction with the remarks the Senator from Vermont has been making today, and also with the remarks just made by the distinguished majority leader. I think we would be unduly clipping our wings if we were to establish any particular geographical parallel or line as the boundary of our action. The Constitution of the United States does not limit the President's powers—whatever they may be; and, of course, there is some debate as to just what they are—to any particular place in the world. His powers to protect American citizens and American property and American military installations are the same, any place in the world. Certainly we should not limit ourselves to any parallel or line, and I thought the Senator was a little frugal in his remarks the other day as to the proper limits of our action.

I am glad that now he has expanded our permissible field of action.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Colorado that a spirit of liberality has infused me since my remarks 2 days ago on the floor of the Senate.

The President's statement on Tuesday was the first completely statesmanlike document which has come out of this administration since I have been in Washington. For the first time, our endeavors to maintain freedom against Russian tyranny were put in the form of direct support of the United Nations, and were devised within the course of procedure which the Charter prescribes. We are back again as a member of the United Nations, instead of acting on our own responsibility, with only vague and fragile ties between ourselves and that organization.

A second point of importance is that the President took occasion at long last to make clear our relations with Formosa, which is all of China that remains to the Chinese Nationalist Government, so far as effective control is concerned. He states that we would prevent any attack by the Red army and navy upon Formosa, but in the same breath he stated that we would also prevent any attack from Formosa upon the mainland. Formosa and the Nationalist Government will be maintained in status quo until that position has become determined, whether by peace treaties or by United Nations action. For the first time the air is clear.

He also stated that increased help was to be given to Indochina to prevent the Red army from overrunning that region.

Finally, neither in the President's statement nor in subsequent interviews by the Secretary of State is there anything which makes it difficult for Russia to withdraw. Theoretically she is not engaged in this action, though all the world knows that it is Russia, not North Korea, which is on the move. Neither the President nor the Secretary of State has mentioned Russia by name. Therefore, she is free, should she choose, to disavow the whole undertaking and to insist on the recall of the Red forces to their own territory north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Mr. President, I have been making a series of observations on this floor on the subject of ending the cold war. I suppose that this talk is one of the series. One way to end a cold war is in a hot one. That is the danger of the present situation. I think, however, that all of us may be hopeful that prompt, vigorous, and effective action will allow us to avoid that kind of an end to the cold war, and will leave us free to continue more constructive efforts.

It has been heartening to see the extent to which the President's statement has met with the approval of the press, the public in general and, on the whole, of the membership of the House and the Senate. That support for the policies enunciated must be continued. The life of the United Nations is at stake. The hope for international cooperation for peace and prosperity is at stake. We must not, we will not, falter.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Vermont has expired.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Colorado whatever time remains to me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Vermont has expired; he has no time remaining.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I am rather amazed and shocked by the continued attack upon the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, in the crisis which the United States and the world are now facing.

Dean Acheson is not going to resign as Secretary of State, regardless of how many Members of the Senate may make such a request.

The truth of the matter is that the attack of the northern Koreans on the southern Koreans changed completely the policy of this country and of the administration. I undertake to say that if the attack had not been made, probably we would have continued the same policy we had in the past.

Mr. President, the arm-chair military strategy which sometimes is evidenced in the Senate of the United States amazes me. Those who engage in it are reminiscent of the Monday-morning quarterbacks, who are so free with their advice on Monday morning, following the football game on Saturday; when the home team has lost, they can always tell where the mistakes were made and what they would have done if they had been in charge of the team.

Mr. President, I am satisfied that neither General Bradley nor General Collins nor any of the other military men high in the Army or the Navy needs the advice, which has been given so generously on the floor of the Senate today by the Senator from Nebraska, in regard to what should be done throughout the world. It amazes me, Mr. President, that the Senator from Nebraska has constantly been opposed to the bipartisan foreign policy the United States has had in regard to Europe, but is entirely in favor of intervention and of a policy which will stop the Communists in Asia.

Mr. President, I desire to speak constructively, if I can, in the few moments allotted to me, so that the American people may understand that the United States, under MacArthur, and through the orders of the President, is acting directly under the resolution adopted by the Security Council of the United Nations Organization, a fact that cannot be stressed too much.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point the membership list of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly consists of representatives of all states members of the United Nations. As of December 31, 1949, the following 59 states were members: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras Iceland, India, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxemburg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Saudi Arabia, Siam, Sweden, Syria, Turkey, Ukranian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Mr. LUCAS. I also ask unanimous consent that the membership list of the Security Council, at this particular time, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

PERMANENT MEMBERS

China, France, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United States of America.

NONPERMANENT MEMBERS

Term expires December 31, 1951: Ecuador, India, Yugoslavia.

Term expires December 31, 1950: Cuba, Egypt, Norway.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the President of the United States, at a meeting at the White House this morning with congressional leaders and members of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force, and Cabinet officers, issued this release to the press and to the group attending the meeting:

At a meeting with congressional leaders at the White House this morning, the President, together with the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reviewed with them the latest developments of the situation in Korea. The congressional leaders were given a full review of the intensified military activities.

In keeping with the United Nations Security Council's request for support to the Republic of Korea in repelling the North Korean invaders and restoring peace in Korea, the President announced that he had authorized the United States Air Force to conduct missions on specific military targets in Northern Korea wherever militarily necessary, and had ordered a naval blockade of the entire Korean coast. General MacArthur has been authorized to use certain supporting ground units.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Illinois has expired.

Mr. LUCAS. The entire five minutes, Mr. President?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It certainly has expired.

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield one additional minute to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks an article which appeared in today's Washington Post. The article is entitled "McArthur To Use Ships and Planes of Three Other Lands," referring to Great Britain, Australia, and Holland. Holland has some mine sweepers in Indonesia at this time.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MACARTHUR TO USE SHIPS AND PLANES OF THREE OTHER LANDS

TOKYO (Friday), June 30.—General MacArthur's key officers said today he has accepted the offer of Great Britain and Australia to use their naval units, including aircraft carriers.

He also is studying the use of land-based Australian planes from Japan.

Ten British warships including the 13,000-ton aircraft carrier Triumph are in Japanese waters now.

Two Australian destroyers are due here tomorrow.

New Zealand has contributed the modern 6-inch gun cruiser Bellona and six frigates now exercising around the Fiji Islands. Australia put in the destroyer Bataan and the frigate Shoalhaven, now in Japanese waters, and promised support of other Aussie navy units farther away.

Holland has some destroyers, corvettes, and minesweepers in Indonesia for use as needed farther North.

Most of the available Australian, New Zealand, and Dutch warships, particularly the frigates, are designed for in-fighting in narrow waters and escort duty. A frigate is smaller than a destroyer.

British Royal Navy warships, including a small carrier, were placed under American command Wednesday. These were said to equal the United States surface forces immediately available in the Korea area.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, this is but carrying out the purposes of the United Nations Security Council's request for support of the Republic of Korea. In line with what the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] said, it is also the hope of the Senator from Illinois that all members of the United Nations will show their good faith in at least making a token gesture of their readiness and willingness to send troops if necessary to help in the present situation in the Far East.

In conclusion, I desire to join with the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND] in his statement. I hope that Members of the United States Senate will be in unison from here on in this crisis. We cannot under any circumstances afford to continue to condemn and criticise and create disunity in our country, in view of the world crisis which faces us at this particular time. I plead with Senators to forget the past and to close up ranks, because, as was said on a famous occasion, if we do not hang together, we may eventually hang separately.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Massachusetts.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I voted for the mutual defense assistance bill last year, and I intend to vote for this bill today. I have supported it in the committee, because I believe it is essential for the security of our country. I believe that in these days, in this very much smaller world, we cannot expect to protect our own security without friends in other parts of the world. If we have friends, we must do our part in making it possible for them to maintain their own security and, by maintaining it, assist us in maintaining our security.

We want peace in the world. The events which have taken place in Korea are evidence that peace is today a very uncertain thing. We are in Korea because under the United Nations Charter, as the majority leader has just said, we are attempting to keep peace, and to keep peace in order to maintain our own security. For these reasons, very briefly expressed, I shall vote for the pending bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Virginia.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, next Tuesday is the anniversary of the death of our greatest political philosopher, Thomas Jefferson. By a singular coincidence, it is likewise the anniversary of his greatest contribution to the cause of personal freedom, the adoption of his immortal declaration of independence.

The bill now pending before the Senate may appear to some to present a new issue. As a matter of fact, we get an echo of this problem from events which occurred 127 years ago, just 3 years before the death of Thomas Jefferson. A situation arose at that time over the struggle which Greece was making for liberty from the cruel domination of the Turks.

In his message to the Congress, Jefferson's friend, President Monroe indicated strong American sympathy for the Greek cause and said there was reason to hope it would be successful. Acting on that suggestion, Daniel Webster introduced in the House of Representatives a resolution to provide for the appointment of an agent or commissioner to Greece.

Greece then, as now, concerned us not merely as an individual nation but as a pawn in the game of power politics being played by the great nations of Europe. Much of the debate centered around the policies of the so-called Holy Alliance which had been formed by the emperors of Russia and Austria and the King of Prussia, and the relations of England to this alliance.

Webster argued we should act as a matter of principle to bolster the cause of democracy and, in response to arguments as to the possible effect on our commerce, Henry Clay asked what it would profit a nation to save its commerce and lose its liberties.

In submitting his resolution, Webster said it was far from being his wish to commit the House on this or any of the political contests in Europe. But, he said, since the President in his message to Congress had expressed the belief that the Greek nation, in its struggle with its oppressors, had the good wishes of the whole civilized world and, since the President also advanced the opinion that Turkish dominion over Greece was lost forever, Webster thought it was important for Congress to act.

He said the United States had diverse interests in the Mediterranean which might be seriously affected by the course of events in that quarter and we ought not to be restrained from a free expression of our views in relation to the Greek cause, so far as it might be done without committing ourselves in the contest.

In concluding, Webster said:

> With suffering Greece, now in the crisis of her fate—her great, it may be, her last struggle. Sir, while we sit here deliberating, her destiny may be decided. The Greeks, contending with ruthless oppressors, turn their eyes to us, and invoke us by their ancestors, by their slaughtered wives and children, by their own blood, poured out like water, by the hecatombs of dead they have heaped up as it were to heaven, they invoke, they implore of us some cheering sound, some look of sympathy, some token of passionate regard.
>
> They look to us as the great Republic of the earth—and they ask us by our common faith, whether we can forget that they are struggling, as we once struggled, for what we now so happily enjoy? I cannot say, sir, that they will succeed: that rests with heaven. But for myself, sir, if I should hear that they have failed—that their last phalanx had sunk beneath the Turkish scimitar, that the flames of their last city had sunk in its ashes, and that naught remained but the wide melancholy waste where Greece once was, I should still reflect, with the most heartfelt satisfaction, that I have asked you, in the name of seven millions of freemen, that you would give them at least the cheering of one friendly voice

Greece got the cheering note of Daniel Webster's voice and the good wishes of President Monroe, together with some other kind expressions, but that was all she got.

We now face a greater threat to democracy in the Mediterranean and in the Orient than in 1823.

No one can say dogmatically what is the sure road to peace, but, if nations learn by experience—and Edmund Burke said they did not—we know that appeasement of dictators is not the road to peace.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. ROBERTSON. May I have one more minute?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield the Senator one more minute.

Mr. ROBERTSON. We know that appeasement did not pay when Japan went into Manchuria, when Mussolini went into Ethiopia, when Hitler went into Czechoslovakia.

I share the views expressed by the acting minority leader, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], who preceded me, that we face a situation in which it is necessary to stand a stand. Within the near future we shall know whether the action in Korea is a border incident which the Politburo will ignore as a cause for war. Unity on our part in this crisis will no doubt influence that decision. It is time for all Americans to stand together on this issue, and on the pending military assistance bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Virginia has again expired.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has 6 minutes, and the Senator from Wisconsin has 3 minutes.

Mr. CONNALLY. My figures show that I have 9 minutes. Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield me a few minutes?

Mr. WILEY. I have only 3 minutes, and I have already assigned two of them to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. KEM].

Mr. CONNALLY. Let him speak first, then.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, I should prefer that the question of appropriations for the support of General MacArthur and our troops in Korea not be combined in this bill with further gifts to nations in other areas of the world. I feel that in view of our own possible military requirements we should consider very carefully the advisability of making other commitments at this time.

I intend to support our military operations in the Far East in every way. Since the Senate committee has seen fit to combine all these grants in one package, I shall vote for the pending bill.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, as I have already intimated, I shall vote for the bill because I think it embodies a must step. It is something we must do in order to tell to the peoples of the earth that we have stopped retreating and are no longer in favor of any Munich policies.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield me the remainder of his time?

Mr. WILEY. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has half a minute.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, not alone the United States, but every nation which is a member of the United Nations, today faces a crisis involving the question whether the dream of creating the United Nations, with the tremendous power it was hoped it would exert in the interest of peace and security, is to be realized, or whether it is to be dissipated and overwhelmed by the iron heel of conquest and aggression.

It is not necessary for me to repeat what happened in Korea. Southern Korea was a peaceful, law-abiding nation created by the nations of the world after World War II. Its safety, integrity, and independence were guaranteed. We now know they have already been ruthlessly violated by the sword in the hands of totalitarianism. We know that liberties of the Republic of Korea have been trampled upon, its peoples driven out, and its civilization attacked and forced into hiding, as it were.

Mr. President, the United States is a member of the United Nations. As a member of that organization there rest on us obligations which amount to more than making 4th-of-July speeches with regard to it. There are serious obligations resting upon us as a nation, because of our plighted faith to support the United Nations, its covenants, and agreements contained in the Charter.

I read article 25 from the United Nations Charter:

> The members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Mr. President, the Security Council has already, in two decisions and resolutions, outlined its condemnation of North Korea in sending troops into South Korea. It has already called upon other members of the United Nations to give help and support in driving from southern Korea the forces of northern Korea and resisting the armed advances of northern Korea. There is an obligation resting upon us there.

I quote briefly from article 39 of the Charter:

> The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression, and shall make recommendations or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

There, Mr. President, is the authority for using force if force is required to restore peace, to maintain peace, and to resist aggression against another nation.

Mr. President, today the country will mark well the attitude of the Senate. The country will know whether the United States Senate is a merely political club for the vaporings of those who want to make politics out of every action taken. It will know whether the Senate is a great governmental body or a mere political device to exploit the ambitions of those who seek power and authority.

Mr. President, the country must stand behind the President of the United States. Personally, I stand by his side. I applaud what he has done in the name of the people of the United States. Let us have unity. Let us support the President. Let the world know that the American people are behind the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Texas has expired. All time for debate has expired. The bill, S. 3809, is open to amendment.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hendrickson	Morse
Anderson	Hickenlooper	Mundt
Butler	Hoey	Murray
Byrd	Holland	Myers
Cain	Humphrey	O'Mahoney
Chapman	Hunt	Robertson
Chavez	Ives	Russell
Connally	Johnson, Tex.	Saltonstall
Cordon	Kem	Schoeppel
Darby	Kilgore	Smith, Maine
Donnell	Knowland	Smith, N. J.
Douglas	Lehman	Stennis
Ecton	Lodge	Taft
Ellender	Lucas	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	McCarthy	Thye
Flanders	McClellan	Tobey
Frear	McFarland	Tydings
Fulbright	McKellar	Watkins
Gillette	McMahon	Wherry
Green	Magnuson	Wiley
Gurney	Martin	Williams
Hayden	Millikin	Withers

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is present.

The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I should like to call up an amendment, which I sent to the desk several minutes ago.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, it is proposed to strike out lines 23 and 24, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "by striking out Iran, the Republic of Korea, and." On page 5, line 9, it is proposed to strike out "$16,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, if this amendment should be adopted it would simply mean that the Committee on Appropriations would be authorized to recommend in any appropriations bill a sum which, in my hope, and in their considered judgment, after they had had a chance to get the facts of the present situation, they think is adequate to meet the needs of Korea. I urge that the amendment be seriously considered.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. Certainly.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I do not have a copy of the amendment on my desk. I understood the Senator to say that he was striking out Korea from the authorized legislation. On what theory does the Senator feel the Committee on Appropriations would have unlimited authority to appropriate money for Korea?

Mr. CAIN. The words of the amendment have been written by the legislative counsel, who tells me that such words are required. The important part of the answer to the Senator's question is that on page 5, line 9, "$16,000,000" is stricken out, and in lieu thereof there is left an open dollar figure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Has the Senator from Washington concluded his remarks?

Mr. CAIN. I should like to make just one other observation.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. Do I understand that this amendment would not change the allocation for Korea, but would simply provide that the Committee on Appropriations could go further than the present allocations.

Mr. CAIN. The Senator's understanding is absolutely correct. On Friday a week ago the distinguished senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] said $16,000,000 appears to be sufficient to help Korea deter possible aggression. Since that time aggression has occurred. I believe that few Senators know—and certainly I do not know—what the present facts are. This amendment would permit the Committee on Appropriations to take action which otherwise it could not take.

Mr. TYDINGS. What other countries are associated with Korea in this amendment? Turkey and Iran?

Mr. CAIN. Iran, Korea, and the Philippines. My understanding is that the $16,000,000 in the bill is for the use in those three countries.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I think the Senator is mistaken. We have taken Iran out of title III, and the $16,000,000 applies to the Philippines and Korea. That is the first correction.

The second is that the $75,000,000 flexible fund in section (b), which covers the area of China, we would consider as being available in case of emergency.

The third point is that the 10 percent provision of section 408 makes it possible to shift from one of the titles to another in an emergency.

So, as I said in my remarks yesterday, I figure there will be available upwards of $100,000,000 for Korea.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to grant that sums are available from sources other than what have been prescribed for Korea in the bill. I believe the American people would like to know what sums actually are to be employed for the benefit of Korea, and that can best be brought about by permitting the Committee on Appropriations to act as a free agent.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAIN. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I think it will be plain, from looking at the amendment, that it has been drafted for the wrong bill. The Senator's amendment would strike out Iran and the Republic of Korea on line 23. It reads:

By striking out "Iran, the Republic of Korea, and."

So I assume the Senator would want to change his amendment, if he desires to accomplish what he is trying to do.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I deeply appreciate the comment made by the Senator from Massachusetts, for the desire of the Senator from Washington is only to make available more aid for Korea, if required.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, what is the time arrangement?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Five minutes on each amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY. That will be all?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is all.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I very much hope the Senate will not approve the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington. He seems excited about the amount of money available. Under the bill there is not only the $16,000,000 available for Korea, but under the provision with regard to $75,000,000 for the general area of China the President of the United States could allocate every cent of that sum to Korea.

Furthermore, there is a provision in the bill which provides that in case of emergency 10 percent of the amount in any title may be transferred to another title. Under that provision the President could transfer a hundred million dollars, if necessary.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I support the position taken by the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations in this matter. In addition to what he has said, which is correct, Korea is also eligible, both under the existing law and under the bill we are now considering, for excess equipment, up to the value of $250,000,000, in the proposed new law, and I think it was $450,000,000 in the old law. So that until other legislation can be presented, I believe there are sufficient tools with which Korea could work.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator from California. The $250,000,000 in equipment is in addition to the money provisions, which would give adequate funds.

Let me say to the Senator from Maryland—though he probably knows about this better than I do—that the operations which are now going on I presume are being taken care of out of the regular Army and Navy appropriations. They are not tagged up against the geographic location of battleships or airplanes. They are provided for out of military appropriations and will not be charged to the Korea matter, as I understand.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. CONNALLY. If they are charged to Korea, the pending bill contains provision for plenty of funds, at least, until we find a greater necessity than is present at the moment.

Mr. President, for these reasons I hope the amendment will be rejected. Furthermore, the Senator's amendment would open the door; it would be up to the Committee on Appropriations to appropriate any sum it wanted to, any amount. That is not the custom of the Senate; it is not the custom of the Congress, even in the case of military appropriations. We have some control, we have some rein over them, and we do not want to give the Committee on Appropriations such broad authority.

Mr. President, the bill contains sufficient funds to carry out the purposes of the measure, and I want to see the bill promptly enacted. I hope the Senate will vote down the amendment, and others of a like character.

The VICE PRESIDENT. All time for debate on the amendment has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I call up the amendment I have at the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill the following new section:

SEC. 13. Section 405 of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"(e) The President shall also terminate the assistance authorized to be furnished to any country under this act whenever he determines that the rate of expenditures by such country from its own funds for defense and military purposes is less than the rate at which such expenditures were made by such country during that one of the fiscal years 1948, 1949, and 1950 in which such expenditures by such country were at the highest rate."

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment just stated is to make certain that each country we will assist is going to spend as much for defense and military purposes in the future as the highest amount it spent in either of the fiscal years 1948, 1949, or 1950. We should not carry the whole load and every effort should be made to the end that all countries do proportionally as well as we do.

Since I offered the amendment, on yesterday for printing, I have had a discussion of the matter with the distinguished Senator from Texas, and we have agreed on a modification of my amendment. I realize the danger of probably establishing a floor on what our friends may spend, by saying that not less than a certain amount should be spent. In view of that danger I send the modified form to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration. I understand that the distinguished Senator from Texas is willing to accept it. From the modified form of my amendment it will be seen that the President is directed to refuse aid to any country that is not making its full contribution through self-help and mutual assistance in all forms to the common defense of all concerned.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The modification will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In lieu of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] he proposed to insert a new section 13, amending section 405 of the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949, as follows:

On page 10, after line 14, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 13. The present section 405 (d) is renumbered as section 405 (e) and a new subsection 405 (d) is added to read as follows:

"(d) If, in the case of any nation, which is a party to the North Atlantic Treaty, the President determines after consultation with the North Atlantic Treaty Council that such nation is not making its full contribution through self-help and mutual assistance in all practicable forms to the common defense of the North Atlantic area; and in the case of any other nation, if the President determines that such nation is not making its full contribution to its own defense or to the defense of the area of which it is a part."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I agree to take the amendment to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement showing, percentagewise, the amount furnished by each nation during the past 4 years.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

North Atlantic Pact countries: National defense expenditures (percent of total Government expenditures)

	Fiscal year ending—	1946	1947	1948	1949	1950	1951
Belgium	Dec. 31	10.5	7.9	7.0	8.3	{12.0	12.0
Denmark	Mar. 31		9.3	11.4	11.9	13.5	{13.0
France	Dec. 31	19.8	20.0	17.6	15.5	{*17.4	21.0
Iceland	do	(1)
Italy	June 30		23.8	13.0	15.3	{18.1 25.0	19.0
Luxemburg	Dec. 31	(1)	1.5	1.3	2.1	{*5.0 3.0	{8.0
Netherlands	do	15.0	13.4	19.1	17.3	{*19.5 23.0	{27.0
Norway	June 30		12.5	8.7	11.7	{12.3 17.0	14.0
Portugal	Dec. 31	27.6	25.0	22.6	20.8	{21.0	30.0
United Kingdom	Mar. 31		31.4	22.7	21.1	20.4	{20.0
Canada	do		11.2	9.2	10.6	{17.1 11.0	22.0
United States:
National defense	June 30		36.4	32.4	29.7	30.4	31.9
Foreign economic and military aid			16.3	13.7	15.7	13.2	10.5
Total			52.7	46.1	45.4	43.6	42.4

[1] Not available.
*ECA Special Report: Central Government Finances, April 1950.
Reports of the Senate Committees on Foreign Relations and Armed Services on H. R. 5895 (1949 Mutual Defense Assistance Act) and S. 3809 (Amendment to Mutual Defense Assistance Act).
Budget Bureau: 1951 Budget.

Source: All figures not marked with asterisk are obtained from report prepared by State Department for Legislative Reference Service of Library of Congress under date of June 29, 1950. Title: Total Expenditures and Defense Expenditures of the Central Governments of the North Atlantic Pact Countries.

Where State Department figures are at variance with data obtained from other sources, or where State Department report did not show figures for a particular year, the data from other sources has been inserted in the foregoing chart, and marked by asterisk, as follows:

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is still open to amendment. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOEY (when Mr. GRAHAM'S name was called.) My colleague, the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], is unavoidably absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CONNALLY. I announce that the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] is detained in Florida because of the very serious illness of a close personal friend. He regrets very much that he is not present to vote for the bill. He was active in the committee in favor of the bill. He voted for the original bill, and he wants his views known to the Senate and to the country. If the Senator from Florida were present, he would vote "yea" on the final passage of the bill.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LEAHY] are absent on public business.

The Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senators from Alabama [Mr. HILL and Mr. SPARKMAN], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senators from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON and Mr. MAYBANK], the Senators from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR and Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from IDAHO [Mr. TAYLOR] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] and the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, attending the sessions of the International Labor Organization at Geneva, Switzerland, as a delegate representing the United States.

I announce further that if present and voting, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senators from Alabama [Mr. HILL and Mr. SPARKMAN], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senators from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON and Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], the Senators from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR and Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LEAHY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR] would each vote "yea."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] are absent by leave of the Senate. If present and voting, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] would vote "yea."

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] are necessarily absent. If present and voting, the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] would each vote "yea."

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DWORSHAK] are absent on official business. If present and voting, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] would vote "yea."

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. JENNER] is absent by leave of the Senate attending the Indiana Republican State Convention.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] is detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 66, nays 0, as follows:

YEAS—66

Aiken	Hendrickson	Morse
Anderson	Hickenlooper	Mundt
Butler	Hoey	Murray
Byrd	Holland	Myers
Cain	Humphrey	O'Mahoney
Chapman	Hunt	Robertson
Chavez	Ives	Russell
Connally	Johnson, Tex.	Saltonstall
Cordon	Kem	Schoeppel
Darby	Kilgore	Smith, Maine
Donnell	Knowland	Smith, N. J.
Douglas	Lehman	Stennis
Ecton	Lodge	Taft
Ellender	Lucas	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	McCarthy	Thye
Flanders	McClellan	Tobey
Frear	McFarland	Tydings
Fulbright	McKellar	Watkins
Gillette	McMahon	Wherry
Green	Magnuson	Wiley
Gurney	Martin	Williams
Hayden	Millikin	Withers

NOT VOTING—30

Benton	Hill	Malone
Brewster	Jenner	Maybank
Bricker	Johnson, Colo.	Neely
Bridges	Johnston, S. C.	O'Conor
Capehart	Kefauver	Pepper
Downey	Kerr	Sparkman
Dworshak	Langer	Taylor
Eastland	Leahy	Thomas, Okla.
George	Long	Vandenberg
Graham	McCarran	Young

So the bill (S. 3809) was passed.

REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 24 OF 1950—RELATING TO TRANSFER OF RFC TO COMMERCE DEPARTMENT

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, in a moment I expect to propound a unanimous-consent request for a vote with regard to Senate Resolution 290. I wish to say a few words in explanation of the resolution, which disapproves the Reorganization Plan No. 24, of 1950, transferring the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce. As the Senate knows, the subcommittee on the RFC, of the Committee on Banking and Currency has been authorized to and is presently engaged in studying the operations of the RFC. The subcommittee has been holding hearings on the subject often and long. Hearings have been held every day this week, and in fact for several weeks. We are nearing the completion of the hearings. We will not, of course, have the report ready in time for the vote on the resolution, which I expect to ask be had on the 6th of July.

Mr. President, I am opposed to the reorganization plan because primarily I think it is premature, and would have the effect, to a great extent of nullifying the whole purpose of the study now being made by the Committee on Banking and Currency. It is also in direct opposition to the recommendation of the Hoover Commission. The Hoover Commission recommended a review and study and curtailment of the operations of the RFC. But in the meantime, bills have been introduced which are designed to liberalize the lending policies of the Government, not all of them by the RFC as such, but they also contemplate the creation of new lending agencies. Those bills are under consideration by the Small-Business Committee. So I think it would be highly improper for us at this moment, in the midst of the various studies which are going on, to transfer the RFC to a department under a reorganization plan which in effect gives to the Secretary of Commerce the power to determine the policy of this greatest of all lending agencies.

Mr. President, I hope the Senate will give some attention to the matter. I think very few Senators have actually taken the time to study the real extent of the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It has power of lending which, to a very great extent, is an irresponsible power. It is not responsible in the sense that expenditures through the regular departments are responsible to the committees of the Congress and subject to the action of these bodies themselves.

I hope that between now and July 6 the Members of the Senate will take occasion to read the material which was issued by the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, in regard to this reorganization plan. The committee has prepared a very thorough and fine statement about the testimony which was taken. The hearings of that testimony have been printed. In case Senators are not able to read all of it in the short time available, let me say there is a very good digest of the hearings, which can be read in a very short time.

So, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on the calendar day of Thursday, July 6, 1950, at the hour of 4 o'clock, p. m., the Senate proceed to vote on Senate Resolution 290, a resolution disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950; that the time between 12 o'clock noon and 4 p. m. on said day be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing said resolution, to be controlled, respectively, by myself, for one side, and by a Senator yet to be named for the other side.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me inquire about this matter. It relates to Reorganization Plan No. 24, does it not?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have already discussed the matter with the distinguished Senator from Arkansas. The only point left undecided was the amount of time the Senator felt would be needed for debate.

Although it is agreeable to Senators on this side to have 4 hours allowed for debate, yet since it is desired to conserve time, perhaps 3 hours would be sufficient.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Of course, I wish to conserve time, too; and perhaps not more than 3 hours will be required.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Arkansas?

ANNOUNCEMENT OF HEARINGS TO BE HELD ON REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 27 OF 1950

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—although I shall not object—I wish to take this occasion to announce to the Senate, and for the information of others who may be interested, that on July 6 the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments will begin to hold hearings on Reorganization Plan No. 27.

Mr. WHERRY. Let me inquire whether that is the plan relating to the social-security system.

Mr. McCLELLAN. It is the plan to create a Department of Health, Security, and Education.

Mr. President, I may say that it is the hope of the committee that we can conclude the hearings the following day; in other words, we shall hold hearings on the 6th and on the 7th of July, and shall hope to conclude them on the 7th, so that the committee can act soon and can report on the resolution of disapproval.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say that I have no objection at all to what is contemplated by the Senator from Arkansas, but I have a question about the parliamentary situation. As I recall the provisions of the controlling act, it provides that when such a measure is taken up, a certain number of hours shall elapse between the time when the measure is taken up and the time when the vote on it is taken.

Perhaps I did not hear, when the request was made, a statement in regard to waiving the time requirement. However, I believe that in the law there is a specific time requirement in that respect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request is that the vote be taken at 4 p. m. on July 6, and that the Senate debate the question prior to that time, namely, between the hours of 12 noon and 4 p. m., with the time to be equally divided between the proponents and the opponents. Thus, there will be 4 hours in which to debate that question; 4 hours will be the limit.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HOLLAND. At what time would the measure be taken up in pursuance of the provisions of the controlling law?

The VICE PRESIDENT. At noon on July 6, under the unanimous-consent agreement which is proposed.

Mr. HOLLAND. Very well; I did not hear that part of the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request propounded by the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The unanimous-consent agreement, as subsequently reduced to writing, is as follows:

Ordered, That on the calendar day of Thursday, July 6, 1950, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 290) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950, and that at the hour of 4 o'clock p. m. on said day, the Senate proceed to vote, without further debate, on the question of agreeing to the said resolution.

Ordered further, That the time between 12 o'clock noon and 4 o'clock p. m. on said day be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the resolution and controlled, respectively, by Mr. FULBRIGHT and Mr. ————.

INTERSTATE TRADE BARRIERS AGAINST MOVEMENT OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, yesterday morning it was my pleasure to testify before the distinguished subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee headed by the able junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE]. I commented on the imperative need of breaking down interstate trade barriers against the freest possible movement of dairy products. My specific reference was to the totally obnoxious and phony health regulations which have been imposed here in the District of Columbia against so-called foreign milk.

I indicated that my colleagues and I in the Midwest have no objection to legitimate health protection for the consumer, but we do object to and we do intend to take decisive action to prevent the maintenance of little Chinese walls here in the District against midwestern milk. As I stated yesterday, we are having enough trouble with the Red iron curtain without there being a District of Columbia iron curtain.

We want to be fair to the milk-consuming population in the District. The only way to do so is to break down the phony health barriers. In my testimony, I pointed out the ridiculous contradiction between our attempts to break down trade barriers in Europe, while we tolerate the erection of trade barriers right here at home.

In the course of my testimony there were several colloquies with my good friend the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] and the very capable senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN]. In the extemporaneous comments which I thereafter presented, I touched upon many interrelated problems. I do not feel that we should forget that very few, if any, problems exist in isolation. This matter of barriers against dairy products must be viewed in terms of the total midwestern dairy picture, as well as in terms of the related problems.

While I would have hoped that there would have been opportunity to present the testimony in a more systematic way, I do feel that the extemporaneous exchanges bespeak the depths of the various Senators' feelings on this issue.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my statement may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF HON. ALEXANDER WILEY, UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

Senator WILEY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

First, let me say that the present Korean crisis notwithstanding, one of the aims of the United States State Department is to encourage the European countries to break down the tariff walls between them—walls which have been set up for hundreds of years and which have impeded the free flow of goods back and forth across boundaries. European nations, prior to the present crisis, have been groping toward a customs union, so to speak.

However, while our officials have been encouraging international trade in Europe and elsewhere, we find that a completely opposite movement is under way here in our own country. This movement particularly affects dairy products and has special reference to bottled fluid milk.

More and more, we note that individual States and municipalities are setting up restrictions against importation of so-called foreign milk, by which is meant milk produced outside the local milkshed. These barriers are set up for alleged health reasons, and yet it only takes a casual observer to note that the health reasons are merely being used as a cloak and a subterfuge to cover up the desire of local producers to have a completely protected market.

Here in the District of Columbia, we see one of the worst such instances of barring so-called foreign milk. You can import into the District practically anything produced elsewhere in our Nation, including the products of distilleries of Kentucky and various beers, of which my State produces the best quality, of course; but you cannot import good bottled fluid milk from Wisconsin—milk which could come in in refrigerated tank cars, and which would be every bit as nutritious and vitamin-rich as milk produced by Maryland and Virginia farmers. Wisconsin, I might mention, is one of the 32 States governed by provisions of the code of the United States Public Health Service.

There are, of course, more phases to this question than simply the phony health regulations. There is the whole problem of Federal milk-marketing orders. Without, however, attempting to present a final solution to that phase, I say that this Congress should, before it quits, take action along lines which I believe will be recommended by this Senate Agriculture Subcommittee whose net effect will, I presume, be to encourage the freest possible movement of dairy products between States. Moreover, areas like the District should also take parallel action.

We of the Middle West have been tremendously hard hit by the decline in dairying income. Within a few days, on July 1, the vicious oleomargarine yellow-color law takes effect, and the dairy industry will have suffered another staggering blow. The Midwest is the dairying heart of the Nation, and I appeal to the rest of our country to take cognizance of the Midwest's need.

I have used the analogy that the Midwest is the dairying heart of the Nation; another analogy which has been used is that it is the backbone of the country, and God knows it is.

My State is 50 percent agricultural and 50 percent industrial. As you know, the farmer has been the best buyer in the world. He is the fellow who really created the market for the industries in the cities and now, with the tremendous decline in milk prices and with conditions as they are at present, when we are creating barriers such as we are criticizing in Europe, creating them here in this country, the effect will be that you will demoralize your purchasing market in the Midwest; and you cannot cut off one arm very easily without injuring the rest of the body.

Senator GILLETTE. Senator, may I interrupt you there and ask you if you have figures to show the percentage of your farm income that is represented by sale of dairy products.

Senator WILEY. Well, I have them in my office, but not with me.

However, I can say, as far as Wisconsin is concerned, of course, that is practically our entire income, especially if you consider, on top of it, the income that comes from the sale of the dairy cows.

As I recall the figures, the dairy cows and the calves produce about 39 percent of the income. You take that, plus the milk and the farmers' income from those two items, the sale of the cows and the sale of the milk, probably represents about 95 percent of our income in our State.

Now, the income in our State is down 25 percent, which affects these small farmers. They are mostly small farmers. We do not have very many big farmers in Wisconsin, and the small farmer is getting in the same shape that he was in the thirties.

I have some personal experience, having been an operator of a farm since 1916, and I know what I am talking about.

I know that when you attempt to reach out and sell your milk, as they are doing today, for a little over 5 cents a quart, and the same milk, when it is delivered to you in the afternoon, costs 19 cents a quart, I know, and it is very apparent that the farmer is not getting the 19 cents. A phony bill of goods about alleged farm profits has been sold all over the country and it has created friction between the city folks and farm folks—friction and prejudice.

Now, we know that in this area the farmer gets something like 12 cents a quart for his milk, and God bless them for that, but I think that you pay in the store 22 cents for that milk.

Again, I think that the public should be made aware that the farmer is not getting the 22 cents, he is getting the 12 cents.

The point I am making, Senator, is that the farmer in the Midwest cannot produce his milk for 5 cents or 6 cents a quart, considering the high price of labor and the high price of machinery and increased taxes, and everything else.

As a consequence, the situation cannot be localized. We cannot simply say, "Well, too bad about you fellows out there; too bad, we are sorry for you," and then stop there. The situation is more serious than that because what it means is that you are going to have your milk cows sold off and you are going to find also that the Government has considerably less taxes; and you are going to find again an exodus from the farms. You are going to have farms for sale and it will be the beginning of a Nation-wide economic tailspin that we do not want to happen.

Now, I will go back to my statement.

From what I have said heretofore on this, one might get the idea that I was speaking simply for the producers of milk. I am also speaking, however, for consumers. Milk is the finest food and the cheapest food, and it is needed by all categories from the baby to the elderly man or woman.

Now, here is a strange thing. You can go down to the store and you can pay $1.49 for a quart of concentrated orange juice which will make, mixed with 3 quarts of water, pretty good orange juice; you can get that for $1.49.

But, because of an evil influence, and I do not know what it is—maybe it is competition for the thirst market of America—you have all of these other soft drinks and other things competing, and you find people buying them, when our children ought to be drinking, particularly the generation that has got to provide the brawn and brain of tomorrow, these youngsters coming up, they ought to be drinking what has been recognized throughout the ages as the best food in the world and the cheapest food in the world.

There is not any question in my mind that it is because of this competition that people will turn to a colored product, looking yellow, looking red, or a cola or some kind of a soft drink. The result will be that the child, instead of having nutriment for his teeth and bones and his organs, will get that which will deteriorate him, and the result will be more pressure for socialized medicine, whereas you can give him a good milk product and that pressure will be taken off.

Senator GILLETTE. You may know, Senator, that Senator AIKEN of this committee developed by questioning that the sale of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia was heavier, per person, than the sale of milk.

Senator WILEY. Well, I want to say this, that he may have developed that but from my observation throughout the years, I do not think that you can lay that entirely or even in large part to the citizens of the District of Columbia.

I think that the Capital of our country is the refreshment center for tourists that come down here and who imbibe a large proportion of it. That has been my observation.

I have made that statement so many times and I am ready to make it in public again, that when I go out on Sundays and see the thousands of people that go to church, the local people, I will say that this consumption of liquors that Senator AIKEN speaks of here, must be attributed only in minor part to the citizens of this district.

I think that it is just a natural consequence of people coming to Washington and they have got that habit from years ago, when they came down here and could not interview a Government official without having their heads taken off. I had some of them in my own office, and they go back to the hotel and they say, "By Joe, I better forget that."

That is just one instance, and it makes a sort of an oasis in the desert of the Capital of the Nation.

Senator GILLETTE. They try to drown their sorrows.

Senator WILEY. Well, not only do they try to drown their sorrows, but they also come here, at times, to renew their youth.

Senator AIKEN. Well, Senator, when the Republicans come in, they drown their sorrows and when the successful Democrats come back, then they have to celebrate their victory; either way you have the drinking.

Senator WILEY. Well, I will say this, that while there may be something to it, I know of no group, and I have said that time and time again to some of the preachers, that I know of no group, and I challenge the preachers, where you can find a bigger percentage of teetotalers in the country than in the United States Senate.

I make none of these statements to reflect upon this legislative body, because there is very little evidence in the Senate or out of the Senate that there is anywhere that indulgence in intoxicating liquor as elsewhere. Percentage-wise, there is a bigger group of those who totally abstain in the Senate than there is around this table now or in any other group that I know of.

So, my statement, Senator—you precipitated this philippic on my part by implying that we are great drinkers in Washington, D. C.

Now, I say that the drinkers ought to turn to milk. You agree with that, do you not?

Senator AIKEN. I do agree.

Senator WILEY. All right, then, we have got that settled.

Senator AIKEN. The thought that I was getting at is, in the first place, that people drink too little milk and too much alcoholic beverages.

Senator WILEY. And milk, as I said, is the finest food and the cheapest food. I say again it is the cheapest food. It is tremendous, what you can get the finest milk in the world for.

I want to make this point, and I want to make it clear so that if the press get hold of it and will get it out, that where milk is selling for 22 cents a quart in this area, the farmer does not get more than 12 cents for that milk. So, you have got the poor farmer, who has to provide all of the capital, all of the work, all of the labor and the hauling, undoubtedly, or pay for the hauling of the milk; and within the course of a few hours the price has gone up practically 100 percent.

Now, out in my State, it has gone up as much as 200 percent on the same day. Now, there is something wrong in that picture; so that the average citizen should not get the idea that the milk farmer is getting what the consumer pays for that milk. That should be clearly stated so that the people will understand the situation and so that prejudice would not be created.

I have even heard bankers who had the wrong impression about this situation. I could go into a recent conversation that I had even with a good citizen of my own State, which showed how little he understood about it, even though he was living in the milk area.

I was talking with a gentleman from Racine last week, where the farmers are getting 6 cents a quart for milk and the fellow that distributed it, the fellow who goes around with the milk placing it at the doorsteps, he gets around $1,000 a month, and in Chicago they make as much as $1,500 a month for distributing that same milk, which sells for 21 cents in that area, after the farmer has gotten his 6 cents.

What I am saying is that I want to get the facts before the consumer so that he does not get a false impression.

Senator AIKEN. The average price for milk in the New England and New York milk shed was $3.55 a hundred for the month of May. That is approximately 7 cents a quart.

Mr. HADLICK. That is the blend price.

Senator AIKEN. That is the blend price. Of course, they get about 9 cents for the percentage of it that is delivered on the consumer's doorstep. Then, they get less than 7 cents for that which is used for other purposes. The average was $3.55 a hundred for the month of May.

It will go up 44 cents a hundred beginning July 1 when the dry season begins.

You started this, Senator WILEY, when you mentioned 12 cents. I know that the producers in this area right around Washington get 12 cents a quart approximately for that part of the milk which is used for direct consumer use; and I presume there is a larger percentage of it used for direct consumer use right around here than in other areas of the country.

Senator GILLETTE. There are two price levels, Senator.

Senator AIKEN. But right here in Washington they get around $3.50 a hundred, or around 7 cents a quart for that which they buy and sell in the jails and hospitals.

Senator GILLETTE. Institutions.

Senator AIKEN. Institutions, yes, so I presume the average in the District would be 9 cents a quart to the farmer, and then you have transportation and other costs which come out of that, which are charged up against receipts.

That is the top figure anywhere in the country, I think. So, while the farmer gets 12 cents for part of his milk, in Washington the consumers pay 21 and 22 cents for it.

In other parts of the country you can figure on 6 cents or 7 cents as more nearly accurate, as the farmers' prices of milk.

Senator WILEY. The second point I was going to make is the depreciated income to the farmer not only hits him but hits every other segment, so that it may precipitate a Nation-wide tailspin that is always caused by a recession starting in the farm areas.

Now, I bring that to the fore because a lot of people think we are talking only for the farmer. Well, we are talking for the consumer as well. We think there may be a question about the distribution costs, when the man that just takes it around from door to door makes $1,000 a month and when the farmer loses in the production, there is something wrong in Denmark.

Then, there is the question of the Government's return in the form of taxes. If the farmer's income has gone down 25 percent, why, of course, the Government will get less taxes. Under the crisis which we are now facing, the Government is going to lose much-needed income.

Our Federal Government is now faced with tremendous new military expenses in the Korean crisis. By breaking down health barriers, you can keep the Midwest healthy economically so as to pay the income taxes which the Government needs. Furthermore, if you can give us the market that we're entitled to, we can save the Commodity Credit Corporation hundreds of millions of dollars that will otherwise be used to support milk.

Everyone recognizes the police power of the respective States to protect their own health, but such power has its limits. Phony milk regulations or orders which have no basis in common sense cannot be designated as the valid exercise of police power. Rather, they comprise in effect arbitrary interstate barriers which the Constitution itself prohibits. They create "iron curtains" that curb the natural flow of commerce. We are having enough trouble with Red iron curtains now without erecting District of Columbia iron curtains.

Now, Congress on February 27, 1925, enacted into law bill known as Public, No. 496, Sixty-ninth Congress (S. 2803). This law authorized the Health Officer, under the direction and with the approval of the Commissioners, to make and enforce all reasonable regulations consistent with the act of Congress.

The Commissioners have from time to time promulgated regulations. However, there has been no comprehensive study of these regulations for many years. They have been amended in minor details from time to time.

During the past 25 years the United States Public Health Service has enacted and amended its code for the inspection of dairy farms producing milk for use in various parts of the country. The code was revised in 1947. At that time there was a comprehensive study made by the United States Public Health Service resulting in the latest edition published in 1947. Thirty-two States have adopted and are governed by the provisions of the code of the United States Public Health Service relating to dairy farms. Some of these States include Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, and many other.

There can be no question that the provisions of this code adequately protect the public in securing an ample supply of pure, wholesome milk.

On July 1, 1950, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia intend to prevent the importation of milk from dairy farms unless the said dairy farms comply with the regulations of the Commissioners relative to the importation of milk into the District of Columbia. These regulations are most restrictive and are not in the public interest in that they prohibit the shipment of milk into the District of Columbia from dairy farms which are qualified and approved under the regulations of the United States Public Health Service.

A simple and expeditious remedy could be effected merely by the District of Columbia Commisisoners passing a regulation immediately which would direct the health officer of the District of Columbia to inspect dairy farms which have been approved by the United States Public Health Service or one of the States having rules and regulations comparable to those provided in the Code of the United States Public Health Service, and the health officer would then be directed to issue a permit to such dairy farmer authorizing him to ship his milk and cream into the District of Columbia.

Legislation is not needed to effect the above. A regulation of the Commissioners is sufficient. This regulation can be enacted immediately.

Since 1942 farms which were approved by certificate from the United States Public Health Service or from the health officer of the local State have been permitted to ship their milk into the District of Columbia. The Commissioners have ordered this terminated as of June 30.

There is no question that this milk, so inspected as described above, is pure and wholesome. The District of Columbia is entitled to have an ample supply of milk, and it would have a strong tendency to reduce the cost of milk, cream, and dairy products to the housewife.

Now, I am back where I started. And, talking about iron curtains, on the floor of the Senate, you will hear great speeches—or are they great?—when some of the Senators get up and tell about England not willing to cooperate and other countries not ready to get in and cooperate in relation to cutting down their tariff walls, their barriers in Europe. Well, they have lived there for thousands of years with those walls.

We, in this country, do not have those barriers between the States, those walls; but under the guidance of folks who have selfish interests to protect, I assume, we have permitted under the guise of police regulations and health provisions, and so forth, the erection of these barriers. It is easy enough for the human mind to do these things if there is not in the mind respect for the law of the land.

Now, I appeal directly to the Commissioners here; and if there is no action, then I will ask that this subcommittee go down and consider the over-all picture. I refer to the right of producers, the right of consumers, the right of the Government (i. e., the tax collector), and the effect of creating and permitting to be created by any lax action on the part of those who should operate, the Commissioners, to wit—permitting to continue this fungus growth that might well turn into something that would be really detrimental to the political and economic life of this country.

You can ship in all the drugs; you can ship all of the alcoholic liquors and malt; but you are not going to be permitted to ship in that which the law of the land says is O. K. and which other States have inspected and said is O. K. and which is the best and cheapest food in the world. It does not make sense, Mr. Chairman.

Senator GILLETTE. Thank you, Senator WILEY.

Do you have any questions, Senator AIKEN?

Senator AIKEN. No.

Senator GILLETTE. Does counsel have questions?

Mr. HADLICK. No.

Senator GILLETTE. We appreciate very much your coming here this morning with your excellent statement, Senator.

MAINTENANCE OF A DOMESTIC TIN-SMELTING INDUSTRY

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Calendar No. 1867, Senate bill 3666, relating to the domestic tin-smelting industry. The bill has been reported without amendment—or, at least, without amendment of any consequence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOLLAND in the chair). The bill will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 3666) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry, reported from the Committee on Armed Services, with an amendment.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I inquire if the Senator from Texas requested unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He did.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say that I understood the Senator to say there was no amendment to the bill. However, the clerk has stated that there is an amendment. Does the amendment change the bill in any way?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, this measure merely extends for 5 years the act passed during the Eightieth Congress.

Mr. WHERRY. What is the amendment?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. There is no amendment——

Mr. WHERRY. I understood the clerk to state that the bill is reported with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the clerk to state that the bill has been reported with an amendment. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The amendment is simply a technical one.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1——

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, inasmuch as the Senator has stated that the amendment is only technical in nature, I have no objection to the request for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services, with an amendment on page 1, in line 7, after the word "amended", to strike out "by Public Law 824, Eightieth Congress", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to strengthen the common defense and to meet industrial needs for tin by providing for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry," approved June 28, 1947, as amended, is amended by striking out "June 30, 1951," and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1956."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and the third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 3666) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, yesterday I presented to the Senate certain information in regard to the then condition of the switchmen's strike against five western and midwestern railroad companies.

At this time I desire to present certain additional information, bringing the situation as nearly up to the present moment as it is within my power to do.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Certain Senators have matters to submit for the RECORD, I am sure. Will the Senator yield for that purpose?

Mr. DONNELL. I am glad to do so.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 2348. An act to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States;

S. 3550. An act to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter) and rice and rice products;

S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes;

S. J. Res. 170. Joint resolution to provide for the transfer of the paintings The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and The Chasm of the Colorado from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior; and

S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution transferring the plaster cast of the statue of George Washington from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following routine business was transacted:

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following letters, which were referred, as indicated:

REPORT OF HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE AGENCY

A letter from the Acting Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Washington, D. C., transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the agency for the calendar year 1949 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a list of papers and documents on the files of several departments and agencies of the Government which are not needed in the conduct of business and have no permanent value or historical interest, and requesting action looking to their disposition (with accompanying papers); to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Papers in the Executive Departments.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina and Mr. LANGER members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Petitions, etc., were laid before the Senate, or presented, and referred as indicated:

By the VICE PRESIDENT:

Petitions of sundry citizens of the United States, praying for the strengthening of the United Nations into a world court; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The memorial of Alice Kamokila Campbell, of Ewa, Oahu, Hawaii, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing statehood for Hawaii (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

A resolution adopted by Club 100, One Hundredth Infantry Battalion, Hilo, Hawaii, favoring the appointment of Tom T. Okino to be a judge of the Third Circuit in Hawaii; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SALTONSTALL (for himself and Mr. LODGE):

Resolutions of the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, relating to the inclusion in the rivers and harbors bill the necessary funds to dredge Wellfleet Harbor, Mass.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

(See resolutions printed in full when laid before the Senate by the Vice President on June 29, 1950, p. 9425, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

Resolutions of the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; to the Committee no Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

"Resolutions memorializing Congress to take immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts

"Whereas the maintenance of a strong and substantial merchant marine fleet is vitally essential for the economic welfare and strength of all sections of the United States of America; and

"Whereas in the present uncertain, volatile world conditions, the continuance of an effective fleet of naval ships of all types is essential for national safety, inasmuch as the maintenance of such a fleet may be the most important factor in averting another devastating war; and

"Whereas in peacetime a powerful merchant-marine fleet adds substantially to the economic strength of the United States, it also serves to train competent personnel, which in time of war becomes a strong and effective auxiliary to our fleet of fighting ships; and

"Whereas the construction and maintenance of a lusty merchant marine and naval fleet is entirely dependent on the availability of skilled engineers, mechanics, and artisans; and

"Whereas the Commonwealth of Massachusetts includes within its present population a substantial number of men experienced in the various trades and crafts required in building, repairing, and refitting ships of all types; and

"Whereas due to the present limited amount of ship construction, repairing, and refitting work currently available to the shipyards of Massachusetts, innumerable skilled shipyard workers, many over 40 years of age, are now unemployed, and numerous others are threatened with unemployment; and

"Whereas the enforced discharges of more skilled shipyard workers may result in their taking employment in other industries, or migrating to other sections of the country; and

"Whereas the unavailability of skilled shipbuilders in or near communities where suitable yards are located may present a problem of major national proportions in the event of war or serious threats of war; and

"Whereas the safety of our Nation requires an effective Navy and powerful merchant marine to be maintained at a level equal to that of any potential foe who seemingly has added at least three sizable battleships to a growing fleet; and

"Whereas such fleets are possible only with an adequate supply of shipbuilders: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the general court of Massachusetts memorializes the Congress of the United States to take immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent forthwith by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the presiding officer of each branch of Congress, and to the Members thereof from this Commonwealth.

"In house of representatives, adopted, June 21, 1950.

"LAWRENCE R. GROVE,
"Clerk.

In senate, adopted, in concurrence, June 23, 1950.

"IRVING N. HAYDEN,
"Clerk."

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate resolutions of the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, identical with the foregoing, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

GENOCIDE CONVENTION—RESOLUTION OF ARMENIAN YOUTH FEDERATION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, the Armenian Youth Federation, which met in annual convention in Washington this week, adopted a resolution asking the United States Senate to approve the genocide convention. I, myself, am very much in favor of this convention, and I hope the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will consider this resolution along with other expressions of sentiment. I ask unanimous consent to insert the resolution in the RECORD, and that it be appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE ARMENIAN YOUTH FEDERATION IN WASHINGTON, JUNE 27, 1950

Whereas—

1. The tragedy of the Armenian people who fell victim of genocide during the First World War never vanished from our hearts and shall never disappear from the conscience of the free peoples of the world;

2. Armenian leaders, intellectuals, and clergy in Soviet Russia are undergoing the process of systematic persecution;

3. The fate of the American people is shared by the peoples of Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, by the Poles, Ukranians, Bulgarians, and others today, and by the Jews and Greeks yesterday;

4. There is a community in the sufferings of victims of Russian persecution, but there must also be solidarity in defense against this unspeakable horror and barbarism conceived by the evil minds of the politiburo;

5. We remember with dismay that the Turkish perpetrators of genocide on 1,100,000 Armenians were never punished because of the lack of international law and that the punishment of the Nazis was criticized because of a similar inadequacy of law. We cannot allow it to happen again;

6. The genocide convention now under consideration for ratification by the parliaments of the world and by the United States Senate is a moral, legal, and political necessity for our times and is a source of hope to the numerous survivors of genocide that this ruthless crime will be abolished forever from the face of the earth: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved—

A. That the Armenian Youth Federation urges the Senate of the United States to ratify immediately the genocide convention.

B. To ask the delegation of the federation to present copies of this resolution to President Truman and Members of the United States Senate concerned and to the United Nations.

RESOLUTIONS OF WISCONSIN BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I have in my hand a series of resolutions in the form of declaration of policy adopted at the Fifty-fourth Annual Convention of the Wisconsin Bankers' Association. This declaration was forwarded to me today by the distinguished secretary of the association, my good friend, Wall Coapman. I think that my colleagues will be tremendously interested in these statements on the vital need for Federal economy, the need for ending the Government deficit, for relieving taxes on American businesses, and so on.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of resolutions be printed at this point in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DECLARATION OF POLICY ADOPTED AT THE FIFTY-FOURTH ANNUAL CONVENTION, WISCONSIN BANKERS ASSOCIATION

Be it resolved by the bankers of Wisconsin in convention assembled at Milwaukee, June 19, 20, and 21, 1950, That the following declaration of policy be adopted and the officers of the association and members be so informed; further, that wide distribution of this statement be made by member banks to their respective local newspapers for publication, and for discussion with public officials that represent them in various divisions of government. The secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is also directed to send copies of this declaration of policy to all State associations and to the officers, divisions, and sections of the American Bankers Association.

FEDERAL EXPENDITURES

Bankers of Wisconsin recognize that it is necessary for the Federal Government to expend large sums of money to build up our defenses and to help other democratic nations recover their economic and military strength. They believe further that these huge expenditures together with other sizable public disbursements by the Federal Government are placing a severe strain on the resources of the country; they, therefore, urge the Federal Government to make all possible efforts to reduce expenditures whereever possible and to defer all new welfare programs until it is possible to balance the national budget.

DEFICIT FINANCING

The policy of the Federal Government to spend more than it receives in taxes at a time of high national income is extremely dangerous to the country's welfare. Governments, like business enterprises and individuals, cannot spend beyond their incomes indefinitely and remain solvent. The increase of the public debt which results from this policy serves only to postpone the day of reckoning, as well as to create money with diminishing purchasing power. The bankers of Wisconsin have the duty to remind Federal administrative officers and Members of Congress of the danger of this policy and to demand that they put an end to deficit financing at the earliest possible moment.

LOANS TO SMALL BUSINESS

The banks of the country have sufficient loanable funds to meet all meritorious requests for business loans, large and small. Therefore, they do not believe there is any necessity for government to create new credit agencies.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST SMALLER CORPORATIONS

As an encouragement to smaller business, bankers of Wisconsin favor an adjustment downward in the Federal income tax of 53 percent presently imposed on smaller corporations.

RESERVE REQUIREMENTS

Bankers of Wisconsin hereby go on record as opposed to any Federal legislation that would vest in the Federal Reserve Board the authority or power to regulate the reserve requirements of any banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve System.

REVISION IN UNITED STATES TREASURY REGULATIONS PERMITTING TEMPORARY BORROWING AGAINST PLEDGE OF UNITED STATES SAVINGS BONDS

Bankers of Wisconsin are cooperating with the United States Treasury Department in promoting the sale of savings bonds and are cognizant of the fact that the liberal purchase and retention of such bonds by our citizenry is a major factor in counteracting inflationary tendencies, as well as in retaining a stake in the economic welfare of our country.

Bankers of Wisconsin believe, however, that it is as necessary on the part of the United States Treasury to devise ways to allow holders to continue ownership of their bonds through temporary borrowing on the security thereof as it is to spend millions of dollars promoting the sale of new savings bonds; therefore, the bankers of Wisconsin recommend the promulgation by the Treasury of a regulation permitting owners of United States savings bonds to pledge them as collateral to any State or national bank or trust company, thereby not only assuring continued ownership but by such provision encouraging further purchases.

ABA URGED TO SPONSOR EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

Bankers throughout the Nation for many years have performed important financial services to their Government and the citizenry. These services include the sale and redemption of United States savings bonds, sale of marketable United States securities and the collection from employers of withholding and social-security taxes. Through their daily contacts with a substantially large section of the citizenry they maintain an influential position in the economy of the United States; therefore, bankers of Wisconsin urge the American Bankers Association to sponsor a national educational program to better inform the public of the part banks play in promoting a sound economy of the country.

CONSERVATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The hard fact that land and other natural resources are exhaustible becomes more evident every day. It is therefore urged that more Wisconsin bankers interest themselves in this problem and take an active part in sponsoring programs in their respective localities to better inform farmers of the part they must take in conserving our natural resources if they want this country to remain strong and prosperous.

YOUTH

The future of our country and its business enterprises is dependent on a healthy, alert, and properly informed younger generation. The bankers of Wisconsin call upon the association membership to subscribe to and participate in programs of encouraging youth activities in 4–H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Future Homemakers of America, Boys' Clubs and other worthy youth organizations, and to sponsor programs of better education in banking and financial transactions at the high-school level.

BANK PERSONNEL

The character building of bank employees is a very important obligation of bank management. Honesty, devotion to the interest of the bank, accuracy, strict attention to duties, courtesy, and other attributes so necessary to advancement should be inculcated in the minds of all personnel. Opportunities for education in banking should be made available to them and, most important, bank employees should be given the same working advantages and conveniences available to the employees in other trades and industries in their communities.

The bankers of Wisconsin are hereby urged to develop within their institutions personnel programs of education in the field of banking through courses offered by the American Institute of Banking, and graduate schools of banking.

As in the past, bankers of Wisconsin shall ask nothing of government that is not to the best interest and welfare of the public at large.

Respectfully submitted.

Resolutions Committee: O. K. Johnson, Chairman, Executive Vice President, Whitefish Bay State Bank; K. K. Duvall, President, First National Bank, Appleton; A. E. Francke, President, Northern Bank, Milwaukee; W. S. Hobbins, President, American Exchange Bank, Madison; F. J. Manning, Cashier, Security State Bank, Ladysmith; Rex Reeder, Executive Vice President, Marine National Exchange Bank, Milwaukee; E. A. Schipper, Executive Vice President and Cashier, State Bank of Viroqua; Carl Taylor, president, Waukesha State Bank; W. J. Tesch, President, Lincoln County Bank, Merrill.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. McFARLAND (for Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado), from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

S. 1281. A bill to amend the Federal Airport Act so as to make the United States share of costs for land acquisitions the same as for other project costs; without amendment (Rept. No. 1930).

By Mr. HOLLAND, from the Committee on Public Works:

H. R. 7219. A bill to authorize acquisition by the Administrator of General Services of certain land and the improvements thereon in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 1931).

By Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments:

S. 3653. A bill to provide for financing the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Treasury Department, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1932).

By Mr. SCHOEPPEL, from the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments:

S. 3652. A bill to facilitate the settlement of the accounts of certain deceased civilian officers and employees of the Government; without amendment (Rept. No. 1933).

PRINTING OF PAPER ENTITLED "A REPORT AS TO BOULDER CITY, NEV."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report an original resolution authorizing the printing of a comprehensive report by Henry Reining, Jr., on problems affecting Boulder City, Nev., and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 305) was read as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed, with illustrations, as a Senate document, a paper entitled "A Report as to Boulder City, Nev.," by Henry Reining, Jr., professor of public administration and political science, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, Calif.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, June 30, 1950, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

S. 2348. An act to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States;

S. 3550. An act to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter), and rice and rice products;

S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes;

S. J. Res. 170. Joint resolution to provide for the transfer of the paintings The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and The Chasm of the Colorado from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior; and

S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution transferring the plaster cast of the statue of George Washington from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. IVES:

S. 3853. A bill for the relief of Dr. Ercole Barattucci; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KILGORE (for himself and Mr. BRIDGES):

S. 3854. A bill to provide for the establishment of summer training installations to offer basic military training for certain civilian volunteers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. MYERS:

S. 3855. A bill for the relief of Alexandros Peter Colyvas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEHMAN:

S. 3856. A bill for the relief of Andrew Halasz; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MYERS:

S. 3857. A bill for the relief of Joseph K. Landa; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CHAPMAN:

S. 3858. A bill for the relief of Teofilo Nutini; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

(Mr. MAGNUSON introduced Senate bill 3859, to authorize the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States when the national security of the United States is endangered, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. MORSE:

S. 3860. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Okuni Kobayashi; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SUSPENSION OF CERTAIN IMPORT TAXES ON COPPER—AMENDMENT

Mr. McMAHON (for himself, Mr. LUCAS, and Mr. BENTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 494) to extend for 2 months the existing suspension of certain import taxes on copper, which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

ESTABLISHMENT OF WYOMING JACKSON HOLE NATIONAL PARK—AMENDMENTS

Mr. O'MAHONEY (for himself and Mr. HUNT) submitted amendments in the nature of a substitute, intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the bill (S. 3409) to establish the Wyoming Jackson Hole National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN LAND AND OTHER PROPERTY TRANSACTIONS BY MILITARY DEPARTMENTS—AMENDMENT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2856) to authorize certain land and other property transactions by the military departments, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services and ordered to be printed.

STATEHOOD FOR HAWAII—AMENDMENT

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 49) to enable the people of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

STATEHOOD FOR ALASKA—AMENDMENT

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 331) to provide for the admission of Alaska into the Union, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles, and referred, as indicated:

H. R. 8112. An act to provide for the transfer to the States of the replicas of the State seals removed from the Chamber of the House of Representatives of the United States; and

H. R. 8958. An act relating to the policing of the buildings and grounds of the Library of Congress; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

H. R. 8920. An act to reduce excise taxes, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

H. J. Res. 453. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the First United States International Trade Fair, to be held at Chicago, Ill., August 7 through 20, 1950; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

Horace W. Harper, of Texas, to be a member of the Railroad Retirement Board for the term expiring August 29, 1954;

Travis P. Burroughs, and sundry other candidates for appointment in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service; and Solomon J. Axelrod, and sundry other candidates for appointment and promotion in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service.

CONVENTIONS WITH CANADA RELATING TO DOUBLE TAXATION—REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY

The VICE PRESIDENT. As in executive session, the Chair lays before the Senate Executive R, Eighty-first Congress, second session, a convention between the United States of America and Canada, signed at Ottawa on June 12, 1950, modifying and supplementing in certain respects the convention and accompanying protocol for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion in the case of income taxes signed at Washington on March 4, 1942.

Mr. CONNALLY. I move that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the convention, and that the convention, together with the President's message be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the injunction of secrecy is removed from the convention, and the convention, together with the President's message will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the President's message will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears no objection.

The message from the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the convention between the United States of America and Canada, signed at Ottawa on June 12, 1950, modifying and supplementing in certain respects the convention and accompanying protocol for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion in the case of income taxes signed at Washington on March 4, 1942.

I also transmit for the information of the Senate the report by the Secretary of State with respect to the supplementary convention.

The supplementary convention has the approval of the Department of State and the Treasury Department.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 30, 1950.

(Enclosures: (1) Report of the Secretary of State; (2) supplementary convention with Canada relating to taxes on income.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. As in executive session, the Chair lays before the Senate Executive S, Eighty-first Congress, second session, a convention between the United States of America and Canada, signed at Ottawa on June 12, 1950, modifying and supplementing in certain respects the convention for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion in the case of estate taxes and succession duties signed at Ottawa on June 8, 1944.

Mr. CONNALLY. I move that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the convention, and that the convention, together with the President's message, be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the injunction of secrecy is removed from the convention, and the convention, together with the President's message will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the President's message will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears no objection.

The message from the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the convention between the United States of America and Canada, signed at Ottawa on June 12, 1950, modifying and supplementing in certain respects the convention and accompanying protocol for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion in the case of estate taxes and succession duties signed at Ottawa on June 8, 1944.

I also transmit for the information of the Senate the report by the Secretary of State with respect to the supplementary convention.

The supplementary convention has the approval of the Department of State and the Treasury Department.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 30, 1950.

(Enclosures: (1) Report of the Secretary of State; (2) supplementary convention with Canada relating to estate taxes and succession duties.)

ADDRESS BY SENATOR MYERS AT MEETING OF PENNSYLVANIA STATE COMMITTEE

[Mr. MYERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the address delivered by him at the meeting of the Pennsylvania State Committee at Harrisburg, Pa., on June 14, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

NO. 29 IN BIWEEKLY SERIES BROADCAST BY SENATOR MYERS TO PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA

[Mr. MYERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD No. 29 in the biweekly series of radio broadcasts to the people of Pennsylvania made by him on June 25, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

SENATOR MYERS' WASHINGTON NEWS-LETTER

[Mr. MYERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the Washington News-Letter prepared by him, a personal report to the people of Pennsylvania, dated June 22, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

UNBALANCED FUEL ECONOMY

[Mr. MYERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement made by him on March 25, 1950, in connection with Senate Resolution 239, submitted by him, authorizing an investigation and study of the available fuel reserves of the United States, and an article entitled "Unbalanced Fuel Economy," written by Harlan Trott and published in the Christian Science Monitor of June 23, 1950, which appear in the Appendix.]

THE HISS HERRING

[Mr. MUNDT asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "The Hiss Herring," published recently in the Daily Plainsman, of Huron, S. Dak., which appears in the Appendix.]

OUR ANTI-ANTI-COMMUNISTS—ARTICLE BY WILLIAM HENRY CHAMBERLIN

[Mr. MUNDT asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Our Anti-Anti-Communists," written by William Henry Chamberlin and published in a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal, which appears in the Appendix.]

STALIN OR GOD—ADDRESS BY GEORGE E. STRINGFELLOW

[Mr. MORSE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Stalin or God," delivered by George E. Stringfellow, vice president, Thomas A. Edison Industries, at the George E. Stringfellow ceremonial of Kalurah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Binghamton, N. Y., on May 27, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

WHEAT PRODUCTION OF KANSAS

Mr. DARBY. Mr. President, that "Kansas is the greatest wheat-producing State in the Union" is a universally known fact. At this time, in the light of international developments, we are concerned about the picture of our Nation's food situation, and an ample supply of wheat. This spring there was widespread gloom when crop forecasters predicted a short 1950 June production. Now harvest is in full swing in Kansas, and the June forecast is 166,000,000 bushels, which will add $24,000,000 to our farmers' income.

This year, as always, Kansas has delivered, so we do not need to worry about the wheat situation in connection with our international developments, when we know that the wheat-production problem is in the hands of Kansas farmers.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD an editorial by J. C. Mohler, which appeared in the Topeka (Kans.) State Journal of Friday, June 23. "Jake" Mohler, a great and distinguished man in agriculture, having attained national prominence in his service to Kansas and our Nation, is known and loved by everyone in Kansas. Before retiring last year he had been secretary of the Kansas State board of agriculture for 35 years. His appropriate editorial, "Wheat Miracle? That's Kansas," is typical of the fine spirit of the Kansas wheat farmers, and emphasizes what they produce on Kansas farms, not only this year, but always.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHEAT MIRACLE? THAT'S KANSAS

(By J. C. Mohler)

Three items of much significance appeared simultaneously in the news the other day—that the first car of this year's Kansas wheat crop had reached the Kansas City market, that its quality was fine, and that the improved weather conditions in the past month were expected to add $24,000,000 to the income of the State's wheat farmers for 1950.

The public, one might well say the world, has been anxiously awaiting word about the Kansas wheat at this critical stage of development. This is not unusual; in fact, it is quite customary, but there is always decided relief to know that the harvest is under way, what the quality of the grain is like, and particularly to be assured that the crop is turning out better than anticipated. Now the ticker and tape boys who have been running chills and fever can relax somewhat, along with the rest of us, and Kansas can take a bow in the comeback of the crop as its special contribution to the favorable trend of business generally the country over.

Even though the crop is making a garrison finish, there are some folks who seem to feel a bit apologetic for the State's total yield of wheat this year because the June forecast was but 166,000,000 bushels. Ordinarily when a crop shows exceptional improvement just before maturity its final production will exceed previous estimates. I suspect this may happen this year. But 166,000,000 bushels is nothing to induce pessimism. Indeed it is something to cheer about.

Up from the earth and out of the air and light, it is new wealth, something of value to society that did not exist before. It will stimulate business far and wide. It will give producers strong purchasing power and they are good spenders. It will gainfully employ elevators, mills, transportation systems and a host of others in the marketing and processing fields, in addition to fulfilling its chief and primary purpose in supplying food for mankind, and in which, after all, is found its truest expression of real wealth.

We have had larger wheat crops than that of this year but not many. In fact only in 11 years have greater wheat crops been raised. In value, however, the 1950 production may step up some. In my new freedom I'm certainly not at this late date going to engage in price predictions, but on the basis of present market quotations the year's crop could figure as worth in the neighborhood of $332,000,000. If realized, this amount would be exceeded only by the 3 years of 1946, 1947, and 1948.

While it may seem like straying a bit, the mere mention or memory of 1948 recalls a most remarkable year in the entire history of Kansas wheat growing. In that year the wheat in a most sensational manner proved its right to be known as the miracle crop, and of which we have also seen some evidence on a minor scale this season. Nearly 14,500,000 acres were seeded in the preceding fall for the crop of 1948. Because of dry weather the planting continued from normal seeding time until even winter days. The December 1947 forecast was for a crop of 159,000,000 bushels. The April forecast of 1948 indicated the same amount, and the May estimate was for 148,000,000.

From normal seeding date this would indicate a period of at least 7 months of as gloomy a picture as the State ever saw.

But look what happened: a June forecast of 160,000,000 bushels; a July estimate of 196,000,000 and in August 216,000,000. The statisticians followed this crop diligently but they couldn't keep up with it, and the final yield of 231,000,000 bushels reported made it the third largest crop of record.

This is indeed striking testimony of the remarkable recuperative ability of wheat and the rejuvenation powers of Kansas soils, which were given a chance to exhibit these qualities under a change in weather conditions that came just in the nick of time.

Well, that's Kansas, and the show goes on all the time, with a varied program.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

On his own request, and by unanimous consent, Mr. IVES was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate on Monday next.

On his own request, and by unanimous consent, Mr. LEHMAN was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate on Monday next.

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, Mr. WITHERS was excused from attendance upon the sessions of the Senate for an indefinite period.

EDUCATION OR TRAINING OF VETERANS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on the bill (S. 2596) relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944), and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read.

(For conference report, see House proceedings of June 28, 1950, pp. 9474–9478.)

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I am submitting the report in the absence of the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], chairman of the Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

Senator PEPPER wanted very much to call this matter up personally, since he has worked most diligently on the measure, but unfortunately he is detained in Florida due to the grave illness of his former law partner, Judge Waller.

The conference report represents the culmination of an effort of almost 2 years' duration to regularize and clarify the education and training program authorized by the GI bill of rights.

S. 2596 was unanimously approved by the Senate last year, and the conference report was unanimously approved by the House yesterday.

Mr. President, I ask that the conference report be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I was going to ask the Senator from Missouri to yield to me, to permit me to make remarks for approximately 15 or 20 minutes in connection with the introduction of a bill. I should like to do so when the Senator concludes his remarks.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, although my remarks probably will not take more than 15 or 20 minutes, nevertheless I am glad to yield to the Senator from Washington for the purpose he has indicated, if I may do so without losing the floor. I ask unanimous consent for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, before the Senator from Washington proceeds, if I may have his permission and that of the Senator from Illinois, I should like to make certain announcements at this time regarding the program. As soon as the Senator from Washington and the Senator from Wisconsin conclude their addresses, or any other Senators, I may say, who wish to be heard on the floor of the Senate this afternoon, I propose to move that the Senate recess until Monday next.

It is my understanding that a number of Senators will be out of town on Monday and Tuesday, and that it will be impossible probably to transact any business by reason of their absence. Therefore, I have agreed with the Senator from Missouri to have considered the bill (H. R. 2365) which is for the relief of the city of Chester, Ill., a bill which is now on the calendar—Calendar No. 1181—and, if there is any objection to voting on it Monday, we will postpone that until the following Wednesday, when all Senators will have returned.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit, I may say that I should like very much to have the vote on Wednesday, rather than on Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator's request will be granted.

Mr. President, on Wednesday, following the 4th of July, it is the intention of the majority leader to move to consider the nomination of Sumner T. Pike, of Maine, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. His term expires tonight, and the sooner we can ascertain what the Senate desires to do in regard to this nomination, the better it will be I think for the country, the Senate, and the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I desire to ask the distinguished majority leader whether it is contemplated that there will be a quorum call on Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. No; I do not believe there will be a quorum call on Monday, I may say to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I should like also to make this further announcement. The Senator from Arkansas has served notice that on July 6 Reorganization Plan 24 will be considered. There is a bill that probably can be reported by the Public Works Committee of the Senate, dealing with the extension of the Federal aid highway program. I hope that that bill will be reported, so we can take it up and dispose of it sometime next week. I also hope that the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry will report Senate bill 2636, to amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

I have merely mentioned those bills, Mr. President, as bills which we should take up next week.

There are also two other bills which have been reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, dealing with statehood for Alaska and statehood for Hawaii. I want to make this statement now with respect to those bills. I may say frankly that whether they will be considered will depend upon how long the Congress remains in session. In the event the Appropriations Committee reports the general appropriation bill next week, as I understand it may, and we begin consideration of the appropriation bill, to be followed by consideration of a tax bill, it will take us at least until July 31 to dispose of those two measures and other measures which I have discussed. I am very much in favor of statehood for Hawaii and statehood for Alaska, but I am not in favor of remaining here all summer, in order to put certain measures through. So it will all depend upon the time element.

I am still driving for adjournment of the Senate around July 31. We may not achieve that goal, but I believe we can. Of course, world conditions will have something to do with it, particularly the developments which may take place in connection with the Korean situation, which I hope will prove favorable, to the end that we may adjourn at that time. If they are not favorable, other developments may take place which will require our remaining in session longer than that. We are hoping for the best.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator one more question?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield first to the minority leader.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the majority leader for having announced the program. I wish to assure him that Senators on this side of the aisle will do everything possible to cooperate in carrying it out.

A bill was mentioned yesterday which I feel should be taken up, in view of the fact that the Senator has announced the program. It is Calendar No. 1365, the bill (S. 2311) to protect the United States against certain un-American and subversive activities, and for other purposes, reported from the Judiciary Committee on March 21. Does the Senator feel that in the list of bills he has announced there might be a possibility of including the consideration of that bill? That is the only one I have to suggest to the Senator, which most of the Members of the Senate on this side are very much interested in.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, some time ago, as the Senator will recall, I gave him a list of bills which the Democratic policy committee thought we might be able to have considered. That bill was not included at that time. As I recall, the Senator from Nebraska suggested only two additional bills, one being the so-called peril-point measure, and the other the bill relating to excise taxes which the House has passed.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. I presumed that was the decision of the policy committee at that time. So I gave no consideration to Senate bill 2311.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct, I may say. First, I may say that I feel the majority leader has properly stated the possible legislation that might be considered between now and July 31. But certainly the majority leader does not feel that all this proposed legislation, including the statehood bills, the appropriation bill and the tax bill can be completed by July 31. I am uncertain whether, in the event the time schedule runs beyond August 1, Senate bill 2311 might have the consideration of the majority leader, in revising the list he is proposing today.

Mr. LUCAS. I may say to the Senator from Nebraska that this is the first time that anyone has discussed Senate bill 2311 with the Senator from Illinois. Obviously, I should like to take it up at the proper time with the Democratic policy committee, because it is something new.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well.

Mr. LUCAS. I know that a number of Senators are interested in this bill, and I should like to take it up at the proper time with the Democratic policy committee. In the event we find it necessary to remain in session for any length of time, I may say there are many bills which can be considered.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the majority leader.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I should like to ask the majority leader a question on two matters.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I yielded on the theory that the Senator from Washington wished to speak approximately 20 minutes, and I was happy to yield to him for that purpose. I trust his speech will not be longer than that, but, of course, I do not want to insist on any limitation.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, this is a very important announcement; or, at least, I think it is important. I shall not be here very long. I want to go to lunch pretty soon.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I do not want to insist on this question, but there are on the calendar approximately 10 bills relating to the merchant marine, one of which involves a very important problem, the revival of shipping on the Great Lakes. Some of the bills may be passed when the Unanimous Consent Calendar is called, but I was hoping that the majority leader would keep in mind the fact that if we have a portion of a day for most of the maritime bills, many of which have already been passed by the House and have been subject to lengthy hearings, and as to which a great deal of work has been done by the subcommittee, there should be no difficulty in passing them. I think the world situation makes our merchant marine as important as is the military today.

Mr. LUCAS. May I inquire of the Senator how long he thinks it will take to dispose of the 10 bills which are on the calendar?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I think we could take them up in one afternoon, and those which appeared to be too controversial we could abandon, but I am sure we can convince the Senate that at least 8 of the 10 bills are vitally necessary.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a brief comment in connection with what the Senator from Washington stated regarding the Great Lakes shipping facilities?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. THYE. Calendar No. 1837, Senate bill 3109, is a bill to allow the sale of certain surplus ships to individuals or corporations desiring to convert the ships into package-freight carriers on the Great Lakes. There is a great need for them. I would say, without any hesitation whatever, that the bill should have been passed earlier in the session. There are favorable reports from all departments which are interested in the subject.

Mr. LUCAS. Let me make this suggestion: Let us wait until the calendar is called, and see how many of the bills can be passed on the call of the Unanimous Consent Calendar. Then we shall be in a position to ascertain the length of time it may take for the remainder of the bills. If it is at all possible, I shall be glad to accommodate the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I appreciate that statement. That is the suggestion I made to the Senator from Minnesota. I think the bill will probably pass if an explanation is given. It is meritorious, and I do not think there will be any difficulty in passing it.

There are several other bills in the agenda of 10 which I mentioned, which will probably pass. I think the suggestion of the minority leader is a good one.

Mr. THYE. When does the Senator expect to call the calendar again?

Mr. LUCAS. We may be able to do that the latter part of next week.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I wanted to ask the Senator from Illinois one more question. He mentioned the bill providing statehood for Alaska. I hope we reach the consideration of that bill at this session. The situation now not only involves the basic problem of whether Alaska should become a State, but its ramifications have gone far beyond that. In my opinion, the psychological effect of tying Alaska to this country as a State would be a great deterrent to the Russian attitude toward Alaska and the great Northwest. I invite attention to the fact that the Russian thinking as to territories is usually that a territory is some sort of a pawn that can be used in power politics or used for any purpose, depending upon the whim of the so-called mother country. As long as it remains in status of a territory, this thinking in respect to our attitude toward it, might invite attack. Whereas, its becoming an integral part of the United States serves notice that we mean to not only protect it but further consider her soil as inviolate as any part of the Nation. This the Russians will understand.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator please keep his speech to the minimum.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Yes.

Mr. LUCAS. I know all the arguments, I may say to my friend.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I hope, because of conditions in the Far East, the bill will be passed, for, in my opinion, Alaskan statehood is almost a war measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has the floor and has been granted unanimous consent to yield to the Senator from Washington for a period of time, estimated to be 15 or 20 minutes, to complete a statement. After that, the Senator from Missouri will be again recognized.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, where did I come in?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By the grace of the Senator from Missouri and the Presiding Officer.

Mr. LUCAS. I wanted to get the parliamentary situation correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President——

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, may I inquire for what purpose the Senator from Minnesota rises?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I should like to ask the majority leader with reference to a bill on the calendar.

Mr. DONNELL. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I should like to ask whether it would be possible to give attention and consideration to Calendar No. 951, Senate bill 1596, to authorize the Postmaster General to enter into special agreements for certain switching service by railway common carriers, and for other purposes.

I may say to the majority leader that the reason I ask about that bill is because there is a case before the Interstate Commerce Commission which involves a considerable amount of money, in the matter of railroad mail pay, and the Government's position in the case cannot be properly represented until the information which this bill would make available can be obtained.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, has the Senator discussed it with me previously?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I do not recall that I have.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator be so kind as to give me a memorandum in order that I may take it up with the Democratic Policy Committee on Wednesday of next week?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I shall be more than happy to do so.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the bill (S. 3336) to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

SECURITY OF UNITED STATES HARBORS

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I desire at this time to introduce a bill which I think is of an emergency nature and is very important to the whole country. Before I introduce the bill, I should like to preface its introduction by a very few remarks regarding its intent and purpose.

The President has been devoting a great deal of study to this and other issues involving the internal security of the Nation. On this particular score, however, existing legislation is neither clear nor suffiicently exact, in my opinion. It is my purpose to make it both clear and exact.

We have laws such as the Espionage Act of 1917 which provides the authority for the President to proclaim a national emergency and to issue directives concerning movement of vessels, search and seizure.

Even though we are still technically in a state war today, the Congress in a joint resolution under date of July 25, 1947, declared that the state of war and the national emergency were ended as of that date for the purposes of that statute. Consequently, it would be necessary for the President again to proclaim a national emergency to exercise the power to regulate movement of foreign vessels under the Espionage Act. At present, therefore, there is no clear authority giving the President the right to protect our ports against foreign-flag vessels bent upon missions of sabotage.

A foreign-flag vessel carrying an atomic weapon, or biological or bacteriological materials of warfare, presumably could enter our ports without inspection other than routine customs search. There is not sufficient authority to divert the movement of a possibly unfriendly or suspect vessel.

In other words, customs officers could go aboard a foreign-flag ship, and the captain of the ship could say to them, "I have 10,000 tons of wheat in the hold." That is as far as the customs inspection would go. Anything could be in the hold. Any cargo at all could be stored in the hold of that ship.

Little imagination is required to conceive what destruction could be wrought by an enemy nation which assigned a half-dozen vessels bearing atomic bombs to an equal number of our major ports in a modern day Pearl Harbor effort.

I propose to do this by amending the Espionage Act of 1917 by adding this or similar language to section 191. The language is suggested by those of us who have studied the matter from a legal standpoint. The language which is suggested is as follows:

Whenever the President finds that the security of the United States is endangered by reason of actual or threatened war, or invasion, or of disturbances or threatened disturbances of the international relations of the United States, the President is authorized to institute such measures and issue such rules and regulations—

(a) to govern the anchorage and movement of any foreign-flag vessels in the territorial waters of the United States, to inspect such vessels at any time, to place guards thereon, and, if necessary in his opinion in order to secure such vessels from damage or injury, or to prevent damage or injury to any harbor or waters of the United States, or to secure the observance of rights and obligations to the United States, may take for such purposes full possession and control of such vessels and remove therefrom the officers and crew thereof, and all other persons not especially authorized by him to go or remain on board thereof.

(b) to safeguard against destruction, loss or injury from sabotage or other subversive acts, accidents, or other causes of similar nature, vessels, harbors, ports, and waterfront facilities in the United States and in Alaska, the Territory of Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Any appropriation available for the national defense shall be available to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

The authority granted under this proposed language is the same authority which was given to the President of the United States prior to World War II for the protection of our harbors.

Let me emphasize that this does not apply to domestic vessels, insofar as directing their movement is concerned. It gives the President authority only to direct the movement of foreign-flag vessels.

The second section is designed to protect our ports, harbors, and water-front facilities against acts of sabotage. Under this section, if the President believes it advisable, he can, without declaring a national emergency, promulgate rules and regulations to restrict or prohibit entry of persons into harbor areas who might engage in acts of sabotage.

This latter authority was exercised during the war, under the War Powers Act which has expired.

In my view, in this day of undeclared wars and propaganda wars it is not always wise to be forced to declare a national emergency before being able to act. The very fact of declaration of a national emergency has the utmost propaganda value that has been and can be used against us.

The importance of taking proper legislative steps could hardly be overemphasized in this present period of international tensions. We must remember our previous experiences and take lessons from them. It should not be forgotten that there were many positive actions that could not be taken in preparation for our security prior to the passage of the War Powers Act.

The time to provide for the protection of our ports and harbors is now. We must take the legislative steps necessary to give the President this power to deal with foreign-flag vessels and to safeguard the water front areas of the United States without having to declare in advance that a national emergency exists.

The language of law which was sufficient in 1917 may no longer be adequate in an atomic age. It may be necessary to divert a foreign-flag vessel from its destination and to require that it go to anchorage elsewhere. At such an anchorage, away from our congested and industrially important port cities, inspection of the ship could take place without harm.

We have a technical advantage in the nuclear field, and must make the most of that advantage in this period of world stress.

Radioactivity or the presence of radioactive materials aboard a ship can be detected by technicians armed with Geiger counters, I believe, unless such a tremendous amount of shielding were used as to effectively conceal the radiation. That much shielding might be easily detected. It is my understanding that an atomic bomb, however, is not radioactive and does not become so until the explosion. Thus the search for an atomic bomb aboard a ship is not a simple matter of detection with a Geiger counter.

We cannot afford to take risks that an aggressor nation might make in an all-out effort to wreck our ports, our port cities, and our maritime strength through such action.

If for reasons of insufficient manpower or insufficient funds such risks exist, they must be eliminated. The security of our ports could be the determining element in a future conflict—if it comes.

Mr. President, I merely add that we in this country have taken great precautions for our national security. We have spent literally billions of dollars to prevent the United States from being attacked by an enemy, and to build up not only our attacking force but our defending force as well.

We know when an airplane comes across Alaska, for example, what the airplane is carrying, its probable speed, and the general direction in which it is flying. Accordingly we can alert ourselves. However, no law exists which gives protection to our harbors. A foreign-flag ship could steam into the harbor of New York, or it could steam into San Francisco, Seattle, Baltimore, or New Orleans, and could have in its hold dangerous and terrifying weapons. Under our present system of security regulations it could probably blow up not only our harbor facilities, but wreck an entire city as effectively as if an airplane had dropped a bomb. It seems to me that we have left uncovered, as it were, despite all our efforts, money, time, and study, this part of our national security. Under this bill the President need not inconvenience foreign-flag vessels coming to our shores. He could say, for example, "Let the English ships come in." He could say the same thing with respect to other foreign-flag carriers which belong to our allies. Our ports could be open to the ships of all nations, including the ships of Russia. However, I think it is high time that we did pay attention to the possibility I have mentioned.

I visualize, Mr. President, a great harbor such as the harbor of New York, in which there are many ship movements throughout the course of a day. Foreign-flag ships enter the harbor. They come from the Middle East with oil. They come from the Far East, too. Ships come to New York Harbor from newly established countries, which may not have regulations such as have been adopted by other countries, like the United States. Many of the ships are manned by crews composed of men of many nations and of many ideas and ideologies. Such ships could hold dangerous weapons. An atomic explosion in the city of New York under such circumstances could be far more damaging than the explosion of an atomic bomb dropped from an airplane.

I merely suggest this legislation so as to give the President the power it proposes to give him. It may be that he may not need it, or that he may not need to use it. However, the enactment of the kind of legislation I suggest certainly would coincide with what we have done with respect to other aspects of our national security. I hope the President will never have to use the authority which this bill would grant him. However, Congress may not be in session. We do not know what will happen. Were I on the other side and wanted to do something damaging to a great city in the United States, the quickest way I could do it would be to send a destructive weapon in the hold of a foreign-flag ship and have that ship dock right in the heart of one of our great cities. In that way I could cause great destruction.

Mr. President, I send the bill to the desk for appropriate reference. I presume it will be referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce because it deals primarily with the Coast Guard, the agency which was responsible for harbor security during the war, and it deals also with the merchant marine. If it should be referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I hope we shall have prompt hearings on it so that it may be promptly reported and passed by Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 3859) to authorize the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States when the national security of the United States is endangered, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. MAGNUSON, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

EMPLOYMENT OF ATTORNEYS BY SUBCOMMITTEE ON LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND PUBLIC WELFARE

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield, on condition that I do not lose the floor.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 180, Calendar No. 1912. I would not make the request at this time except that in a sense there is an emergency. The joint resolution would permit the employment of an attorney by the Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. It merely waives the requirement that the attorney be excused from the provision of law which prohibits his practicing in court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the joint resolution by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 180) to suspend until December 31, 1950, the application of certain Federal laws with respect to attorneys employed by the Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare in connection with the study and investigation ordered by Senate Resolution 140, Eighty-first Congress.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, may I inquire whether or not the amendment adopted by the Judiciary Committee is shown in the resolution?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The amendment appears in the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, after the word "of", to strike out "any" and insert "one", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That service or employment of one person as an attorney on a temporary basis prior to December 31, 1950, to assist the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare or its duly authorized Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations in the investigation ordered by Senate Resolution 140, agreed to August 15, 1949, and Senate Resolution 217, agreed to February 1, 1950, shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such person within the provisions of sections 281, 283, or 284, of title 18 of the United States Code, or of any other Federal law imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of service, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with any claim, proceeding, or matter involving the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to cooperate with the Senator, as this is a matter in which he and I, as members of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, are both interested.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is true.

STRIKES ON RAILROADS

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I desire to emphasize again the urgent advisability and profound importance of early action by the Senate on Senate bill 3463, a bill which makes unlawful any strike or any lockout by a carrier arising out of or in connection with a dispute falling within the purview of the Railway Labor Act.

I anticipate that hearings which have been in progress on S. 3463 before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare will probably be completed on Monday, July 3. It is my intention as a member of the Senate committee to which reference has been made to move soon thereafter that the committee report S. 3463 favorably to the Senate.

Mr. President, there came to me today an editorial from the Kansas City Times of June 27, 1950, entitled "Second Big Railroad Strike." I ask unanimous consent that the entire editorial be set forth in the body of the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECOND BIG RAILROAD STRIKE

Again silence has settled over the freight yards along thousands of miles of American railroads. A second major strike within a few weeks tells its story. That model of American labor legislation, the Railway Labor Act, works only so long as both parties want it to work.

The public is helpless. The only possible protection today is the President, and he doesn't claim the authority to act in such an emergency.

Not in almost a quarter of a century has the union challenge appeared as determined as it is this year. The firemen struck in defiance of recommendations by two presidential fact-finding boards. Now the switchmen's union has struck immediately after another fact-finding board handed down its recommendations.

The public plight is especially apparent and critical in this part of the country. The movement of the Kansas wheat crop is paralyzed along the Rock Island system. A wheat crop must move or pile up on the ground.

In the background are the negotiations between the railroads and two big brotherhoods, the trainmen and conductors. These powerful brotherhoods will be free to strike July 15.

In both these major strikes the original position of the unions has been clear cut—meet our terms or else. After a few days the firemen backed away from their ultimatum and the strike was settled along the general line taken by the fact-finding boards. But strikes and threats of strikes continue to dominate the railroad scene in this year 1950.

The switchmen have appeared quite ready to slap the issue in the face of Congress. This is a case where there is clearly no law to control and no will to peaceful settlements. The American public can look only to Congress for ultimate protection.

Senator DONNELL's compulsory arbitration bill is still in Senate committee where it has aroused no enthusiasm. Most people dislike the principle of compulsory arbitration, but the Donnell bill is the only current proposal to meet such a challenge as we are seeing this year.

In the past the railroads have opposed compulsory arbitration as forcefully as the unions. They dislike the idea of trusting the final settlement of their labor disputes to persons appointed by a President. The danger of a political slant is obvious.

But the thinking of railroad management has undergone a change. The railroads have found themselves in a position where they have to accept the recommendations of presidential fact-finding boards. For them the perils of defiance are too great to risk. They feel bound as securely as if they had compulsory arbitration without the advantage of being able to get the issues settled. The unions are still free to refuse the official recommendations and free to strike.

Right now the question seems to be just how far the various railroad workers are prepared to go and how much Congress is willing to take. The situation could come to a head this year.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I call attention to certain particularly salient and important observations made in the editorial which has just been authorized to be incorporated in the body of the RECORD. The editorial says:

Not in almost a quarter of a century has the union challenge appeared as determined as it is this year. The firemen struck in defiance of recommendations by two Presidential fact-finding boards. Now the switchmen's union has struck immediately after another fact-finding board handed down its recommendation.

The editorial proceeds:

The public plight is especially apparent and critical in this part of the country.

Reference of course is had to the central part of the United States, in which Kansas City is located. The editorial continues:

The movement of the Kansas wheat crop is paralyzed along the Rock Island System. A wheat crop must move or pile up on the ground.

Earlier in the editorial the writer had said:

The public is helpless. The only possible protection today is the President, and he doesn't claim the authority to act in such an emergency.

Earlier in the editorial it was stated:

Again silence has settled over the freight yards along thousands of miles of American railroads. A second major strike within a few weeks tells its story. That model of American labor legislation, the Railway Labor Act, works only so long as both parties want it to work.

Mr. President, the editorial has this further to say:

In the background are the negotiations between the railroads and two big brotherhoods, the trainmen and conductors. These powerful brotherhoods will be free to strike July 15.

From this observation, it will be seen that the strike which is now in progress is a strike independent, so far as the identity of the unions is concerned, of the one or ones which the brotherhoods will be free to call only 15 days from the date on which we are here this afternoon.

The editorial writer says:

In both these major strikes the original position of the unions has been clear-cut.

The writer is referring, of course, to the Diesel engine strike of a few weeks ago, and the switchmen's strike now in progress.

In both these major strikes the original position of the unions has been clear cut—meet our terms or else. After a few days the firemen backed away from their ultimatum and the strike was settled along the general line taken by the fact-finding boards. But strikes and threats of strikes continue to dominate the railroad scene in this year 1950.

The switchmen have appeared quite ready to slap the issue in the face of Congress.

Mr. President, earlier in this editorial, as I have read, the writer refers to what has been considered in the past, as the quoted language would indicate, a "model" of American labor legislation. Reference is made to the Railway Labor Act, which has indeed possessed much of meritorious content, and has deserved very justly much of the commendation which it has received. But the present occupant of the chair, I am sure, will recall, the fact that, as has been mentioned on the floor of this body, the Railway Mediation Board, itself created by the Railway Labor Act, speaking officially, in an official report to Congress but 2 or 3 years ago, pointed out that notwithstanding the record of settlement of strikes, the record of non-settlement of strikes under the Railway Labor Act does not bode well for the future of that act. The report spoke with the tongue of prophecy, for in this year of 1950 the scene is dominated by railroad strikes, one of which has been ended, another of which is now in progress, and there is the prospect of strikes on July 15 of this year which could tie up and paralyze the railroad transportation systems of the Nation.

Mr. President, it is difficult for us, as Members of the Senate, to sit here in comfort and without the pandemonium of outside affairs with relation to railroads 1,500 or 2,000 miles away, stretching from their initial point on west to the Pacific coast—it is difficult, I say, for us, engrossed as we are in our duties here, to realize the conditions which today exist over that great network of railroads, involving some 21,000 miles of railroad track, 21,000 miles of transportation facilities. I dare say there is many a merchant, many a manufacturer, many a stock raiser, many a wheat grower, many an individual engaged in other avenues of his or her livelihood, who realizes far more clearly and far more definitely the dangers, as well as the inconveniences which today are confronting the Nation by reason of the present situation in the railway industry and by reason of the threats of further strikes in the near future.

Mr. President, the writer of this editorial says, as I have indicated:

This is a case where there is clearly no law to control and no will to peaceful settlements. The American public—

Says the editorial writer—can look only to Congress for ultimate protection.

Then the writer says this:

Senator DONNELL's compulsory arbitration bill is still in Senate committee where it has aroused no enthusiasm. Most people dislike the principle of compulsory arbitration, but—

And I emphasize at this point as strongly as I can this language of the writer—

but the Donnell bill is the only current proposal to meet such a challenge as we are seeing this year.

The newspaper from which I read, the Kansas City Times, is not an institution which is given to wild vagaries or fantastic utterances. The Kansas City Times, is one of the great powerful newspapers of the Central West, whose opinion is entitled to thorough and careful consideration, and to respectful hearing by the people of this great Nation. Let me read what the writer continues to say:

In the past the railroads have opposed compulsory arbitration as forcefully as the unions.

I pause to say that in the hearings which we have had before the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare the reluctance of the railroads themselves to advocate compulsory arbitration has been frankly and fully stated by presidents of outstanding and leading railroads. The president of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, the president of the New York Central, the president of the Santa Fe, and one of the chief, if not the chief, operating officers of the Southern Railway System, have all expressed themselves, nevertheless, as today of the opinion that the remedy to introduce and to pass at the hands of Congress is the remedy of compulsory arbitration.

Says the writer in the editorial:

They—

That is to say, the railroads—

dislike the idea of trusting the final settlement of their labor disputes to persons appointed by a President. The danger of a political slant is obvious.

But the thinking of railroad management has undergone a change. The railroads have found themselves in a position where they have to accept the recommendations of presidential fact-finding boards. For them the perils of defiance are too great to risk. They feel bound as securely as if they had compulsory arbitration without the advantage of being able to get the issues settled. The unions are still free to refuse the official recommendations and free to strike.

Right now—

Says the writer of this editorial—

the question seems to be just how far the various railroad workers are prepared to go and how much Congress is willing to take. The situation could come to a head this year.

So, Mr. President, this editorial from this great newspaper of the Central West so clearly sets forth the situation, so forcefully presents the remedy which is now before Congress that I am unable to supplement it by any statement that would approach it in powerful presentation to the public of the facts involved.

In this editorial the movement of the Kansas wheat crop is referred to as being paralyzed along the Rock Island system, and the fact that a wheat crop must move or pile up on the ground is mentioned.

Let me place in the RECORD at this point, if I may have leave, a telegraphic message from Kansas City, Mo., received—it is a little obscured by an ink mark—received at my office, at any rate, apparently on today June 30, 1950, and, I judge, probably received in Washington today. It comes from Mr. C. J. Kaney, president, Kansas City Livestock Exchange, and Jay B. Dillingham, president, Kansas City Stockyards Co.

I may say that Kansas City is one of the great livestock centers of the United States, and these gentlemen are entitled to respectful consideration by this body of legislators of their Nation. This telegraphic message is addressed to me and reads:

On behalf of the thousands of farmers and ranchers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, and Colorado, who depend upon the terminal markets to convert their livestock into cash, we urge you to do everything possible to bring a quick end to the work stoppage on some of our principal western railroads, particularly the Rock Island line. Continuation of the work stoppage on this railroad is seriously affecting the distribution of livestock from this market because they are one of the largest outbound carriers. Cattle from the Flint Hills and Osage country will start moving right after the Fourth of July and stockmen must have national distribution if market price levels are to be maintained. We urge you to exert every effort to restore normal transportation service.

Mr. President, I have here a few telegraphic messages, all of them originating, I believe, in Kansas City, Mo. The explanation of their origin in that city is that Missouri is experiencing obviously and clearly the effect of the strike, particularly as it applies to the Rock Island Railroad system. The Rock Island Railroad system, as has been indicated in earlier statements before the Senate, operates thousands of miles of railroads and serves exclusively 1,184 grain elevators.

Mr. President, by way of illustration, I have before me a telegraphic message, received in Washington yesterday, from A. F. McElhenie, vice president of the Pittsburgh & Midway Coal Mining Co. This telegram comes from Kansas City, Mo., is addressed to me, and reads as follows:

Urge administration take action to bring about immediate settlement of switchmen's strike. Suspension of operations by the Rock Island and Chicago Great Western Railroads seriously affecting movement of coal and other basic commodities and very detrimental to the economy of your constituents.

A. F. MCELHENIE,
Vice President, Pittsburgh & Midway Coal Mining Co.

Mr. President, here is a telegraphic message which reached Washington yesterday from the Petroleum Products, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo. The telegram is addressed to me, and reads as follows:

Urge you do all possible to cause early termination switchmen's strike which is causing serious delays in movement industrial fuel and Diesel fuel for utilities and municipalities.

PETROLEUM PRODUCTS, INC.

Mr. President, yesterday I referred to the fact that this railway strike is interfering with the housing development, and I pointed out messages along that line which I had received. That point is quite interesting; were it not so tragic, it might give room for some academic analysis by way of consideration of the effects of the present situation, both piecemeal and in total. However, we cannot take the time for such an academic study, for this great body has the duty of protecting the interests of the Nation.

So, on the one hand, when we find the livestock movements impeded or about to be impeded; and when we find, on the other hand, the wheat-crop movement being impeded; and when we find the other situations which I discussed in the RECORD yesterday—and in few moments I shall refer briefly to one of them, namely, the movement of iron ore—we realize that not only does the situation require a careful, accurate analysis, such as we are endeavoring to make, but it also demands action at the hands of the Congress of the United States.

So, Mr. President, the Petroleum Products Co., Inc., adds—in addition to the evidence we already have had before the Senate in regard to the ramifications of the strike—the fact that serious delays in the movement of industrial fuel and Diesel fuel for utilities and municipalities are being occasioned by the switchmen's strike.

Then I have a very succinct message from a very well-known company in Kansas City, the Battenfeld Grease and Oil Corp. Their telegram, which reached Washington yesterday, is addressed to me and reads as follows:

Rush passage of bill S. 3463 urgent.

BATTENFELD GREASE & OIL CORP.

Mr. President, the bill mentioned in that telegram is the bill to which I have referred, the bill which now is before the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, and has been receiving careful and appropriate consideration by way of hearings by that committee or by a subcommittee thereof.

Then I have a message from one of the old-established companies, one of the well-known, high-standing companies in Kansas City, Mo. Incidentally, let me say that I come from the other side of the city; and, of course, there may be room for some slight competition between the section in which I live—St. Louis County—and Kansas City, Kans.; but I wish to say that Kansas City is a great, powerful industrial center, and a great, enterprising city, and its people and its industries are deserving of consideration, as are the people and the industries of all other portions of our Nation.

Mr. President, this message reached me yesterday. It comes from William Volker & Co., by Mr. R. M. Nielson; and it reads as follows:

Switchmen's strike seriously affecting our operation at Kansas City and other points served by C. G. W.—

In other words, the Chicago & Great Western—

C. R. I. P.—

In other words, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific—

D. R. G. W.—

In other words, the Denver, Rio Grande & Western—

W. P.—

In other words, the Western Pacific—

and G. N.—

In short, the Great Northern—

Suggest immediate passage legislation to prohibit strikes of this kind where ruling of arbitration committee is not abided by or other action that will restore service without delay.

Then, Mr. President, a telegraph message, which reached Washington at 11:52 a. m., this morning, from St. Joseph, Mo., from the Schreiber Mills, Inc. The telegram is addressed to me, and reads as follows:

Continuation of Brotherhoods strike against C. G. W. and C. R. I. P. railroads is seriously impeding our business. We need your further assistance to bring about proper arbitration.

SCHREIBER MILLS, INC.

Then, Mr. President, I have before me a message, which reached Washington at 12:05 p. m. today, from the Burd & Fletcher Co., a printers' company, of Kansas City. The telegram is addressed to me and reads as follows:

Urge administration take action to bring about immediate settlement switchmen's strike. Suspension of operations seriously affecting movement of basic commodities and use of equipment.

BURD & FLETCHER CO.

Mr. President, then I have a message, which reached Washington this morning, from A. H. Evans, president of the W. B. Young Supply Co., a plumbing-supply house in Kansas City. The telegram is addressed to me and reads as follows:

It is imperative the switchmen's strike be stopped immediately. Your cooperation is requested.

W. B. YOUNG SUPPLY CO.,
A. H. EVANS, President.

Mr. President, then I have a message, which reached Washington yesterday, from E. L. Bride Co., of Kansas City. The telegram is addressed to me and reads as follows:

Will appreciate your efforts toward stopping present rail strike which is seriously curtailing business this area.

E. L. BRIDE CO.

Then, Mr. President, I have a telegraphic message, which reached Washington yesterday, from the Rutherford Food Corp., by Mr. George Van Voorst, of Kansas City, Mo. The telegram is addressed to me and reads as follows:

Would appreciate your best efforts in obtaining settlement of switchmen's strike, as it is seriously affecting the economy of your constituents.

RUTHERFORD FOOD CORP.
GEORGE VAN VOORST.

Then, Mr. President, finally, I have a telegram from the English Bros. Machinery Co.—a machinery-supply house—which reached Washington yesterday. The telegram is addressed to me by Mr. J. J. Moran and reads as follows:

Please see what can be done to settle strike on Chicago Great Western Railroad.

ENGLISH BROS. MACHINERY CO.,
J. J. MORAN.

Mr. President, those telegrams constitute very graphic and very powerful illustrations of the effect this strike is having, as we sit here in far-off Washington, D. C., without being on the scene and without being able to observe with our eyes what is transpiring.

However, we have some great newspapers in this part of the country, newspapers which gather together the information in regard to what is occurring.

For instance, I hold in my hand an article from today's New York Times. The article is entitled "Idle Total 50,000 in Railway Strike."

Perchance it will be remembered that yesterday the figure, as I recall, was approximately 41,000. Now we see that, most unfortunately and most sadly, the figure is mounting. I prophesy that it will mount with increasing and almost geometric proportions, if the strike continues for any length of time, as did the 1946 railroad strike in my own part of the country—a strike which lasted 45 days, 6 weeks and 3 days.

Let me read the article to which I have just referred:

IDLE TOTAL 50,000 IN RAILWAY STRIKE—COAL MINERS, SMELTER WORKERS AFFECTED—UNITED STATES CONCILIATORS REPORT "NO PROGRESS"

CHICAGO, June 29.—As Federal mediators reported again today "no progress" in their efforts to settle the 5-day-old strike of 4,000 members of the Switchmen's Union of North America, AFL, against five major Midwestern and western railroads lay-offs ascribed to the walkout rose to nearly 50,000 on the struck carriers.

Mr. President, the writer is not talking about lay-offs in collateral industries, but simply on the struck carriers. Let me read further from this article:

The union called the strike Sunday morning to enforce its demand for a reduction in the workweek from 6 days totaling 48 hours to a 5-day week of 40 hours with no decrease in pay.

Railroad companies affected by the strike are the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Chicago & Great Western, the Denver & Rio Grande Western; the Western Pacific, and the Great Northern.

The Great Northern, only one of the five struck which has kept in partial operation, announced it would lay off four-fifths of its 28,000 employees if the strike continues tomorrow. The road today canceled its Oriental Limited to Seattle, leaving the Empire Builder the only train on that run. Freight service on the Great Northern's 8,000-mile system is at a virtual standstill.

What does that mean, Mr. President? Perhaps the distinguished occupant of the chair will recall the fact that it was pointed out in the RECORD yesterday that, from the Washington Post, we learned:

At Superior, Wis., suspension of Great Northern freight service slowed operation at the big ore-loading docks. The railroad is the largest shipper of iron ore from the Mesabi range and also operates the largest dock.

We have heard much within the last few days of the critical conditions in the Korean situation. We have heard the announcement by the President today of the fact that he has authorized, or perhaps directed—I am uncertain which—the use of ground troops in addition to the previous announcement made by him. Yet we find that on the Great Northern Railway system, which is the largest carrier of iron ore from the Mesabi range, and which operates the largest dock, "the freight service," as the New York Times of this morning tells us, "on the Great Northern's 8,000-mile system is at a virtual standstill."

Mr. President, a joint resolution, presented by the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] was passed by the Senate only a few moments ago. Attention is called to the fact that in his State—and I quote now from today's issue of the New York times:

The strike has also made idle 5,000 Utah coal miners and 1,000 Utah smelter workers.

Mr. President, these are not strikers, they are not men involved in the switchmen's strike. These are men who are deprived of work by the economic force which has resulted from the action of the few men who are striking. Today 6,000 persons in Utah are idle. Yesterday the number was only 5,000, when the matter was called to the attention of the Senate, and particularly of the Senator from Utah, the chairman of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. Today 6,000 men have been made idle by this strike, men who are not at all employees of railroads.

I quote further from the New York Times of this morning:

In Washington, Daniel P. Loomis, chairman of the Association of Western Railroads, asserted that the strike threatens the annual movement of iron ore and wheat.

I conclude the article from the New York Times with these two sentences:

Meanwhile, Federal conciliators held only telephone conferences with three other rail unions threatening strikes early next month to enforce demands similar to the switchmen's. The unions are the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railway Conductors, and the Yardmasters of America, AFL.

The distinguished senior Senator from Washington who now occupies the seat of the majority leader in the absence of the latter, may be interested to know, and I am sure he will be, of this dispatch which appears in this morning's New York Times. It is a United Press dispatch from his own home State, and is as follows:

FIREMAN MAULED ON COAST

SEATTLE, June 29.—A locomotive fireman was mauled and rocks were thrown today as striking switchmen attempted to prevent Great Northern Railway roundhouse workers from reporting to work.

The roundhouse workers, representing nine crafts, are members of System Federation 101, railway employees department of the American Federation of Labor.

Fifteen pickets blocked the road leading to the roundhouse and attempted to stop the early shift from going to work.

I pause to inquire, What right does any one citizen have, or what right do any 15 citizens have to prevent other people from going to work? What right do they possess? Is there any inherent right in you or me, Mr. President, to stand in the way of any other man or woman, to prevent him or her from going to work if he or she wants to? Yet here is what is going on in the Far West from which our distinguished friend from the State of Washington hails. The dispatch continues:

The first workers stopped at a road block and waited until there were sufficient fellow workers, and then went through in automobiles.

Rocks were thrown but missed all cars. Later a fireman who attempted to report for duty at the roundhouse yard was physically restrained by pickets, company officials said.

Mr. President, I have in my hand two dispatches to the Wall Street Journal. They appeared in yesterday's issue of that publication. The article is entitled, over and above the two dispatches, in medium black type:

Rail Spokesman Declares United States Seizure Won't Solve Roads' Labor Strife; Backs Compulsory Arbitration.

There appears upon this page a map which extends from the Pacific coast as far east, and somewhat east, of Chicago. It shows the great network of railroads which is involved in this strike, which we realize nothing about when we pick up our morning newspapers in Washington. This line leads from Vancouver eastward, passing south of Winnipeg. The line then leads to Winnipeg. Another line comes from south of Seattle, up to Seattle, and on to Vancouver, and then east, over the Great Northern, clear to Duluth. Then, a number of branches run to the north, from the Great Northern, and two or three—more than that, in fact—lead to the south. There is a network leading down to St. Paul, and into Minneapolis; then on through Iowa; then to Omaha; then to Chicago; and then to Kansas City; then to St. Louis; then through Oklahoma and through Texas, into New Mexico, as I judge it to be; then a line leading to the south, to Fort Worth and Dallas; then a line crossing from Oklahoma City to Memphis, Tenn.; then a line south from the line from Oklahoma City to Memphis, a line running south, going to a point which is not denominated on the map. Then the line leads west from Kansas City, by way of Denver, with certain branches leading off to the south and three leading off to the north, going to Salt Lake City, passing through Reno, and on to San Francisco.

Mr. President, can anyone doubt that this is a great strike in which the Nation is concerned, not simply some one locality? Even if it were only one locality, to my mind, the people of that locality are entitled to the protection of law to see that force shall not be the means through which this industrial conflict shall be settled.

Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed at this point in my remarks the two dispatches to which I have referred, one from Washington to the Wall Street Journal, and the other from Chicago to the Wall Street Journal, both of which appeared under the heading which I have read in the issue of June 29, 1950.

There being no objection, the dispatches were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAIL SPOKESMAN DECLARES UNITED STATES SEIZURE WON'T SOLVE ROADS' LABOR STRIFE; BACKS COMPULSORY ARBITRATION

WASHINGTON.—Daniel P. Loomis, Chicago, chairman of the Association of Western Railways, said that Government seizure is not the answer to settlements of pending rail labor problems.

Mr. Loomis said that compulsory arbitration is the only answer we can see, short of giving the unions everything they want. However, he said the railroads are supporting compulsory arbitration with a great deal of reluctance.

Mr. Loomis will testify before a House group today in favor of the Donnell bill, which would outlaw strikes by requiring compulsory arbitration, with the settlement to be binding on all parties.

Five western and midwestern railroads are crippled at present by the walkout last Sunday of members of the AFL Switchmen's Union of North America. They are the Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande Western, Western Pacific, Chicago Great Western, and the Great Northern.

Asked about the possible effect of this rail tie-up on the national emergency, Mr. Loomis said service is affected in about 23 States and 2 Canadian Provinces. Of particular significance, he said, is the fact that the Great Northern moves about one-third of the Nation's iron ore supply from the Mesabi Range and also serves the west coast ports of Tacoma, Seattle, Portland, and Vancouver. The Rock Island is affected at a time approaching the peak harvest of the Grain Belt and all five of the railroads serve vital defense areas, he continued.

Mr. Loomis estimated that between 12 and 15 percent of the total freight volume moved in the western territory is held up by the strike.

NO STRIKE SETTLEMENT NEAR

CHICAGO.—Federal mediators reported slight progress in their attempts to end the 4-day-old switchmen's strike against five western and midwestern railroads and in efforts to avert another strike July 15 against more than 200 other roads by trainmen and conductors seeking the same wage boosts.

"We're getting a little bit beyond the exploratory stage," Leverett Edwards, member of the National Railway Mediation Board, said. He added that he and Francis A. O'Neill, board chairman, would meet with the railroads and representatives of the unions in separate meetings today. He said no joint meetings were likely to be held today.

The struck roads have laid off over 40,000 employees as a result of the strike. Only one of the roads is still operating any trains, the Great Northern. However, F. J. Gavin, president, announced that if a settlement were not reached by Friday, the road would have to lay off a substantial number of its 28,000 employees. It is understood that number would amount to at least two-thirds of the road's workers and that the road's freight services already largely curtailed, then would be almost at a standstill. So far the road has laid off about 5,800 people and closed all operations on 15 branch lines in five States and British Columbia.

MESABI RANGE SERVICE HIT

A Great Northern spokesman said nearly half of the 1,500 communities served by the 8,000-mile system were without trains, and 37 train runs were canceled yesterday.

Freight service in the Mesabi Iron Range in Minnesota, except for trains manned by supervisory personnel, was reduced to a minimum because of picketing in the Superior-Duluth area.

The strike also hit another important segment of the copper industry, this time at the copper smelter of the American Smelting & Refining Co. at Garfield, Utah. It has halted the movement of copper concentrate into this plant and the outflow of blister copper to the firm's copper refineries at Baltimore, Md., and Perth Amboy, N. J., for processing into refined metal.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I should like to comment upon some portions of these dispatches. One of them says this:

Five western and midwestern railroads are crippled at present by the walk-out last Sunday of members of the A. F. of L. Switchmen's Union of North America. There are the Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande Western, Western Pacific, Chicago Great Western, and the Great Northern.

Asked about the possible effect of this rail tie-up on the national emergency, Mr. Loomis—

That is to say, Mr. President, the chairman of the Association of Western Railways—said service is affected in about 23 States and two Canadian provinces. Of particular significance, he said, is the fact that the Great Northern moves about one-third of the Nation's iron-ore supply from the Mesabi Range and also serves the west-coast ports of Tacoma, Seattle, Portland, and Vancouver.

I pause, Mr. President, to emphasize that one-third of the Nation's iron-ore supply is moved by the Great Northern, which, we are told in the other dispatch I have read, is at a virtual standstill.

Continuing with the article:

The Rock Island is affected at a time approaching the peak harvest of the Grain Belt, and all five of the railroads serve vital defense areas, he continued.

Mr. Loomis estimated that between 12 percent and 15 percent of the total freight volume moved in the western territory is held up by the strike.

In the second article which I have had introduced into the RECORD, the second one being entitled "No Strike Settlement Near," we find these statements:

Federal mediators reported slight progress in their attempts to end the 4-day-old switchmen's strike against five western and midwestern railroads and in efforts to avert another strike July 15 against—against more than 200 other roads by trainmen and conductors seeking the same wage boosts.

Against what, Mr. President?—

Think what it means to have a strike threatened against more than 200 railroads in our Nation on July 15. I continue reading:

"We're getting a little bit beyond the exploratory stage," Leverett Edwards, member of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, said. He added that he and Francis A. O'Neill, Board Chairman, would meet with the railroads and representatives of the unions in separate meetings today. He said no joint meetings were likely to be held today.

Further down on the page of the article this statement appears under the heading "Mesabi Range Service Hit":

A Great Northern spokesman said nearly half of the 1,500 communities served by the 8,000-mile system were without trains and—

It appears to be "31"; it is somewhat obscure—

31 train runs were canceled yesterday.

Freight service in the Mesabi Iron Range in Minnesota, except for trains manned by supervisory personnel, was reduced to a minimum because of picketing in the Superior-Duluth area.

As this strike goes on it extends further and further. Let me read the next two or three sentences, the concluding ones, of this article:

The strike also hit another important segment of the copper industry—this time at the copper smelter of the American Smelting & Refining Co. at Garfield, Utah. It has halted the movement of copper concentrate into this plant and the outflow of blister copper to the firm copper refineries at Baltimore, Md., and Perth Amboy, N. J., for processing into refined metal.

Mr. President, speaking of the State of Washington—and I appreciate the attention which the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] is so kindly giving to these remarks—in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of June 29, 1950, I find this statement:

STRIKE HALTS LIMITED'S RUN—SCARCITY OF OPERATING WORKERS CAUSES MOVE

Great Northern Railroad's westbound Oriental Limited passenger train from Chicago was canceled Wednesday in the face of the switchmen's strike and the eastbound trains from Seattle will not operate Thursday. This was announced late Wednesday as the line began to "run out" of supervisory employees capable of replacing striking employees and locomotive engineers, firemen, brakemen and others who refused to pass the strikers' picket lines.

Washington State safety regulations prescribe rest periods for all railroad employees. The railroad had been attempting to operate by using supervisory personnel in place of the strikers and their supporters.

The railroad said its Wednesday 10:15 p. m. departure from Seattle to Chicago would be the last eastbound operation of the limited until the strike is settled.

However, a spokesman said the road planned to continue operation of its two other principal passenger operations, the Empire Builder and the Fast Mail.

Locomotive engineers, firemen, and other organized union members have refused to pass the switchmen's picket lines.

Then, in black-faced type, appears the following:

The railroad said if the strike continues until Friday—

That is today, I believe—it will have laid off 23,000 of its 28,000 employees. More than half of the 1,500 communities normally served by the railroad are now without service, a railroad spokesman said.

Mr. President, in Tampa, Fla., it is realized that a strike has been going on. I have in my hand an editorial from the Tampa Tribune of June 23, being 2 days before the switchmen's strike began, but they knew it was going to happen; and here is what the editorial writer says:

NEW RAIL STRIKE THREAT

Another strike call bobs up to plague the Nation and the railroad industry.

I pause, to say that this writer appreciates the point which I have imperfectly endeavored to make, and that is the fact that it is the Nation, not merely the employees, not merely the railroads, but the Nation, which is plagued by these conflicts between employees and employers in the railroad industry. I read it again:

Another strike call bobs up to plague the Nation and the railroad industry. This time it is the A. F. of L. Switchmen's Union of North America which has threatened to walk out early Sunday morning in an effort to enforce demands against five big western and midwestern lines.

The issue in this dispute is primarily one of wages and hours. The A. F. of L. union, which is said to represent only 5 percent of the Nation's switchmen, is demanding a 40-hour week at 48 hours' pay. A Presidential fact-finding board has recommended a 40-hour week and 18 cents hourly pay increase. The union rejected this recommendation and is prepared to strike.

This threat again makes it clear that fact-finding under the Railway Labor Act isn't all it is cracked up to be. Fact-finding may turn up the fact. However, if the recommendations of the boards do not satisfy the rail union bosses, no matter how fair and impartial those findings may be, the unions all too frequently decide to use force in attempts to win their original demands.

Obviously the Railway Labor Act can work only if the parties display a willingness to abide by the facts. It is too soon to say whether the A. F. of L. switchmen will carry out their threat.

Mr. President, we found they did. Continuing, the editorial says:

What we do know is that a shut-down in a public utility as vital as a railroad can be justified—if at all—only by some grave and otherwise unresolvable issue. We are not persuaded that there is one in this case.

I call attention now to a reference in the editorial to the bill now pending before the Senate, S. 3463. I quote further from the editorial:

Moreover, this strike threat by a minor rail union should concern all rail brotherhoods and unions. They should not forget that there is a bill now before the Senate Labor Committee, introduced by Senator DONNELL, which would outlaw strikes on railroads and provide that labor difficulties be settled by compulsory arbitration. If the unions continue to call strikes to enforce demands for changes in working rules, wage increases, and other concessions—issues that ultimately have to be settled at the conference table—transportation tie-ups will recur at frequent intervals, and the American public will before long become convinced that either compulsory arbitration of dispute or nationalization of the railways is the only feasible method of insuring uninterrupted service or at least minimizing the danger of rail strikes that paralyze trade and industry over wide areas.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I have not heard the Senator say in this very able discussion whether he has made up his mind that the principle of his bill should be extended to other public utilities.

Mr. DONNELL. I am very glad the Senator asked that question. It is a proper one and one which must be decided ultimately. I think there is much of sound argument to sustain such a position. However, I have not yet determined that it is advisable to carry the principle of compulsory arbitration beyond the industries within the purview of the Railway Labor Act. To my mind there is a pretty clear distinction between railways and such industries as waterworks or electric-light plants, because the railway industries can tie up and paralyze completely, or substantially so, the entire industrial life of the country, whereas the operation of the other utilities is more limited. If I may be permitted, I should like to say that there has come to my hand a copy of a transcript of a radio-television program in which it was the privilege of the speaker to participate in advocacy of and with respect to S. 3463, and in which the distinguished Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] participated. The program occurred on June 17, 1950. A question along that same line was presented by a Member of the House of Representatives from Florida [Mr. ROGERS]. I have not read the transcript to see if it is a correct representation of what happened on the program, but I have no doubt it is. I read from the transcript as follows:

Chairman GRANIK. I see that Congressman ROGERS, of Florida, is here. Go ahead, Mr. ROGERS.

Representative ROGERS (Florida). I will address this question to Senator DONNELL. Senator, don't you believe that if we adopt the principle of compulsory arbitration, that that should apply also to public utilities in which the public interest and the public welfare and the public health of people are concerned, or work out some means of adjustment whereby we can take care of the public and prevent strikes and lock-outs?

Senator DONNELL. I think there is very much to be said in favor of your proposition, Congressman ROGERS. However, my bill does not go that far, and I would not go that far without further hearings, without extensive consideration. I would like to say, however, that I have a telegram here from the governor of your own State and the governor of the State of our distinguished friend, Senator PEPPER. It refers to the public-utility law which is in effect in Florida, and which, as I understand, it provides for compulsory arbitration, and it says this:

"Re your telegram requesting information regarding Florida's statute, Laws of Florida, 1947, Chapter 23,911, authorizing handling disputes in public utilities, please be advised that it is our view that such statute has proved to be of benefit and value to the disputants and the people of Florida. We have had occasion to act pursuant to authority of such statute in several instances, with all-around satisfactory results.

"FULLER WARREN,
"Governor."

In fairness to the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], I think I should read his comment, if the Senator from Oregon will permit me to do so.

Mr. MORSE. I wonder if the Senator from Missouri would permit me to ask unanimous consent to have the entire discussion inserted in the RECORD?

Mr. DONNELL. That is very kind of the Senator. I should be happy to have him do so. I am very much pleased that he should make the request.

I read further:

Senator PEPPER. Now, Senator, doesn't that pretty well illustrate how far along this path we would be pretty likely to go once we started with your bill? The able Congressman from Florida has already brought up the subject here, and you have already quoted the Governor of Florida rather favorably toward this legislation, and cannot you see pretty clearly that once we start down that path, first with your bill having compulsory arbitration with respect to railroad disputes and then probably reaching over next to disputes between management and labor in the trucking industry, and I see no reason why it shouldn't similarly apply in the aviation industry, because that is important. I think it would be very logical to extend it to the telephone industry, because everybody has admitted that if we tied up the telephone system of the country that would practically paralyze the country. Then you would have to carry it to Western Union and those facilities. Congressman ROGERS has suggested the public utilities, and it would be only a little while as has happened in Australia and New Zealand, where they have compulsory arbitration, until the Government would be fixing wages and salaries and therefore prices on practically everything.

Senator DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, may I say that in Australia and New Zealand as I understand it, there has been compulsory arbitration for some 40 years or thereabouts. I want to say, however, in regard to Senator PEPPER'S suggestion that my bill is but one step along a longer road illustrated by Congressman ROGERS' question, to my mind it does not follow at all, that because this bill is passed that the extension suggested by Congressman ROGERS is at all necessary or would occur. I did say and I repeat it, that in my judgment there is much to be said in commendation of his view, but I for one would not join in that view unless I were persuaded considerably more than I am at this time.

Mr. MORSE. With the permission of the Senator from Missouri, I ask unanimous consent to have the entire radio debate, from which the Senator from Missouri has read, inserted in the RECORD at the conclusion of his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator for causing this debate to be introduced in the RECORD.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. DONNELL. Yes.

Mr. MORSE. Is the Senator from Oregon correct in assuming, from the comments which the Senator from Missouri has read from this radio debate, that the Senator from Missouri recognizes that the passage of his bill would have considerable precedential force in connection with at least attempts to have the same principle applied to other great public utilities, such as, for example, the merchant marine?

Mr. DONNELL. I think undoubtedly there are those who would think that my Railway Labor Act bill, if enacted, would have some force of precedent along the line indicated by both the Senator from Oregon and the Member of the House of Representatives from Florida. I can well see how in a given community, in which, for example, the waterworks were closed down, or the electric-light plant was closed down, or, as in the familiar case of Munn against Illinois, the mills were closed down, the community might well feel that the same principle should be put into effect. I think we will have to decide, just as we do in so much of our legislation, where to draw the line. It is not always easy to draw it. There may be twilight zones, there may be illustrations which would impress themselves with great force upon the Members of Congress.

I digress at this point to say that the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] referred to the aviation industry. I should like to have it in the record that the aviation industry is already included, so far as it is a carrier, in the Railway Labor Act.

I can well see how there is a clear line of distinction between the industries under the Railway Labor Act, and particularly the railways themselves, and utilities of other types. As to other utilities, such as those already covered along with railroads, as I understand, in Florida there may be strong reason to believe, as did the Legislature of Florida, that they should be under a compulsory arbitration law, and it might be that Congress in its judgment would take the same view.

Personally, I have not yet come to that conclusion, and I think there is such a clear line between an industry which could tie up the whole Nation, as can the transportation industry, and others, that I would not be willing at all, at this time, certainly, to extend to any other industry except those within the purview of the Railway Labor Act the operation of a bill providing for compulsory arbitration.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. Does the Senator believe that if we had a law in operation such as his bill the decisions of the compulsory arbitration boards in respect to wages, hours, and conditions of employment would have great precedential effect and influence upon wages, hours, and conditions-of-employment settlements in other industries not covered by the law?

Mr. DONNELL. I think they might well do so; yes. Just as the wages in one industry have effect on others, I believe it would also be true that wages fixed in the railway industry would have some effect, and it might be a very material effect, on wages in other industries.

Mr. MORSE. Is it not possible, then, that taking away the right to strike and lock-out on the part of parties to railroad disputes would really limit in a very real sense, so far as results obtained in the disputes over wages, hours, and conditions of employment are concerned, the effectiveness of economic action in nonpublic utility fields?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, it seems to me that does not follow. I believe that, although wages in one industry necessarily have an influence on wages in another, it is not true that because wages should be fixed at a particular figure in the railway industry, members of an industry of some other type, as, for instance, the automobile industry, or the coal industry, would be necessarily, or in the least, precluded from asserting, actually or in law, their rights, by collective bargaining, and, if necessary, by strike.

Mr. MORSE. Let us take a hypothetical. Let us take a dispute in the steel industry, assuming the Senator's bill has become law, involving machinists in a great steel plant. They have a strike, and we all know that the strike is certain to end on some basis in a peaceful settlement. Frequently the parties get together on a voluntary arbitration basis. Does not the Senator think that evidence as to the wages which are paid the machinists in the railway industry would be relevant and material in a case involving the steel industry?

Mr. DONNELL. I certainly do. I think it would be relevant and material, but I do not think it would be at all decisive of the outcome of a strike in the steel industry. If the steel employees could show that because of conditions of work, because of their particular duties, because of the economic position in which they are, their wages should be different, should be greater, perhaps, than wages in the railroad industry, I think that by the power of striking in the steel industry they could assert their right, and it would not be in any sense interfered with by the fact that in the railway industry compulsory arbitration figures should have been fixed at levels different from what the steel employees demanded.

Mr. MORSE. Would the Senator agree, however, that wages paid for so-called comparable work are a criterion which has become rather well accepted in American arbitration law in determining the wage structure?

Mr. DONNELL. I think it is certainly true that wages paid in one industry are one of the criteria to be taken into consideration in fixing wages in another, but I do not think that the fact that wages in industry A have been fixed at a particular level means that wages in industry B must be brought up to the wages paid in industry A. Nor do I believe it follows that employees in industry B will be able to get their wages up to the industry A level.

I believe that industry is influenced, as is every other economic entity, by the economic facts prevailing throughout the Union. But I do not believe labor or management in other industries would be at all precluded from the fixing, in a contest between themselves, an entirely different figure from what is paid in the railway industry.

Mr. MORSE. Not precluded. I hope the Senator will not object to another question.

Mr. DONNELL. Certainly not.

Mr. MORSE. I am only seeking to bring out what I think are some differences between the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DONNELL. I should like to say, if the Senator from Oregon will permit, that in discussing this matter with him this afternoon, I am having the privilege of engaging in a discussion with one of the foremost authorities in the Nation upon labor matters, and his great experience in the War Labor Board, particularly, certainly gives his opinions very great importance.

Mr. MORSE. Along in November I shall be happy to hear the Senator say that in my State, but for this afternoon, I thank the Senator for the compliment. The benefit of this discussion is accruing to the Senator from Oregon, and not to the Senator from Missouri. I feel I am the beneficiary.

Let us take our hypothetical, a dispute in the railway industry, in contrast with a dispute in the steel industry. In one industry the workers are free to strike, and in the other industry they are not free to strike, assuming the enactment of the Senator's bill.

We will assume an arbitration has been held in the railway industry affecting the wages for machinists in the railway shops, and a dispute arises in the steel industry over the wages which should be paid machinists in steel plants. Does the Senator feel that the lack of the right to use economic force in the railway industry, in contrast to the existence of the right in the steel industry, might exercise some influence in the determination of the wage rates in the two cases? In other words, does the factor of the economic power of the parties in a case bear any weight at all in determining wages?

Mr. DONNELL. I am not sure that I precisely understand the Senator's question, but I shall endeavor to answer it as I do understand it.

Take a situation in which compulsory arbitration has occurred in the railway field. I understood that to be the Senator's hypothesis. Certain figures are arrived at with respect to wages, then a dispute occurs in the steel industry. The point in the Senator's mind, as I understand, is whether the absence of the power to strike on the part of employees of the railway industry would in any sense affect their ability to secure just wages. Is that the Senator's point?

Mr. MORSE. The ability to secure a higher wage than they would be able to secure with the loss of that power to strike.

Mr. DONNELL. I will say that it is entirely possible that the wage that would be secured by a strike might be different than the one that is procured through the Presidential board which my bill would prescribe. But to my mind there is nothing unfair and nothing economically unsound in leaving the question as to what is a proper wage, to a board appointed by the President of the United States. I have faith in the competency of a board that would be appointed by such a high official. I see nothing that would put the employees at an illegitimate disadvantage. Just as it is possible for a man to use the force of his fist or the force of a weapon to extract some unfair bargain from the distinguished Senator from Oregon, I can see how the power to use economic force, in other words, to strike, might bring about, through the force of circumstances and the exercise of that economic force, a result that is not proper and not just. But I do not think the fact that the employees and the railroads themselves would be remitted to the judgment of a Presidential board, impartial in its nature, would put either of the two parties, either labor or management, at any unfair disadvantage.

Mr. MORSE. The Senator's bill would take away from the railroad workers the right to strike, would it not?

Mr. DONNELL. It would.

Mr. MORSE. I think this is a very interesting use of words. By the words men use one gets a pretty good idea of differences in their thinking, and I think that the words the Senator and I are using in the discussion of these two hypothetical situations are very interesting, because the Senator from Missouri talks about force connected with the use of the strike, and the Senator from Oregon talks about the right to strike.

Mr. DONNELL. If I may interrupt the Senator at that point, he refers to the right to strike. The Senator inquired whether my bill would deprive the individual railway worker of the right to strike. I answered "It would." I want to make it clear, however, that I do not in any sense take the view that there is an inherent right to strike. I think that today, under the law as it now stands, there is nothing in the Railway Labor Act that would prevent an employee from striking and under the present law they have the right, the legal right, to strike. But I think there is no inherent right that they have so that Congress would not legitimately have the right to say, "You cannot strike." In other words, in a public industry, such as the railway industry, I think that any alleged right or any existing right at the present moment of employees to strike must yield and does legally yield to the right of Congress to prohibit the exercise of the power to strike.

Mr. MORSE. I do not agree with the Senator from Missouri on that point. Does the Senator from Missouri take the position that a right would have to be an absolute or an inherent right to be a valuable right?

Mr. DONNELL. Oh, a man may have a valuable right under the law as it exists and still it may be a right which is subject at all times to regulation or prohibition by the Congress.

Mr. MORSE. I have always taken the position that labor does not have the absolute right to strike under any and all circumstances.

Mr. DONNELL. Of course, that has been well settled in the judicial decisions of our country.

Mr. MORSE. There is no question about it.

Mr. DONNELL. And particularly with respect to the question that the fourteenth amendment gives the individual an inherent right. In the case of Dorchy v. Kansas (272 U. S., 306, loc. cit. 311), I think it is stated very clearly to the contrary.

Mr. MORSE. I do not want to digress very far, but in the cloakroom some time I am sure I would enjoy a discussion with the Senator of a little theory of mine, that I think he will look in vain for any absolute legal rights separate and distinct from any and all circumstances that might be imagined to come into being at some time modifying such rights. But I suppose it is simply a question of legal philosophy, and that is not what I seek to discuss here this afternoon.

If we start on the premise that the right to strike—not the absolute right to strike—but that the right to strike is a valuable asset to labor, as demonstrated by what it can produce for labor when exercised in contest with an employer, then assuming that the Senator from Missouri is sitting on two boards of arbitration, one hearing a railway case under his bill, assuming it has become law, and the other involving the machinists in the steel industry, where the right to strike has not been taken away, would it be the position of the Senator from Missouri that evidence as to the economic effects of the exercise of that valuable right "owned" by labor, we will say in quotation marks, "owned" by labor in that particular situation, would not be evidence that would be subject to admission, and material to the case for the determination of the board to evaluate?

Mr. DONNELL. I think, Mr. President, that evidence of the amounts of wages that have been procured through the exercise of the power or right, as the case may be, to strike, would certainly be admissible before both of those boards.

Mr. MORSE. And evidence as to the losses of both wages and profits which the parties would suffer in case a strike were to ensue would be admissible.

Mr. DONNELL. I think evidence as to the entire economic situation with respect to employers and employees in each industry would be admissible in any proceeding involving the other industry. But I do not think that the fact that a Presidential board shall have fixed a specific scale of wages in the railway industry would at all preclude strikers in the steel industry from the right to ask and possibly from the power to procure a different scale of wages.

I may say to the Senator that if such happened, I can very readily appreciate that it might be true that in the railway industry it would not be long until the employees would again be asking for a revision of their wages, and I think the Presidential board then appointed, if the parties could not get together, would have the right to consider the wages existing in the steel industry.

Mr. MORSE. They might.

Mr. DONNELL. But it would not be precluded by reason thereof from exercising their best judgment as to what would be appropriate in the railway industry.

Mr. MORSE. The point I mean to bring out—and I shall conclude shortly——

Mr. DONNELL. I hope the Senator will continue as long as he wishes.

Mr. MORSE. The only point I mean to bring out is that the Senator's bill would take away from railway labor something of great economic value to them.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I think that is true. I do not pretend to be an expert upon economics, and I do not know whether all writers upon economics would agree, but I think labor certainly believes that the right to strike is of economic value. I have no doubt that when, for illustration, in the coal mining cases, the power to strike has been exercised, particularly by Mr. Lewis, it has doubtless resulted in increases in wages that would not have been procured had not the strike occurred.

Mr. MORSE. Of course, it is also true that in many of these cases one never can be sure what the economic advantages or disadvantages are, and, of course, we need to recognize also that a right or an economic freedom exercised by labor, if we preserve the right to strike, must necessarily be costly to the public at times.

Mr. DONNELL. Yes.

Mr. MORSE. We cannot have these rights and not pay for them, and it is very inconvenient sometimes.

Mr. DONNELL. I should like to call the attention of the Senator to a thought which, of course, has occurred to him much more quickly than to me. On the other side of the ledger, as to the question whether or not the right to strike is a valuable right, is the fact that an improper exercise of that so-called right or power may be highly injurious to labor by reason of its exercise.

Mr. MORSE. It often is. I am afraid it is in the instant case.

Mr. DONNELL. Yes, I think so. I think in the Diesel engine case labor lost a very great position which it had previously held, by reason of the action taken by labor in the Diesel engine strike of only a few weeks ago.

Mr. MORSE. I was going to say that, philosophically speaking, however, I do not think we would want to have the existence our our rights determined by whether or not we use them wisely.

Again we come to the question the Senator has been discussing, namely, the degree to which the public interest has been involved. When that situation develops, when the interest of the public far outweighs the advantage claimed by those who feel that a right accrues to them, I would point out that, after all, rights are relative.

However, I do not think the Congress should set itself up to determine whether a right for any group in America should be perpetuated or whether its continued existence should be predicated upon the basis of any criterion as to whether or not from time to time the group has used that right wisely.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in answer, let me say that I think the fact that there is not only a tendency but an actual use from time to time of that right unwisely—and by the use of the word "right," I am not conceding that there is an inherent, absolute right——

Mr. MORSE. Of course.

Mr. DONNELL. But I say that the fact that it is used unwisely may constitute a perfectly proper argument for the restriction of the use of that right.

For instance, even though in the railroad industry the employees have today at least to a certain extent a right to strike—and I appreciate that if a national emergency results, the President may have the right, or a court may have the right, at the instance of an appropriate government official, to suspend the strike; for instance, when the war powers are in existence—when we find that time after time labor uses its power unwisely—perhaps unwisely to itself; certainly injuriously to the Nation—then, even if it is conceded, for the sake of argument, that labor has that right, certainly Congress has the right to use its own best judgment in determining whether or not the employees' right should be restricted.

To illustrate that point, let me say that in 1946 there occurred a paralyzing shut-down of the Nation's railroads. Practically the entire railroad system was shut down, and that shut-down continued for some 48 hours. The distinguished Senator from Oregon remembers, I am sure—because I know of his concern and great interest in the matter—the fear and almost helplessness which seemed to grip the Nation as a result of that action.

Of course, the employees had a legal right to strike; at least, they had a legal right up to a certain point. I am not certain whether they went beyond that point; but at least they had a legal right to strike.

In 1948, again in connection with the exercise of the right to strike, we found the welfare of the Nation threatened by a railroad strike. Although the President took over possession of the railroads—which action, as I recall, was also taken in the case of the 1948 strike—yet we found that the employees insisted upon the so-called right to strike, even against the Government of the United States. I do not know that they had the latter right.

At any rate, the Federal Court in the District of Columbia issued an injunction. It was not until that time that the particular labor unions involved desisted from the strike which had been called.

Then we recall the time when, in Missouri and in the territory somewhat east of Missouri, the territory through which the Wabash Railroad Co. runs, with approximately 2,700 miles of line, that railroad was completely immobilized for 7 or 8 days, as I recall.

Then, some 6 or 7 months later, the Missouri Pacific Railroad, operating 10,000 or 11,000 miles of railroad, was completely tied up and closed down, as tightly as it was possible for any railroad to be closed, for 6 weeks and 3 days, or 45 days, regardless of whether there was a right to strike or, to put the matter another way, regardless of whether there was no law to prevent the employees from striking.

Certainly the Congress of the United States has a right to say, under circumstances such as these—where the employees have shown by experience that in the exercise of their then-existing right they will go to the point of injury, indeed, almost, if not exactly, irreparable injury to the Nation—that, in view of the situation and in view of such exercise of the so-called right, we will restrict that right in that industry. That is the theory on which my bill is based.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I do not disagree with the theory on which the Senator has based his bill; but I disagree with the particular application of the theory, because I think it is not only the right of Congress to impose restrictions when any group—I care not what the group is; whether it be the banking fraternity, the brotherhood of railroad workers, or any other group—follows a course of behavior which jeopardizes the public interest.

I would make this point because I want to be sure that I understand the difference between the Senator's position and my position. I would take the position that my difference with the Senator from Missouri in this particular matter is on the question of whether or not the facts show that railway labor over the years has abused its right or has gone to excesses or to such a point in connection with its right that we should have a blanket, permanent, fixed restriction on that right, or whether we should look to some alternative procedures to see whether we can accomplish what the Senator seeks to accomplish—namely, the operation of the railways in the public interest—which I, too, seek to accomplish—without having the Congress enact a measure so extreme as the one the Senator from Missouri proposes.

The best evidence I can give the Senator of my insistence that excesses and abuses on the part of labor be curtailed and restricted is, of course, the Ives-Morse bill of 1947. I still stand on the Ives-Morse bill of 1947, and I would that it were the law today, instead of the Taft-Hartley law. However, I cite it merely as an illustration of my attitude toward restricting clear abuses on the part of either employers or labor.

Let me ask the Senator this question——

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I wonder whether the Senator from Oregon would hold his question in abeyance for a moment?

Mr. MORSE. Certainly.

Mr. DONNELL. My memory may not be so good as is that of the Senator from Oregon, and I do not wish to overlook a point he mentioned a few minutes ago. He said that the question in his mind is whether labor in the railway industry has gone to such an excess as to make it necessary to use what he regards as an extreme remedy. I believe that is the Senator's point.

To my mind, that is a very frank statement, and it is one on which I am willing to rest this case.

Mr. President, I am not here to criticize labor or to advocate in behalf of management, but to my mind the historical facts show, as they are demonstrated this very day in the strike on the five western railroads, that labor has conducted itself in a way which has not been to the public interest; that labor in many instances has accepted rulings by the Presidential board when those rulings were in its favor, but when the rulings of the Presidential board were not in favor of labor or were not as much in favor of labor as labor thought they should be, labor has refused to accept the findings of the Presidential board.

Mr. MORSE. Labor did not have to accept those findings; the law did not require labor to accept them.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator is exactly correct in that respect, of course. That is the defect of the law, and that is what this Senate bill 3463 will remove.

Mr. President, to my mind the lamp of experience, about which Patrick Henry used to speak, demonstrates the absolute necessity, as is pointed out by some of the editorials which from day to day I have submitted for the RECORD, for the enactment of some such legislation as that which I have proposed; it shows that because of the fact that labor has not acted in a way which inures to the public interest.

Now, if the Senator has his other question in mind, I should be pleased to have him ask it.

Mr. MORSE. Before asking the question, if the Senator will permit, I should like to make a brief comment.

Mr. DONNELL. Certainly.

Mr. MORSE. The Senator has referred once or twice to the 1946 strike.

Mr. DONNELL. That is correct.

Mr. MORSE. I think it was a very bad strike, an unreasonable strike, and an unnecessary strike.

Mr. DONNELL. And it was a Nation-wide strike, was it not?

Mr. MORSE. It was a Nation-wide strike. But I submit that it was a strike which was greatly misunderstood by the American people, because I do not think they ever did understand all the facts. It never needed to reach the proportions it did.

Mr. DONNELL. But it did reach them, did it not?

Mr. MORSE. In my opinion——

Mr. DONNELL. I say, it did reach those proportions, did it not?

Mr. MORSE. Yes, it reached those proportions; because certain forces outside both the carriers and the brotherhoods muffed the ball. It was a strike which in my opinion could have been and should have been settled long before it reached serious proportions. I know a little bit about the subject I am discussing.

Mr. DONNELL. I am sure the Senator does.

Mr. MORSE. Because the surrender terms in that strike were written in my office.

Mr. DONNELL. Yes, I know the Senator is quite familiar with it.

Mr. MORSE. I wrote most of them, and, had certain people followed my advice, which I gave the first itme the matter was ever presented to me, that strike would never have occurred in the first instance; and the surrender terms would have been submitted identically as they finally were submitted within the first hour after the inauguration of the strike. I am merely telling the Senator that when disputes such as that occur, there are many circumstances and facts which too frequently are kept from the public.

I think we can work out some procedure short of compulsory arbitration. That is a term which frightens me. When I think of the Federal Government undertaking to run the railway economy of the country, I become scared, because I am afraid of the precedential effect I mentioned earlier in my remarks, and where it is going to lead. The Senator from Missouri would not want that. But I do not think, when the precedent is once established it can be easily stopped. I am afraid it will lead at least to the serious danger of the nationalization of certain basic industries.

So I ask the Senator from Missouri, if we could work out some procedure short of compulsory arbitration, some such procedure as I suggested yesterday morning in the Labor Committee in regard to the Railway Labor Act, would it not be possible to make the appointment of an emergency board automatic, and permit the passing of discretionary judgment on the question: Have the parties mediated in good faith? That might be the first step to take. It could be tried at least, before we go so far as the Senator from Missouri suggests in his compulsory arbitration bill. I know he does not like to frighten the junior Senator from Oregon, but the Senator has me scared almost to death by this proposal.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, knowing the courage of the Senator from Oregon I am appalled at the result I have occasioned in that respect. But I may say that to my mind the bill, as I have introduced it, does precisely what the Senator has in mind, namely, it leaves all the processes, all the opportunities for the voluntary settlement of disputes, in full force and effect.

In addition to that, it leaves the provision for the adjustment board, for the activities of its divisions, unaffected. Then, Mr. President, it permits the mediation board to consider the matter. There is nothing in my amendment which would prevent that in the slightest. All the provisions of the Railway Labor Act would remain in effect so far as adjustment, mediation, and voluntary processes are concerned. My bill only applies in this respect insofar as matters other than disputes within the jurisdiction of the adjustment board are concerned. I pause at that point so that the RECORD may show what I mean. Of course, the Senator realizes much better than most of us that in the Railway Labor Act there are two divisions of disputes: One, those that are considered before the adjustment board, which, generally speaking, relate to existing contracts and their interpretation; and then disputes which relate to contracts to be negotiated for the future; and, as to the latter, I term them in my bill disputes "other than a dispute within the jurisdiction of the adjustment board."

In the first place, the bill leaves the present provision as to the binding effect of certain awards by the adjustment board unimpaired. There is one situation, as the Senator will realize and will recall, in the Railway Labor Board, as to the binding effect of an order of the adjustment board. That is the case of a money award. Then in the cases which the Senator I think probably has in mind, let us consider what my bill says. It says:

The act is amended to read as follows:

That is, the Railway Labor Act. In the first place, the bill leaves the act as it is except as it is amended. The bill does not tear down any of it except certain portions which are stricken out, and my amendments are substituted. But the Railway Labor Act in its outline remains as it is, subject only to these amendments. And here is this amendment:

Section 10 of the Railway Labor Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

First, section 10—

If a dispute between a carrier and its employees, other than a dispute within the jurisdiction of the adjustment board, shall not have been adjusted or arbitration agreed to within 15 days after the Mediation Board shall have requested the parties to submit such dispute to arbitration, the Mediation Board shall immediately so notify the President.

I pause at that point. Obviously this bill contemplates that, the voluntary processes must be exhausted. In addition to that, the Mediation Board, if it shall have requested the parties to submit themselves to arbitration and the parties shall have failed to submit themselves to such arbitration, then, and only then, shall the Mediation Board notify the President; and thereafter the President is required to create a Presidential board.

Mr. MORSE. That is in essence the same procedure as that of the existing act.

Mr. DONNELL. As I recall, under the existing act it is not mandatory on the President. I think he has the authority, the power to create a mediation board. I do not have the Railway Labor Act at my fingertips, on the desk.

Mr. MORSE. In other words, it would improve it. Under the present law, does not the Emergency Board act?

Mr. DONNELL. Yes.

Mr. MORSE. I think there have been very few cases.

Mr. DONNELL. This makes it mandatory upon the President, if the facts exist, as I have indicated.

Mr. MORSE. Then, does not the Senator, by including the mandatory provision, strengthen even more than does the existing act the hand of the party who wants to conduct himself as I now describe his conduct, namely, the party, be it a brotherhood or a carrier, who has in a way merely figured out that he will be better off if he lets a particular dispute run the course of the provisions of the new Railway Labor Act which the Senator's bill would provide, and end up with compulsory arbitration, thus affording no inducement for good-faith collective bargaining, good-faith mediation, or agreeing to good-faith voluntary arbitration? He could merely sit and look out the window and say, "All right, we disagree, we disagree, we disagree," because what he is after is the appointment of the emergency board and compulsory arbitration; whereas what I suggested yesterday in committee was that we give consideration to a revision of the Railway Labor Act, which would keep the parties in doubt as to what would happen to them if they do not bargain in good faith, giving them no assurance that they are going to be able to sit there and look out the window and go through to compulsory arbitration. There could be a refusal to take jurisdiction, if it were found that they have been acting in bad faith. Of course, it is helpful, as the Senator knows, to have a little economic club which one of the parties can use on the other. If a board finds that the other party has been acting in bad faith, the publicity which would follow from such a finding would have a tremendous effect on public opinion, and directly upon the parties themselves.

I should like to try some of the psychological-warfare weapons in the field of labor disputes before I come to the kind of strong ammunition which the Senator from Missouri would shoot at them.

Mr. DONNELL. In regard to the suggestion the Senator has made very forcefully in the committee, and possibly elsewhere, to the effect that it is of importance that both parties be left in doubt as to what is going to happen, I cannot see anything in my bill which removes any doubt. That is to say, if the parties sit and look out the window, as the Senator has supposed, the sitter at the window is running a risk as to what the presidential board is going to do. It may very well be that the presidential board may say, "Gentlemen, here is our decision." It may be very materially less than the party might have been able to secure by negotiation instead of by looking out the window.

Mr. President, the Senator from Oregon has referred to the strong ammunition which he considers my bill contains. I believe there is strength in the bill and that is what I want in it. I think we must have something which will make unlawful great industrial disturbances and disputes arising out of the Railway Labor Act. Inasmuch as we have tried for all these years, under the Railway Labor Act, not to go to the extent of having compulsory arbitration, I am in favor of putting into the act an ingredient which it now lacks. To my mind, it is a wholesome and a necessary one.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, if I may I should like to close my colloquy with the Senator by making this very brief comment: The Senator heard me, yesterday, in committee, raise a question as to the operation of mediation processes under the Railway Labor Act. I have not yet completed my study, but I have been working on it. I was advised today that the doubt I expressed as to the efficacy of mediation under the existing act was a well-stated doubt. Mediation under the act has not been successful in settling a single major railway dispute, although some possible help was given through mediation in perhaps two cases. But it cannot be said they were finally settled through mediation. That is one of the great weaknesses of the act, because I think that after good-faith collective bargaining most cases should be settled. I do not believe we should go into the field of voluntary arbitration, for if that becomes the common procedure for settling disputes, it destroys itself because it comes to substitute in industry a third party to run the industry rather than having it run by the employers and the workers themselves.

I am sure I was reliably informed today that even in the instant dispute the Railway Mediation Board has made recommendations for the settlement of the strike which the workers have indicated would be acceptable to them, or at least, they would like to sit down and talk about the proposals. They have indicated that there is merit in them, whereas the carriers, again, as they did before the Emergency Board was appointed, refused to give consideration to the recommendations of the Mediation Board.

I desire to get more facts with reference to it. I repeat what I said yesterday, that America does not happen to be in the same position in which she was when the report was handed down. We are actually in peril today, and I want to repeat my warning to both the carriers and the brotherhoods that if they want to talk about rights, I do not think either or both of them have any right to take an adamant, stubborn, uncompromising position and say they will not seek in good faith to settle the matter through mediation. In my opinion the people of the country have a right, over this week end, to have the carriers and the brotherhoods sit down and get the case settled. We can then consider any procedure as to future cases which the Senator from Missouri wants to propose in connection with his bill. But we are confronted now with a great emergency. I do not believe I am unfair when I ask the brotherhoods and the carriers, in the public interest and in the interest of the security of the Nation, to get this case settled over the week end by way of good-faith mediation. I think it can be settled in 5 hours.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I should like to say to the distinguished Senator from Missouri that I have listened with much interest to the discussion. It has been most enlightening. I am wondering if the Senator from Missouri would be interested in knowing the experience which the Senator from Kansas has had with reference to inquiries which have been made of him in communications of various and sundry types he has received in relation to the bill which the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Oregon have been discussing?

Mr. DONNELL. I shall be much pleased to have the Senator give that information for the benefit of the Senate, the entire Congress, and the public.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I might say that within the past several days the senior Senator from Kansas has been literally swamped with telegrams, letters, and numerous telephone calls from the State of Kansas. The Senator from Missouri knows, of course, that the Rock Island Railroad system, one of the great railroad systems tied up in the strike, runs through the entire length of the State of Kansas. Probably some of the complaints which have come in have been aggravated because of the harvesting situation, but I have received hundreds of telegrams and hundreds of letters showing a very definite interest, almost going to the point of commanding me to use every means at my command to see if something may not be done to expedite, if at all possible, the hearings or the consideration on the part of the Senate and the enactment of Senate bill 3463.

I am sure I state it fairly when I say to the distinguished Senator from Missouri, the author of the bill which I have just mentioned, that those who have communicated with me are not unmindful of the fact that rights are involved, but they cannot understand why during such an emergency as the distinguished Senator from Oregon mentioned a few moments ago the settlement of the strike should be delayed. The people who are writing to me cannot understand why, in these times, it is impossible for the parties to understand that the public interest is involved.

I commend the Senator from Missouri for his discussion, and I want to say to him quite positively, and I want to say most kindly to the labor groups involved in the entire picture, that the general public, not only in my State and severally in the great Midwest, but, I know, in other sections of the country, are becoming very tired of these strikes, and that labor loses prestige, public faith, and public confidence when they permit such strikes to occur, and we apparently do not have the machinery at our command, after we have had an opportunity to consider all sides, to cope with this kind of an unreasonable dispute whereby the public suffers. I think it is a matter for very serious consideration in the light of the situation throughout the world in which we have a very important stake.

Mr. President, I asked the indulgence of the Senator from Missouri because I thought he might be interested in my viewpoint and to know of the communications which I have received.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to address a question to him?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I shall be glad to.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator has been not only the Governor of Kansas and is a Member of the United States Senate, but he has served as head of one of the important boards of his State. Will the Senator state what that board was?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I had the honor of serving as Chairman of the Corporation Commission of the State of Kansas, which is comparable to the Public Utilities Commissions of the respective States. The Senator from Kansas had the honor to serve in that capacity for approximately 3½ years.

Mr. DONNELL. Did he come in contact and have experience with the operation of railroads, among other public utilities?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I may say to the distinguished Senator from Missouri that in the capacity in which the senior Senator from Kansas indicated he served, one of the functions of the commission on which he served as chairman was the performance of duties in connection with matters incident to railroads and other public utilities.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator very much, indeed, for his fine contribution to this discussion. I wish to state one thing which I do not recall having stated for the record on the floor of the Senate, although I have stated it for the record in hearings before the committee, and I want the Senate to be just as fully advised as the committee. The Senator from Kansas referred to me as the author of the bill. I want to tell the facts with respect to the authorship of the bill as nearly as I can recall them. The fact is, Mr. President, that during my membership upon the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare of the Senate—and I have been a member of that committee and of its predecessor committee, the former Committee on Education and Labor since the time I came to the Senate in 1945—I became very much interested particularly in the testimony of experiences under the Railway Labor Act. I found the remark to which I have referred this afternoon in the official report to Congress from the National Mediation Board, pointing out the successes of the Railway Labor Act, pointing out the omissions and failures of the act, and pointing out that the experience with respect to these strikes does not bode well for the future of the act. Last year, in 1949, at or about the time of the Missouri Pacific strike, which, as I recall, began in September and lasted, as indicated, for 45 days, there was an increased emphasis in my mind on the importance of legislation which would be designed to prevent the occurrence of such strikes as that. I gave it some consideration. I was not an expert, and I am not today an expert. I make no pretense of being an expert on this type of law or legislation. However, I have tried to study it and learn something about it.

In view of my interest in the subject, I talked with Mr. Thomas E. Shroyer, who is a member of the staff, or was at that time, and holds a somewhat similar position today in connection with the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, or I believe he was then a member of the staff of the committee, and today I believe he is a member of a staff of a Senate subcommittee. He had had great experience in the matter of legislation touching labor. I talked to him with regard to the subject matter I had in mind, and he told me that there was one man he thought I could confer with who would be able to give me information of value, and that man was Mr. Carter Fort, the general counsel, I think, of the American Association of Railroads. Mr. Fort, at my request through Mr. Shroyer, was asked to come down to the Capitol, which he did. I conferred with him and Mr. Shroyer in the rear room of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare on this very floor of the Capitol. It seemed to me that Mr. Fort had himself already either prepared or caused to be prepared a tentative draft of legislation somewhat, although not precisely, along the lines I had in mind. I may say that I had not myself formulated in any detail the specific provision of what I had in mind.

Mr. Fort brought with him this particular paper. It was a document of quite a number of pages, and he permitted me to take it with me. I did so. The Senate adjourned on October 19, I think it was, last year. I remained in Washington until the early part of November and then went home to my State. I did not come back to Washington until the beginning or near the beginning of the present session. When the Diesel engine strike was about to be projected, my interest was again attracted by the menace of that strike, and I requested Mr. Fort—I think it was again through Mr. Shroyer—to come to my office, which he did. There Mr. Fort, Mr. Shroyer, and I conferred. I told Mr. Fort that what I wanted was a bill to make it unlawful to strike in the railway industry, and to make the findings of a board final and binding, subject only, I think I may have said—I am not certain whether I did say so or not—subject only as it ultimately developed, to certain court review of a limited nature, which is set forth in this bill.

Mr. Fort, at my suggestion, request, and approval, undertook to be of some assistance in formulating the thought which I had suggested. He himself was not certain by any means whether his clients, the American Association of Railroads, would favor the plan which I had. He assisted and brought down a redraft of the proposed bill.

I am going into some detail, Mr. President, because there has been considerable charge by railway labor newspapers in America of participation of the railroads in this matter, and of the alleged charge that I am a mere tool or agent of the railroads. I want the facts clear in the RECORD in that respect. I want it to be clear that it was I and not the railroads that initiated the thought of the presentation of legislation of this type on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. Fort, Mr. Randall, a Mr. Pinion, of the office of the legislative counsel of the Senate, the general counsel, I think he was, of the Santa Fe Railroad—the name escapes me now—and a gentleman from the Southern Railway Co.—I believe he was one of the officers of that company who was in the city at the time—came to my office. I am not certain how many conferences Mr. Fort and I had. Perhaps it was one or two additional conferences. At any rate, these gentlemen came down one night and we worked and prepared a redraft of this bill. Mr. Pinion made suggestions, and the other gentlemen made suggestions, and we had considerable discussions on the subject in my office. Finally a draft was agreed upon by myself as being what I wanted.

Mr. President, I indicated at the time that I would desire to state on the floor of the Senate the participation that these gentlemen from the railroads had had in regard to this matter. Because of the fact that Mr. Fort had no authorization whatever to speak for his association—and I think it was likewise true with respect to the other gentlemen that they had no authority to speak for their railroads—as to whether or not they were favorable to the principle involved, it was suggested that I should not make any statement with respect to that effect upon the floor of the Senate in presenting this bill. A few days later the Association of Railroads held a meeting in the city of Washington. I introduced the bill on April 21, before the railroad meeting was held. The railroad meeting was held. I have never seen a transcript of the proceedings, and I do not know whether one was made. I do not know whether any final action was taken on the bill. I do know that following the meeting of the presidents of various railroads I was informed that Mr. Franklin of the Pennsylvania Railroad and if I am not mistaken I believe that previously I had heard that he was in favor of some such measure, although I am not entirely certain of that—the president of the New York Central Railroad, the president of the Santa Fe, and one of the high officers of the Southern Railway Co. were in favor of the bill, and were willing to testify at hearings on the subject.

At the first hearing, as I recall, Mr. Fort was the first witness. He was called at my instance, I asked him questions, and from the record of that hearing it will be disclosed that Mr. Fort stated quite fully and frankly, as I found him to express himself always to me, substantially what I have given here this afternoon.

Mr. President, I want clear on the record of the Senate the assistance that was given to me in connection with the formulation of this bill. I want that particularly in view of the fact that the Senator from Kansas referred to me as the author of the bill. I want it full and clear, and if there is any question by any Member of the Senate, at this time or any other time, as to the participation of the railways, I want such Member or Members to feel entirely free to ask me for a fuller or more complete statement, if I have inadvertently omitted any portion of the facts.

Mr. President, I shall not trespass much longer on the time of the Senate. Senators have been very patient with me this afternoon, and again I desire to thank the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] for their participation in the discussion. After all, I realize that it is only after study, it is only after conference, it is only after the interplay of different views, that we finally come to a conclusion. That is the way, my brief experience in the Senate has indicated, that legislation is prepared. So I welcome comments not merely favorable to the bill, but comments such as those by the Senator from Oregon, which indicate questions which have arisen in his mind. I appreciate also the factual statement made by the Senator from Kansas as to the communications he has been receiving from his own State and the difficulty of the people there to understand why it is that the members of this industry cannot come together.

Mr. President, I desire to put into the RECORD a few more utterances by the press. The Philadelphia Inquirer of today carries an article entitled in somewhat heavy black type, "Embargo Put on Wheat In Western Rail Strike." This is a dispatch from Washington under date of June 29, United Press. It reads:

The Association of American Railroads today issued an embargo which will permit movement of wheat in the Midwest only where storage is available or the wheat is for sale. The order was issued because of the 5-day-old strike by 4,000 A. F. of L. switchmen.

The embargo, effective July 1, covers Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and Missouri, and Council Bluffs, Iowa, and East St. Louis, Ill. It is designed to prevent congestion and long delays of box cars at grain storage points.

The embargo does not apply to wheat shipped by farmers which is intended for sale.

Mr. President, I ask that the entire article be placed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EMBARGO PUT ON WHEAT IN WESTERN RAIL STRIKE

WASHINGTON, June 29 (UP).—The Association of American Railroads today issued an embargo which will permit movement of wheat in the Midwest only where storage space is available or the wheat is for sale. The order was issued because of the 5-day-old strike by 4,000 A. F. of L. switchmen.

The embargo, effective July 1, covers Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and Missouri, and Council Bluffs, Iowa, and East St. Louis, Ill. It is designed to prevent congestion and long delays of boxcars at grain storage points.

The embargo does not apply to wheat shipped by farmers which is intended for sale.

BOARD MAPS FORMULA

The first violence in the strike flared meanwhile as the Railway Mediation Board drew up a formula which it hopes will halt the switchmen's walkout as well as forestall a strike by more than 250,000 conductors, trainmen, and yardmasters.

Officials of the Great Northern Railroad, the only one of five affected roads to continue operations, reported nonstrikers were stoned at Seattle, Wash., and St. Paul, Minn.

RECURRENCE DISCUSSED

The heads of many of the country's major railroads conferred privately at Washington on the problem of recurring strikes in the industry.

In the Senate, Senator WAYNE MORSE (Democrat, Oregon) said the American people would not "stand for any tie-up of American railroads at this time of peril, and shouldn't."

FORTY-HOUR WEEK IS ISSUE

The switchmen struck against five Western railroads after a Presidential fact-finding board rejected their demand for a 40-hour week with no loss of pay.

The Great Northern has been offering a "restricted service" along its main lines. A spokesman said today, however, that 22,000 of its 23,000 employees would be made idle by tomorrow if the strike continued. The Great Northern has been forced to halt 46 round trip and 39 branch line trains.

The other four railroads, the Rock Island, the Chicago Great Western, the Western Pacific, and the Denver & Rio Grande Western, were paralyzed.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, so that the Senator from Oregon may know of the particular contents of this article, I should like to read one sentence from the article which refers to him. It says:

In the Senate, Senator WAYNE MORSE—

Inadvertently it says "(Democrat, Oregon)." I know the Senator is a Republican, and there is an error.

Mr. MORSE. In some quarters there seems to be some doubt.

Mr. DONNELL. I am sure of the Senator's fine contribution to the Republican Party. He and I sit together on the same side of the aisle, and are seat mates.

In the Senate, Senator WAYNE MORSE (Democrat, Oregon)—

It should be Republican—said the American people would not stand for any tie-up of American railroads at this time of peril, and shouldn't.

A little further down in the article it is said:

The Great Northern has been offering a restricted service along its main lines. A spokesman said today, however, that 22,000 of its 23,000 employees would be made idle by tomorrow if the strike continued. The Great Northern has been forced to halt 46 round trip and 39 branch-line trains.

The other four railroads—the Rock Island, the Chicago Great Western, the Western Pacific, and the Denver & Rio Grande Western—were paralyzed.

That is from today's Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mr. President, day before yesterday the Chicago Tribune had this to say, referring to a matter that was mentioned on the floor of the Senate yesterday:

THREE HUNDRED TRAINMEN STRIKE—ELEVEN THOUSAND IN PLANT IDLED

LORAIN, Ohio, June 27.—A strike of 300 plant railroad workers shut down the National Tube Co. plant here today, throwing 11,000 employees out of work.

National Tube, United States Steel's largest subsidiary, makes seamless pipe and billets. The 4-mile Lake Terminal Railroad, also owned by United States Steel, connects with other railroads in Lorain.

Earl B. Wecome, deputy president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said the strike was a protest against recent recommendations by a Presidential fact finding board. The board recommended a 40-hour week with an 18-cent hourly pay boost. The union sought a 40-hour week with 48 hours pay. In Cleveland, William P. Kennedy, BRT president, said the strike was unauthorized. Under terms of the Railway Labor Act, the BRT cannot legally strike until July 15.

Finally, Mr. President, I desire to read into the RECORD another article appearing in yesterday's Philadelphia Inquirer entitled "Rail Strike Called Peril to United States Defense Plans." The dispatch comes from Washington:

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Daniel Loomis, chairman of the Carriers Conference Committee, today warned that the AFL switchmen's 3-day-old strike against five western railroads was endangering the defense program of the country.

Loomis pointed out that one of the struck railroads, the Great Northern, hauls one-third of the iron ore from the Mesabi range, chief source of iron ore for the steel industry, now operating at capacity.

I hope the Senate will bear in mind particularly this sentence:

Also affected, he said, are uranium processing plants located on the route of the Denver and Rio Grande. Uranium is essential in the production of atom bombs and other types of weapons.

Loomis emphasized that the switchmen's strike might take on added importance in view of President Truman's decision to halt Communist aggression in Korea and contain it elsewhere in Asia.

Loomis said four major west coast ports, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, and Vancouver, all gateways to Pearl Harbor and other points essential to the President's containment policy, have been hit by the rail strike.

The rail tie-up also has hit United States Steel's Geneva plant, one of the principal sources of steel for the west coast.

I do not know where the Geneva plant is. Perhaps the Senator from Oregon can tell us.

Mr. MORSE. It is in Utah.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator. The article continues:

Loomis was asked if the carriers were ready to assume wartime responsibilities in the event that Mr. Truman's policy generated another world conflict. He said that the Nation's railroads had been on an emergency basis for years and, except for a possible early shortage of freight cars, were ready to move with the defense program.

I called attention to the shortage in freight cars caused by this strike, which is idling many thousands of freight cars on the roads' lines. The article continues:

In addition to the Great Northern and the Denver, the other carriers affected by the strike are the Chicago Great Western, the Western Pacific and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific. These five carriers serve 23 Western States.

Federal mediators and union and railroad representatives have had no success in trying to settle the 3-day dispute of the switchmen, who are seeking a 40-hour week with 48 hours pay, which would amount to a pay increase of 31 cents an hour. The roads are willing to grant only the 18 cents recommended by a Presidential fact-finding board.

So the 3-day strike is now a 5-day strike.

I desire to emphasize, in concluding my remarks of today, that the interest which I have in presenting this matter is the public interest, not the railroads' interest, not the employees' interests, save only as the railroads and the employees are a part of the industry and the public of the United States. I plead, Mr. President, with the Senate, for the people of the United States who find themselves in a condition in which legally today sections of the railroads over the country, through the device of having strikes only in partial sections of the country, may be wholly curtailed and paralyzed in their industrial operations. I plead for the people of the country, the men and the women and the children who, if great industrial conflicts in the railway industry shall continue to be inflicted upon them, will be subject not only to inconvenience but in many instances doubtless suffering and perhaps disaster. I plead for the industry of the small-business man as well as for the large-business man, for manufacturer, for the farmer, for the miner, for all occupations and employers and professions, because we are all interested in the public welfare, and we are all a part of the public.

Senate bill 3463 does not deny any carrier or any employee or any union the right to voluntary processes. It does not deny the Mediation Board's right of participation. It merely says that the Government here provides a method of settling these disputes, just like a lawsuit is settled by a court, by such a court as that over which the distinguished present occupant of the Chair, the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS] presided with distinction. Just as is true in the case of settlement of disputes by the courts, rather than to have them settled by force and violence, so when great public interest is involved the Congress, as I see it, should say that we are going to have tribunals which are created by Congress settle railway disputes and make such settlements final and binding.

The bill goes further, as I have indicated, and makes it clear that not only are the settlements final and binding, but that no strike on the one hand by employees, and no lockout on the other hand by carriers, shall be lawful when they shall arise out of or in connection with a dispute falling within the purview of the Railway Labor Act.

I thank the Senate for its very kind consideration.

EXHIBIT 1

[From the American Forum of the Air, June 17, 1950]

THE RAILWAY LABOR CRISIS

(Senator FORREST C. DONNELL, Republican, of Missouri; Senator CLAUDE PEPPER, Democrat, of Florida; Theodore Granik, founder and moderator of the American Forum of the Air)

ANNOUNCER. The National Broadcasting Co. presents the American Forum of the Air, founded 22 years ago by Theodore Granik and dedicated to the full and public discussion of all sides of all issues, coming to you from the NBC theater in Washington, D. C.

Now, here is your moderator, Theodore Granik.

Chairman GRANIK. The United States Senate Labor Committee has been holding hearings on a bill which would prohibit railroad strikes and require compulsory arbitration of all railway labor disputes.

Testifying in opposition to the measure, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared, and I quote, "It is an attempt to establish a phase of Russian philosophy in American life." But the bill's sponsor, Senator FORREST C. DONNELL, Republican of Missouri, said it was based on a premise that the public interest was predominant to that of either labor or management in a dispute that threatened a national emergency.

In view of the bill's vital effect on our national economy, the American Forum of the Air has invited Senator DONNELL and Senator CLAUDE PEPPER, Democrat of Florida, both of whom are members of the Senate Labor Committee, to discuss the issues involved.

Now, Senator DONNELL, opponents of your measure contend that it is a long step toward Government ownership of the railroads. How do you feel about it?

Senator DONNELL. Mr. Granik, I do not agree with that view. There is nothing in my bill which tends toward Government ownership. Although I do not contemplate that Government ownership of American railways is likely under even present law, nevertheless there is under the existing law a greater probability of public insistence arising for Government ownership than would ever arise under my bill. This is true because unless some method of preventing railroad strikes shall be put into effect, the people may demand that through some form of governmental interposition, perhaps even Government ownership, such strikes shall be prevented.

Mr. Granik, you have correctly understood that the keynote of my bill is the fact that in railway labor disputes the parties at interest are not solely the companies and their employees, but include in addition, and foremost, the public.

Chairman GRANIK. Senator PEPPER?

Senator PEPPER. Senator DONNELL, I think you take far too pessimistic an outlook upon this problem. I think that you fail to realize how well we have been getting along. As a matter of fact, in the last 15 years since this amended labor disputes act for railway employees and management became effective, we have had 108 work stoppages, and only, I believe—well, let us see. Over the 15-year period from 1935 to 1949, inclusive, there have been 102 work stoppages in the industry. Then if you add the six that have occurred this year, the total is 108. Only two of these work stoppages which were of any significance involved more than one railroad. One was the strike of the engineers and trainmen in 1946, which lasted 2 days, and the other was a recent firemen's strike, which lasted 1 week.

Now, one other thing, Senator, if I may. It is not suggested that your bill by its own terms would provide for Government ownership, but what you do in your bill is to deny to railroad labor the right to strike. You make it a punishable offense if they should strike, no matter what the cause of the strike might be. And the last is, you provide that when a Presidential emergency board is appointed and makes its recommendations, that is binding upon both of the parties and may be enforced in a court.

Now, that means that three men—because you do not fix the size of your board in your bill—three men appointed by the President might fix any wages, any terms or working conditions, which might be ruinous, either to the railroads, the management, or to the employees, and you might force public ownership in order to carry out the terms that your board might require.

Senator DONNELL. Mr. Granik, I was interested in Senator PEPPER's comment to the effect that he thinks that I am too pessimistic as to conditions. May I call to the attention of the Senator, and to all others interested, that the National Mediation Board, which was created by the Railway Labor Act, in its official report to the Houses of Congress for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1948, after referring to 172 peaceful settlements effected through mediation or arbitration, said, and I quote the Board:

"The peaceful settlements do not, however, make up for the instances in which stoppages occurred. It is not a good record, and it does not bode well for the future effectiveness of the Railway Labor Act."

Now, Mr. Chairman, the recollection of railway strikes and threatened strikes is fresh in our memory.

Senator PEPPER, you referred to the fact that we have had six of them this very year. You referred also to the strike in May of 1946 that was a Nation-wide strike of locomotive engineers, trainmen, and yardmen. The 1946 annual report of the National Mediation Board said of it, and I quote:

"By far the most disruptive tie-up in the history of American railroads occurred at 4 p. m., on May 23, 1946, when locomotive engineers, trainmen, and yardmen left their jobs and operation of our giant network of railways came to a halt."

The Board said:

"The effect was immediate, paralyzing, and Nation-wide."

Chairman GRANIK. Could I interrupt?

Senator PEPPER. It did only last 2 days, however, did it not?

Senator DONNELL. That is right; and even in those 2 days, the effect was "immediate, paralyzing, and Nation-wide."

Suppose, Senator, that instead of lasting 2 days this strike of 1946, which affected virtually all of the railroads, had gone through the experience of the Wabash Railway strike, which lasted for 8 days, or of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad Co. strike, when more than 100,000 miles of railroads serving 11 States were tied up by a strike for nearly 6½ weeks.

Senator PEPPER. Senator, may I interrupt you to make another comparison? Public utilities are also of vital interest to the public, and they are necessary also to the public welfare. In every year since the war, up to and including the present year, except one, and that was in 1949, I believe, the record of the number of work stoppages in relation to the number of hours worked was more favorable in the railroad industry than even in the case of public utilities, and in every year the record in the railroad industry of hours worked in relation to the hours not worked by work stoppages, was more favorable than in private industry. So when you see that record, that you have only had the small number of strikes that you have had, and the relative lack of detriment to the public interest, and when you compare the good record in the railroad industry to the record of public utilities and all industry generally, then when you consider the drastic method that you proposed, of giving the number of men the President might appoint the absolute, arbitrary, unreviewable power—because in your bill there is no right to review any decision that this Presidential board might make—giving them the unreviewable power to do anything that might affect management or labor——

Chairman GRANIK. May I quote from one of the witnesses before your committee? I believe this was the testimony of Mr. Franklin, the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad:

"I believe that our experience with the present Railway Labor Act shows that we have gone as far as we can go with voluntary machinery for disposing of railway labor disputes, and found it simply does not work because the labor organizations are unwilling to accept any less concessions than they think that they can enforce by threat to strike."

Would you care to comment on that?

Senator PEPPER. I recall that testimony by Mr. Franklin, the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, I believe; but he said that he reluctantly, also, came to the conclusion of recommending compulsory arbitration.. I wonder if management would not later come to regret giving the power to the Government, the power to the President by the selection of a Board, to fix any wages, to fix any terms of work that management might have to meet. In other words, I think that they may now be harassed and have difficulty, but I wonder if they want to fly to ills that they know not of.

Senator DONNELL. Mr. Granik, may I make some comment on that?

In connection with Mr. Franklin's testimony, to my mind the very fact that he did reluctantly come to this conclusion adds persuasiveness and force to his testimony. It was not a case in which Mr. Franklin was seeking to interpose some drastic remedy. It was a situation in which he found that it was the only remedy that was practicable, and he came forward, as he very frankly said, and as I think in substance the other railroad presidents—the president of the Santa Fe, the president of the New York Central, the president or operating manager or vice president, I believe it was, of the Southern Railway—came forward without any great desire to advocate that this thing be forced upon the public, but they reluctantly came to the conclusion that it was the only possible, practicable remedy.

Senator PEPPER. Now, my distinguished colleague raises a matter of practicability. That leads us to examine the experience that others have had in the use of compulsory arbitration. Our great State of Kansas tried that in 1920, I believe it was, with the Kansas compulsory arbitration law, Industrial Disputes Act. It was in effect for about 3 years before the United States Supreme Court held it unconstitutional. But the writers who have examined its history said that it did not stop strikes. They said that compulsory arbitration has not succeeded in New Zealand and Australia, and that England, which had a criminal statute forbidding strikes during the war, still had a larger percentage of strikes, in relation to the workers employed, than we had in the United States when we did not have such a law.

Chairman GRANIK. I would like to quote from another statement, that of Mr. Robinson——

Senator DONNELL. Could I answer some of these statements by Senator PEPPER—but go ahead.

Chairman GRANIK. Another one of your witnesses, Mr. E. B. Robinson, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen and Enginemen, said that "this would be only a step in the direction of a compulsory arbitration in all industry, because you cannot have it in the railroad industry without spreading it all over the country."

He went on, I think, later on, to say, "If you take the first step, you will never see the end until you get nationalization of all industry."

Senator DONNELL. May I say this with respect to the comments made by Senator PEPPER?

In the first place, as to the point that the action of the Presidential Board is not subject to review, I disagree with the Senator in that respect, although I want to state very frankly that the provision for review in the bill itself is very limited, but if the Senator would refer to pages 6 and 7 of the bill, he will note that there is a review provided by way of a petition for impeachment of the report, on several grounds, among which is that the report does not conform to the issues in the controversy submitted to the Board.

Senator PEPPER. That is all technical, and, as you say, all limited. If they were to find that management should double the wages of the workers of the country, there would be no way that management could do anything about it.

Senator DONNELL. I think that you are precisely right in that regard.

With respect to the Kansas Industrial Court, may I call attention to two or three things. In the first place, the Kansas Industrial Court was not a court which was confined to railways—and I am not certain whether railways were included, perhaps they were—but it was a general industrial court, which referred to disputes in all lines of general industry. And the case in which the law was held unconstitutional was one which came up from the packing-house industry.

Now I am not in favor, Mr. Chairman, of compulsory arbitration in general industry. I am opposed to it. But when we find a situation in which great, giant networks of our railroads can be tied up, and in the course, as Senator PEPPER indicated, of only 2 days' time can have a paralyzing, immediate, and Nation-wide effect upon our industry and our people, I think that there is sound reason for putting into effect a different law than would apply to general industry.

Now, I want——

Chairman GRANIK. Would you like to comment on that, Senator PEPPER?

Senator PEPPER. Do you not believe, Senator, that leaving aside the wisdom or lack of wisdom of applying that new principle in respect to the railroad industry, that immediately somebody would come forward and say that we should apply the same thing to the utilities, the public utilities; and then the next step would obviously be to the coal industry; and then someone might well add the gasoline industry. And all of those things are essential to the continuity of our American way of life. Where will it lead you? Once you take away from men the right to stop working for an employer for private profit, and give the Government the power, unreviewable authority, to fix wages and working conditions and things that are essential to the continuity of that industry, you have practically turned the whole thing over to the Government.

Senator DONNELL. I may say in answer to that that it is, of course, entirely possible that if a railway labor compulsory arbitration act be put into effect, that there may arise proponents of extending that arbitration to all types of industry. But just as the Supreme Court of the United States in the case declaring unconstitutional the Kansas Industrial Court, distinguished between the situation in which general industry is concerned, and which had to do likewise with food which certainly is of importance, I would say that just as the Supreme Court distinguished between that case, and as it has later on referred to public utilities, likewise to my mind there is a perfectly logical answer that would be put forth in Congress, and in my judgment successfully so, to any extension of compulsory arbitration from a field in which it is obviously needed to a field in which it would be improper for it to proceed.

Senator PEPPER. Senator, let us suppose a case where this board and the number of the board is not fixed, and it might be three men appointed by the President, might proceed. Leaving aside the question that if you had a President who was friendly to labor he might appoint a board friendly to labor, and a President who was friendly to management might appoint that kind of a board; leaving that aside, suppose that that board should require management to pay more wages than they can pay out of their current revenues. Then you have got no right of appeal. There is no way that public opinion can make itself felt upon the wisdom of it, no way that the President can intervene even, and they have got to carry out the terms of that order. Now, then, does that mean that the Interstate Commerce Commission would perforce have to give a rate increase automatically in order to carry out a Government order? What would you do in a case like that?

Senator DONNELL. It is perfectly clear what should be done under those circumstances. The fact is that if the railroads are ordered by the presidential board to increase wages, it is just the same as if grease or oil or any other equipment or material used by railroads shall go up. It would mean necessarily an increase in the rates which the railroads would charge.

How would it be put into effect? Well, under present law, as I understand it, the railroad, if it found that it could not make its earnings on the income derived from existing rates, would fix a rate and then the Interstate Commerce Commission, to which the Senator refers, would determine whether or not the rate was reasonable. If it should hold it was unreasonable, it would order it reduced; and if it held that the rate was unreasonable or unreasonably low and the railroads still found that they couldn't make money, the courts would step in and protect the investors in the railroads.

Senator PEPPER. Wouldn't that lead you logically to the conclusion that the board, being given the power to fix wages and working conditions, would practically have the power to effect all of these things that are incident thereto, so they would also have the power to fix rates?

Chairman GRANIK. May I interrupt you and take a question from the audience?

Question. I am a resident in Washington and this question is addressed to Senator PEPPER. Sir, do you favor the fantastic wage agreements which have been forced upon the railroads by the unions with the advice and consent of Government-appointed boards? Typical case of this is the pay of engineers in the Washington-New York run, where for a round trip he gets 6 days pay for 1 day's work of 8 hours? That amounts to about $65.

Chairman GRANIK. Go ahead, Senator PEPPER.

Senator PEPPER. I don't know the details of the agreements to which you referred, but I wouldn't hesitate to make the general observation that taking into account the character of their labor, and the manner in which they perform it, that railroad labor including engineers is not overpaid.

Question. Do you think that stockholders are entitled to any return on their investment?

Senator PEPPER. I do not know what return the stockholders of the railroads are getting at the present time.

Question. They have not had a dividend on their common stock in 20 years.

Chairman GRANIK. Do you have any comment on that question, Senator?

Senator DONNELL. I have no comment. I think that the gentleman who has presented the question has commented on it and I am quite ready to leave it at that point.

Question. I am from Danville, Va., representing the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Senator DONNELL, do you believe that the railroad problem could be solved in any measure by the adoption of further Federal controls on the fast-growing trucking industry?

Senator DONNELL. Of course, I would say this, that the trucking industry undoubtedly has a close relationship with and effect upon the railroad industry, but I don't think that any regulation of the trucking industry would even remotely affect the question that is presented and considered by this bill. We have here a situation in which great Nation-wide strikes are had and are threatened. We have had strikes as in the case of the Missouri-Pacific covering 10 States, or a strike as I was about to mention a little while ago in May of 1948, which was threatened and was stopped only by an order granted by a Federal court of which the President himself said, "A strike on our railroads would be a Nation-wide tragedy with world-wide repercussions."

I would answer your question by saying that while of course there is a relationship between all types of transportation, I do not think any regulation of trucking could even remotely solve this problem.

Senator PEPPER. May I just add the observation that many of us know the importance to the national economy of the trucking industry also, and I would think my learned friend, if he were going to be consistent and protect the public interest, would also apply his principle of compulsory arbitration to disputes between trucking management and labor.

Chairman GRANIK. I may add the observation that next week we are going to discuss all phases of transportation. So we will probably cover your question in full next week.

Senator PEPPER. And the airlines, the same principle should apply to them.

Chairman GRANIK. We will cover the airlines and the truckers.

Senator DONNELL. Will you also take up your boat that you have down on the Potomac, when you take that up, Mr. Granik?

Chairman GRANIK. We will. All right, the next question.

Question. My name is Harold Bigler, and I would like to ask Senator PEPPER if he would prefer to have the Railroad Labor Act amended to incorporate the protective provisions similar to those in the Taft-Hartley law, rather than the proposal submitted here tonight.

Senator PEPPER. The Taft-Hartley Act is not only of doubtful protection but doubtful in entirety. Would you care to tell me what provision you mean?

Question. I had in mind the provisions principally that would do away with, for example, featherbedding, and that would protect the public.

Senator PEPPER. I think probably I should tell you that my attitude is that the Taft-Hartley Act should be reduced, and we should not stop until we get down to zero.

Chairman GRANIK. Would you care to comment on that?

Senator DONNELL. I take quite precisely the contrary view. I think the Taft-Hartley Act is one of the finest pieces of legislation that Congress has enacted in recent years. I do not at all, Mr. Chairman, take the view that the Taft-Hartley Act is perfect, and I happen to be one of the three Senators who proposed a bill last year which was passed by the Senate, which to my mind cured a number of the defects which had been pointed out in large part by the Labor-Management Committee, which had been created under the Taft-Hartley Act for the purpose of investigating whether or not changes should be made.

Senator PEPPER. It will no doubt stand considerable further improvement.

Chairman GRANIK. I see that Congressman ROGERS of Florida is here. Go ahead, Mr. ROGERS.

Representative ROGERS (Florida). I will address this question to Senator DONNELL Senator, don't you believe that if we adopt the principle of compulsory arbitration, that that should apply also to public utilities in which the public interest and the public welfare and the public health of people are concerned, or work out some means of adjustment whereby we can take care of the public and prevent strikes and lock-outs?

Senator DONNELL. I think there is very much to be said in favor of your proposition, Congressman ROGERS. However, my bill does not go that far, and I would not go that far without further hearings, without extensive consideration. I would like to say, however, that I have a telegram here from the Governor of your own State and the Governor of the State of our distinguished friend, Senator PEPPER. It refers to the public-utility law which is in effect in Florida, and which as I understand it provides for compulsory arbitration, and it says this:

"Re your telegram requesting information regarding Florida's statute, Laws of Florida, 1947, chapter 23,911, authorizing handling disputes in public utilities, please be advised that it is our view that such statute has proved to be of benefit and value to the disputants and the people of Florida. We have had occasion to act pursuant to authority of such statute in several instances, with all-around satisfactory results." Signed, Fuller Warren, Governor.

Senator PEPPER. Now, Senator, doesn't that pretty well illustrate how far along this path we would be pretty likely to go once we started with your bill? The able Congressman from Florida has already brought up the subject here, and you have already quoted the Governor of Florida rather favorably toward this legislation, and cannot you see pretty clearly that once we start down that path, first with your bill having compulsory arbitration with respect to railroad disputes and then probably reaching over next to disputes between management and labor in the trucking industry, and I see no reason why it shouldn't similarly apply in the aviation industry, because that is important. I think it would be very logical to extend it to the telephone industry, because everybody has admitted that if we tied up the telephone system of the country that would practically paralyze the country. Then you would have to carry it to Western Union and those facilities. Congressman ROGERS has suggested the public utilities, and it would be only a little while, as has happened in Australia and New Zealand where they have compulsory arbitration, until the Government would be fixing wages and salaries and therefore prices on practically everything.

Senator DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, may I say that in Australia and New Zealand, as I understand it, there has been compulsory arbitration for some 40 years or thereabouts. I want to say, however, in regard to Senator PEPPER'S suggestion that my bill is but one step along a longer road illustrated by Congressman ROGER'S question, to my mind it does not follow at all, because this bill is passed that the extension suggested by Congressman ROGERS is at all necessary or would occur. I did say and I repeat it, that in my judgment there is much to be said in commendation of his view, but I for one would not join in that view unless I were persuaded considerably more than I am at this time.

Chairman GRANIK. Could we have one more question?

Question. I am Al Stover of the Dartmouth College Young Republican Club. Senator PEPPER, do you object to a forced cooling off period before a railroad strike, regardless of the fact that railroads cannot suspend operations without the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Senator PEPPER. Well, there is I think what you might call a forced cooling off period under the present law. When there is an emergency board recommendation, then it is the duty of both management and labor not to make any changes in the situation for 30 days after the report is filed with the President. That is in the existing law and I don't know of any violation of that. So we have practically got a cooling off period, but my distinguished friend, Senator DONNELL'S bill, has no limit at all. It is a continual injunction against work stoppage.

Chairman GRANIK. Will you continue with your summary, Senator?

Senator PEPPER. Experience that we have had under the present railroad act has been on the whole satisfactory. We have not had serious and protracted work stoppages, and we have maintained the democratic principle of collective bargaining. The provisions of Senator DONNELL'S bill would inevitably in my humble opinion lead to the Government ownership of railroads or at least to the Government fixing wages and salaries and working conditions which would determine eventually rates and all of that sort of thing. I think it would be far better if I might paraphrase a little bit the words of Hamlet, "It were far better that we bear the democratic ideals we have rather than flee to the totalitarian ideals which we know not of."

Chairman GRANIK. Now, Senator DONNELL.

Senator DONNELL. Referring to Hamlet, I should like to refer also to his soliloquy, "To be, or not to be," and it would seem to me, Mr. Chairman, that a situation under which the railroads of our country can strike either in 10 States or 8 States or 48 States, and where there is no provision whatsoever of existing law which makes such a strike unlawful, is a dangerous one which, as the President himself said in the case of the strike of our railroads, would be a Nation-wide tragedy with world-wide reprecussions.

Senator PEPPER is of the opinion that the Railway Labor Act has worked well. To my mind it has produced many excellent results, and yet I take it that he overlooks the fact the National Mediation Board itself created by the Railway Labor Act, in the report from which I have quoted, spoke of the record of that Board in this language: "It is not a good record and it does not bode well for the future effectiveness of the Railway Labor Act."

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, this bill of mine is not a bill based on advocacy of the railroads or advocacy of or oppostion to either the railroads or labor. This bill is based on the theory that the interest which is predominant and paramount and must be protected is the interest of the public.

THE PRESIDENT'S VETO OF HOUSE BILL 1243, TO AMEND THE HATCH ACT

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, it has just been brought to my attention that the President of the United States has vetoed House bill 1243, the bill to amend the Hatch Act. I know the Presiding Officer is very much interested in this measure. We had considerable debate in the Senate over the conference report on the bill to amend the Hatch Act.

I noted in the Presidential message, which has been read in the House of Representatives, and has now been made available for release, that the President of the United States took note of two particular objections. One was that the bill limited the participation of Federal employees in a particular jurisdictional area, where there was a predominance of Federal employees in a population area.

The second point the President noted in his veto message was the statutory right given congressional committees to obtain records containing testimony or other evidence relative to charges or allegations of violations under the Hatch Act.

Mr. President, these were the very two points the Senator from Minnesota outlined in his address on the floor of the Senate as being objectionable in the conference report on the amendments to the Hatch Act. However, on the date that we voted on the measure the Senator from Minnesota had been informed that the objections to the use of the files on the part of the Civil Service Commission had been removed; in other words, that the Civil Service Commission felt that it could handle that particular feature of the bill. I must say, however, that on later inquiry the Senator from Minnesota found out that the Civil Service Commission was not of that mind. I applaud the President's veto of this measure.

I had definitely intended to vote against this measure, and within the hour of the vote, by telephone, I was informed that the major objection I had raised was one the Civil Service Commission felt it could properly handle by administrative rules and regulations, and rather than to impede the progress of the bill, because I did not feel other objections were too important, I changed my position and cast a vote in behalf of the bill.

I say now that if this measure comes up before the Senate on the question of overriding the veto of the President, I am going to support the President, because the evidence is quite clear that the President's position is sound. It is equally clear that the argument of the junior Senator from Minnesota was sound. I intend at the time the veto message comes before the Senate to support the President.

Mr. President, I now desire to speak on another subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota has the floor.

POLITICAL EXPENDITURES FROM PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION FUNDS

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I wish to bring up one other matter for the RECORD. On the date of June 20 the distinguished Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] and my distinguished colleague from Minnesota [Mr. THYE] made reference to the Secretary of Agriculture's reply to the General Accounting Office respecting a recent meeting in the State of Minnesota pertaining to the Production and Marketing Administration, its county committeemen and its community committeemen. I was present on the floor of the Senate during part of those remarks.

The next day I read those remarks in full. I was somewhat disturbed, and, may I say, surely interested. I immediately sent a copy of the remarks to the Secretary of Agriculture, the Production and Marketing Administrator and also to the State administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration in the State of Minnesota. Also on the date of June 21 I addressed a letter to the Minnesota PMA chairman, United States Department of Agriculture, St. Paul, Minn. The chairman's name is Mr. Charles Stickney. I know Mr. Stickney very well. Most of the members of the Minnesota delegation consider him not only to be an able public servant, one who has performed his tasks well and has performed his duties well, but we also consider him as a friend. So I addressed the letter to him in a very friendly tone, as follows:

DEAR CHARLIE: On the date of Tuesday, June 20, Senator AIKEN and Senator THYE made reference to the State Production Marketing Administration meeting held on April 3 and 4 at St. Paul, Minn. I am taking the liberty of sending you a copy of their remarks and ask for your analysis of their criticism.

I am particularly interested as to whether or not as stated by Senator AIKEN "over one-third of these community committeemen and posibly as high as 40 percent did not submit any claim for salary and travel expense." Is it true that of the total number of community committeemen who attended the PMA meeting that approximately one-third to 40 percent did not ask for salary and travel expense?

The next question I would like to have you answer is have you had a large number of complaints from community and county committeemen about this meeting?

Also, is it true that you or your office put undue pressure upon community and county committeemen to be present at the meeting?

I do hope that you will reply immediately to this letter. I want the United States Senate to know the facts. I ask your immediate consideration and reply.

Sincerely yours,

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY.

Under date of June 26, I received a reply, Mr. President, in reference to the questions which I asked in my letter of June 21. I am sure the reply is worthy of the attention of the Senate, because I have known of no meeting held in my beloved State of Minnesota that has caused more commotion, more comment, more criticism, and more misinformation and misinterpretation than this particular meeting. I read with interest editorials in the Washington newspapers about this meeting, in which the writers spoke as if they had been present, had enjoyed the privilege of the wonderful climate, and the fine hospitality of the good people of the State of Minnesota. I wrote to the editor of one of the newspapers and in so many words asked, "Were you there, Charlie?" Surely the editor spoke with all the authority of one who had sat on the platform and had absorbed every word that had been expressed.

This is the letter I received in reply to my letter of June 21:

UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
St. Paul, Minn., June 26, 1950.

Hon. HUBERT H. HUMPHREY,
United States Senate,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR HUBERT: We are including in this letter our answer to several of the statements made about our State PMA meeting held on April 4 which are found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for Tuesday, June 20. To substantiate several of these statements we are forwarding a copy of the tabulation this office made from the claims submitted by county and community committeemen for attendance at the meeting on the prescribed expense account forms used by county offices. This tabulation may not be identical with that made by the General Accounting Office representatives but very closely includes the same totals which they submitted in their report. They used our tabulation in preparing their report and may have, in several instances, included an additional day or two for community oommitteemen where we had information which indicated that committeemen did not actually attend the meeting but were employed for field work in the country. We would like to particularly direct your attention to the columnar headings showing the number of community committeemen in each county and the number who attended the meeting on April 4. You will note that a high percentage of the community committeemen in southern Minnesota or counties adjacent to the Twin Cities attended the meeting but in the northern part of the State very few community committeemen were present. This fact is explained by the weather and road conditions which existed in northern Minnesota on April 4. Many of the trunk highways from northern Minnesota were blocked.

Let me say that we had a blizzard on the second of April; in fact, there was not a thaw until May. So the committeemen were prevented by the weather conditions from traveling.

The letter goes on to say:

In the following paragraphs we have included excerpts from statements made by Senator AIKEN and Senator THYE and our response to what we consider discrepancies in the printed record—

Mr. President, those statements are the ones I sent to the Production and Marketing Administration's office in St. Paul. These are the statements as printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on June 20. I asked the State Production and Marketing Administration chairman to give me his answer in regard to the statements and his attitude regarding their accuracy.

In the letter, the Senator from Vermont then is quoted, as follows:

AIKEN. There were evidently between 3,300 and 4,000 community committeemen in attendance; but after learning of the irregularities engaged in by the State chairman of the PMA for Minnesota and the United States Department of Agriculture, over one-third of these community committeemen, and possibly as high as 40 percent, did not submit any claim for salary and travel expenses.

This is the information I have been able to obtain:

The Minnesota PMA Committee advises that to the best of their knowledge every county and community committeeman who attended the State meeting on either April 3 or 4 has been paid for attendance at the meeting.

Mr. President, at this point I wish to introduce into the RECORD a full tabulation for the annual State meeting on April 3 and April 4, giving the total number of county and community committeemen for each county, and the total number of county committeemen and community committeemen who attended the meeting and who were paid. I wish to ask unanimous consent that this tabulation be incorporated at this point of the RECORD as a part of my remarks; and I also note that the total county committee expense was $8,106.21 and the total community committee expense was $33,952.64.

So I ask unanimous consent that the tabulation be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the tabulation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Annual State meeting—Apr. 3 and 4, 1950

County	County committeemen							Community committeemen							Total
	April		Wages ($8 per day)	Mileage (5 cents per mile)	Common carrier		Per diem ($5 per day)	Number	April		Wages ($8 per day)	Mileage (5 cents per mile)	Common carrier
	3	4			Number	Amount			3	4			Number	Amount
Aitkin	2	2	$32.00	$7.20	2	$8.45	$22.50	30	10	11	$168.00	$48.15	2	$7.60	$293.90
Anoke	3	3	48.00	12.60				21		15	120.00	27.20			207.80
Becker	3	3	48.00	23.40			30.00	33	7	9	128.00	94.40	2	13.46	337.26
Beltrami	3	3	48.00	29.65			50.00	21	9	10	152.00	108.20	3	53.64	441.49
Benton	3	3	48.00	10.00			37.50	36		20	160.00	57.15			312.65
Big Stone	2	2	32.00	20.15			22.50	42	15	19	288.00	170.25	1	5.15	538.05
Blue Earth	3	3	48.00	9.50			33.75	69		44	344.00	81.85	20	57.03	574.13
Brown	3	2	40.00	7.05	1	2.13	28.75	48		30	240.00	172.40			490.33
Carlton	2	2	32.00		1	0.52	22.50	36	18	18	288.00	72.15	4	16.79	431.96
Carver	2	2	32.00	10.85				33		25	200.00	31.50			274.35
Cass	3	3	48.00	40.80	1	7.30	35.00	21	8	15	232.00	55.40	2	17.15	435.65
Chippewa	2	2	32.00	14.80	1	2.88	15.00	48	8	24	238.00	91.65	2	13.02	407.35
Chisago	3	3	48.00	5.60			22.50	18		17	136.00	36.40			248.50
Clay	3	3	48.00	30.35			36.25	90	2	2	32.00	27.20			173.80
Clearwater	3	3	48.00	29.25	1	4.43	48.75	39	9	9	144.00	112.00	2	13.44	399.87
Cook
Cottonwood	3	3	48.00	15.60	1	4.16	33.75	54	33	33	528.00	211.95	1	5.30	846.76
Crow Wing	2	2	32.00		2	10.00	27.50	33		13	104.00	16.05			189.55
Dakota	2	2	32.00	6.80				48		27	216.00	41.10			295.90
Dodge	3	3	48.00	10.25			22.50	36		16	128.00	45.30			254.05
Douglas	3	3	48.00	31.50			30.00	60	16¼	31	442.00	199.40	13	72.08	822.98
Faribault	3	3	48.00	14.70			27.00	60		39	312.00	130.25			531.95

Annual State meeting—Apr. 3 and 4, 1950—Continued

County	County committeemen							Community committeemen
	April		Wages ($8 per day)	Mileage (5 cents per mile)	Common carrier		Per diem ($5 per day)	Number	April		Wages ($8 per day)	Mileage (5 cents per mile)	Common carrier		Total
	3	4			Number	Amount			3	4			Number	Amount
Fillmore	3	3	$48.00	$36.20			$22.50	72		36	$288.00	$168.90			$563.60
Freeborn	3	3	48.00	10.50			30.00	60		34	272.00	144.10	4	$17.01	521.61
Goodhue	2	2	32.00	5.95				63		44	352.00	112.75			502.70
Grant	3	3	48.00	17.95	1	$9.69	27.50	48	23	27	400.00	123.85	11	62.05	689.04
Hennepin	3	2	40.00	14.00				39		26	208.00	30.40			292.40
Houston	3	3	48.00	16.00	1	3.83	25.00	51		22	176.00	120.85			389.68
Hubbard	2	3	40.00		3	33.88	32.50	21		4	64.00	24.50	1	19.67	214.55
Isanti	3	3	48.00	6.00			22.50	39		23	184.00	49.05			309.55
Itasca	3	3	48.00		3	23.09	57.50	33	9	12	176.00	95.45	1	13.46	413.50
Jackson	3	3	48.00	1.10	3	14.74	40.00	60	19	27	368.00	243.60			715.44
Kanabec	3	3	48.00	9.00			30.00	21		15	120.00	39.75			246.75
Kandiyohi	3	3	48.00		3	6.79	35.00	72		33	264.00	62.60	17	47.58	463.97
Kittson	3	3	48.00	40.00	2	71.10	43.75	78	28	30	464.00	274.00	11	172.99	1,113.84
Koochiching	3	3	48.00	28.75			40.00	27	3	5	64.00		1	15.32	196.07
Lac qui Parle	3	3	48.00		2	10.72	32.50	66	6½	35	418.00	209.10	5	29.63	747.95
Lake								15		1	8.00	18.50			26.50
Lake of Woods	2	2	32.00	36.00			35.00	15							103.00
Le Sueur	2	3	40.00	5.40			18.75	42		16	128.00	50.90			243.05
Lincoln	2	2	32.00	23.00	1	7.25	23.75	45	14½	13	240.00	118.15	1	7.25	451.40
Lyon	3	3	48.00	18.80			30.00	60	10	27	432.00	153.60			682.40
McLeod	2	3	40.00	11.50			15.00	42		28	224.00	99.40			389.90
Mahnomen	3	3	48.00				50.00	15	5	7	96.00	25.50	1	11.90	231.40
Marshall	3	3	48.00	36.05			52.50	117	43	43	688.00	397.35	32	491.08	1,712.98
Martin	3	3	48.00	36.60			45.00	60		48	384.00	257.00			770.60
Meeker	3	3	48.00	9.25			22.50	51		35	280.00	106.20	3	7.37	473.32
Mille Lacs	3	3	48.00	7.10			22.50	30		24	192.00	67.00			336.60
Morrison	3	3	48.00		3	13.80	37.50	39		18	144.00	71.00	1	5.58	319.88
Mower	3	3	48.00	11.90			22.50	60		41	328.00	199.25	2	8.05	617.70
Murray	3	3	48.00		2	13.80	33.75	60		30	360.00	235.15			690.70
Nicollet	3	3	48.00	7.50	2	5.24	22.50	39		22	176.00	78.75			337.99
Nobles	3	3	48.00	20.40	2	18.06	45.00	60		2	16.00				147.46
Norman	3	3	48.00		3	42.92	42.50	60	35	37	576.00	252.40	18	229.60	1,191.42
Olmsted	3	3	48.00	8.40			22.50	54		24	192.00	88.45	2	7.93	367.28
West Otter Tail	3	3	48.00	22.00	1	5.76	30.00	93	20	25	392.00	117.65	6	31.51	646.92
East Otter Tail	3	3	48.00	20.00			42.50	93	11½	63	656.00	341.80	7	39.02	1,147.32
Pennington	3	3	48.00	32.50			55.00	42	14	14	224.00	225.05	1	8.19	592.74
Pine	3	3	48.00	7.20			30.00	39		16	128.00	58.25			271.45
Pipestone	3	3	48.00	20.10			37.50	36	12	12	192.00	129.60			427.20
West Polk	3	3	48.00	32.80			48.75	102	15	23	372.00	234.90	16	246.30	982.75
East Polk	3	3	48.00	28.60	1	13.34	48.75	60	27	27	432.00	293.75	7	77.30	941.74
Pope	2	2	32.00	26.40			18.75	60	19	27	368.00	148.95	2	13.80	607.90
Ramsey	3	3	48.00	5.50				12		7	56.00				109.50
Red Lake	3	3	48.00	31.00	1	10.00	37.50	30	8	8	128.00	92.50	1	19.49	366.49
Redwood	2	2	32.00	7.90			22.50	75		16	128.00	53.25			243.65
Renville	3	3	48.00	5.80			22.50	81		62	496.00	275.35			847.65
Rice	3	3	48.00	8.50			22.50	42		24	192.00	49.50			320.50
Rock	3	3	48.00	23.70			22.50	36	8	14	176.00	100.65			370.85
Roseau	3	3	48.00	42.00			55.00	24	6	6	96.00	79.00			320.00
South St. Louis	2	2	32.00	21.00			23.75	39	19	21	320.00	166.15	6	36.85	599.75
North St. Louis	2	2	32.00	2.00	2	25.54	30.00	45	2	2	32.00	50.60			172.14
Scott	3	3	48.00	9.85			15.00	33		19	152.00	32.90			257.75
Sherburne	3	3	48.00	11.30			30.00	21		18	144.00	52.60	1	2.47	288.37
Sibley	3	3	48.00	7.55			24.00	51		32	256.00	101.05			436.60
Stearns	3	3	48.00	10.75			22.50	111		56	448.00		55	110.00	639.25
Steele	3	3	48.00	8.00			22.50	36		23	184.00	97.00			359.50
Stevens	3	3	48.00	17.80			26.25	48	10	30	334.00	188.85	2	8.56	623.46
Swift	3	3	48.00	16.00			33.75	63	17½	40	460.00	212.25	4	16.67	786.67
Todd	3	3	48.00	16.75			33.75	42	2	18	160.00	74.75	3	15.54	348.79
Traverse	3	3	48.00	21.20	1	5.52	20.00	45	11	12	192.00	123.95	1	6.32	416.99
Wabasha	3	3	48.00		3	10.63	30.00	51		36	288.00	125.05	1	2.01	503.69
Wadena	2	2	32.00		1	3.19	28.75	21	5	11	128.00	58.45	2	13.41	263.80
Waseca	2	2	32.00	9.00	1	4.43	17.50	36		22	176.00	96.95			335.88
Washington	3	3	48.00	3.85				36		31	248.00	21.50			321.35
Watonwan	3	3	48.00	12.50			30.00	36		13	104.00	77.30			271.80
Wilkin	3	3	48.00		3	27.71	22.50	57	27	27	432.00	179.90	8	76.17	786.28
Winona	2	2	32.00		2	5.96	30.00	51		37	296.00	37.25	26	71.50	472.71
Wright	2	3	40.00	14.35			21.25	60		40	320.00	98.80			494.40
Yellow Medicine	3	3	48.00	17.30			33.75	63	8½	29	300.00	101.45			500.50
Total		245	3,904.00	1,260.60		426.86	2,514.75	4,254		2,077	21,892.00	9,844.40		2,216.24	42,058.85

Total county committee expense, $8,106.21; total community committee expense, $33,952.64.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I continue to read the report:

They—

Meaning the Minnesota PMA Committee—

have received no reports or letters indicating that any community committeemen did not intend to claim the salary and travel expenses which were authorized. County committeemen would know definitely if community committeemen had attended and did not receive compensation. County committeemen have assured the State PMA committee that this situation did not exist.

To further establish this fact, the father of Roy Schultz—

That is the name which was brought into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD some weeks ago—

the former community committeeman who received a letter of invitation by mistake and turned in that letter which was used in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD when Senator AIKEN made his original attack on the meeting, attended the meeting and received the same compensation as did other community committeemen from his county. His name is Fred Schultz, and he is a community committeeman in Decoria Township in Blue Earth County. We consider that this family might be considered to be critical if any committeemen were critical because of the son's attitude.

Since the complaint against the meeting was originated in Blue Earth County you might note that out of 69 committeemen from that county, 44 attended and all received pay.

Mr. President, my colleague, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. THYE], had made the following comment at that time:

Some of the PMA county committeemen have written to me stating that they have not submitted their expense accounts, that their consciences would not permit them to submit expense accounts in connection with attending that meeting.

That is the end of the quotation as it appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for June 20.

Mr. President, I would have the Senate note the next statement in the letter, as follows:

The State PMA Committee informs us that 245 of the 267 county committeemen in the State, or all of the county committeemen who attended the meeting, have submitted claims for their salary and travel expenses.

All of them, everyone who was there.

I read further:

The 22 county committeemen who did not submit claims were not registered as attending the conference and it has been determined by the State committee that they were unable to be present because of illness or other personal reasons which did not permit them to be in St. Paul for the meeting.

I now quote from the remarks of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] as they are set forth in the letter:

AIKEN. As a matter of fact, one county chairman protested the action of the State chairman, and only under extreme pressure and at the last moment advised his community committeemen to attend.

In response to that statement, Mr. President, I think we should note the following information which is supplied in the letter:

In response to your question, the Minnesota PMA office advises that no protest either prior to the meeting or subsequent to it was ever received by them from any county committeeman.

Mr. President, I wish it clearly understood that as I speak on this subject, I am submitting excerpts from a letter, and at the same time I am interpolating comments of my own, am examining the excerpts, and am making further comments.

I read further:

They state that no county committeeman was ever asked to advise community committeemen to attend the meeting—that invitations to attend were sent from the State office to the community committeemen.

In other words, the State PMA office sent out all the letters of invitation.

Reading further:

The only suggestion of any contact between county and community committeemen was a suggestion that in case community committeemen planned to stay overnight in St. Paul that county committeemen would assist in making reservations. It was also pointed out by the State committee that prior to the meeting in St. Paul the State committee had consulted county committeemen at a series of district meetings being held as to the advisability of holding a State-wide meeting with community committeemen. County committeemen throughout the State were unanimous in requesting the State committee to invite the community committeemen to attend the State meeting for the second day.

Mr. President, I shall read what the distinguished Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] said. By the way, Mr. President, I have said repeatedly that I hold him in the highest regard, and I know that his interest in this matter is one of making sure that the Department of Agriculture is not engaged in any activities in which it should not be engaged; and I believe that his investigation and his comments have been of help, in the sense of holding the Department of Agriculture and other agencies within the bounds of the law.

The Senator from Vermont made this statement:

There were about 2,322 Production and Marketing Administration committeemen at the meeting. Of this number, 245 were county committeemen and 2,077 were community committeemen.

This statement of the Secretary is in sharp contrast to the press reports, which estimated the attendance at the meeting as high as 8,000.

As a matter of fact, the attendance at the meeting did approximate between five and six thousand.

In other words, the Senator from Vermont notes a discrepancy, which is quite obvious by the figures, of 2,322, as compared to 8,000. But I think that this discrepancy in figures of attendance is quite understandable if one would take a moment to understand it. This meeting was held at the St. Paul Auditorium, in St. Paul. The auditorium had been made available by the city of St. Paul for the PMA meeting at no cost. Minnesota is an agricultural State whose inhabitants are interested in farm problems.

There is no discrepancy in the figures on attendance. The St. Paul Auditorium arena had been made available for this PMA meeting at no charge. Minnesota is an agricultural State whose inhabitants are interested in farm problems. After the radio and press had carried notices of the meeting and the speakers, the State PMA office received inquiries from people throughout the State and even from Wisconsin asking if it might be possible for them to attend. An address by the Secretary of Agriculture creates great interest in the agricultural Midwest. Those people were told that the auditorium seating capacity would accommodate them.

That is, they were told that the auditorium's seating capacity would accommodate them.

This was no secret meeting behind closed doors. People who were interested in coming to this meeting to hear the speeches were not turned away—and thousands of them did come.

Actually, there were about 8,000 people attending of whom 2,077 were community committeemen, and 245 county committeemen. Several hundred veterans enrolled in on-the-farm veterans training were also given credit for attendance at the meeting. A great many from the Farmers Home Administration, the Extension Service, the Farm Credit Administration, the Farm Bureau, the Farmers Union, the Grange, the Farmers Union Grain Terminal Association, the Minnesota Editorial Association, the various cooperative organizations in the State and a large number whose sole interest was as consumers attended to get first-hand information pertaining to the Brannan plan which has been denied them in the press.

Some were plain visitors.

So I think it is quite obvious that the figures which were reported in the press were not erroneous. However, it should be noted that the only persons who were paid to attend the meeting were those persons who were either county committeemen or community committeemen.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] had this further remark to make—and I quote from the RECORD of June 20:

The fact is the community committeemen were not invited to attend the first day's session, when speeches relating to the work of PMA programs were made. They were directed to be on hand the second day to hear the Secretary of Agriculture.

This is the reply that I have received, in reference to this comment:

Actually, the State PMA committee had invited the Administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration to speak on the same day that the Secretary spoke, and had hoped that he would fulfill the engagement.

By the way, Mr. President, if the Members of the Senate will check the printed program which the junior Senator from Minnesota placed in the RECORD, it will be readily noticed that the National Administrator of the Production Marketing Administration was to speak on the same day as the Secretary of Agriculture.

When it became impossible for him to do so, he sent the Deputy Administrator to deliver the address for him. The Deputy Administrator took up the entire forenoon with discussion of details concerning administrative problems of PMA. The State PMA chairman discussed the advisability of staying within acreage allotments and the need for shifting land into conservation crops to better carry out a permanent conservation program.

A speech was also made by Dr. Dewey Anderson on the President's point-four program and foreign relations and their effect on the economic conditions of American Agriculture.

Of course we need not furnish any justification for the Secretary's speech, or the Senator's speech.

Mr. President, on June 20, my colleague made the following statement:

They came away from the meeting regretting that such speeches had been made.

I am not going to say how the people felt about the speech that the junior Senator from Minnesota gave, because that would be inappropriate. I can only say this, that the editorial writers of the Minneapolis newspapers, while they disagreed with the content of the speech, thought it was a pretty good speech. One of them said it "mesmerized" the audience. That is a good word. I think it is an over exaggeration.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the junior Senator from Minnesota yield to his colleague?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I cannot, of course, help but make comments so long as the junior Senator from Minnesota refers to his colleague here on the floor and refers to the remarks which I made concerning the remarks of the Senator at the PMA gathering in St. Paul. I heard so much about that meeting, if the Senator, my colleague, will permit me 1 or 2 minutes to comment—as I am sure he will——

Mr. HUMPHREY. Certainly.

Mr. THYE. I should like to comment on what I heard. I may say that I was invited by the State PMA chairman to attend the meeting and to speak at the meeting. I regretted my inability to accept the invitation to attend the PMA meeting, because personally I was one of the producers of the State who was present when the PMA was organized, and put into operation in Minnesota and in the United States generally.

My colleague was very much of a boy, if I may say that in the Senate, at the time the farm program was first conceived in order to relieve the farmers of the devastatingly low prices, which were forcing farmer after farmer to the wall in foreclosure. While I am speaking on the subject, I may say that the program which was printed and circulated at that PMA meeting contained on the back page and I am sorry I do not have a copy of it with me, for I should like to present it in the Senate, a list of commodity prices as they were in the early '30's and they were then very low as my colleague well knows. Then the statement was printed in bold type, "It can happen again." Anyone who has understanding and knowledge of the farm program which is today on the statute books, written year after year into public law—and it is on the statute books today as it was written in the Eightieth Congress, when it carried the name of the Hope-Aiken Act, later amended by the Democratically-controlled Eighty-first Congress by the legislation which now carries the Anderson name—I say anyone who is familiar with farm legislation, if he is willing to be honest with the law that is on the statute books, knows that no such drastically low prices as prevailed in the early '30's, could occur again when we have six basics with 90 percent parity written into the mandatory law; dairy products, under a mandatory law of from 75 to 90 percent; and the Secretary of Agriculture given the discretionary authorization in the Act to support, and the Commodity Credit Corporation furnished with the money, commodities at the Secretary's discretion.

Anyone who would print a program stating that such ruinously low prices as occurred in the early thirties could occur again, is only making a representation designed to have a devastating effect on men's minds, yet that was the type of program which was circulated that day in the meeting at St. Paul to which the Senator has reference.

But I started to say that I was invited to attend the meeting and to speak. I regretted sincerely that I was unable to attend, because the educational and instructional meetings conducted in the State by PMA officials for the purpose of acquainting the administrators on the county and township levels with their program is a splendid type of conference which I have attended in years past, not only as a producer but as an official, in the capacity of Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture and as Governor of my State.

But if, when such a meeting is called and it is necessary to have people in attendance, and an effort is then made to tear to pieces acts which have been placed on the statute books during one legislative session, and amended at another legislative session, leaving some type of inference, that this act was—I shall not undertake to quote the remarks which my colleague made, because I am sure they slipped from his lips in the enthusiasm of a big rally, and for that reason I shall not refer to them here.

But the fact of the matter is that the purpose of the meeting was laudable. It was an assembly of county and township officials, and they should not be criticized. But the speeches were political in every aspect, and the men who had been invited to come as county men, and to be allowed their per diem and expenses to listen to the speeches, were not given any facts about existing laws providing mandatory price supports, but they and the audience were led to believe there was a possibility that low prices could recur. That was the general trend of the speeches, and many of those who attended the meeting regretted that it had taken place.

So, Mr. President, I again say to my colleague that he and I, as public officials, must always properly interpret the laws on the statute books and what the Federal agencies can do under those laws, what they will do for a group or for a citizen or for any individual in the Nation. We overstep our proper boundaries, I think, when we excite people with reference to what could happen as compared with the actual situation.

My colleague was speaking with reference to a certain law which was written in the Eightieth Congress by two honorable Members and concurred in by a majority of the legislative body. That law is an absolutely sound piece of legislation. The Democratic Party, which is in the majority, thought it so good that it was retained with only a slight amendment.

If there is any reflection cast upon the act known as the Hope-Aiken Act, enacted by the Eightieth Congress, I think my colleague, who happens to be on the majority side of the Chamber, must assume as much responsibility for the present provisions of that act as any other Member of Congress, because it was amended by the democratically-controlled Eighty-first Congress. It is a sound piece of legislation. I have defended it at all times and I defend it now. It gives assurance of price support to the diversified type of farm operator. That is the only type of farming which builds soil, through the use of legumes, dairying, poultry raising, hog raising, and beef raising. It is soil building. It is not a row-crop operation; it is not depleting. For the first time in history the act gives consideration to the diversified farm manager and protects him.

The distress today is in the diversified farming field. It is not in the so-called field of basics, such as corn, wheat, cotton, rice, tobacco, and peanuts, because with respect to those products the act is rigid and the mandatory price supports are at a rigid 90 percent, but with respect to poultry and eggs, the price is at rock bottom. In dairying the price is slipping every month. The oleomargarine law enacted by the present Congress, which removed the tax on oleomargarine, permitting the product to sell in competition with butter, is going to destroy, to a great extent, the butter markets in the United States. If we destroy the dairy farmer we shall have destroyed the basic diversified type of farming in the United States.

So, Mr. President, I would say to my colleague that I have not only read the speech by the Secretary, but I have heard it on a recording machine, word by word. I heard the speech made by my colleague, which was the best rousing political speech I have ever heard my colleague make. In 4 years in the Governor's office I heard my colleague speak at lunches, dinners, men's clubs, Kiwanis Clubs, and every type of gathering held in the State——

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THYE. In just a moment.

My colleague was always present and made good political speeches even before he was elected mayor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Minnesota can yield only for a question.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I can finish in a second. I am not very often inclined to trespass or to take the time of the Senate with lengthly speeches. I realize that the Chair is correct in calling my attention to the fact that my colleague can yield only for a question. I appreciate the fact that my colleague has yielded to me to permit me to refer to the speeches made before the PMA gathering at St. Paul.

As I have stated, I heard the recording of the speech, and it was the best political speech I ever heard my colleague make. The speech he made at that meeting was a dandy; it was a rouser. In fact, I listened to it and thought to myself how that young man was blessed with the ability to make a speech.

But my colleague either did not know of the law enacted giving mandatory price supports to agricultural commodities, or he had completely forgotten that the act had been amended by a Democratically controlled Congress and that it now carries the Anderson name.

I thank my colleague for yielding.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I want to thank my colleague, and I want to say that he has made a good speech.

Mr. THYE. If my colleague will yield just a moment longer, I should like to say that I hold in my hand a copy of the program of the Annual Conference of the Minnesota Production and Marketing Administration, County and Township Farmers and Committeemen, St. Paul, Minn., April 3 and 4, 1950.

I just read what there is on the front page, Mr. President. On the back page it says, "Lest we forget."

Please understand that this was a PMA meeting, called for the purpose of bringing county and township committeemen in to study the farm program for the coming year. The commodity prices are given, going back to December 1932, in Minneapolis, Minn. It refers to dark northern, meaning spring wheat. It gives the prices, the protein, and so forth. It also gives the prices on flax, shelled corn, and the like. Then at the bottom it states the prices on December 21, 1932. Then in bold letters it says: "It Could Happen Again."

Mr. President, it could not happen with the mandatory support we have on the statute books for the six commodities. Wheat is one of the commodities. Corn is one of the commodities. Those prices could not occur again, because we have given the Secretary of Agriculture a mandatory right and discretionary authorization to support prices at any level at which he wishes to support them up to 90 percent of priority. We have given him money. We have increased the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation by $2,000,000,000 only within the last few days. The low prices referred to in the program could not happen again. Whoever was responsible for printing that type of program either did not know of the public law which is on the statute books, or, if he did know it, he did not intend that the public should be properly informed. It was misrepresentation, Mr. President, and it was a misuse of public funds to print that type of program. That is my contention.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I ask unanimous consent that the junior Senator from Minnesota may yield to me so that I may make a brief observation.

Mr. HUMPHREY. In view of the fact that I have yielded once, I feel that I should yield again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair wishes to state that he was addressed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] and the Senator from Minnesota at about the same time only a few minutes ago.

Mr. HUMPHREY. The Senator from Minnesota has the floor, I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. The Chair recognized the junior Senator from Minnesota. That is why the Chair felt he should intervene and not let the debate go on indefinitely without giving the Senator from South Dakota another opportunity to ask to be recognized. Does the Senator from Illinois address the Chair?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should like to inquire whether the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] will yield to me so that I may make a brief statement?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I ask unanimous consent that I may do so without losing the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the Senator's interpretation of the word "brief"? The Chair is a Member of this body, too.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Not more than 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Illinois is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I suppose it is not a mark of caution to inject one's self into a discussion between two such valiant Senators as the senior Senator from Minnesota and the junior Senator from Minnesota, for both of whom I have very deep respect and a very real feeling of affection. They are both splendid Senators. I suppose a person who injects himself into that sort of situation inevitably gets into trouble with both parties.

Of course, I was not present at the famous meeting at St. Paul. I have not read the speeches which were delivered. Therefore, I do not pose as an expert on the St. Paul meeting. I have observed, however, that whenever the junior Senator from Minnesota takes the floor there is quite a common predisposition on the part of other Senators immediately to proceed to question his statements. Although I believe the junior Senator needs no defense, but because I think his case should be stated by others, as well as by himself, I should like to point out some facts, if I may.

It is quite true that the Hope-Aiken bill of the Eightieth Congress, one of whose authors was our highly respected good friend the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] had many fine features in it; it is likewise true that some of those features are carried over into the present law. It is also true, that it was possible for the ratio of farm prices, as compared with the general price level, to fall as low as 60 percent.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, if I may, in order to prevent a misunderstanding——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized for 4 minutes. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, the Senator made a statement to the effect that prices dropped as low as 60 percent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I have yielded to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. THYE].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the junior Senator from Minnesota yield to the senior Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield.

Mr. THYE. The Senator from Illinois stated that prices could fall as low as 60 percent. That was true under the act passed in the Eightieth Congress——

Mr. DOUGLAS. That is all I said.

Mr. THYE. Only if the producers refused to either vote marketing agreements or acreage quotas. Only at that time and in that manner could the price go to 60 percent. However, the Eighty-first Congress removed supports entirely on potatoes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am speaking of the basic commodities.

Mr. THYE. Therefore, there is a misunderstanding if we say prices could go as low as 60 percent. They can go as low as 60 percent only if the producers refuse to vote either acreage quotas or marketing agreements.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I take it that the emendation does not change the substantial accuracy of what the junior Senator from Illinois was saying, namely, that it was possible under the Hope-Aiken bill, with its many fine features, for the level of agricultural prices to fall to 60 percent of parity. I was about to say when the Senator from Minnesota raised this issue that if we take the past record of farm prices we will find that the lowest level to which agricultural prices fell was when they fell to 59.9 percent of parity. Therefore, the minimum price parity guaranteed under the Hope-Aiken bill was substantially the same as the lowest ratio of farm prices which had previously been provided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HUMPHREY. May I say that just as the junior Senator from Minnesota was getting some help the hands of the clock seemed to move rapidly. Mr. President, it was not the purpose of the junior Senator from Minnesota to precipitate any debate this afternoon. I notice, however, that I am able to and generally do draw some fire and coment. My purpose was to cite what I considered to be a report from the Production and Marketing Administration on the comments which the distinguished Senator had made on the floor of the Senate on June 20.

I want my distinguished colleague to know that at the time he arrived I was not making my own personal comment. I was reading the comment which I had in a letter from the Production and Marketing Administration. I also want my colleague to know that I have at all times on the floor of the Senate, in the presence of his friends, and publicly, paid tribute to his knowledge of agriculture, his sincerity, his integrity, and his ability. I want him to know that we do have honest differences of opinion. While he has paid glowing tributes to my speaking abilities, he has demonstrated his powers of persuasion and his powers of speech on more than one occasion. It was not the purpose of the junior Senator from Minnesota in any way to be critical of his colleague. That is something that I shall not do as a Member of this body. On the floor of the Senate our arguments will be on the basis of issue. Our arguments will be on the public platform. We shall work as a team as much as it is humanly possible to do so for the good of our country and State.

I do want it quite clear, however, that the participation in the production marketing meeting at St. Paul apparently was not criticized until the junior Senator from Minnesota got there. The program which has been presented, by the way, has already been printed in the RECORD, because I brought the program back with me and presented it for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the day following the meeting. That program will show that 90 percent of the activities on the program were directed specifically to such matters as soil conservation, acreage allotments, the farm price-support program, and other farm legislation, that if there were any two parts of the meeting which could be criticized they were late in the afternoon, after 2:30 on the second day.

At 2:30 o'clock p. m., I believe the program will show, the Secretary of Agriculture was to speak, and what the Secretary of Agriculture said he can defend. All I can say is that when the Secretary of Agriculture was through—and I know, because I was there—8,000 people to a man rose and applauded. When the Secretary sat down they rose on their own, without any coaching, to ask him to speak longer. I know that, because I was intending to catch a 4 o'clock plane to return to Washington. I had just traveled out there in the morning, arriving at 2 o'clock, and I was thinking, "Was this trip really necessary?" It appeared that the junior Senator from Minnesota would not even get a chance to be introduced, because the Secretary of Agriculture was asked to continue his speech. On two occasions the people of that splendid audience urged, that the Secretary of Agriculture continue his remarks. When the Secretary was through with his remarks, the State Director of the PMA asked the audience, "Do you want to have meetings like this again?" The audience rose up and a tremendous chorus of "Yes" was heard.

The Secretary of Agriculture is not known as the Demosthenes of the Democratic Party. He is a good, constructive, able speaker, and a very able, honest, capable administrator. There had been no rousing, no hallelujah tricks indulged in at all. This was merely a speech of the Secretary of Agriculture, and the farmer representatives of the State of Minnesota, plus about four thousand or five thousand other people who had come to the hall, on their own, applauded and cheered.

There is no speaker in America who can hold a Minnesota farmer in an audience if he does not want to listen. The doors were wide open, there were no cops at the doors to hold the people, the exits had big red lights on them so that they could not be missed. There were no tally clerks, which was particularly true when the junior Senator from Minnesota spoke. The audience was under no obligation to hear me speak.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, is it not a fact that during the time the junior Senator from Minnesota spoke virtually no one left the hall?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I appreciate the commendation of the Senator from Illinois. My colleague has referred to the phonetics, to the noise that was involved. The junior Senator from Minnesota thought he gave a speech that had some substance to it, and it was not a new experience for me.

It is strange to note that the junior Senator from Minnesota, while he was mayor of a neighboring city, addressed the PMA meeting twice, and gave a real political speech, where he talked about Democrats and Republicans, yet he never had any criticism leveled at him, not once. I do not recall even a line in a newspaper, much less criticism. Then the junior Senator from Minnesota goes, as an elected representative of the people, elected in the farm areas as well as in the city areas, and without ever once in his speech mentioning the word "Democrat" or the word "Republican," and without ever once paying any grand tribute to any member of the administration, the Senator from Minnesota made his address, and during that address pointed out what he considered to be the weaknesses of the present farm law, as well as the law of the Eightieth Congress.

I made a similar speech in the old Senate Chamber, the Supreme Court room where the Senate held its sessions last year. The junior Senator from Minnesota worked for a 90 percent of parity program, and the junior Senator from Minnesota wanted mandatory price supports not only upon the basic commodities, but upon the perishable commodities. The junior Senator from Minnesota feels exactly the same, on this 30th day of June, as he did last year.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President——

Mr. HUMPHREY. I do not yield at this time. I have yielded a considerable period of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. The junior Senator from Minnesota has pointed out repeatedly that the present program as regards to perishable commodities is not satisfactory. There has been no more brilliant testimony to that than the comments of my distinguished colleague this afternoon. He has well pointed out the fact that the program we have at the present time has its weaknesses, as it applies to diversified farming and perishable commodities in particular.

When it comes to the basic commodities, which are protected, which are 90 percent protected, not 75 percent, not 60 percent or 80 percent, but 90 percent this year, we both seem to be pleased. Why did this PMA meeting precipitate this kind of a heated discussion? Why the uproar over this meeting? I think that what brought forth the discussion was that the farmers of our State, and the farmers of other States of America who are engaged in diversified farming, who are raising chickens, hogs, ducks, who are raising butterfat products, are somewhat disturbed about present farm price support legislation. They want some changes. The junior Senator from Minnesota did not tell them that the Brannan plan was what they ought to have.

What did he say? He said that he hoped they would not take anyone's plan just because it was offered under some eminent name. He hoped they would, as farmers, work out their own plan, and constructively criticize the other plans that were offered. The junior Senator noted that the distressing thing in American agriculture today is the lack of unity amongst the farm organizations—the Farmers Union and the Farm Bureau Federation are at cross-purposes, and the Grange with another program, all great organizations, representing the finest people. I said, every time I had a chance to speak on agriculture, that it was imperative that the farm groups not weaken themselves by working at cross-purposes, that they should unite and take the program coming from their own people, rather than having it handed down from on high.

I have a feeling, however, as to why there has been so much criticism. It is because the people liked that speech—it made sense, it analyzed their problems.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President——

Mr. HUMPHREY. They like the speech.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to his colleague?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I will yield only for a question.

Mr. THYE. I should like to make this statement——

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield for a question.

Mr. THYE. It is not going to take more than a moment. I do not believe that any criticism was directed toward the Senator. The criticism was directed, first, to the fact that the meeting was called, and to the type of program printed.

Mr. President, I have not yet asked unanimous consent, but I shall, before we adjourn or recess this evening, to put the back page of this program into the RECORD.

I will say to my colleague that the criticism was not directed at him. Had I been at the meeting and spoken politically, I might have been criticized, but I would not have been in violation of my trust or my public oath, because I am in the political field. But an administrator, the Secretary of Agriculture, has a duty and a responsibility, and that duty and responsibility are to keep himself entirely in an unbiased position as an administrator. He must not cast any reflection upon public laws passed, except in explanation of the public laws, and if he is a party to having such a program printed, or if he permits anyone within his department to print such a program, he is, in my humble opinion, in violation of his responsibility.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I do appreciate the comments of my colleague. As I said, I do not think there is any argument between my colleague and myself, so far as my participation or the participation of the senior Senator is concerned. As a matter of fact, I am very regretful that the senior Senator did not go to the meeting. It had not been my plan to go, but at the last moment I decided to go. However, as to the propriety of the remarks of the Secretary of Agriculture, that is a matter of judgment. The Secretary of Agriculture is not merely an administrator, such as the Administrator of PMA, or the Administrator of the Pure Food and Drugs Division.

The Secretary of Agriculture is a representative of the President, appointed by the President as one of the Presidential advisers, as a member of his Cabinet, as a member of the team of the President. The Secretary of Agriculture has a farm program. That farm program is known as the Brannan plan. Believe me, that plan has provoked a great deal of comment. I doubt whether there are many who are willing to accept the plan in toto, but many want it tried on selected commodities. I think the principle of the plan advanced by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN], the compensatory payment principle, can be applied on certain commodities. I think it has merit. I am not prepared to take the whole plan and swallow it in one lump. I feel it has something, however, that deserves a trial. At least a portion of it deserves a trial.

To say that the Secretary of Agriculture has no right to state his program would not fit my idea of what I think the job or the responsibilities of the Secretary are. Frankly, I believe the Secretary of Agriculture does have the right to press for his program, just as I believe, for example, the Attorney General of the United States has the right to seek stronger antitrust laws or legislation on civil rights. The Secretary of the Army makes speeches on what we ought to do in connection with national defense. I heard the Secretary of Air make a speech relating to what we ought to do about air power, far beyond what the Congress has done.

Mr. President, we expect guidance and direction from our leaders. We can repudiate their program, and that we have often done. We can turn it aside. But we ought not to condemn the principle of stating the desired objectives. The Secretary of Agriculture is something more than a bookkeeper. He is something more than the keeper of the records. The Secretary of Agriculture is not only supposed to administer a law which is on the statute books, but if he is any kind of a Secretary he will be thinking about how he can improve it, and if he has a plan to improve it, I think he ought to state that plan. That is quite different, Mr. President, from what the situation would be if the Secretary were out stumping for political candidates at a PMA meeting. Had the Secretary of Agriculture gone to Minnesota and said, "I think we ought to defeat this man, or that man, or the other man running for Congress," had he done so at a meeting of the county committeemen or community committeemen, not only should he be censored, but he would stand guilty of gross malfeasance of office. But to say that the Secretary of Agriculture cannot go to a meeting and say that he believes the principle of parity ought to be changed, or to say that he believes there ought to be a little more money spent for soil conservation, or say that he disagrees with the comments made about certain legislation, is to put the handcuffs on him, and make him into a sort of shipping clerk, or junior-grade civil-service assistant. We want the Secretary to have some initiative. We want a Secretary with vision, with ideas. We need Government department heads who have a program and are willing to fight for it.

The major issue involved is whether or not these community committeemen, these county committeemen, were brought together for the purpose of holding a political meeting. The record is clear. The record is that they were not brought in for that purpose. The record is they sought their payment for the meeting and that they have received payment for attending the meeting. The record is equally clear that they came on their own volition. Some came and some did not. The record is equally clear that the majority of the audience was not made up of paid county or community committeemen. I directed a letter some weeks ago to Mr. Ralph Trigg, Administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration. Rather than read the letter I ask that it be incorporated in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, D. C., June 20, 1950.

Hon. HUBERT H. HUMPHREY,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR HUMPHREY: This is in reply to your letter concerning the recent criticism and distorted newspaper article on our PMA meeting in St. Paul on April 3 and 4. We are entirely in accord with your views that there is no good basis for such criticism. Apparently, a determined effort has been made to make political capital out of this meeting without regard to how unfair or unjust the charges are so far as the farmer committeemen and speakers who participated in the meeting were concerned.

For your information I'm sending you a copy of the Secretary's report to the Comptroller General on this meeting. While it provides most of the information you requested, the answers to your specific questions are as follows:

1. The amount paid to county and community committeemen each year by the Federal Government varies with the amounts appropriated by the Congress for this purpose, and the amount of work performed. During the current fiscal year the average county committeeman will receive $304.29 for 44.1 days' work and the average community committeeman will receive $58.50 for 6.5 days' work.

2. The farmers in each community participating or cooperating in PMA programs elect the members of the community committee and a delegate to a county convention. The delegates to the county convention elected by the farmers select the members of the county committee. This procedure is in accordance with section 8 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act.

3. All States hold meetings of county and community committeemen. Sometimes these meetings are countywide or districtwide, but nearly all States hold one Statewide meeting during the year if the administrative funds available will permit. These meetings are for the purpose of discussing over-all operating policies and program plans and to get farmers' reaction to PMA programs and policies.

4. It is standard practice to pay per diem and travel to county and community committeemen to attend meetings at which official PMA business is discussed. There have been instances, however, where committeemen have attended such meetings at their own expense because of fund limitations.

5. It is customary, particularly in Statewide meetings, to invite one, or more, Congressman, Senator, or Governor to speak to the committeemen on subjects appropriate to the general subject matter of the meeting.

6. The Department of Agriculture does not undertake to censor, review, or revise in any way the speeches which a Congressman, Senator, or Governor desires to make to PMA committeemen.

7. It is our belief that we could not, if we desired, require PMA committeemen to listen to a speech by anyone they did not care to hear. Our experience has been that these farmer committeemen are about as independent a group as you will find anywhere in this great country of ours.

We sincerely appreciate your interest in PMA, its programs and its farmer committee system. You have been most generous in accepting speaking engagements before our committeemen and in devoting a considerable amount of your time and effort to defending and supporting PMA programs.

Sincerely yours,

RALPH S. TRIGG,
Administrator.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, the point of the letter is that it is a standard policy to pay the county and community committeemen for the work they perform each year.

The policy is that the farmers in each community participating in the PMA program select members of the community committee as delegates to county conventions, and the delegates select their own officials.

It is also a standard policy that all States hold meetings of county and community committeemen.

It is also quite standard that the State meetings are addressed by a Representative in Congress or a Senator.

Mr. President, I have been around in politics a little bit. I know that the best political speeches are nonpolitical. The best political speeches are those made when the speaker is loving everyone. The best political speeches are made when the speaker does not get into an argument with anybody.

The dangerous political speeches are those made when the speakers draw the issue. Such speeches may lose the speakers votes. In such speeches the speakers stick their necks out. I want to say right now for the record that if any Representative or any Senator should be invited to any PMA meeting he can be sure that addressing such a meeting is a political asset to him. Any Representative or Senator who wants to be honest about the matter is willing to admit that addressing such a meeting is a political asset. It is just as much of a political asset as it is to stand in the grandstand and say hello to the folks at a county fair. Anyone who has been in politics knows that. Any elected official who can stand up before as large an audience as that at St. Paul on the occasion in question and addresses the audience knows that it is a political asset to him. That is why it is so often said that it is difficult to beat the incumbent because the incumbent can be here and there by reason of the nature of his office.

The junior Senator from Minnesota is not trying to fool anyone. To be sure, I went to St. Paul to talk about what I believe to be a proper program in respect to agriculture. Somebody asked me to come. I accepted the invitation. I think it is political, to be sure. But no one talked partisan politics. Everyone talked about agriculture, the present program, the past programs, the needs of the future.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUMPHREY. Not at this moment. I want to conclude, and then I will yield to my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Minnesota declines to yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I merely want to say that insofar as the meeting in question is concerned it has been dramatized far out of all proper proportion. Similar meetings have been held all over the United States. The junior Senator from Minnesota was present at a meeting when the distinguished Senator from New Mexico was Secretary of Agriculture, and I delivered a better speech then, Mr. President, than I did at the meeting in St. Paul. The former speech was better than the latter, because on the latter occasion I had to fly to St. Paul in an airplane, get off the plane, and dash to the meeting hall. Then I did not know whether I was going to have the opportunity of speaking. My former speech was really well prepared, in good shape. Neither the former Secretary of Agriculture nor I were criticized for the speeches we made at that former meeting.

Why was what occurred at the recent meeting criticized? It was because the Secretary of Agriculture is fighting for a program. It is because he is in some disagreement with some of the existing legislation. So are some Senators in disagreement with some of the existing legislation. I believe most of the Secretary's program is good. My office is flooded with letters, and I am sure the same is true of my colleague's office, from people in Minnesota who are unhappy about what is going on in respect to price supports or lack of supports—from people who are really unhappy about potatoes, eggs, and other commodities.

Mr. President, what the Secretary of Agriculture was talking about, and what the junior Senator from Minnesota was talking about was whether or not there was any kind of a program that could improve existing legislation. I think the only real mistake I made was that I did not pay tribute in my remarks, first of all, to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN]. I feel that that was an error. It was an error that came about because the address was not prepared, and because of the shortness of time and the confusion which resulted from a quick, tight, schedule of catching a plane in and out. I paid a public tribute to the Senator from Vermont on my return, because I really admire him and I trust him and have faith in him. I may disagree on occasion with his point of view. I know that the Senator from Vermont had the courage to introduce the compensatory-price program. I paid tribute to him for that. It is the principle of compensatory payments that is at the heart of the so-called Brannan plan. I support that principle. I want to see it tried on selected commodities.

The other part of that mistake is that I did not pay appropriate tribute to my colleague the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. THYE]. I say in all honesty that he is an able, conscientious, well-looked, well-respected United States Senator. He has done honor to our State. His work on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has earned him the respect of all of his colleagues on that committee. That does not mean that all his colleagues necessarily agree with everything he stands for or that he agrees with everything his colleagues stand for. The fact is that a conscientious effort is being made by all of them. As the junior Senator from Minnesota, I should have paid greater tribute to my senior colleague for his work in connection with agriculture. The politics in connection with whether one is for 90 percent or 75 percent of parity, the economic differences that may result in connection therewith, are things we argue out in committee and on the floor of the Senate. Those differences are clear-cut on the issue of price supports. This was demonstrated in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress.

Now that everybody has had his say respecting the PMA meeting in St. Paul, the record is full and complete. I hope it will be a matter of record that we ought never to use a meeting such as this for a paid administrative official to talk about party politics, but we should expect from our officials at these meetings that they not only tell us of the past and present but that they project their plans into the future. We ought to expect leadership and guidance. We ought not to criticize a Secretary of any department for explaining his program. The people are interested and they should hear the message.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, does the Senator yield to me, or does he yield the floor?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield the floor.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, my comments will not be directed to my colleague. He attended the meeting, and if he spoke politically and politicalwise at the meeeting, that was his prerogative. As a United States Senator, he could refer to any legislative act in any manner he desired. He could minimize, he could leave out, he could ridicule; that was his business.

Mr. President, I also wish to say that I recognize the outstanding ability of my colleague the junior Senator from Minnesota; and as a speaker he is very persuasive. I have always said that. I enjoy his pleasantness. I assume that he would be one of the very finest of companions on a long automobile trip or at a dinner. I have often sat beside him at dinners and luncheons, and he has always shown himself to be a most congenial luncheon or dinner companion. Therefore, Mr. President, my remarks are not directed in any manner at my colleague.

Both of us are here to do a job. If we differ on a particular legislative proposal, we do so because we do not view it in the same light. We have often taken the same attitude on legislative proposals, and I am indeed glad that is so, because in such case we do not cancel out each other's efforts, but we are doing something for our State and for the country.

I hope that the two of us, who represent Minnesota, may work as a unit, and that we do not very often cancel out one another's efforts in regard to important legislative proposals.

Mr. President, my criticism is directed, first, at those who were responsible for calling this meeting.

At this point I wish to quote from a letter which was issued on March 16, over the signature of the PMA chairman in Minnesota, Charles W. Stickney:

A travel allowance is being authorized for community committeemen who attend this meeting. We are asking that you contact other committeemen and try to make arrangements to pool rides. If you drive your own car, and are accompanied by one or more passengers, you may make a claim for 5 cents a mile. It will be necessary for you to keep an accurate record of the mileage in this event.

If you come either by bus or train, buy your ticket, and get a receipt for it. You must submit this receipt to the county office in order to be reimbursed for your fare.

You will receive a regular day's pay for attending the meeting. For community commiteemen who live some distance from the Twin Cities and require traveling time which would exceed the 1 day, up to 2 day's salary will be authorized.

We feel this is an opportunity which you, as committeemen, cannot afford to miss. We strongly urge you to attend this meeting.

Sincerely yours,

CHAS. W. STICKNEY,
Chairman, Minnesota PMA Committee.

Mr. President, that is the notice which was issued.

Now let me refer to the printed program which was made available to every person attending that meeting. I have read this before, but let me point out again that on the back of the program, the following appears at the top of the page:

Lest we forget.

That appears there for the purpose of exciting and creating fear.

At the bottom of that page appear these words:

It could happen again.

Anyone who read those statements would have a cold, cold fear that there might be a recurrence of the ruinously low prices which occurred in the early 1930's, when no farm program legislation had been put on the statute books, when there was no mandatory 90 percent of parity support for the basic commodities, when there was no authorization for the Secretary of Agriculture to support all other commodities up to 90 percent of parity, and when Congress had made available all the funds the Secretary needed to maintain such prices. Yet such statements were printed on the program.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the back page of this program may be printed at this point in the RECORD, so that it will show how those who were administering the affairs of the Department of Agriculture and those who were administering the affairs as PMA officers in the State of Minnesota had in mind to excite, when they printed such statements on the back of the official program which was distributed to the audience at that gathering.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Lest we forget

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 24, 1932

DARK NOR.		N. SP.			Winter White
1B&1D	60#	29
1	58#	28	27	1	60#	27	27
2	57#	27	26	2	58#	25	25
3	55#	25	24	3	56#	23	23
4	53#	23	22	4	54#	21	21
5	50#	17	16	5	51#	15	15

Protein Premiums

12.0%	0¢	13.5%	0¢	15.0%	3¢
13.0%	0¢	14.0%	1¢

		AMBER	DURUM	MIXED	RED
1	60#	25	23	21	20
2	58#	24	22	20	19
3	56#	22	20	18	17
4	54#	20	18	16	15
5	51#	17	15	13	12

CHOICE to FANCY DURUM, 4-7¢ more

FLAX		OATS
No. 1	88	No. 3 W 26#	05
No. 2	85	No. 4 W 23#	04
Sample	80	Sample 22#	03
		No. 2 1¢ over 3#
SHELL CORN YELLOW		BARLEY
No. 2	06	No. 2 46#	12
No. 3	05	No. 3 43#	10
No. 4	04	No. 4 40#	08
No. 5	02	1 Feed 35#	06
Ear Corn 2¢ less.		Ch. Mlt 3-5¢ more.
Mix & Wht. Corn less than Yel.	3¢
		RYE
Speltz Cwt.	15	No. 2 54#	15
Buckwheat Cwt.	55	No. 3 52#	13
#114 Nor.	36	No. 4 49#	11

—Grain Bulletin Card on Prices, Dec. 24, 1932.

It could happen again.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I have said before that the PMA chairman in Minnesota, Charles Stickney, is an able administrator. I have known him for years. I worked with him in farm program activities before either one of us had the responsibility of public office.

Most of the men who administer the PMA program in Minnesota, I have either known from youth or I have associated with them as men in farm organization activities, not only during the years of the depression but in the years of the inflationary war prices. All of them are able men, good men, men who would not for a moment violate the law if they knew the law was being violated.

However, unwittingly and unconsciously the men who conceived this program violated at least the spirit of Federal law, and in my humble opinion, were guilty of unethical conduct. I use the words "unethical conduct" because they were exciting other people, when they printed such material, despite the fact that they knew that what then existed on the statute books, in the form of public laws, would not permit a recurrence of such low prices.

I wish to defend those PMA men, who perform the commendable job of administering the farm program in my State. I have never had cause to complain of them either politically or administratively or as individuals. I have had nothing but the highest commendation and respect for them.

I think they unwittingly permitted themselves to become involved enthusiastically, in order to get a big rally there for the Secretary of Agriculture; and the Secretary of Agriculture became overly enthusiastic and spoke very fervently for the Brannan plan, and possibly somewhat in a tone of discouragement so far as the laws on the statute books were concerned. Then, with statements such as those I have just read, appearing on the back page of the program issued at that meeting, it would be easy for a farmer to believe that the prices could go to ruinously low points, overnight, if Secretary Brannan's program was not enacted.

This is the question which is before us—namely, whether efforts of that sort were made to excite the farmers there in attendance. The PMA county committeemen and the PMA township or community committeemen were brought to that meeting by being offered mileage; and they were excited by such statements appearing on the back of the program, and then there was the enthusiastic speech in behalf of the Brannan plan.

Mr. President, I think we cannot permit that to be done without criticizing it, because if it happens in the field of agriculture, it could happen in the case of the Interior Department or in the case of one of the military departments; and then, the first thing we know, the people of the United States could be excited to the point of being willing to take steps which they would never be willing to take unless they had been induced to take them under the influence of such great excitement.

I think those of us who have raised our voices in regard to this matter have done so only in a sincere effort to correct what we thought was a misuse of Federal funds, and because we do not want our farm program discredited or kicked around in the political arena.

I take that position for the reason that the minute we become partisan in regard to the farm program, we shall lose the confidence of the public, which has supported the farm program. The present farm program has been possible not only because of the public support, but also because of the united effort on the part of both Democrats and Republicans, both the deep South and the North, both the Grange and the Farmers' Union and the Farm Bureau and other farm organizations of lesser degrees of importance, other of our national farmers' groups which I could name, who acted together during the early 30's, when the farmers were on their knees and when the local banks were closing their doors or were having their doors closed in every county across the Nation.

Mr. President, I was one of the producers in that day, and I delivered hogs at south St. Paul. They did not net me $5, yet they were prime, the choice type of product. A hog weighing more than 200 pounds did not bring me $5 net as a producer.

I have seen the farmers, up and down the highways, standing in bewilderment and confusion, wondering what was going to happen to them next, when they saw the sheriff's sale across the field, in their neighbor's yard, and when they saw on the trees a notice of another sheriff's sale within the next 24 hours.

Mr. President, as a young farmer coming out of World War I, I assumed the responsibility of farming on my own, in 1922, and I went through the depression years and experienced the low prices then prevailing, with a heavy financial obligation resting upon me and my wife. In those early thirties and those years of depression prices, I appraised for the Federal Land Bank for 2 years. I listened to men and women tell me their tale of woe, how they had raised their families, paid for their farms, and, in the evening of life, b use of ruinous low prices, saw such an accumulation of bills, taxes, interest, a few doctor bills, and a few repair bills for work on their buildings that they were compelled finally to seek a real-estate mortgage. At that time real-estate mortgages were being foreclosed, and they only had the Federal Land Bank to which to turn.

The Federal Land Bank in those early years of the 1930's could not assist or help them all. Then Congress enacted what was known as the Commissioner's law. The Commissioner's fund was made available as a second mortgage to help bail the farmers out of their tremendous debts. The farm population of the United States fed the people of the Nation, we might say, from their own resources. They depleted their land. They deteriorated their buildings, because they were not getting back the cost of production.

Mr. President, the Congress did a most commendable thing when it enacted the Commissioner's loan fund, which was used as a second mortgage to bolster the Federal Land Bank loans, in order that loans could be made. The banker, the elevator man, the hardware dealer, the implement dealer, the doctor, the lawyer, and everyone else benefited from it. When a loan was made to the farmer in a community, all the creditors received their money. Some accounts, of course, had to be scaled down. Certain percentages of the indebtedness to the credit were paid. But nevertheless everyone benefited when the Commissioner's act was passed.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I may say I hope this is the last time that the question of the St. Paul meeting will be discussed. I believe that no man intentionally was attempting to violate the law, but unwittingly certain individuals got themselves involved in a meeting which smacked of politics in every sense, and it roiled and aroused a large number of citizens, many of whom thought it was a misuse of Federal funds. I hope that this will close the chapter.

PROTECTION AGAINST UN-AMERICAN AND SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, I have been waiting now for a little over 2 hours for the privilege of presenting a matter to the Senate. I happen to have been caught in a sort of forensic version of the Minnesota shift, to which I have listened, I may say, with considerable interest and satisfaction, and I have consequently become well advised concerning a certain farm meeting in the great neighboring State of Minnesota.

I think, next Tuesday being what it is—the Fourth of July—and the Senate of the United States having acted as it has this week twice by unanimous vote to take a firm and definite stand against the forces of communism and tyranny abroad, that it is appropriate for me to address myself to the current situation at this time. I shall be brief, because we have all been here I think a bit longer than we had expected, certainly longer than I expected when I asked for the floor, first, about 4:30 this afternoon.

I think it cannot but be recognized by the citizens of America generally that, just prior to this great birthday of our independence, this great day dedicated to freedom, once by unanimous vote, the Senate of the United States has voted to draft its young men, if necessary, to put them into the armed forces of the country, and, at another time, by unanimous vote, we have voted to provide additional hundreds of millions of dollars of our wealth and sustenance for our military-aid program abroad; that we have done both of these things merely because there is loose in the world today a Godless, aggressive force called communism, which has pretty well upset the plans and the hopes and the prayers of people around the globe.

I was one of the Senators who voted for both those measures, because it seemed to me that in the kind of world in which we live and the kind of time in which we operate, it was essential that we take what action we could, as we could, when we could, and through whatever opportunity is provided to us to do something to strike back against that godless force and that dangerous conspiracy. It is to that subject and to that theme and to that proposition that I now address myself, because we have left something undone, Mr. President, while we have been busy in the process of drafting young men and in the process of shipping millions of dollars overseas in military aid, in our war against communism, important and necessary though those steps may well have been. We have as yet done nothing as a Congress to tighten our home defenses against communism. No such legislation has even been scheduled for action, and now we hear talk of adjournment in another 30 days.

We have listened here on the floor of this body for long hours at this session of the Congress to charges and countercharges, explanations, and alibis concerning what has been done in this country at home by this same godless force of communism endeavoring to work its agents into our Government—the same conspiracy which has caused us to take these highly unusual and unprecedented steps this week to meet it abroad. We have heard much, but we have taken no action. We have had a special investigating committee grappling with the problem of what to do with the Communists who are alleged to have wormed their way into positions of high importance, and it simply does not seem to me that here, on the eve of Independence Day, here, on the eve of the birthday of this country, dedicated to the proposition that men should be free, we should leave undone things which might well be done to finish the job of measuring up to the challege flung at our feet by the Communists abroad and their conspiracy at home. The dangers to our security are perhaps greater due to our nonchalance at home than are those growing out of Communist conspiracy abroad. We need to take the same firm courageous action at home that we have been compelled as a Nation to undertake abroad. This is a job for Congress to do.

So, Mr. President, while it may be that we do not now have the time to act, today, and we well may not find the time before the Fourth, still recognizing as I do that there is now nothing more important before the country than to meet the challenge of communism fully, at home as well as abroad, that there is nothing more important for any Senator on this floor to do than to square his conscience with the fact that, while drafting young men to die overseas and while sending millions of dollars of our wealth abroad, we have as yet done literally and completely nothing to meet the challenge of the same menace here at home. I think we should give consideration to these obligations. We should at least set the stage and prepare to act in tightening our home-front defenses against communism.

I think it is fitting, therefore, on this unhappy eve of Independence Day, when American boys are dying in Korea tonight in fighting communism, as we meet here, that we do what we can, as we can, and when we can to meet the challenge of communism. We cannot vote today but we can set the stage for early and effective action.

Therefore, Mr. President, since there is no business pending before the Senate at this time, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2311) to protect the United States against certain un-American and subversive activities, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for a quorum call be rescinded, and that further proceedings under the call be suspended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate adjourn until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 7 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, July 1, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

WITHDRAWAL

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate June 30 (legislative day of June 7), 1950:

POSTMASTER

PENNSYLVANIA

James S. Newton, Ellwood City, Pa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art the supreme ruler of the universe and the guiding intelligence in the life of all mankind, we have entered upon a new day ladened with difficult tasks and grave responsibilities.

We humbly confess that we are not sure of what we should think or say or do in order to bear effective witness that we are men of vision and worthy of our high vocation as statesmen and spiritual leaders.

Grant that we may yield ourselves to the interpreting and guiding light of Thy spirit, assured that the secret of our blessedness is to be found in obeying Thy will and following Thy leading.

Fill us with longings and hopes for that blessed day of prediction when the nations of the earth shall be united in the bonds of brotherhood, seeking together the blessings of freedom and peace which none can ever find or enjoy alone.

Hear us in the name of the Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McDaniel, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a concurrent resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 96. Concurrent resolution to print additional copies of hearings on S. 1832, an immigration bill.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 2596. An act relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944); and

S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Maritime Commission under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On June 23, 1950:

H. R. 697. An act for the relief of Samuel W. Poorvu;

H. R. 2224. An act for the relief of the Winona Machine & Foundry Co., a corporation of Winona, Minn.;

H. R. 4747. An act for the relief of Louise Ahting;

H. R. 4781. An act for the relief of Veronica Jolly;

H. R. 6163. An act for the relief of Dr. Wei Tcheng Liang;

H. R. 7057. An act to amend Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a) with respect to the computation of estimated costs of teaching personnel and supplies for instruction in the case of colleges of agriculture and the mechanic arts and other nonprofit educational institutions;

H. R. 4960. An act for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth H. Whitney;

H. R. 7440. An act to amend Veterans Regulations to establish for persons who served in the Armed Forces during World War II a further presumption of service-connection for active pulmonary tuberculosis;

H. R. 4100. An act for the relief of Calvin E. Cranford; and

H. R. 4163. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Walker.

On June 24, 1950:

H. R. 7579. An act to extend the Rubber Act of 1948 (Public Law 469, 80th Cong.), and for other purposes.

On June 26, 1950:

H. R. 2705. An act for the relief of Martin Kenneth Ikeda;

H. R. 2803. An act for the relief of Albert J. Peterson;

H. R. 3009. An act for the relief of Dr. Ali Reza Bassir;

H. R. 3018. An act for the relief of Camilla Fabris;

H. R. 4371. An act for the relief of Shiro Takemura;

H. R. 5541. An act for the relief of William Lawrence Tan;

H. R. 6589. An act for the relief of Mitsue Miyamoto;

H. R. 6747. An act for the relief of Helga Holleb;

H. R. 7096. An act for the relief of Mrs. Maria Salome Holland;

H. R. 7315. An act for the relief of Daijiro Yoshida; and

H. R. 7363. An act for the relief of Suzuko Yagi and Anne Yagi.

On June 27, 1950:

H. R. 1609. An act for the relief of Arne Gordon Westly;

H. R. 6743. An act to amend the Federal Loan Bank Act, as amended, and title IV of the National Housing Act, as amended, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6756. An act for the relief of Arthur Chen Shu Jee;

H. R. 6787. An act for the relief of Mrs. Kyoko Nakamura Kornhauser;

H. R. 6880. An act for the relief of Mrs. Kiyo Narumi Murakami and Keiko Narumi;

H. R. 6894. An act for the relief of Mrs. Nobuko Eto Heard;

H. R. 7035. An act for the relief of Hisako Sakata Ikezawa;

H. R. 7047. An act for the relief of Mrs. Tomo Nonque Rosevear;

H. R. 7050. An act for the relief of Louie Gam Yean;

H. R. 7292. An act for the relief of Erio Louis Tomita and Fumiko Tomita;

H. R. 8270. An act relating to the renewal of contracts for the carrying of mail on star routes; and

H. J. Res. 480. Joint resolution extending the time for the release, free of estate and gift tax, of certain powers.

On June 28, 1950:

H. R. 714. An act for the relief of Pieter Cornelis ten Wolde and family;

H. R. 1038. An act for the relief of William Richard Geoffrey Malpas;

H. R. 1082. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York to hear, determine, and render judgment upon a claim of the Bunker Hill Development Corp.;

H. R. 2226. An act for the relief of Victor C. Kaminski (also known as Victor Kaminski);

H. R. 3254. An act for the relief of Iva Gavin;

H. R. 4532. An act for the relief of Dr. Ta Fu Wu;

H. R. 4903. An act for the relief of Krikor G. Guiragossian;

H. R. 6567. An act to increase the borrowing power of Commodity Credit Corporation;

H. R. 6652. An act for the relief of Mrs. Fujiko Chichie Imbert, wife, and Robert Imbert, Jr., son of an American soldier;

H. R. 6691. An act for the relief of Paul D. Banning, chief disbursing officer, Treasury Department, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7065. An act for the relief of Kazuko Miyama Akana and Chang King Akana;

H. R. 7066. An act for the relief of Setsuko Amano;

H. R. 7073. An act for the relief of Koto Kogami Kitsu and Jeannette Akemi Kitsu;

H. R. 7199. An act for the relief of Nobuko Maeda;

H. R. 7254. An act for the relief of Mrs. Bernard Smith;

H. R. 7362. An act for the relief of Mrs. Willard Thulin (formerly Jutta Kono);

H. R. 7416. An act for the relief of Suzuko Takanashi;

H. R. 7656. An act for the relief of David George Callaway;

H. R. 7658. A act for the relief of Mitsuko Ito;

H. R. 7682. An act for the relief of Mrs. Akiko Osada Gustafson;

H. R. 7889. An act to postpone the application of the Classification Act of 1949 to certain employees of the selective-service system; and

H. R. 8198. An act to provide for the organization of the Army and the Department of the Army, and for other purposes.

On June 29, 1950:

H. R. 5682. An act for the relief of William T. Orton;

H. R. 5979. An act for the relief of John Tweit;

H. R. 6692. An act for the relief of Sgt. Blaine W. Hughes;

H. R. 8567. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 492. Joint resolution making temporary appropriations for the fiscal year 1951, and for other purposes.

On June 30, 1950:

H. R. 5355. An act for the relief of Mindel Malek.

HON. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, this is a significant day in more ways than one. At the end of a week which has witnessed a great and heroic decision by our Government, it is fitting that we honor a Member of the legislative branch of that Government who has served it long, faithfully, and with distinction.

In this shining hour, which marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of her stewardship in behalf of the people of the Fifth Massachusetts District and the Nation, it is my privilege to extend the sincere and affectionate congratulations of the United States House of Representatives to our friend and colleague, Congresswoman EDITH NOURSE ROGERS.

Because her home city, which is close to mine, is also a textile community, we have shared many problems. In discussing these, I have been increasingly impressed with her resources of practical knowledge, her devotion to duty, and her generous understanding. Other names may flash like meteors across the sky, but in terms of both volume and quality of service that is very close to the people, I believe that EDITH NOURSE ROGERS has earned the title of "First Lady of the Republican Party."

Up our way she is known as the veteran's friend by Democrats, of whom I am one, as well as Republicans. With unfailing consistency since she was first elected to the Congress on June 30, 1925, she has taken their problems to her heart. The records show the long list of laws which she successfully championed for them. But more important than these are the many recollections I have of sick and friendless veterans who spoke to me of "Mrs. ROGERS," with an almost childlike trust and confidence which cannot be surpassed in its sincerity. The humble and spontaneous tribute is best of all. Being unstudied, it gives you a key to the human qualities of a person which linger long after the dry record of dates and events is forgotten.

In yesterday afternoon's issue of my home city paper, the Lawrence Tribune, there appeared in the Things Talked About column the following paragraph. I am sure that the writer had no idea that a certain silver anniversary was so near at hand.

He reported, and I quote:

Congresswoman EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, who represents Andover among other cities and towns, is a charming woman as well as an able Representative of the Federal House of Representatives. It was the privilege of the TTA man to meet Mrs. ROGERS as she boarded a train for Washington not long ago. The hour was late and the lady lawmaker was tired, but she fairly burst with graciousness and enthusiasm.

But this is not the end of a real-life story. We pause to appreciate the remarkable career of our colleague and to hope that EDITH NOURSE ROGERS will continue her splendid service to the people for many, many years to come.

POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, April 18, 1950, was a dark day to the postal employees and the citizens of our country, when the Postmaster General issued a curtailment order to the postmasters of the United States.

A serious mistake has been made in curtailing postal service, which is exactly that—service. If it is going to be a business deal then it should be turned over to business and run as a business, but if it is a service to our citizens then it should be just that. Of course, we want it run as efficiently and economically as possible, but if the people of this Nation are willing to foot the bill to get this service then I feel they should have it.

Communication and transportation have been the two fundamentals that have made this Nation grow and become a great country. Instead of curtailing we should be thinking of expanding in order to continue its growth.

Floods of letters have come to me from the residents of my district, and I know other Members of Congress have received a similar deluge of protest mail. Our citizens have come to expect good service from the Post Office Department and we cannot permit this drastic move of reduction in the postal system, which has been a vital link in the attainment of world leadership by this Nation.

Postmasters in my district inform me that the volume of business in their respective offices has greatly increased during and since the war years. This, as we all know, is a fact that cannot be overloooked. This curtailment order will disrupt all efforts of improvement since the war and will nullify effective gains made over the past years in giving a necessary and important communication system to our country.

PERSONAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. DENTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. DENTON. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, June 26, 1950, I was absent from the session due to my attendance at the Democratic State Convention at Indianapolis, June 26 and 27.

Had I been present during the vote upon the passage of H. R. 87 over the veto of the President, I would have voted "aye" for its passage.

On Tuesday, June 27, 1950, had I been present during the vote upon the question of the extension of the selective service law, I would have voted "aye" and for such extension of that law.

PEACE OR WAR

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, the important news for Americans this morning is that India, which refrained from voting on Tuesday's decision to invoke military sanctions, announces this morning that she has accepted the Security Council's recommendations. The people of the United States are deeply concerned about whether the issue in Korea is to be resolved by peace or war. It is my firm conviction that those who express this concern have overloked one fundamental fact—that the United States is acting by direction of the Security Council and has subjected itself to the discipline of the United Nations.

India was the power thought to be neutral between the east and west, but India has responded—in company with France, Great Britain, Norway, Ecuador, and Colombia, the members of the Security Council other than China and the United States—and it is India which is the great subcontinent, a country which has gained her independence by peaceful revolution, and the great counterpoise in Asia to Communist China. India recognizes, as do all free peoples, that the mortal threat in Korea was to small nations everywhere and to people without great military forces of their own everywhere. India, just like this House on Tuesday, did not permit dust to be thrown into her eyes about civil war in Korea by patriotic elements seeking to unify the country but saw naked aggression for what it was.

It is in this rallying of the nations like India that the American people have their best assurance that we have taken the road to peace and have left behind the road of uncertainty as to the power and determination of the United Nations and the free peoples to defend themselves—which is the road to war.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. COLE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

[Mr. COLE of Kansas addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include a report of the subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

[Mr. RANKIN addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, we are about to consider an important bill. I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 192]

Abbitt	Harrison	Perkins
Abernethy	Harvey	Pfeifer, Joseph L.
Allen, La.	Hays, Ark.	Pfeiffer, William L.
Andersen, H. Carl	Hays, Ohio	Phillips, Calif.
Angell	Hébert	Phillips, Tenn.
Arends	Heffernan	Pickett
Auchincloss	Heller	Plumley
Bailey	Hinshaw	Poage
Barden	Hobbs	Powell
Barrett, Pa.	Hoeven	Preston
Barrett, Wyo.	Hoffman, Ill.	Price
Bates, Ky.	Irving	Quinn
Battle	Jackson, Calif.	Redden
Bolling	Jackson, Wash.	Rich
Bolton, Ohio	James	Riehlman
Bramblett	Jenison	Rivers
Breen	Jenkins	Roosevelt
Bryson	Johnson	Sadlak
Buckley, N. Y.	Jonas	Sadowski
Bulwinkle	Jones, Ala.	Sanborn
Burdick	Jones, Mo.	Sasscer
Burleson	Kean	Scott, Hardie
Burton	Kearney	Shelley
Byrne, N. Y.	Keefe	Sikes
Carroll	Kelley, Pa.	Sims
Cavalcante	Kennedy	Smathers
Chesney	Keogh	Smith, Ohio
Christopher	Kerr	Spence
Chudoff	Kilburn	Stanley
Clemente	King	Steed
Clevenger	Klein	Stigler
Cole, N. Y.	Latham	Sutton
Corbett	LeFevre	Taber
Coudert	Lichtenwalter	Tackett
Davies, N. Y.	Linehan	Taylor
Dingell	Lyle	Teague
Dondero	McCarthy	Thompson
Doughton	McGrath	Towe
Engel, Mich.	McGregor	Underwood
Evins	Macy	Velde
Fallon	Magee	Vinson
Fogarty	Martin, Mass.	Vursell
Frazier	Mason	Wagner
Fugate	Miles	Walsh
Gillette	Mitchell	Welch
Gilmer	Monroney	Werdel
Golden	Morgan	Wheeler
Gossett	Morris	Wickersham
Granahan	Morton	Wier
Granger	Multer	Willis
Green	Nicholson	Wilson, Ind.
Hall, Edwin Arthur	Noland	Wilson, Okla.
Hall, Leonard W.	Norblad	Wilson, Tex.
Halleck	Norton	Withrow
Harden	O'Toole	Wolcott
Harris	Pace	Wood
	Passman
	Patman
	Patterson

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 259 Members have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances; in one to include a letter from a constituent, in another a resolution.

Mr. SUTTON (at the request of Mr. PRIEST) was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. LARCADE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances, in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. RAINS (at the request of Mr. THOMAS) was given permission to extend his remarks on slum clearance and include certain extraneous matter.

Mr. THORNBERRY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include some extraneous matter.

Mr. RODINO asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. BENNETT of Michigan asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a resolution.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances; in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. FARRINGTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and to include certain printed matter.

Mr. BIEMILLER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. PATTERSON (at the request of Mr. KEATING) was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include a resolution and an editorial.

Mr. WEICHEL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a news article.

Mr. LECOMPTE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address delivered by the new department commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans of Iowa, Hon. Lloyd Thurston, who served many years in the House of Representatives.

Mr. RHODES asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article.

Mr. CELLER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I have just introduced a concurrent resolution to establish a world court. I ask that that may be included in the RECORD with my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mrs. DOUGLAS asked and was given permission to address the House today for 30 minutes, following the legislative business of the day and any other special orders heretofore entered.

ORGANIZATION OF A CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE OF PUERTO RICO

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3336) to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 3336, with Mr. BONNER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Colorado is recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 12 minutes to the gentleman from Puerto Rico [Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN].

Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN. Mr. Chairman, the people of Puerto Rico, 2,200,000 American citizens, are organized, as a body politic, in accordance with a law of Congress. S. 3336 would make it possible for them to organize themselves in accordance with a Constitution of their own adoption, while the present exercise of United States authority, all matters of a Federal nature, would continue undisturbed. Such a step is in line with the fundamental tenents of the American way of life.

According to S. 3336 the present provisions of the Organic Act of Puerto Rico, concerning the operation of Federal authority, the application of Federal laws to Puerto Rico, the operation of the United States district court and the conduct of Federal services, would be continued as heretofore. Insofar as local government is concerned, insofar as power of government which Congress has heretofore considered to be local in nature, it would be based on a constitution adopted by the people of Puerto Rico instead of on provisions of congressional law.

In order for this to take place S. 3336 establishes certain conditions and requirements. The Constitution of Puerto Rico shall be republican in form. It shall contain a bill of rights. It shall not be inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States. It shall not be inconsistent with such provisions of the present organic act as would continue in effect. It shall be submitted for final approval, to the Congress. It must be approved by the Congress before it becomes effective.

These conditions must be accepted by the people of Puerto Rico, in a referendum, before the bill, if enacted, goes into effect. The people of Puerto Rico will decide by themselves in a free vote if they want or do not want to enjoy self-government on this basis.

On the other hand, upon the conditions and requirements established by S. 3336 being fulfilled by the people of Puerto Rico and upon the Congress so finding, and approving the Constitution of Puerto Rico, such Constitution shall become operative, and such provisions of the present organic act as refer to local government shall stand repealed. This will create government by consent in Puerto Rico both at the Federal and at the local level, a government to which all concerned will have agreed to.

This is not statehood. Puerto Rico will continue to be represented in Congress by its Resident Commissioner. This is not independence. Puerto Ricans will continue proudly to be American citizens, in a common loyalty to our common institutions.

Mr. Chairman, I confidently say that the present political aspirations of the people of Puerto Rico are embodied in this bill.

At the last elections, I ran on a platform calling for this form of self-government. I explained my views on this subject and advocated such self-government. I had two opponents. One ran on an independence platform. Another, on a statehood platform. The independence candidate polled about 66,000 votes. The statehood candidate polled about 180,000 votes. I polled about 392,000 votes.

Since this bill has been introduced, the Governor of Puerto Rico, elected on the same party ticket as I was, has appeared both before Senate and House committees to uphold the bill. The Legislature of Puerto Rico, by unanimous vote, has endorsed the bill. All members of the insular senate, except one who abstained, voted for the bill. All members of the insular house of representatives, except one, who abstained, voted for the bill. The five justices of our Supreme Court of Puerto Rico have endorsed the bill. Seventy-six mayors, out of seventy-seven—there are 77 municipalities in the island—endorsed the bill. The American Federation of Labor in Puerto Rico and the CIO in Puerto Rico, have endorsed the bill. The Chamber of Commerce of Puerto Rico has endorsed the bill.

In spite of the unmistakable fact that I, who was elected on such platform, represent the people of Puerto Rico in Congress; in spite of the evident support I have had in sponsoring this measure, I wish again to call attention to the fact, that in accordance with its terms, this act would not become effective until approved by a majority of voters in a referendum on this bill, to be held in Puerto Rico.

The bill will not be imposed upon the people of Puerto Rico by the Congress. The people may approve and accept it or disapprove and reject it.

The bill will be an answer to those who would accuse the United States of maintaining Puerto Rico in a colonial status. It will be another instance where facts show that we not only believe in, but practice, democracy. Under S. 3336 and in accordance with its terms, Puerto Rico with its own constitution and with a type of relationship with the United States to which it would have freely agreed to, would be taking, within this great Federal system, the station of a free people, united with the great people of the mainland for the common good, in the interest of peace, prosperity, and security, in common loyalty to the great institution of this federation. Our union with the United States is expressed and symbolized by our common citizenship.

I think it would be of great significance that this bill be passed here today on the last session to be held before the Fourth of July. The Fourth of July signifies in the history of the new world the affirmation of the principle that just government derives its authority from the consent of the governed. This bill establishes in Puerto Rico government by the consent of the governed. The 21st of May last marked the fiftieth anniversary of civil government in Puerto Rico under the authority of the United States. Since the year 1900 we have been celebrating the Fourth of July in Puerto Rico under civil government and under the United States flag. This coming Fourth of July will be therefore the fiftieth Fourth of July which we celebrate under such auspices. We celebrate it because we consider it to be our holiday, the holiday of all American citizens no matter where they are.

Mr. Chairman, I shall speak to the people of Puerto Rico on the coming Fourth of July. I will certainly feel deeply honored in carrying with this bill the message from this Congress to the people of Puerto Rico which this bill implies. That is, the Fourth of July means government by the people, of the people, and for the people wherever it is celebrated under the American flag. It means government by the consent of the governed in the United States including Puerto Rico.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, this is a very serious issue for us in the United States, especially today, because this is a possession of the United States. The charge has been made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO], who introduced a great amount of material in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which I read, and I hope other Members will read, in great detail, saying that we were by our conduct and in respect to this bill using our power with respect to Puerto Rico in a way that we should not. I reiterate, at a time when we are fighting for the rights of free people with the lives of Americans in Korea, and when we are trying to hold up the hand of the United Nations which is seeking to have a new rule of justice in all relationships between administering powers and their possessions or colonies, this is an extremely important issue.

I have tried to analyze this issue in deference to my own conscience and in deference to the 10,000 or more of our citizens of Puerto Rican extraction who live in my district and in respect to the best interests of the country, and I have come to some conclusions with which I would like to acquaint the House.

This bill does restrict, and let us have that very clear, the people of Puerto Rico to a constitution which is within the limitations of the Organic Act for Puerto Rico. Their fundamental status is unchanged.

They undoubtedly will get more powers by a constitution under this act and they get them by their own designation, but their fundamental status is unchanged. The fundamental difference which has occurred between this bill and the drafts which were available before the Senate acted, is twofold: First, the people of Puerto Rico are given two votes under this act, and instead of its being left in uncertain language as to whatever laws Puerto Rico might have about voting, it is now said specifically, and I refer to section 2, "This act shall be submitted to the qualified voters of Puerto Rico for acceptance or rejection through an island-wide referendum". Also at least one more vote by the people is provided for in section 3 "upon adoption of the constitution by the people of Puerto Rico."

Now, let us see where that leaves us. I believe that if the people of Puerto Rico are ready to make a constitution, then they are ready to decide their own fate whether they wish to be independent, whether they wish to have statehood, or to continue within this organic act which the United States has given to them. If they are ready for one, I think they are ready for either of the others. But, the question is, Does this act cut them off? Does this act foreclose them, and there, I think, is very grave ground for doubt, for I believe the act inhibits the Puerto Rican people by giving Congress' consent in advance to only the one alternative, that of the present status within the organic act only with a constitution, of course.

The constitutional convention duly called by the people for Puerto Rico could be a run-away convention. In 1787 we had a run-away constitutional convention. Our run-away constitutional convention was called for the purpose of confirming the Articles of Confederation, and instead of that they came up with a new Constitution, for a new Government which, for the first time, made a country that was successful, and there is no reason under this particular law why, if the people of Puerto Rico will it, they cannot have a run-away constitutional convention which will give them statehood or independence.

How does the Congress inhibit them in this particular statute? It says that the only thing we agree to now is that you shall have a constitution within the organic act. If you have a run-away constitutional convention, you have not accepted that in advance; there is nothing which can prevent this Congress, when it gets this constitution back, from accepting it, because the Congress controls the organic act whether it passes this bill or not, and it will control it when that constitution is returned to it.

There is another change, and that is that the bill now does not just provide that the constitution shall lay on the table for 90 days, which the original draft provided, but it says that the Congress shall approve affirmatively. We can approve, we can also eliminate or amend the organic act if we are satisfied to approve a constitution which gives statehood or independence.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Does the gentleman have any fear that this constitutional convention, if called, would try to separate its ties with the United States Government?

Mr. JAVITS. I do not see that that is a proper fear and I do not have any fear on that subject; I believe only that it would be better to give the people of Puerto Rico an uninhibited right to adopt a constitution of their choice.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON].

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to state to the House that I will vote for this bill. I believe this legislation is progress for Puerto Rico. I should like to see these possessions of ours come of age and look forward to the time when they can join us by standing shoulder to shoulder as a State.

I am rising this morning to urge a united front with respect to Korea. We have to have a United States policy, and at this time we should back the President's statement. I am sorry that some people have seen fit to make political issues of it, because we cannot have a political foray in Korea; it must be action on a bipartisan policy under United Nations authority.

At this critical time, we should forget these past recriminations among each other, and the unfortunate events that have occurred through our previous policy in the Far East which many of us opposed, and unite on a constructive forward policy. I am one of the members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs who as a member of the opposition at times has criticized the State Department. I have criticized various of Dean Acheson's actions as Secretary of State to obtain the best bipartisan policy. But I must say that I have confidence in Dean Acheson's loyalty and competence in doing his duties, and I feel he should be continued as Secretary of State instead of asking for his resignation. We must remember that the President is the one under the Constitution designated to handle our foreign policy. The Secretary of State and the Department of State are merely the arms of the President to carry out those policies, so that when Senator TAFT spoke of a policy as possibly being Acheson's policy——

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is out of order and I move that his words be taken down. He has no authority to use the name of Senator TAFT. He has been a Member of the House long enough to know the rules.

Mr. FULTON. I will be glad to withdraw the name of Senator TAFT as it was only a casual reference. So that when we speak of a policy as being Acheson's policy, we really mean a policy of the President's which Mr. Acheson and the Department of State are implementing and administering.

When it is said that Secretary Acheson should resign, we are then getting into the position that the foreign governments use when somebody makes a mistake; we immediately call for their political scalps. This makes for unstable governments and many shifts in policy personnel. In our system, we hope by constructive criticism in Congress and in the country to have the Government officials change their minds and adopt the policies we others suggest. It is a happy occasion for those who have struggled for an affirmative bipartisan policy in the Pacific as well as the Atlantic, that this change of policy has now been made. We United States citizens should rejoice that we are now able to go forward on a united bipartisan American foreign policy both in the Pacific and the Atlantic, and there is now the high duty to reach a fair and just policy. In our country, however, we still maintain the right to be wrong, to criticize our policies, and to unite behind our officials to carry out the decisions, once the issues have been resolved.

We should have introduced a bipartisan resolution by which Congress ratifies the actions of the President as to Korea and Formosa to date, and which then states the policy and limits for further action under the United Nations Charter and Security Council.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, at the very outset I should like to refer to the statement of the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS]. He seeks to justify, if I understand him correctly, the passage of this bill with an apology.

Mr. JAVITS. Unfortunately, I was unable to finish my remarks, so the gentleman cannot assume what I would have said if I had finished.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. May I ask the gentleman whether his argument is made for the purpose of supporting the bill?

Mr. JAVITS. If the gentleman desires my views on this matter, first, I believe this——

Mr. MARCANTONIO. No; I am asking the gentleman, is he for the bill or against the bill?

Mr. JAVITS. I will answer the question. I believe the bill should be recommitted to the committee but for the purpose of striking out sections 4 and 5 which may have the effect of inhibiting the freedom of choice of the Puerto Rican people.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. All right. The gentleman has stated that he will vote for recommittal. I note he has not qualified his assurance that he will vote for recommittal and I trust he will do so, so that the RECORD will remain with his unqualified statement to vote to recommit.

I, too, believe that this bill should be recommitted. As I stated yesterday, this bill is merely a snare and a delusion and a fraud perpetrated on the people of Puerto Rico to make them believe we are giving them something. We are giving them nothing. This bill is a scheme to deprive the people of Puerto Rico to pass on their own future status.

We cannot abdicate our powers to legislate on the Territories or possessions. That power is vested in Congress. We cannot turn it over to anybody else. So when we say to the people of Puerto Rico, "We are with this bill, going to let you legislate for yourselves," we are not telling them the truth. We are misleading them, and we are aiding the present ruling clique of Puerto Rico to dodge the responsibility they assumed at the time they won their election to bring about an end to the colonial status.

Despite the statement made by the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, I think the election literature of 1948 will demonstrate conclusively that the Resident Commissioner himself and his party and his Governor advocated the following:

First, they would seek from Congress the complete elimination of any restriction on the refining of sugar that is produced in Puerto Rico.

Second, it was said by the Governor and by the platform of that party that when the Legislature of Puerto Rico felt it was wise it would request of the Congress the right to conduct a referendum on three questions—colonial status, statehood, and independence—and would request Congress to agree in advance to abide by the decision of the people of Puerto Rico.

That was the platform and those are the speeches which were made by the Governor of Puerto Rico as well as the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico. It is significant here that the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico ntil just a few years ago, and our colleague is here present, and I am sure will not deny this statement, was an ardent advocate of independence. In fact he was one of the most eloquent advocates of independence. You see, you advocate certain things when you are out, and then when you are in, a change takes place. A change took place in both the Resident Commissioner and the leader of his party, Mr. Muñoz Marín, who originally split up the Liberal Party of Puerto Rico because he felt the leaders of the Liberal Party in Puerto Rico were not advocating independence. He established the present political party on the idea of independence.

So far as the statement that 38 mayors support this bill let us bear in mind that the mayors in Puerto Rico are not elected. They are appointed, or at least in many of the cities they are, and naturally being appointed by the Governor they are going to sustain the Governor's position on any question.

This bill is proposed by the Governor, and it is proposed by his representative the Resident Commissioner. It is contrary to public opinion in Puerto Rico. I say that because I maintain not only the other political parties, not only the statehood people and not only the independence people are opposed to this bill, but the leading newspapers of Puerto Rico are opposed to this bill. El Mundo and El Imparcial are opposed to this bill.

The labor groups are split, that is the leadership is split wide open on this question, but the rank and file has in telegrams and messages time and time again demonstrated its opposition to this bill. It is significant that many, many representative Puerto Ricans who have requested to be heard were told to submit statements, but were not given an opportunity to be heard in opposition to the bill.

There is something fundamental involved here, much more fundamental than these fringe arguments as to what side who takes. In Puerto Rico we witnessed another tragedy just a couple of weeks ago when a plane fell into the ocean and 28 Puerto Ricans on that plane were killed. We might say, "Well, that is just an ordinary disaster, an airplane disaster." But that is a symptom of the fundamental evils which this bill perpetuates in Puerto Rico. This bill perpetuates the colonial system in Puerto Rico. Those workers who died in that plane crash were victims of the colonial system this bill would perpetuate.

Let me give you some figures which I placed in the RECORD, but which I want to repeat because they are so vitally important. In Puerto Rico they have what is called the Puerto Rican Industrial Development Company, which is supposed to produce jobs and is supposed to bring industries to Puerto Rico. In 6 years all that has been produced is a total of 7,233 jobs. Of this number 3,440 are homework jobs. There is an additional labor force for the past 3 years of 22,000. Out of 2,200,000 population in Puerto Rico you have an average of 300,000 unemployed.

There must be some reason for it, and the reason is that Puerto Rico is a colony and has no sovereignty. Because of its lack of sovereignty it cannot control that economic relationship which is necessary to its own well-being. It cannot develop its own industries because it cannot protect those industries from competition from the States. It is choked within the circle of our own tariff laws. It is subject to our coastwise shipping monopoly. Absentee ownership is turning Puerto Rico into a diabetic economy. Its agriculture is mainly sugar. The result is that the people of Puerto Rico are faced with the most dire poverty. This operation of bootstrap, about which we hear so much, and which the present Governor of Puerto Rico has been advertising so much, particularly in the New York Herald-Tribune, giving it terrific sums of money, and that explains one of the reasons why the Herald-Tribune is supporting this bill, advertising this operation bootstrap, it has nothing for the people of Puerto Rico except big salaries for the politicians. Only the politicians are living well while doing nothing for the people of Puerto Rico.

Puerto Rico's problem can only be solved in one manner, and that is to give it sovereignty. This bill does not give Puerto Rico any sovereignty. It restricts Puerto Rico's existence within the framework of the colonial status. And that is why the leading newspapers El Mundo and El Imparcial have written editorials, which I placed in the RECORD yesterday, which are in complete opposition to this program. Oh, it is said, we give the people a chance to pass on whether they want this or not. This implies great faith in the judgment of the people of Puerto Rico. It is just the opposite. It shows a lack of faith. The fact that the present Governor of Puerto Rico deprived the people of Puerto Rico of what he has promised them, an opportunity to choose independence, statehood, or a continuance of the present status. I submit that this bill is not in the interest of the people of Puerto Rico and it is in violation of our own Constitution. It betrays the people of Puerto Rico to the interests of colonialism.

I include here a speech I made on this subject last March:

PUERTO RICAN INDEPENDENCE

(A speech by Congressman VITO MARCANTONIO)

PUERTO RICAN INDEPENDENCE VERSUS THE NERO OF FORTALEZA—HIS SATURNALIA OF CORRUPTION AND HIS OPERATION BOOBY TRAP

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, the Honorable FERNÓS-ISERN, introduced the other day H. R. 7674. The bill is described as a bill to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

The mere fact that this bill was introduced is a confession on the part of the present rulers of Puerto Rico that the Puerto Rican people are restive under the present colonial status, and that they no longer want any part of it.

The question of colonialism in Puerto Rico, however, will not be solved by H. R. 7674. This bill is an evasion of the real question. It dodges the issue and is a form of escapism, an attempt to put to sleep the aspirations of the Puerto Rican people for democracy and independence. It is a snare and a delusion and is intended to perpetuate the present system of imperialism imposed on the Puerto Rican people by selfish interests in these United States.

What this bill actually is can be found in the words of Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN in a statement he inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Tuesday, March 14, 1950:

"The Congress of the United States since 1900 has provided for the operation of Federal laws in Puerto Rico. It has determined the economic relationships to exist between Puerto Rico and the mainland. It has determined that the people of Puerto Rico are United States citizens. Such legal and economic provisions of our organic act the people of Puerto Rico are not aiming to disturb. Rather, they wish to reaffirm them and expressly register their consent to their application."

This is an admission on the part of the author of the bill that its purpose is to perpetuate the present system of colonialism under which the people of Puerto Rico are now suffering.

Then, again, in the same statement inserted in the RECORD, Tuesday, March 14, 1950, the gentleman from Puerto Rico [Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN] again says:

"The Federal provisions of the present organic act would be reaffirmed under my bill. They are needful regulations for the establishment and maintenance of proper relations between the island and the mainland by the Federal Government."

In the light of this language of the author, and in the light of the language of the bill, the conclusion is inescapable that the bill is a meaningless gesture submitted for the sole purpose of negating the desire of the people of Puerto Rico for democracy and independence; it seeks to divert the attention of the people from the issue of independence. Here is a bill that does not even ask for statehood. It is a supine reaffirmation of the status quo in Puerto Rico under the guise of a meaningless self-government.

This proposal of the Muñoz Marín administration cannot be accepted as having been offered in good faith. Mr. Muñoz Marín knows better than to expect the establishment of a commonwealth which cannot be established under the provisions of our Constitution.

Operation desperation

This last proposal of Muñoz Marín can be described as operation desperation on the part of those who in the past have lead the people to believe that they supported independence, when they were out of power, and now when confronted with responsibility of office employ this artifice to renege on past promises and declarations for independence.

As against this empty gesture, I today have reintroduced my independence bill.

Mr. Speaker, in order to pass honest judgment on this last empty proposal of the Muñoz Marín administration, in contrast with my proposal for genuine independence, I submit that it is of utmost importance that we must first examine our relations with Puerto Rico, that we examine its present government, and that we seek a solution of its most pressing problems.

Puerto Rico was taken over by us by force of arms. This action was subsequently ratified by the Treaty of Paris in 1898. As a result Puerto Rico is a colony of the United States.

When we took over this country, which was discovered by Columbus in 1492, and which was under the jurisdiction of Spain until 1898, the Puerto Rican people had won over from Spain, through centuries of struggle, an autonomous charter which guaranteed the people substantial sovereignty. Under that charter the people of Puerto Rico had complete home rule, and, besides, had the power of making their own tariff laws and of entering into commercial trade agreements with other countries. The autonomous charter could not be revoked or amended but on the petition of the Puerto Rican Parliament.

We substituted for the autonomous government which the Puerto Ricans had won over from Spain, a colonial form of government. Under our present relationship, which the Fernós-Isern bill would not change, Puerto Rico, according to our Supreme Court, "belongs to but does not form part of the United States." The government of Puerto Rico is organized under an organic act passed by this Congress, the Jones Act, which can be amended or annulled by us without consulting the people of Puerto Rico. The laws passed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico can be amended, suspended, or revoked by Congress. Every law approved by the legislature must be sent to this Congress which can exercise its veto power over them. The Supreme Court of the United States can declare unconstitutional the laws passed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico. The President of the United States holds a veto power over the Puerto Rico Legislature. The President of the United States appoints the judges of the supreme court, the auditor for Puerto Rico, and all Federal officials in the island, including the judge of the Federal court. Appeals are taken from the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico to the circuit court of appeals for the first circuit in Boston. We have exclusive jurisdiction in such vital matters as bankruptcy, navigation, air law, radio, immigration, conscription—in time of peace and of war—and other matters. The structure within which the Puerto Rican government operates cannot be altered, annulled, or in any way modified by the people of Puerto Rico.

We have encircled Puerto Rico within our tariff walls. We have imposed upon that country the coastwise shipping laws. We bind the Puerto Ricans with the treaties we negotiated without their participation in such negotiations. We can force Puerto Rico, as we have done twice through the past 50 years, into a war without consulting them in advance, and we can take over their territory, as we have done on numerous occasions in spite of the great need that they have for land, for air, naval, military, and submarine needs of ours.

All this the Muñoz Marín empty proposal for alleged self-government would perpetuate. All this the Muñoz Marín government accepts. All this would be continued, this status quo would be made permanent under H. R. 7674. Not one iota of this colonialism that I have described would be changed by the recent Fernós-Isern-Muñoz Marín proposal.

Let me remind you that the Puerto Rican people have no representation in this Congress. The Puerto Rican people are allowed only to send here a Resident Commissioner who has a voice in matters affecting Puerto Rico, but who has no vote.

This, too, would be perpetuated under Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN'S bill. It is shameful and tragic that Mr. Muñoz Marín has tried to lead people here in Washington to believe that the Puerto Ricans give their blessing to this system of colonialism which I am describing, and that they want this system continued through the enactment of H. R. 7674.

Under the Spanish regime at the time we took over Puerto Rico from Spain the people of Puerto Rico had representation in the Spanish Cortes or Parliament. They had representation in the senate and 16 representatives in the Spanish house at Madrid.

We can tax the Puerto Rican people besides having the power to send them to war. Thus we do not only impose upon the Puerto Ricans taxation without representation, but we also impose upon them a tax on the blood of their people.

This, too, Muñoz Marín would perpetuate through the enactment of H. R. 7674.

During the 51 years that Puerto Rico has been under our jurisdiction we have used that island and its people to our advantage. We have established, as I have said before, air, naval, military, and submarine bases in Puerto Rican territory. We have conscripted Puerto Ricans in two wars and have sent them to fight for us in two wars. In the last war over 500,000 Puerto Ricans were drafted, and 80,000 were actually under arms. Many of them were in action and many died for the cause of democracy. As a result of the workings of the tariff laws, and the imposition upon the Puerto Ricans of the coastwise shipping laws, and the denial to them of power to negotiate for reciprocal trade agreements, we have excluded them from world markets. They buy 98 percent of their imports in the United States. In 1948 Puerto Rico bought $337,000,000 in goods from the United States and sold us $199,000,000 worth of goods. The balance of trade thus favors us by $138,000,000. The shipping companies which hold a monopoly in Puerto Rico have made huge profits in the island during the last half century. This can be said also of our banks which are doing business in the island, of the insurance companies, of the Wall Street financial interests, and of several other big American concerns. We have found in Puerto Rico an outlet for our rice, our beans, our codfish, our shoes, clothes, manufactured products, and many other items which number over 1,000.

Again, all this is not changed one iota by the Muñoz Marín proposal. In fact, H. R. 7674 accepts this form of exploitation.

Facts about sugar

Besides, Congress does not allow Puerto Rico to refine but 15 percent of its total production of sugar. The other 85 percent is refined in the United States by our refiners at a loss to Puerto Rico of over $30,000,000. This is an outright discrimination excercised by this Congress against the Puerto Rican people, which exemplifies the colonial status of the island.

Here again the last Muñoz Marín empty gesture, H. R. 7674, does not attempt to remedy this situation, nor provide any means for remedying it.

Furthermore, under the Sugar Act passed by this Congress, the Federal Department of Agriculture has fixed for Puerto Rico an annual export quota of 910,000 tons of sugar, and an annual domestic quota of 100,000 tons. Puerto Rico produced 1,277,482 tons in 1949. Ninety-six thousand tons of excess are in the hands of Puerto Rican producers today. It is estimated that at the end of 1950 there will be an excess of 250,000 tons in the hands of Puerto Rican producers. Even though the annual consumption of sugar in the United States has gone up to 7,800,000 tons, the basic quota of Puerto Rico has not been increased substantially. This has been so because the Sugar Act passed by this Congress provides that the normal Puerto Rican quota of 910,000 tons a year can be reduced if the normal consumption, as fixed by the United States Department of Agriculture, is less than 7,000,000 tons, while no provision is made for an increase when the annual consumption goes over 7,000,000 tons a year.

Here again let me remind the people of Puerto Rico that with the adoption of H. R. 7674 this situation with respect to sugar will not be changed, and that the Puerto Rican sugar quota will continue to be dependent on the will of the Congress of the United States.

Under our rule the people of Puerto Rico have seen the destruction of their coffee trade. That has been so because we offer no tariff protection to coffee. We do that because we produce no coffee in the United States. Our tariff is drafted to protect our crops. If we protect sugar which is a Puerto Rican product, it is because we produce 2,000,000 tons of sugar right here in the United States. If we buy Puerto Rican sugar it is because we have a normal consumption of 7,000,000 tons a year. Coffee was one of the most important cash products to Puerto Rico in 1898 when Puerto Rico had a market for its well-known product in 17 nations. Today Puerto Rico not only is not a coffee-exporting country, but it imports coffee from the United States, which is not a coffee-producing nation. We buy coffee from Brazil and other countries and sell it to the people of Puerto Rico. Today, when the price of coffee has gone up, the Puerto Rican people have been unable to take advantage of the world situation because the coffee growers are ruined. It is important to point out that over 15 percent of the Puerto Rican people live on the production of the coffee-producing region.

Furthermore we afford no real protection to the Puerto Rican tobacco. We fix the price of the articles we sell the Puerto Ricans and of the articles which they sell us. In short, we have a strangle hold upon the Puerto Rican economy and have reduced that country to a state of misery and abysmal poverty.

Neither Puerto Rican coffee nor Puerto Rican tobacco can be protected with the enactment of H. R. 7674. These products will remain the victims of our strangle hold upon the economy of Puerto Rico. So that H. R. 7674 is definitely an empty gesture. It fails to deal with the fundamental problems of Puerto Rico. It fails to protect Puerto Rican economy. It fails to relieve Puerto Rico from the yoke of imperialism and colonial exploitation under which it is suffering. It fails to establish democracy for Puerto Rico, and therefore fails to give Puerto Rico self-government in the real sense of the word.

Again I repeat the Muñoz Marín proposal perpetuates one of the worst forms of colonial exploitation.

Under the colonial system of exploitation which I have just described, we have now in Puerto Rico over 300,000 unemployed out of a total population of 2,200,000 inhabitants. That would amount, more or less, to 21,000,000 unemployed in the United States.

One of the vicious results of this system of exploitation is that we have right now in Puerto Rico 309,000 children of school age without school facilities out of a school population of 688,000 children. The rest do not receive adequate education. They just go to school for half a day. From 6 to 7 persons out of 100 graduate from high school under the half-a-day training program in force. The average person in the rural areas receives the equivalent of 2 years' schooling in the United States, for the average person in Puerto Rico goes to school for 4 years on a half-day basis. The people of Puerto Rico do not have the educational facilities offered to the citizens of the poorest State in the United States.

The conclusions stated above are not my own. They are the conclusions arrived at recently by a committee of experts of Columbia University hired by the government of Puerto Rico to make a survey of the educational facilities of the people of the island.

We have in Puerto Rico the worst slums of the Western Hemisphere. The tourist going to the islands is greeted by the slum called La Perla—the Pearl. When he departs he is bade farewell by El Fangrito—Little Mud.

La Perla and El Fangrito are two of the typical slums of the island. Last December saw destruction and misery in some of the slums of the island when an unusually high tide of the Atlantic wiped away many of the houses in La Perla, San Juan, Palo Seco in Toa Baja and Palmarito and other places in the city of Arecibo.

There exists a municipal hospital system in Puerto Rico which has been characterized by the health commissioner of the island, Dr. Juan A. Pons, as one which offers the people a service worse than the one given its dogs in a hospital for animals.

About three-quarters of the total population of Puerto Rico is at present ill-clothed and ill-housed.

To help the people of Puerto Rico this Congress has made no appropriation for educational facilities. We have not extended to the island the total benefits of the Social Security Act. We have done nothing to correct the transportation conditions in the island. We have limited, as I said before, the production and refining of sugar. We have done nothing to protect coffee and tobacco production, while we have directed obstacles in the path of the development of the needle-trade industry, which is undergoing right now a crisis.

Program

To take care of the immediate needs of the Puerto Rican people it is imperative that we enact a program which will help these people to face the impending crisis. Among the immediate measures which should be adopted are the following:

First. Allow Puerto Rico to refine its sugar production.

Second. Increase the Puerto Rican sugar quota to absorb present and estimated excess. This requires an amendment to the Sugar Act which would provide "that in the event that the sugar consumption of the United States is considered by the United States Department of Agriculture to be in excess of 7,000,000 tons a year, the basic quota of Puerto Rico of 910,000 tons be raised accordingly."

Another solution would be to permit the Puerto Rican producers to sell their excess in the world market at 1 cent less than the price and have Congress appropriate $6,000,000 to compensate the Puerto Rican producers for their loss.

Third. Extend to Puerto Rico all the benefits of the Social Security Act.

Fourth. Extend to Puerto Rico Federal aid to an amount not less than $10,000,000 to extend its educational facilities.

Fifth. Legislate to help in a program of coffee and tobacco rehabilitation.

Sixth. Take measures to end discrimination against Puerto Rican workers in the United States. Enact a genuine FEPC bill.

Seventh. Give back to the people of Vieques the land which has been taken away from them by the United States Navy. This land is not used at the present time by the Navy, and the people of Vieques have been displaced en masse from their homes and they are undergoing a terrible plight. During last Christmas the mayor of Vieques sent a message to the Governor of Puerto Rico telling him that the people of Vieques were so desperate that they were asking only for a Christmas dinner.

Eighth. Appropriate money for the establishment of a Federal Public Works program on a large scale to relieve the unemployed.

To solve the problem of Puerto Rico on a permanent basis it is imperative that colonialism be ended in the island, and that the people of Puerto Rico be allowed to draft their own constitution as a free an independent nation, and not as a colony as provided in H. R. 7674. Provisons should be taken at the adoption of my independence bill to insure the transformation of the colonial economy which we have developed in Puerto Rico since 1898 into the economy of a free and independent nation.

The trend in our time is toward the liquidation of colonialism everywhere and the granting of recognition to new and independent nations, to work together under the framework of the United Nations. The trend is also toward international cooperation and toward the offering of help to small nations, so that they can better develop their economies, and so that they can better help in the building of a better world.

The Muñoz Marín-Fernós-Isern proposal runs counter to this trend, and it is therefore reactionary and imbedded in the decayed structure of colonialism.

The people of Puerto Rico can only solve their economic problem through industrialization. In order to develop a wide program of industrialization they must have power to make their own tariff laws, to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements, to make their own coastwise shipping laws, and to have complete jurisdiction over their territory and land, their waters, their air, and their people. They cannot have these powers under colonialism. They cannot have these powers under H. R. 7674. They cannot have these powers under statehood. They can only have these powers under their own sovereignty in a free and independent nation, a nation able to enter into negotiation with other countries on a basis of equality and of justice.

What Puerto Rico needs to solve its problems is sovereignty—full sovereignty. The Muñoz Marín proposal denies even limited sovereignty to the people of Puerto Rico.

The people and Government of the United States are bound to help the people of Puerto Rico. It is our responsibility because we have exploited them for over half a century. It is our responsibility because we have cut them off from world markets. It is our responsibility because we have made them dependent on our own economy. It is our responsibilty because they have helped fight two of our wars. It is our responsibility because they are a hard-working and progressive people, with a noble tradition of solidarity in the Western Hemisphere, and with a noble cultural heritage.

The people and Government of the United States cannot and will not deny help to a free Republic of Puerto Rico. I am confident that Americans will assist the people of Puerto Rico in their struggle for independence when they are given a true picture of our relations with Puerto Rico.

We have a false picture in Congress and in the United States of what has been going on in Puerto Rico, because the colonial government there is headed by a governor who is working hand in hand with imperialistic interests, and whose job it is to give the impression to the people of the United States and to the world that Puerto Rico is not a colony, but a country of free and contented people to whom we have extended a fair deal.

The name of that man is Luis Muñoz Marín. Under his government we have seen floundering the most extravagant, luxurious, pompous, and irresponsible bureaucratic government that anyone can imagine.

This character Muñoz Marín may be accurately described as the Nero of La Fortaleza—the Governor's palace. While his people starve, and at their expense, he has built for himself a false reputation here in the United States as a champion of the jibaros—peasants—of Puerto Rico, when as a matter of fact, like Nero, he ignores their suffering and lives well at their expense.

This man came to power as a champion of independence, as a champion of the under dog, as a champion of simple, austere life in public service. And now he is a renegade of independence, he is working hand in hand with the Wall Street crowd, and he has established in the island an era of the most extravagant and expensive government that the people of Puerto Rico have ever seen. He has used public money for his own personal propaganda. He pays the publicity agent, Hamilton Wright, $140,000 a year. Incidentally, some of the newspapers in the United States are beneficiaries of this propaganda slush fund. One of the chief apologists for Muñoz Marín is the New York Herald Tribune. An examination of the advertising in the New York Herald Tribune will expose it as one of the chief beneficiaries of this huge propaganda fund which is squeezed out of the bloodless veins of the people of Puerto Rico. Of course the propaganda slush fund is clothed under the guise of propaganda for Puerto Rican products, but it is actually personal propaganda for Luis Muñoz Marín, and for the colonial system. Most of the propaganda from Puerto Rico which we read centers around Muñoz Marín to promote him personally, and to alibi the present system of colonial exploitation. Besides the money paid as a retainer, thousands and thousands of dollars are spent in publicity in American magazines and periodicals to promote Muñoz Marín personally, and to cover up indecent exploitation of the Puerto Rican people under the present colonial status.

This man uses public money for his personal propaganda without accounting to the people of Puerto Rico. His inauguration last year was the most grandiose, Roman circus, carnival-like festivity which anyone has ever seen. Four hundred people from all over Latin America and the United States were invited to the ceremonies, and all the expenses were paid by the people of Puerto Rico, from air transportation, hotel accommodations, taxis, and for all kinds of extra entertainment. Up to this time nobody knows exactly the amount of money which was expended during this inauguration, but it is known that an enormous amount of money was expended and that the fees far exceeded the appropriation for the expenses of the inauguration for the President of the United States. The legislature did not make any appropriation in advance for these ceremonies. After they had taken place bills of deficiency were sent to the legislature without any specific accounting being given, and they were approved by the legislature without discussion of the specific items and amounts, and in the midst of a standing applause of the stooges of Muñoz Marín in the legislature.

With this inauguration there was inaugurated in Puerto Rico one of the worst saturnalias of corruption in the history of governments.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to state right here, however, that neither Mr. Muñoz Marín nor his administration are the product of Puerto Rico. They are the product of colonial exploitation. They are the minions of our colonial status imposed on the people of Puerto Rico. Their actions do not reflect on either the integrity or the honor of the people of Puerto Rico. They merely prove again that puppets of imperialism never serve the best interests of their people.

Here is some more on Mr. Muñoz Marín.

Every week different persons from various places are invited to stay with Muñoz Marín at the Governor's palace known as La Fortaleza. There again the sole purpose is that of obtaining personal publicity and to cover up for colonialism. No account for the parties nor for the expenses is given to the people. The entertainment is most extravagant. Members of the House who have been entertained at La Fortaleza will bear me out. However, I doubt if the visiting Congressmen knew that the entertainment came out of the pockets of the suffering people of Puerto Rico. This type of entertainment is shocking because Puerto Rico is poor and its people are poor. All this despite the preelection promises of Muñoz Marín to institute a program of austerity and simplicity in the public life of that country.

Nero of Fortaleza

This Nero of Fortaleza has at at his disposal large numbers of automobiles. His personal bodyguard is unprecedented in size. The number of attendants and retainers at Fortaleza have been abnormally increased, and so has the number of political parasites on the governmental structure rapidly multiplied.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I say that all this is a byproduct of our colonial status and not the product of the people of Puerto Rico.

Let me call the attention of the Members of this House who are so critical of large Government expenditures here to the following salaries paid to the favorites of this colonial emperor of ours in Puerto Rico. Here is a list of salaries which would make even our local grafters gasp:

Antonio Luchetti, head of the Water Resources Authority	$30,000
(This man also gets expenses, automobile, chauffeur, and a residence which is a palace.)
Rafael Buscaglia, president, Development Bank	30,000
Esteban Bird, vice president, Development Bank	28,000
E. R. Bonniwell, finance director, Development Bank (plus expenses)	22,000
J. R. Hanson, manager, Glass Factory of the Puerto Rico Industrial Development Co	20,000
Teodoro Moscoso, president, Puerto Rico Development Co	18,000
Sergio Cuevas Bustamante, director, Puerto Rico Aqueduct Service	15,000
Thomas A. Fennell, manager, Agricultural Co. of Puerto Rico (plus expenses)	12,000
(Mr. Fennell was dropped as manager after terrific public protest, but was retained as an absentee expert at a salary, according to my information, of $5,000.)
Jose Acosta Velarde, director, Land Authority	12,000
Moriano Ramirez, vice president, Development Co	12,000
David Ramirez, vice president, Development Co. (this officer was dropped later on)	12,000
Rafael Fernandez Garcia, vice president, Development Co	12,000
Homer J. Miller, manager, Paper Factory of Development Co. (this factory closed because of huge deficit and lack of market)	12,000

The information that I am herewith revealing was dug up by an economist, Eliezer Curet Cuevas, while working for a Puerto Rican newspaper, El Mundo, and the information was published in that paper on January 23, 1949. He pointed out that 17 executives of the Puerto Rican government and the various government corporations and authorities are receiving salaries amounting to approximately $300,000 a year.

On the other hand, Mr. Cuevas pointed out that the salaries received by the small government employees had been reduced from 1940 to 1948. That is so because the cost of living in Puerto Rico has increased in the island so much faster than the salaries of the small employees.

There are other salaries, the exact amounts of which I do not have. I understand that many of the salaries I have recited, as well as others, have been raised since Mr. Cuevas published his article on January 23, 1949.

Accompanying this extravaganza of fancy salaries, let us see what the Muñoz Marín government has done with respect to government finances.

Under the leadership of Muñoz Marín, the government has embarked on a loan program from Wall Street. It has issued bonds which were sold in Wall Street for $50,000,000 at a very high interest rate. It is negotiating an additional loan for this agency, the Water Resources Authority. To guarantee these bonds they pledge the property of the Water Resources Authority. It also issued bonds which it sold in Wall Street in the amount of $22,700,000, also at a high interest rate for the Aqueduct and Sewage Service of Puerto Rico. It negotiated this loan for $22,700,000 even though they are expending the money at the rate of about $4,000,000 a year—the balance is deposited in private banks and draws no interest, while the people of Puerto Rico are paying an interest rate on the total amount of the bonds.

It should be pointed out that Mr. Bonniwell, the financial adviser of the Government of Puerto Rico, was related to the bond firm of Wall Street, B. J. Van Ingen & Co. That firm negotiated the first $20,000,000 bonds for the Water Resources Authority when Mr. Bonniwell was connected with the firm. After that he went to work with the government of Puerto Rico and that firm participated in the negotiation of the $22,700,000 in bonds negotiated by the Aqueduct and Sewage Service. The commission which negotiated the bonds is fixed by the government bank of which Mr. Bonniwell is financial adviser.

While the people's finance is being squandered and the people's financial ability is being exploited, let us see how the local government itself operates, and again here I repeat, this is not the product of the people of Puerto Rico but the product of colonialism in its worst form.

Mr. Muñoz Marín has tried to centralize in his own hands all the government of Puerto Rico. Now he is planning to eliminate the municipal assemblies and usurp the powers of the municipal officers—to be controlled by the Governor.

The most important decisions of the legislature are made at dinners which are given at La Fortaleza to the legislators by Mr. Muñoz Marín. The legislators will not pass bills which have not the previous approval of Muñoz. Actually every bill is written completely at La Fortaleza.

Now, as to the fundamental economy of Puerto Rico itself, let us examine the following:

Because of the special war conditions, huge amounts of moneys entered the government of Puerto Rico. According to a report which was filed by the governor of Puerto Rico before the United Nations, from June 30, 1940 to June 30, 1949, $713,000,000 went to the treasury of Puerto Rico. From this $144,000,000 were appropriated for the insular agencies and authorities. Besides, these agencies received $72,000,000 from the sale of bonds. In spite of these bonds, Muñoz Marín has done nothing to promote in a fundamental way the Puerto Rican economy. This has been partly so because of the inner inequities of the colonial structure and partly so because of the incompetence of Muñoz Marín, and because of this extravagant and expensive government, and his extravagant and expensive way of living.

Out of the money received, he appropriated $15,000,000 for the Agriculture Development Co. which was a flop. The money, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Fennell, a totally incompetent person, was squandered.

Eleven million dollars were appropriated for five government plants—cement, paper, glass, shoe, and ceramics. All of these plants except the cement plant have operated at a deficit. The glass plant ceased its operation last August because of lack of market. The other 4 employ only 820 workers.

This is the story of the industrialization program of Muñoz Marín which has proven to be a complete failure.

Another agency of the government, the transportation authority, which is a government monopoly of transportation within the metropolitan zone—that is, San Juan and surroundings, including Rio Piedras—gives nothing but inefficient service and it has been operating at a deficit of over $1,000,000.

Fundamentally, all these agencies and especially the land authority are used for political purposes. Of course, I am in favor of the principle involved in the establishing and functioning of all these authorities. I have defended the land authority. I have defended also the land policies of the government of Puerto Rico, up to and including the establishment of the land authority. I have favored the proportional benefit fund. I have also favored the water resources authority and others. But I am against the use of the land authority as a political agency, and I am against the mortgage of the properties of the water resources authority and of the aqueducts to the Wall Street crowd. The water resources were formerly in the hands of the Puerto Rican Railway Light & Power Co. Now they are in the hands of the bondholders of Wall Street. The same can be said of the aqueducts of Puerto Rico. As a result of that the water rates and the electric light rates have gone up to the extent that protest demonstrations have been organized by consumers in Puerto Rico.

Muñoz Marín has changed the whole philosophy under which the authorities were created, and has used them to his political advantage. To do this he has allied himself with Wall Street vested interests and he is today their stooge and servant. He has mortgaged these authorities to Wall Street interests.

Operation booby trap

We have heard through the fancy, high-paid advertising, a great deal about Operation Boot Strap, but to the people of Puerto Rico the Muñoz Marín administration can be called Operation Booby Trap. The following story of the Caribe Hilton Hotel demonstrates what I mean when I say the Muñoz Marín administration is Operation Booby Trap for the people of Puerto Rico.

The story on the Caribe Hilton Hotel is an example of the Government's policies to attract industries. The Government of Puerto Rico built the hotel at a cost of $7,000,000. The hotel has 300 rooms. Then, after it was built, the Government leased the hotel to the Hilton Hotel Corp. on a 20-year lease.

Muñoz Marín has not even revealed the amount for which the hotel was leased, even though the people have asked for this information. This is part of the policy of secrecy in the government—the people are never given information about the way the money is expended. Everything that was used, including furniture, was flown from the United States. Even the sugar came from the United States to Puerto Rico, and also most of the employees were taken from the United States to Puerto Rico. The expenses for propaganda, as announced by the management, went over $150,000, and the Government of Puerto Rico pays half of that amount. Up to this time they have paid $75,000.

The government policy to attract industries to Puerto Rico is based on the principle of constructing the plans for the firms to go into Puerto Rico and to equip them. Then the firms are tax-exempt for a period of 12 years. These firms, like Textron, want a guaranty that the minimum salary will not be raised, so that these firms expect to do business on the basis of paying starvation wages to the workers of Puerto Rico. Textron recently said that if the minimum wage is increased from the 25 cents an hour which they are paying now they will move from Puerto Rico.

The Caribe Hilton Hotel was also exempted from paying taxes.

All these industries which may go to Puerto Rico can leave the island whenever they choose and leave the Puerto Ricans with all the expenses already incurred. So we can see that all this industrialization program of Muñoz Marin is just hooey. It is, I repeat, not Operation Boot Strap, but Operation Booby Trap for the people of Puerto Rico.

While Muñoz Marín is engaged in Operation Booby Trap for the people of Puerto Rico, let us see what is happening to the people themselves.

The cost of living in Puerto Rico has gone up about 300 percent since 1940, while salaries and wages have had only a slight increase and now are going down. The huge amounts of money which entered the Puerto Rican treasury were because of the revenue on rum and the high taxes collected from the people of Puerto Rico. I would like to here note that in Congress I protected the income from rum for the treasury of Puerto Rico.

There was in general an artificial atmosphere of prosperity because 80,000 Puerto Ricans were under arms and their relatives were receiving benefits; war construction was going on and there were war Government jobs. Muñoz Marín squandered the huge amounts of money received. No permanent works were built by him. No substantial reserve was established. Muñoz Marín received from 1940 to 1948 in his government more money than the total amount of money received by the successive governments of the island from Juan Ponce de Leon, the first governor under Spain, to 1940.

During the war the price of sugar was frozen to prewar prices, 1939. On the other hand no control was put on the items imported from the United States. The result was that while the price of sugar was kept low the price of rice, beans, codfish, lard, meat, butter, bacon, machinery, and so forth, went up to a fantastic level. It has been figured out by economists of great prestige in the island, that because of this the people of Puerto Rico lost an average of $80,000,000 a year since 1940, or about $540,000,000 during the war years.

And again let me repeat, the number of unemployed in Puerto Rico totals 300,000 out of a population of 2,200,000 inhabitants.

Yes, the Muñoz Marín rule is indeed Operation Booby Trap for the people of Puerto Rico.

While the government of Puerto Rico has been so diligent in its extravagant and expensive propaganda, it has taken no measures to insure the safety of the people of Puerto Rico. Last year—1949—we saw the worst disaster in the history of Puerto Rico. There was an air crash in Puntas Arenas where over 50 persons were killed. The lack of supervision at the airport was responsible and we must blame the government of Puerto Rico for this.

There was a fire in San Juan last March—1949—where eight people were burned to death. They were unable to escape because there are no fire escapes in any of the buildings in San Juan and because the entrance halls were blocked by the wares and boxes of small merchants who rent space in these halls.

Last June there was a typical extravagant fiesta which was organized by Felisa Rincon, the appointed city administrator. Because of the big crowd in a structure which was built for dancing, the structure collapsed and two persons were killed and others injured. This accident was due to the negligence of the authorities. It occurred at night. The morning after the accident the whole structure had disappeared, so that the people have never been able to determine what really happened and who was responsible for the accident.

There have been several explosions in Government works belonging to the water-resources authority and workers have lost their lives because of the lack of safety measures and the complete negligence of the Government.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on and recount many more incidents of the neglect of the people of Puerto Rico by its present rulers. I could go on and recite many more phases of the exploitation of the people of Puerto Rico. I shall from time to time recite more chapters from the story of the sordid saturnalia of corruption and graft which now exists under our "Nero of Fortaleza," the puppet of our colonialism.

My purpose in this speech, however, is to establish, which I believe I have done:

First. That H. R. 7674 is an empty gesture and a device to cover up, and to perpetuate the colonialism and exploitation imposed on the people of Puerto Rico by selfish interests in the United States.

Second. That the graft and corruption by the present rulers of Puerto Rico is not the product of the people of Puerto Rico, but the byproduct of the system of colonialism and exploitation under which the people of Puerto Rico are suffering.

Third. That the suggestions which I have made for immediate solution of Puerto Rico's immediate problems are of immediate character and must be enacted immediately to save the Puerto Rican people from further suffering.

Fourth. That the only real solution for Puerto Rico and its problems is to grant to the people of Puerto Rico full sovereignty; the only guaranty which the people of Puerto Rico can have to solve their problems—yes, the full sovereignty of a free and independent nation, and this, I submit, can be achieved by the enactment of my bill.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. EBERHARTER. I, together with some other Members of the House, was down in Puerto Rico a couple of months ago. None of the members of our subcommittee agree at all with the statements made by the gentleman from New York. There was an election in Puerto Rico and the present party got over 60 percent of the votes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Of course, the gentleman spent his time at Fortaleza, the Governor's palace, where he was extravagantly entertained and grossly misled by Muñoz Marín.

Mr. EBERHARTER. I want to say that we went through the country.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Just a moment. Whatever traveling he did in Puerto Rico was done under the Governor's auspices. I doubt if the gentleman was permitted to see much of the havoc caused by colonialism in Puerto Rico. I also doubt whether the gentleman knew that that entertainment was paid for out of the empty pockets of the people of Puerto Rico. These entertainments at Fortaleza by the present Governor of Puerto Rico are very fine. They afford the Members a good time, but at the same time the entertainment helps cover up the real picture of what exists in Puerto Rico. The gentleman from Pennsylvania referred to the election of 1948. I shall discuss even that in another speech soon. However, that is neither here nor there. I challenge the gentleman to refute the facts that I have mentioned in my speech. These facts are uncontrovertible and no amount of hocus-pocus and good times extended by Muñoz Marín to House Members will explain these facts away.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] has expired.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KEARNS].

Mr. KEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to stand in the well of the House this morning and speak favorably for this legislation. I am not going to try to discuss the technical phases of this proposed constitution for the island, but I would like to give the Members my own personal opinions, derived from my visit to Puerto Rico.

I think that the strides that have been made under Governor Marin and under the worthy representation in this House by Dr. FERNÓS-ISERN has certainly told its worth throughout the populace there. I feel that the people of Puerto Rico need some kind of a charter, in this constitution, to enable them to arrive at better government in the island. I think it would help their senate and their house. It would integrate their problems of government on the island. At the present time I think probably both houses flounder, and are not sure what approaches should be made in certain types of legislation. In any event, this does not take away the authority of the United States Congress over what dispositions shall be made for the island, but simply sets them up in a position whereby they can better approach matters in behalf of the island in a better way.

I did not merely go to certain places that I was supposed to while visiting there. I went up the highways and byways. I talked to men in the shops, to men in the streets, to men in the stores, to legislators, and to doctors and school teachers. I visited the schools. I can see a very, very strong trend toward individualism there that is most worth while.

I feel that the present system of government under the leadership of Governor Muñoz Marín is making wonderful strides, and I am greatly pleased with the results of the industry committee there, because that committee, composed of management and labor, work over their problems and they have unity of thought. Once those meetings are over—and that board consists of laymen, labor, and management—I am surprised at how well they are able to arrive at a solution of their problems. We here in the United States frequently have prolonged strikes before results and agreements can be reached. Let me say at this time that I feel that every Member of this House when he votes for this charter of government for this island is doing a very good turn for a people who are trying in every way possible to do the best they can for their own island.

I also would like to report that I feel there is no effort being made in any way for statehood; that the people of Puerto Rico are not interested in statehood; they are loyal Americans and want to be always an integral part of the mainland and are in no way planning to set up any movement for statehood.

Let me also say that the development company in Puerto Rico has built industries and supplied jobs. It has done a wonderful piece of work. I have talked with all of the members of that company. They take their money, build plants, train employees, then turn it over to private management, take that capital and reinvest it in some other industry. The average Puerto Rican is industrious, and I believe this Congress would make a very, very good beginning in helping those people feel that they are important and that they are making a great contribution to the United States of America.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 8 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I am wholeheartedly in favor of the bill, S. 3336.

I wish categorically to deny the statement that has been made to the effect that this bill is a snare, a delusion, and a fraud. I wish to say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] that that is not true; and he is sufficiently intelligent to know that he cannot make that statement stand up before the public of this country.

We are not offering the people of Puerto Rico anything except the right to vote on a constitution to be submitted to the President of the United States who, in turn, is to submit it to the Congress of the United States for approval.

We have lived with these Puerto Ricans for approximately 50 years. They are acquainted with our customs; they have lived for several decades under an organic act which Congress approved and sent down to them; they know what a constitutional representative form of government is; they are citizens of the United States, and they have sufficient sense and intelligence, and loyalty, and patriotism to design a constitution and return it to us which will square with the Constitution of the United States. If they are not able to do that at the present time, after 50 years under the American flag, the good Lord certainly knows that it is time for us to find out, first, what kind of guardians we are and, second, what kind of people we have under the American flag. I am, therefore, in favor of giving them a chance further to demonstrate, as they have heretofore demonstrated, that they are still good American citizens, and that they are still willing to do the right and square thing for themselves and the other people there. This bill will give them another chance to so demonstrate.

What was said in the 1948 election and what appeared in the 1948 election literature I would assume was about what appeared in the Democratic and Republican literature and campaign promises here in the States. But this is not a bill to settle that argument. Let those who run for office down there promise what they please and then answer to the electorate.

Puerto Rico at the present time is primarily an agricultural community. Tremendous progress is being made toward industrializing Puerto Rico. I do not want Puerto Rico to become exclusively an industrial shop because somebody is going to have to produce the food if all of these industrial workers are going to eat. That applies also throughout the world, in countries like India, Pakistan, and all of these other countries that seem to have the idea everybody can work in a factory and everyone leave the farm. You are not going to get away without the production of foodstuff. Somebody will have to do it. So some food will have to be produced in Puerto Rico along with industrial activity.

In the past 15 to 18 months new industries like chinaware, shoes, clothing, radios, gloves, men's low-priced sweaters and short jackets, men's clothing, textiles, men's high-priced dress shirts that sell for $8 to $10 a shirt in these very classy stores, such as Garfinckel, Woodward & Lothrop, Macy of San Francisco and Fifth Avenue stores in New York: They are selling the products of the brain and the handiwork of young Puerto Rican men and women who have come into these new industries in these recent months and many of whom never before saw a production line. They are today demonstrating what they can do under our supervision. I have visited many of these shops and manufacturing plants I am talking about in Puerto Rico. I have seen the labels being put on the goods. I have seen the labels being put on the packages shipped to these stores I am talking about. Their learners and apprentices down there are as active, as keen, and as adept as they are in the United States, and I do not know but what they are going to show up much better than some of ours here at the present time because the young Puerto Ricans are not yet fully indoctrinated with some of the slow-down operations that we have here in the United States.

Puerto Rico has no substantial natural resources, such as metals, oil, forest products, and so on down the line. They do have a lot of resources in the form of good intelligent labor. It so happens that we have a Fair Labor Standards Act in the United States which extends to Puerto Rico; it so happens that Puerto Rico has a good labor department of its own; it so happens that the wisdom of the House and Senate put in the Fair Labor Standards Act provisions which call for flexibility so that the people of Puerto Rico can build up these industries and supervise wages, thus protecting the people against the exploitation that has been referred to. Those labor laws are in operation and they are working out fairly well.

Only a few weeks ago when I addressed a joint session of the Puerto Rican Legislature, which was attended by Members of the Senate and House, the Supreme Court, the mayor of San Juan, and the Governor's staff, I said this to them and almost in these exact words: "If the Labor Department of the United States with the Congress and the Labor Department of Puerto Rico with the administration in power will let these new industries of Puerto Rico get their roots firmly established in the economic soil of Puerto Rico, there will be lots of progress and lots of production and good wages and a much higher standard of living for the people in that area."

Then I proceeded to point out that if some very foolish action were taken in the way, for instance, of first killing the china industry of Puerto Rico by giving a 100-percent increase in wages to apprentices before the factory even got into full production, all of this expansion of industry program that is under way could be killed on just one decision involving one operation in one industry.

Now, that is what they can do. Here it is several months since we passed the Fair Labor Standards Act, and that bad thing has not happened yet, and I hope it will not happen.

Reference was made to the terrible accident that happened in the Atlantic off of Florida the other day where a plane went down and the lives of several Puerto Ricans were lost. Here is my complete file on that situation. And, I do not mind saying to the House and stating the fact that up in my district I have been charged with being responsible for that accident. I am not proud of the charge, but I think you should have the facts on it. Why, a lot of people up there have been told that I am one of those people who advocate the feeding of sharks with human flesh, if you can imagine anything more asinine than that. For more than 15 years I have been attempting to get the people of the United States and the people of Puerto Rico to let Puerto Ricans, citizens of the United States, come to this country and enjoy some of our good jobs and good wages. During this last spring the good farm people of Michigan and Ohio made a contract with the Department of Labor of Puerto Rico, which was approved by the Governor of Puerto Rico, to move about 5,000 agricultural workers into the United States during the idle agricultural season in Puerto Rico so that they could work here and return to their cane fields this coming November. A contract was made with one of the airplane charter companies, not scheduled fliers, to move those people. The firm who moved those people has been moving people from Puerto Rico by chartered service for some years. They have moved thousands of them into the truck-farming areas of the Atlantic seaboard, New Jersey, and Maryland; thousands of them. The officials of that company, Westair Transport, were in my office the other day and I inquired categorically, "Did you ever before have an accident of this nature?" The reply was "No." There was another accident off San Juan Harbor, but not to this company. So, the farmers out in Michigan and Ohio made a contract with this charter company to move these people into the Tri-cities Airport, which serves my home town, and Bay City, Mich., the home of the Honorable ROY WOODRUFF, and Midland, the home of Dow Chemical Co.; one of the finest airports in the country. This charter company made several trips in there, and the accident occurred, and the Governor of Puerto Rico issued an order that no more contract labor move by nonscheduled airplanes. So, when the Governor issued that order, I sent a cablegram to him, a copy of which I have here. It is not confidential information; it has been released to the press. That was June 8. Here is the cablegram. I told him what the situation was and I said, "Let us see if we cannot fix it so that these 4,200 Puerto Ricans can come up here and work." He immediately contacted Pan American Service and the Eastern Air Lines, Eddie Rickenbacker's company, and Pan American and Eastern produced nine super de luxe four-motor planes that gave good, fine service, and moved those 4,200 people in there, and, as I understand from official sources, it was the greatest air lift of human cargo in peacetime in all history. Thousands and thousands of people came to that airport and witnessed Pan American's and Eastern's magnificent handling of this movement. No accident; no trouble. But, while that was going on, Northwest Air Lines had an accident out in Lake Michigan. Fifty-eight lives were lost. There were a few pieces of debris from the plane, one or two blankets out of the plane, and a few pieces of human bodies.

Who was the cause of that accident? Perhaps within 3 or 4 days I may be charged with having blown up that plane. God only knows what the CIO is going to charge me with in the campaign that is going on up in Michigan. So some very unusual and strange things evolve. I think, perhaps, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] at one time thought I might have been responsible for the accident off in the Atlantic a few days ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman on that point, not to make a speech.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Yes, on the question of the accident. I made no charge against the gentleman, and the gentleman knows that.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman got awfully close to it up before the Rules Committee the other day, and I corrected him on it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I said then and I say now that the investigation reveals, and this is official——

Mr. CRAWFORD. Submit the official report and we will stand on the report.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I will give it to the gentleman now.

Mr. CRAWFORD. No; the gentleman will submit the official report.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The plane was overloaded by 2,335 pounds.

Mr. CRAWFORD. We will get the report from the CAB. They are the ones who regulate these planes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The plane was overloaded by 2,335 pounds. Those responsible for that, in my opinion, are guilty of murder.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The CAB issues the rules and regulations under which airplanes fly, and the CAA issues rules and regulations. The only protection you and I have as passengers on an airplane is the rules and regulations of the CAA, the CAB, and the common sense of the operating crew of the company. That is all the protection we have. You have your protection on the trains under the ICC, and on the busses under the ICC and the State utilities commissions, and so forth. So we have to rely on the supervisory authorities.

Going back to this bill, if we have any faith whatsoever in what we have been preaching to the world in World War I and World War II we ought to be willing to let the people under the American flag determine something about the form of government under which they live. This bill is not for statehood, this is not for independence. At no time have I ever come to a conclusion where I thought Puerto Rico could ever support statehood. Certainly Puerto Rico cannot support any type of independence. She would have to be a puppet of some other country. But Puerto Rico can be a colonial possession and have a great deal to say about her own government, under which the Puerto Ricans live.

Two years ago under Republican control of the House and the other body we gave Puerto Rico a chance to elect its own Governor. Prior to that Puerto Rican Governors had been supplied mostly on the basis of political debt payments. They elected a good Governor. He is doing a fine job. He is a Puerto Rican. He is doing just as good a job for his area as the governors of our States are doing for their areas.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Something has been said here with respect to the 300,000 unemployed in Puerto Rico. I think it has been said that those people are unemployed because Puerto Rico is a colony.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I get the gentleman's point. The way to remove unemployment in Puerto Rico is to let those citizens come to the United States and fill some of our shortages up here. That is exactly the program I have been describing. I hope that next year we can induce the farmers of the United States and the Government of Puerto Rico to move a minimum of 20,000 Puerto Rican agricultural workers into the United States, and move them by super-deluxe planes. These 5,000 up here at the present time will have to be moved back in October or November. We should make the preparations, and we should have the CAB, who issues the certifications for these planes to travel, establish a rate and create some competition between San Juan and New York City, so that these people can move at reasonable costs of travel instead of paying the high prices they have had to pay heretofore.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. What the gentleman said about the need to have these people from Puerto Rico for agricultural labor is accurate, but the difficulty is that we tried to get some of them to work out in the Midwest in the canning industry. But you cannot keep them there. They all want to go to New York.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes; and we have too many of them up there now.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. EBERHARTER. It is my personal opinion, from my observation, that if Puerto Rico was independent and had its sovereignty, there would be many times more unemployment than they have at present.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Why, there would be ten times as much. We would have a situation like we have in the Philippines. We gave the Filipinos their independence 50 years too soon. I never agreed to it; I always opposed it. They are just a puppet of the United States; as a result of the development of the war. We have to underwrite the Filipinos. Of course, I support that 100 percent. I would go in there with every kind of protection, as I said the other day, and I am willing to be taxed for it and all that goes with it, because I do not propose to surrender the Philippine Government to the Russians.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. ENGLE of California. The newly elected president of Puerto Rico is for this bill, is he not?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman mean the Governor?

Mr. ENGLE of California. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. He certainly is.

Mr. ENGLE of California. And he has advocated it before the committee?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.

Mr. ENGLE of California. And if he is doing something that the people do not like, why they can beat him, can they not?

Mr. CRAWFORD. They certainly can.

Mr. ENGLE of California. And that is what they can do with the Commissioner sitting here?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. ENGLE of California. So that we are doing just exactly what they want us to do, is that not correct?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, who has this bill in charge.

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Chairman, I think the purport of this bill is rather clear. But I do want to emphasize a few salient points here. In the first place, the commitee has tried very carefully to safeguard everybody's rights and to see that this was handled in a democratic way. As has already been pointed out to you, the elected Governor of Puerto Rico appeared before the committee and urged the passage of this bill. The distinguished Commissioner from Puerto Rico who sits with us, and who has the high regard of every Member of the House of Representatives, has himself told you, in a very fine address, that he is urging the passage of this bill.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON. I yield.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Not only is that true, not only are we following the recommendation made by the elected representatives of the people down there, but in addition this bill provides, does it not, that the people will vote on the question of whether or not they want to accept the bill and go into a constitutional convention before it becomes law.

Mr. PETERSON. The gentleman is correct. That was the next point I was going to develop very clearly. It is not upon the constitution itself—that is not the first step in which the people have a right to vote. This bill provides that the people have a right to vote whether this act shall take effect.

There is to be a referendum. Those of you who serve in this legislative body know that that is one of the fairest ways to express democratic approval of legislation. I will give you the exact wording of the bill:

Upon the approval of this act by a majority of the voters participating in such referendum, the legislature of Puerto Rico is authorized to call a constitutional convention to draw the constitution for the said island of Puerto Rico.

They do not have a constitutional convention until the people of Puerto Rico have spoken affirmatively in an island-wide referendum approving this act.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON. I yield for a question.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Just for the sake of the record showing the history of this legislation, originally when this bill was introduced, that provision was not in the bill; is that correct?

Mr. PETERSON. But it is in the bill now and it is in the bill reported by the committee.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I am not asking that. It was not in the original bill; was it?

Mr. PETERSON. It is in the bill which the House considered. We are considering the Senate bill. By reason of that, it is in the bill. We felt it was the fair and democratic way. What was considered in the other body, or what was originally in the other body, is not before us.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. But as a matter of record, it was not in the original bill.

Mr. PETERSON. The record will speak for itself. This did gain us strength because we felt it is a fair method.

Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON. I yield to the distinguished Commissioner.

Mr. FERNÓS-ISERN. It is a matter of record that the bill which I introduced in the House and the bill as originally introduced in the other body carried language with reference to the acceptance of this act by the people of Puerto Rico. The change has been to make it clear and plain that that means a referendum. Therefore, the only change has been as to the phraseology.

Mr. PETERSON. Yes, the distinguished Delegate is correct the referendum is provided because we feel it is the fair and proper way.

Now, when they have a constitutional convention and the constitution comes back, it has to provide a republican form of government and a bill of rights. When it comes back here it goes to the President of the United States, and he is authorized to transmit such constitution to the Congress, if he finds that that constitution complies with the applicable provisions of this act and the Constitution of the United States. He does not have to send it unless he so finds. Then it comes here and the Congress itself has to speak again:

Upon approval by the Congress, the constitution shall become effective in accordance with its terms.

There are groups down there in Puerto Rico who want independence, who want statehood. There are groups who want to proceed in an orderly way. They elect their governor, they send their commissioner here. They can enlarge their responsibility and self-government by adopting their own constitution. That is what a great majority of the Puerto Ricans seem to want to do. It was represented to us that 76 of the 77 mayors were in favor of this; but, regardless of that, this does not preclude ultimate statehood, nor does it hold out any hopes of ultimate statehood. It is a progressive step until destiny finally determines what the people, they themselves, shall determine what they want to do and the Congress approves. It does not preclude independence.

So, I hope that you may pass this in its present form, without any amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PETERSON] has expired.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LYNCH].

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Chairman, I am thoroughly in favor of this bill. I believe that the people of Puerto Rico should be granted the authority to organize a constitutional government of their own choosing and of their own making, within the certain, well-defined boundaries and limitations specified by Congress. Although Puerto Rico has been under the American flag for over 50 years, we have been extremely slow in fulfilling our treaty obligations to decide the political status of Puerto Rico.

In 1900 Congress created a temporary civil government for Puerto Rico under what is known as the Foraker Act, and 17 years later a permanent civil government was established under the Jones Act. Under this latter act most of the provisions of law granted under the Foraker Act were retained and new provisions were included. It was not, however, until the past few years that we have made any substantial addition to the form of government of Puerto Rico, and during these last few years we have granted to the people of Puerto Rico the right to elect their own Governor and name most of their own public officials.

Last November I visited Puerto Rico as a member of the subcommittee of the House Committee on Ways and Means for the purpose of ascertaining the impact of the extension of social security on the economy of the island. We held hearings and we went out and studied the living conditions of the people of Puerto Rico. We learned what the Government of Puerto Rico is doing in its endeavor to advance the best interests of its people.

I came away confident that the people of Puerto Rico under the American flag had learned the principles of self-government and were indeed able to accept the responsibilities that go with citizenship in the United States. I believe that the overwhelming majority of the people of Puerto Rico desire to remain as American citizens and desire to be a part of our great Union, whether in the capacity of a State or as a federated commonwealth. Puerto Rico has made and is making great strides in its endeavor to solve its economic problems. Every effort is being made to industrialize the island, and it is the common belief that only through such industrialization will sufficient employment be had for the 2,200,000 people of Puerto Rico.

I found the people of Puerto Rico intensely loyal Americans, proud of their citizenship and equally proud in their belief that they were worthy of that citizenship. I believe that we can best show our faith in them by passing this bill and granting to them a constitution of their own making. I shall vote for the bill.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from California [Mr. ENGLE].

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Chairman, the proposition presented by this bill is very simple. Two years ago the Congress authorized Puerto Rico to elect a President. Puerto Rico elected its own President, who took office last year. As the elected President of the people of Puerto Rico he has asked for this bill granting a constitutional form of government to the people of Puerto Rico. This request is also concurred in by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico, Dr. Fernós, who is the elected representative of the people of Puerto Rico under their Organic Act in the House of Representatives. There are certain elements in Puerto Rico which oppose this bill and advocate instead statehood or independence. The question is whether or not the Congress is going to be influenced by those factions or accept the judgment and recommendation of the elected representatives of the people. It is plain to me that we should do the latter, and that it would not be in harmony with our democratic principles to do otherwise than to follow the recommendations of the people elected to represent the people of Puerto Rico. We have provided an additional safeguard. This bill has to be submitted to a referendum of the people of Puerto Rico before a constitutional convention can be called. In short, we have taken the recommendation of the President and of the Commissioner and provided that the people can exercise a veto on it if they want to. The bill is satisfactory to the President and the interested agencies of our Government. It should be favorably acted on by the House.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the delegate from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, as a citizen of the northernmost Territory under the Stars and Stripes, and as one who has spent a lifetime living under Territorial government, I hope I may be permitted to express the opinion that completion of congressional action on S. 3336 by this House and signing by the President of the act into law would be a distinct contribution to the process of self-government in the Territory of Puerto Rico.

No one need have any apprehensions about a grant of undue powers under this act to the people of Puerto Rico. Congress retains all essential powers set forth under our constitutional system, and it will be Congress and Congress alone which ultimately will determine the changes, if any, in the political status of the island.

The concept embraced in this act is as praiseworthy as it is new. The proposition that the people of any area ought to be allowed to do things governmentally for themselves instead of having things done for them finds ideal expression in S. 3336. American citizens do not like forever to be governed from afar with no voice whatsoever in the making of those laws which apply to them. I know that from long and personal experience as an Alaskan. Although I have made only one brief trip to Puerto Rico, I was struck then by the devotion of Puerto Ricans to our American form of government. The additional grant of power contained in this measure is timely; it acknowledges the political growth of the people of Puerto Rico.

Nothing is imposed upon them by S. 3336. The act specifically provides that a referendum shall be held and that all qualified electors shall have opportunity to approve or reject S. 3336. Further provision is made that if the decision is to accept the act that Puerto Ricans will again have an opportunity to pass judgment upon the constitution to be drawn up.

In these dangerous times when totalitarian philosophies are being exploited to the utmost, nothing could be more heartening to the uncertain hundreds of millions of people in the world than to have the United States extend democratic government everywhere within its borders and to the fullest possible degree. Dr. A. FERNÓS-ISERN, our very able colleague, is to be congratulated upon his highly effective work in connection with this measure. The reputation he has made for himself as Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, a reputation based upon ability, integrity, and devotion, has found its reward in the quick response of the other body to his plea that the people who he represents be given the added grant of democratic power provided for in S. 3336. I am sure affirmative action here will be equally swift. And I am sure that there was not a single member of the House Committee on Public Lands who had any substantial doubts remaining after the convincing testimony presented by Gov. Luis Muñoz Marin.

When this act shall have become law and when statehood has been granted to Alaska and Hawaii, this Government will have moved effectively and far in living up to its promises to the people living in the three Territories.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. EBERHARTER].

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this measure and hope it will pass as reported by the committee.

It is difficult for me to understand why any Member of this legislative body should oppose the measure now before us. It can in no respect whatsoever do any harm to any individual either in the United States or in the Island of Puerto Rico.

I know that the people of Puerto Rico have enough intelligence to pass judgment upon what they believe is in their own best interests, and this measure would allow them to pass judgment on that question.

I also am positive that the people of Puerto Rico are patriotic in the utmost degree, and in saying this I mean not only that they are patriotic as citizens of the United States, but they love their island and their homeland. They are a moral people. They are industrious, and if a constitution of their own making will be of benefit to them, it would not be right for this Congress to fail to give them the opportunity to so decide.

The philosophy of the democratic way of life which is espoused in our own Constitution should sway each and every Member of this House to vote affirmatively on this measure.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this bill. I want to compliment the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands in bringing out this bill. It is a step in the right direction. I heartily support its passage in the form in which it was reported by the committee.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may desire, simply to express myself in favor of this bill, feeling that it is another step in line with the intelligent, enlightened, and magnanimous policy that the United States of America has followed in taking care of the territories which have come under its jurisdiction, either by purchase or conquest.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, fully recognizing the principle of government by consent, this act is now adopted in the nature of a compact so that the people of Puerto Rico may organize a government pursuant to a constitution of their own adoption.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time because I cannot permit some of the remarks made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] to go unchallenged.

First of all, I deeply resent, and I am sure all Representatives from the city of New York will agree with me that we all deeply resent the remark that he made in stating that there are altogether too many Puerto Ricans in New York. I want him to know, as I stated to him when we both appeared before the Committee on Rules, that the Puerto Rican citizens in New York are good citizens. They are no different than anybody else. Their contribution to the welfare of the community is something that is deeply appreciated by all the people of New York City.

So that that snide remark, which is a part of the smear that is being conducted by "wise-alecky" magazines and other dishonest writers in this country, is not in keeping with the dignity of the House of Representatives.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I am not going to yield at this time; I am sorry. I want to make a statement in regard to the airplane crash of the other week.

The gentleman from Michigan tries to convey the impression that the crash was just another one of those things. I think the House should know the facts: Fixty-six people were packed in that plane. An airplane of that sort has what is supposed to be a placard weight; the weight it can safely carry is marked on a placard somewhere on that plane. The investigation which was held only the other day in Puerto Rico revealed that the plane was overweighted to the extent of 2,335 pounds—a 2,335-pound overweight. That airline was an airline against which there existed complaints at the time the contract was entered into with this airline to transport these workers. The Governor of Puerto Rico now hypocritically asks for an investigation to find out who made this contract. Whom is he trying to fool? The culpability rests with the Governor and the government of Puerto Rico as well as with the CAB. You do not permit any airline, chartered or unchartered, to squeeze 56 people into an airplane and thereby cause the plane to be 2,335 pounds over the weight limit. The government of Puerto Rico was remiss and criminally negligent in permitting a contract to transport Puerto Rican workers to be entered into with this particular airline when its Governor knew that there were charges pending against this airline, charges pending as to unsafe conditions; yet the government of Puerto Rico, the agents of the Governor's own administration permitted that contract to be entered into with that airline. Further, if it had been on the job, it would have inspected the loading of this plane as it should have; it owed a duty to these men who were being sent out of Puerto Rico, a duty to protect them against the overloading of that plane.

This reveals the attitude that has developed toward these men who are sent out like cattle loaded on these planes—yes, to be exploited—no protection against exploitation after they are brought into the various places of employment. The representative of the Puerto Rican government in New York City, Mr. Cabrares does not lift a finger to protect these workers. He has never done so. So, when we deal with this air tragedy, as I said in my earlier statement, we must view it as a symptom, a symptom of the colonial system which causes 300,000 unemployed. If you did not have this colonial system which this bill perpetuates, Puerto Rico could develop an agriculture of its own, not an agriculture which is economically diabetic, a total-sugar agriculture. It could develop an industry of its own and protect that industry if it had sovereignty. This bill gives it no sovereignty. Because of the lack of sovereignty it cannot develop those industries, cannot develop a real agriculture of its own, and because of that lack of sovereignty you have lack of employment and you have a system which subjects them to the exploitation and the neglect of their safety they are now subjected to.

This bill is a device to deprive Puerto Ricans of the right to obtain for themselves the sovereignty they need to protect themselves against these conditions.

Mr. DOLLINGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise at this point to take exception likewise to the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] relative to the Puerto Ricans in New York. I represent quite many Puerto Ricans in the city of New York. I have found them to be upstanding American citizens for whom we have the highest regard.

In my district recently we had a poll with regard to independence or statehood for Puerto Rico. I wish to announce at this time that the indications were overwhelmingly in favor of statehood. I think the gentleman from Michigan was wrong when he said that they are not ready for statehood. If we had a statehood bill before us I would be happy to vote for it.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to make an observation regarding the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] when he stated that there are certain abuses in Puerto Rico with respect to labor conditions and living conditions and for those reasons as well as others opposes the bill. He might be correct as to the abuses, but I do not think those statements are germane to the issue before us today. We are to ascertain whether we are to vote upon a bill before us to give Puerto Rico a constitution. I think in democratic fashion and in the democratic processes that we have to follow, the bill adequately protects those people. It gives them all of the safeguards necessary to determine for themselves whether they want a constitution and the kind of constitution. Before we go into the issue any further we should ascertain whether they want a constitution. If they vote it down they can come before us and put the question; do they want independence or statehood, and we will then determine the issue, but for the time being I am satisfied to go along with the bill because it is a step in the right direction. For that reason I will vote for the bill and allow the people of Puerto Rico, not we in America, to decide whether they want a constitution.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLINGER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. JAVITS. I, too, am in the gentleman's position with respect to residents in my district. Will the gentleman join me in expressing the view, and I hope the gentleman will join me, that this is not a snare and delusion. There is no bad faith here. We have a right to differ. Some of us may think one thing and some of us may think another. But I would not want to be put in the position of subscribing to the idea that this bill is a snare and a delusion so far as the people of Puerto Rico are concerned.

Mr. DOLLINGER. The gentleman is correct. I do not agree with that statement at all.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with and that it be printed in the RECORD at this point and open for amendment at any place in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The balance of the bill follows:

SEC. 2. This act shall be submitted to the qualified voters of Puerto Rico for acceptance or rejection through an island-wide referendum to be held in accordance with the laws of Puerto Rico. Upon the approval of this act, by a majority of the voters participating in such referendum, the Legislature of Puerto Rico is authorized to call a constitutional convention to draft a constitution for the said island of Puerto Rico. The said constitution shall provide a republican form of government and shall include a bill of rights.

SEC. 3. Upon adoption of the constitution by the people of Puerto Rico, the President of the United States is authorized to transmit such constitution to the Congress of the United States if he finds that such constitution conforms with the applicable provisions of this act and of the Constitution of the United States.

Upon approval by the Congress the constitution shall become effective in accordance with its terms.

SEC. 4. Except as provided in section 5 of this act, the act entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1917, as amended, is hereby continued in force and effect and may hereafter be cited as the "Puerto Rican Federal Relations Act."

SEC. 5. At such time as the constitution of Puerto Rico becomes effective, the following provisions of such act of March 2, 1917, as amended, shall be deemed repealed:

(1) Section 2, except the paragraph added thereto by Public Law 362, Eightieth Congress, first session, approved August 5, 1947.

(2) Sections 4, 12, 12a, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 18a, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 39, 40, 49, 49b, 50, 51, 52, 53, 56, and 57.

(3) The last paragraph in section 37.

(4) Section 38, except the second paragraph thereof which begins with the words "The Interstate Commerce Act" and ends with the words "shall not apply in Puerto Rico."

SEC. 6. All laws or parts of laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill, S. 3336, because I believe it is a step in the right direction. As has been said in this House, there are people in Puerto Rico and people in this country who have decided ideas as to whether Puerto Rico should be a State, whether it should remain as a possession or whether it should be an independent country on its feet. I happen to have decided opinions along that line myself.

I do not believe that Puerto Rico is ready for independence. I would like to see all of the so-called colonial possessions of the world stand on their own feet. I voted for the independence of the Philippines, but I wonder if I did not make a mistake because after that vote I visited the Philippines and I saw the people in action over there and I have watched them very closely since then. I saw by the declaration of the President just the other day that we are going to have to go into the Philippines and take over power which is an independent nation they should be able to take care of themselves if they were able to do the job with independence. To be part of a democratic form of government and to participate and maintain a democratic form of government is, in my opinion, one of the hardest jobs in the world. It requires participation of a high order in the practice of government. Some people are just simply not trained to do it. You can declare them independent, you can give them their independence, but after they have it they cannot handle their independence. Then some nation has to go in and handle it for them. We are having to do that very thing in the Philippine Islands today.

You can blame that on many different things. I say that the people of Puerto Rico as a whole, regardless of their aspirations, are not yet to the point where they can sustain themselves as an independent state. However, they have exercised a form of self-government. We can say for the credit of the United States that we have fostered in Puerto Rico a form of self-government and as that form of self-government develops to the point of complete and adequate responsibility, they will learn to function as an independent nation, if they so desire by plebiscite. I say at that time the United States will not stand in the way of Puerto Rican independence any more than we did so far as the Philippine people were concerned when they clamored and finally obtained their independence.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. ENGLE of California. As a matter of fact, even though there are people down there who advocate independence, they have not elected anybody yet, have they?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is right.

Mr. ENGLE of California. And the governor, who is elected by the people, and the Commissioner, who is elected by the people, are asking for this bill; is that not correct?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is correct.

Mr. ENGLE of California. And then we turn around and give them a plebiscite on it afterward.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is right.

The people who advocate independence for Puerto Rico, as you can see by the figures put in the RECORD by the gentleman from New York, are a very small amount of the total vote. I had occasion to speak to Representative Ramos Antonini, speaker of the house of representatives, and Senator Guitierez-Franquie, the majority leader in the senate for the administration of Governor Muñoz Marín. I talked over many of these problems with them and I came to the conclusion from my observation there, and also in the Philippines and other places, that these people are taking a step which they can take at this time. And, as far as us having the constitutional authority to grant them this privilege, I say that we do have. Puerto Rico at the present time, under the Treaty of Paris signed in 1898, is a possession of the United States. This status was established in the treaty between the Spanish Government and the United States. Congress is the final governing body. We have amended the Organic Act several times, and only in 1947 we gave them the right to elect their own governor, and now we are saying to the people of Puerto Rico that as far as the Congress of the United States is concerned, it is all right for their legislature to convene and to vote on whether you shall have a constitutional conventionl or not—and if they do not want it they can vote it down, but if a constitutional convention is called, we ask the Puerto Rican people to form your constitution along the lines of our own Constitution—not exactly the same, but in such a manner so that it will not be in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Once that constitution is formed by these freely elected delegates in Puerto Rico, that constitution comes to the President of the United States and the President submits it to the Congress, and there we exercise our ultimate authority of approval or disapproval of this constitution, so we are still operating under the constitutional power of the United States which does have control of these possessions. I believe that rather than give them something that is unattainable, and which in my opinion the people are not yet quite ready for in Puerto Rico, that we should reach for the attainable goal and give these people that next step which rests between territory and statehood. As far as self-government is concerned, let them have a little more experience, a little broader element of self-government, and then later on these other steps in due time can be taken.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I simply want to point out that the people of Puerto Rico have had just as much experience at self-government as we have. As a matter of fact, when we took over that island by military force they had practically been given self-government by the Spanish Government. They certainly can govern themselves, and I do not think it is fair to say that they lack experience, because they have had just as much experience as we have.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the bill and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, may I explain that there are a number of Members standing who do not have amendments and who desire time, so that we get into the usual jam. May I suggest a half hour?

Mr. ASPINALL. May I say to the gentleman from New York that I have spoken to the gentleman, who has an amendment, and he has requested 5 minutes.

Mr. JAVITS. But here is a gentleman who has no amendment. I point out that there are other Members who do not have amendments.

Mr. ASPINALL. Make it 20.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I hope my good friend from Colorado will not insist on this. This is not the only question we have on Puerto Rico. The House is learning something about Puerto Rico today and its problems. I do not think it is going to wreck the Nation if we spend 25 or 30 minutes on this, if the Members want to talk on it. I hope my friend from Colorado will modify his request.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I modify my request and ask that debate close in 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JAVITS: On page 2, line 14, strike out the period and insert "and expresses the will of the people of Puerto Rico."

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, during my time in general debate I did not finish my argument, and I should like to finish it now. I said that I favored recommittal of the bill to the committee but for the purpose of reconsidering and striking out section 4 and 5 which I fear may have a tendency to inhibit the people of Puerto Rico in the free choice of a constitution and form of government. I also said that I do not believe the bill is a snare and a delusion, or that there is any bad faith involved in it. My reasons tie into the amendment I have offered.

Where the bill should have stopped is at section 3. There is no reason why the Congress in advance should have inhibited the people of Puerto Rico with respect to what we would or would not accept, when we are saying that they are mature and adult enough to bring in a constitution. If they are mature and adult enough to bring in a constitution then, reserving to ourselves, which the bill would do in section 3, the right to reject or accept it, we should have inhibited them no further, whereas the bill may inhibit them because it says we will accept only a constitution which fits in with the Organic Act.

I said before that though we state that in this bill we can always draw it back. If there is a runaway constitutional convention, we may still decide that we want to give the people of Puerto Rico statehood or, indeed, independence if they want it. Nevertheless, there is an element of inhibition in this bill, and that I do not like.

As to my amendment, you will note that there are two tests that the President must make before he submits the constitution which the people of Puerto Rico vote out, and these tests appear in section 3. The tests are, first, that the applicable provisions of this particular bill have been met, and second, that the constitution submitted by the people of Puerto Rico is consonant with the Constitution of the United States.

In view of the charges aired here that elections down there are influenced and that mayors are appointed and that there has not been full testimony before this committee, and those charges have been made, I write in by my amendment the additional test—that is all it is—that the President shall find not only that the act has been complied with and that consonance with the United States Constitution has been complied with but that the will of the people of Puerto Rico has been complied with. That enables the President to pass on corrupt practices, on buying elections, on unfair influence, or on anything that he finds might invalidate the action which is submitted to him, and anything which he feels interfers with the free expression of the will of the people of Puerto Rico.

I sympathize with Dr. FERNÓS-ISERN'S desire to get this act passed by July 1, but I know he will be the first to agree that if any of us feel in deep conscience that something should be done to correct the bill we certainly have a right to propose it. I hope he will understand that when I push this amendment I do it out of a sincere conviction that this additional test as to the will of the people of Puerto Rico should be added to this bill.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. ENGLE of California. Does the gentleman believe the President of the United States would send up to this Congress a constitution which was brought about by corrupt practices?

Mr. JAVITS. I do not believe that at all, but we are legislating, we are giving the President a mandate; hence I believe we must tell the President what we want. Also, and most important, we must assure the people of Puerto Rico that that is the way we feel. The only way they can get that assurance before they vote on a constitution in advance is by this bill. We say in this bill that we wish them to express their will. That is an assurance which the people of Puerto Rico in my view will treasure and treasure very much.

I emphasize what I said before. There is no charge or question of snare or delusion involved. As far as I am concerned, I am honestly trying to get this bill amended to recognize that the self-respect of the people of Puerto Rico requires that they freely express their will in respect to a constitution.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 1 minute, to be taken out of the time allotted to me, in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, the committee is in opposition to this amendment because the powers which the gentleman from New York speaks of are inherent in the Office of the Chief Executive at the present time. The Chief Executive exercises the same powers over Puerto Rico as over all of the country which we call the United States of America.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ASPINALL. Certainly.

Mr. JAVITS. Will the gentleman tell the committee that it is the intention of the committee in proposing this bill, as he reads this bill, that it is the intention of the committee and the intention of the House if it passes the bill, that that is what we want to say, even if my amendment is not agreed to?

Mr. ASPINALL. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARCANTONIO: On page 2, line 3, after the period insert "Provided, That such island-wide referendum shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925, as amended."

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is very simple and I do not see why there should be any opposition to it at all.

All it provides is that the referendum be held in a manner which is in keeping with our own form of government here and in order to see that an honest election and an honest referendum is held there should be no corruption or intimidation in connection with the referendum. I cannot see how anybody could have any objection to that.

Of course I know what is going on here. The leadership wants to get this bill through without any amendments, and we are told the reason they want this bill is because they need it for the Fourth of July celebration. It seems to me that they have had Fourth of July celebrations down in Puerto Rico for many, many years without this bill, and they can have another one without this bill. This is part of the scheme to rush the bill through here for fear that Congress might learn the truth with respect to Puerto Rico. If the Congress is going to vote a referendum, then certainly we should guarantee the referendum be held pursuant to the provisions of our Corrupt Practices Act. I will tell you why. It is not just an academic proposition; it is a serious matter. Puerto Rico today is just rife with graft and corruption. It is a saturnalia of corruption. I want to read to you some of the salaries being handed out down there to some of the favorites. For instance, the head of the Water Resources Authority gets $30,000 a year, and he gets a chauffeur and an automobile and a residence. The president of the Development Bank gets $30,000 a year and the vice president of the Development Bank gets $28,000 a year. I have a list here which I included in the RECORD in a speech I delivered here last March.

Let me show you what is going on in San Juan itself and how they are playing around with the money that belongs to the poor people. The mayor of the city of San Juan, Felisa Rincon, who the other day increased her salary from $6,000 to $10,000. She also increased her sister's salary from $4,500 to $6,000. I am now reading from Il Diario of New York, the leading Spanish paper in New York, which incidentally is also opposed to this bill, said in last Sunday's issue:

THE LADY MAYOR OF SAN JUAN AND AN AUDITOR ARE ORDERED TO RETURN PUBLIC MONEY TAKEN IN VIOLATION OF EXISTING LAW

The mayor of the city of San Juan, Felisa Rincon, and the municipal auditor, Luis Munoz Rivera, were ordered to return to the city treasury over $1,000 spent in violation of article No. 20 of the organic act. The insular auditor, Dr. Rafael J. Cordero, has issued a statement as a result of the investigation of the irregularities of the governing body of the municipality of San Juan. Among the several irregularities we have the payment of $1,000 to Johnny Rodriguez without specifying the activity for which the money was paid; an entry of $6,000 as a donation to Club Civico de Damas; the payment of $19,874.60 as relief to the poor without indicating the persons who received the money in question.

As indicated in the report there is an entry characterized as "unexpected" and under such entry money was paid out to people and to commercial firms for flowers, banquets, etc. These expenses as stated by Dr. Cordero are prohibited by Circular No. 11 of January 16, 1937, as issued by the office of the insular auditor. The total sum of this unauthorized expense which is $932.70 must be replaced in the city treasury as ordered by Dr. Cordero.

The insular auditor stated that the expenses in question were extravagant and excessive, and he also ordered the return of $76.05 paid to a firm known as "Clarima." This establishment belongs to the wife of the president of the senate, Counselor Samuel R. Quinonez, and the said lady is also receiving a $500 monthly salary as an employee of the San Juan City Hall.

This shows you how rotten matters are in Puerto Rico under the present administration. So that government money will definitely be used to promote this scheme of the governor and to influence this referendum. Graft and corruption is the order of the day. The people's money is being squandered. The money intended for the poor is being stolen. All I ask is that the Congress of the United States simply declare this referendum be held pursuant to our Corrupt Practices Act. Is that asking too much, in light of the politically immoral situation that exists in Puerto Rico today under its governor and his administration in Puerto Rico?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] has expired.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

In the first place, Mr. Chairman, may I state that there are election laws in Puerto Rico that secure satisfactory and legal elections. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York is not necessary.

In the second place, no member of the committee who has heard the hearings relative to this matter has had any indication of corruption or malfeasance taking place in Puerto Rico in regard to the enforcement of the laws, let alone the election laws.

Therefore, I believe the amendment is unnecessary, and the committee opposes the amendment.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

As I stated a while ago, I have great faith in the Puerto Rican people. They have done a good job up to date. In my opinion, this is a slap in their face, saying that we have no confidence in their election procedure, and that we would have the Federal Government reach out and say to them how they shall run their elections after we provide the organic act for them. To me, this is really slapping the Puerto Rican people. I am, therefore, against the amendment, and I hope it will be voted down.

If I employ a person on a job I let him go ahead and work on the job until he has proved that he is incapable of handling it.

Why would I be guilty of praising the Puerto Rican people and seeking their company and their employment in my State, not by me personally but by the good citizens of the State of Michigan, and at the same time speak as though the Puerto Ricans were bad people and had no character, and so forth. Of course, the gentleman from Michigan is not guilty of any such thing. When I said there were too many Puerto Ricans in New York City, I meant exactly what I said. By that I meant to say that we should not concentrate our off-shore citizens in small areas in the big cities. We should diffuse them out through the States of the Nation, where they can thoroughly comprehend our customs and learn our language and where our people can understand them and learn to love them. That is what I meant when I said there were too many Puerto Ricans in New York City. Of course, I do not blame Members of the House for standing up here and defending the people who vote for them. We expect that, but the two gentleman from New York can not stand up here and tell me that I am condemning the Puerto Ricans in New York City. I do no such thing, and I will stand on the record exactly as the reporter has reported it.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. HUBER. I am interested in what the gentleman said about learning our language and customs. I understand they have recently made Spanish the official language that will be taught. I wonder if that is not some disadvantage to those Puerto Ricans who do come to the United States, in that they are unable to be assimilated as readily as if they could speak English.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That question has been under debate in Puerto Rico for many years. The University of Puerto Rico, which has officials that I have violently disagreed with, substantially write the ticket with respect to educational procedure in the island. That is a long, technical question which we cannot settle here. Personally, I would like to see the English language as the basic language in Puerto Rico, but that is a matter that is beyond our control, unless the Congress wants to override legislation passed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MURRAY] is recognized.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, so far as this legislation is concerned I am surely willing to follow the leadership of this distinguished committee for whose members I have the highest regard. Its chairman, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PETERSON] has a long record as a constructive legislator. I cannot, however, let this discussion on Puerto Rico pass without calling attention to two facts. One of them I have worked on for several months and have not accomplished very much as yet. Either the Fair Deal is wrong in the approach or I am.

We have a minimum wage law that applies to everyone except agriculture. The only agricultural minimum wage law we have is under the Sugar Act. Under the Sugar Act the minimum wage in Puerto Rico is 29 cents an hour; it is 25 cents in the Virgin Islands. If anyone is interested they can look in the RECORD of last Monday in which I published all the correspondence I have had with the Department of Agriculture in relation to it. A member of the President's Cabinet, the Secretary of Agriculture, has the power and the authority to fix this minimum wage. Would you believe that the Fair Deal would fix a 25-cent minimum wage after all their talk about their interest in labor? This minimum wage was not so much out of line when we had a 40-cent national minimum wage, but since we have a 75-cent national minimum wage we are way out of line to have a 29-cent minimum wage so far as Puerto Rico is concerned. I think that our relationship with people like Puerto Ricans—and I base my observations purely upon my contact with the Indian people in my district—is that we should make progress gradually and go along with them instead of holding them back year after year. Now, to me, if we have dominated, if we have had control of that country for 50 years I do not know any reason why there should be any person in that country unable to speak English. If the contrary is the case then we have fallen down on the job badly, at least in the case of those who are under 40 years of age. That is No. 1. An adequate minimum wage does not need legislation. All that is needed is a desire to act in justice and fairness to this agricultural labor.

I repeat that it does not require any legislation, either. The Secretary of Agriculture can change that minimum if he wants to. I do not want you Fair Dealers shedding any crocodile tears to me about slave labor or any legislation of the Eightieth Congress or any other black Republican legislation when you fix a 25-cent and a 29-cent wage for sugar labor. You keep your own doorstep swept and correct this injustice and I will keep mine swept.

Then there is this one other situation. I cannot rule for the Supreme Court, but I would just like to know by what stretch of the imagination anyone can say that the people of Puerto Rico have to let a certain percentage of their sugar come into this country raw and a certain percentage refined. The first thing I know you Fair Dealers will be up there in Wisconsin telling us we can ship only a certain part of our milk out of the State in the form of raw milk and a certain other part in the form of cheese or butter. You tell the people of Puerto Rico that they can ship only so many tons of their sugar refined. Let us not make progress backwards; let us go forward. Let us not continue to discriminate against the Puerto Rico sugar economy and discriminate against Puerto Rico labor industry.

Mr. PETERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Wisconsin yield?

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. PETERSON. The gentleman does not take the position, however, that our committee has jurisdiction of that feature, does he? The Sugar Act was under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Agriculture. Wages is now under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Labor.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. I realize the facts incident to the Sugar Act. The fact still remains that the Fair Deal administration fixed the minimum wage at 25 cents per hour when they have the power and authority to do it. The fact remains that the Fair Deal discriminates against labor—Puerto Rico labor—by insisting that a certain percentage of their exports must be in the form of raw sugar. If and when you Fair Dealers wish to be fair you will correct these injustices, and I am sure that the Puerto Ricans will appreciate your efforts as will all Americans that are interested in fairness, equity, and justice.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. FERNANDEZ] is recognized.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday when the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] was speaking, I thought he was somewhat confused about a statement he was making, and I asked him to yield. I had not said half a dozen words when he rudely interrupted me and refused to yield further. Unable to help him then, I shall try to help him now.

The gentleman from New York says in the first place that this bill is just a farce and gives nothing to the Puerto Ricans; then he turns right around and admits that this bill is designed to give them a larger share of legislative power; then he says that that is unconstitutional because under the Constitution the Congress alone has the exclusive right to legislate for the Territories, and that we cannot delegate any of it to Puerto Rico.

In the first place he is entirely mistaken about the law. Congress does have the right to delegate legislative power to the Territories and has done so time and time again.

In the second place, Puerto Rico is not a Territory and never has been. So there is nothing to that argument.

But the gentleman from New York does admit this bill does something. It gives them partial sovereignty.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I think the gentleman has distorted my position, and I thank him for yielding. My position is that you are holding out to the Puerto Ricans a false idea that you are giving them sovereignty when you cannot give it to them by virtue of this bill.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. It is not a false idea. They understand exactly what we are offering them, and that is partial sovereignty. We are not giving them full sovereignty. In fact, the Puerto Ricans do not wish full sovereignty all at once. They are not asking for it, and they know it is not attainable all at once. There is a lot of responsibility to full sovereignty. There are financial burdens and economic burdens that they themselves understand they cannot undertake all at once at the present time. But they are willing to go along and get sovereignty a little at a time, and we are willing to give them that sovereignty a little at a time.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the gentleman disagree with the statement of the proponents of this bill that the bill is neither a step in the direction of independence nor a step in the direction of statehood?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I wish the gentleman would not put words in my mouth.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I said the proponents.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I said this bill gives them partial sovereignty, which the gentleman admits.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I have not made any such admission.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. Is it not true that this bill merely recognizes the fact which everybody knows in his daily experience, namely, that you cannot expect to take a child in the third or sixth grade and move him up to the twelfth grade or into college or into a postgraduate school without going through the various grades between?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Yes.

Mr. JUDD. Do not the Puerto Ricans realize they have to do it step by step, in their own interests?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. The thinking people of Puerto Rico, particularly the young people, understand and realize that. They want to go a step at a time. We have been liberal. In the first place, we have permitted them to elect their officials, their own Governor and they have a good governor. They have done the job with what has so far been granted to them.

Mr. JUDD. Has not America demonstrated beyond question these last few years that wherever she has been a trustee in charge of peoples who were just emerging into self-government, she has moved ahead steadily, in an orderly way and as fast as it was possible to move, and given them a greater and greater share in the control of their own destinies?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Yes. This is another step in that direction.

Mr. JUDD. Precisely. It is to our advantage not to depart from that orderly process of development through which they have gone from the time we took over a half century ago.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I would like to add my opinion at this point. I had the pleasure of visiting Puerto Rico last November at considerable length. My observation of the work of the Governor of Puerto Rico, Governor Luis Muñoz Marín and the responsible officials of the island government and of the Puerto Rican Resident Commissioner, Dr. ANTONIO FERNÓS-ISERN, is that they have tremendous determination, ability, and capacity to build a system of government for Puerto Rico that will be very successful, provided we give them the opportunity and provided we cooperate with them fully and fairly.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. I have had the same impression when I have been in Puerto Rico.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I commend the Committee on Public Lands on its good work in bringing so promptly this bill S. 3336 before the House of Representatives for action thereon.

I support and will vote for the passage of the bill and I extend my best wishes to the people of Puerto Rico for every success.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ASPINALL].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASPINALL. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, the bill now before the House which will pass very shortly as it should, is a very important one. It comes at a time in the world's history when it conveys more probably than words could the fact that our great country has no imperialistic designs. It is not seeking territory. We seek to build, not to destroy; we seek to preserve liberty, not to make men and women slaves. We stand for a principle that will enable the people of other lands also to establish within themselves a government of law and not of men.

Mr. Chairman, I want to insert in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a telegram I received a few days ago, which I shall read, showing the importance attached to the passage of this legislation at this particular time and the reason why as leader of the House after the rule was reported out on Wednesday I assigned this bill for consideration of the House yesterday.

The telegram is from San Juan, addressed to me.

Hon. JOHN W. McCORMACK,
Majority Leader, House of Representatives:

Would be deeply grateful for your aid to the effect that bill granting Puerto Rico the right to make its own constitution be considered by House before July 4 so that Puerto Ricans can add that significance to national celebration.

That shows that they are Americans in mind and that they love America, and they want to remain within the sphere of the American Government and the American Constitution.

Continuing, the cablegram says:

Bill was aproved unanimously by Senate and reported unanimously by House committee and the petition for rule is now pending before Rules Committee. Greetings.

That cablegram was sent to me by Luis Muñoz Marín, Governor of Puerto Rico, This cablegram shows clearly the importance of this bill insofar as the Governor and the people of Puerto Rico are concerned, and how longingly they are looking to the Congress of the United States to pass this bill and have it become law, and they urgently request, through the Governor, that, if possible, we do it by July 4.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MARCANTONIO moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill, S. 3336, back to the House with the recommendation that the bill be stricken.

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the motion on the ground that it is not preferential.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I now offer the same motion that the enacting clause be stricken.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MARCANTONIO moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill, S. 3336, back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the gentleman from Tennessee desire to make a point of order against the motion now?

Mr. PRIEST. The gentleman from Tennessee recognizes that the present motion is in order.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to take the floor again except that the words of the majority leader, in my mind, should not remain unchallenged. As usual we have had high sounding words from him to cover up what, in my opinion, is a betrayal of the interest of the Puerto Rican people and a denial of campaign pledges made to them by their leaders. You are pretending to give them something when you are giving them nothing and by giving them nothing you are depriving them of any opportunity to obtain real sovereignty. You are pretending to give them self-government over their own affairs when you yourself admit that this bill does no such thing. This bill merely amends the organic act and it grants them no sovereignty and nobody can honestly make any contention to the contrary. The authors of this bill, in order to have the committee report it out and get the Congress to subscribe to it, have said time and time again that this is neither a first step in the direction of independence nor is it a first step in the direction of statehood. It is a device to dodge a real resolution of the colonial states. So, the majority leader, as usual, comes to us with high-sounding words—and I use the term "high-sounding" advisedly—to cover up a betrayal of election promises. As far as this Congress is concerned, what is happening with respect to this bill, in the light of what was promised to the Puerto Ricans in the campaign of 1948 that the people of Puerto Rico would be given a right to choose—not a restricted choice such as you are giving them now, for they either take this or nothing else, but you promised them the right to choose between independence and statehood and the colonial states—this Congress again is going back on its election oratory and doing so with the high-sounding language of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK]. No promise is being kept. I say that this broken promise is in line with the other broken promises, the broken promise on peace, on civil rights, and the broken promise on repeal of Taft-Hartley.

Now, let the gentleman talk all he wants about freedom, but this record of today is one against the freedom of Puerto Rico.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the motion.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York has seen fit to refer to the gentleman from Massachusetts who is now addressing the Committee of the Whole as "using high-sounding words." Coming from the gentleman from New York, I consider that a distinct compliment, although not intended as such. Sometimes the intention is one way and the result is another. Unconsciously and unintentionally the gentleman from New York, as far as results are concerned, has paid me a most unusual compliment. I repeat, he did not intend to do so.

May I say to the gentleman from New York that I am just a human being. I have my weaknesses and I try to have my strengths. I try as hard as I can to overcome my weaknesses or to control them, and to retain and increase the strengths I possess.

There is one thing I have fundamentally in mind. I want my freedom and I want other persons to have their freedom. If I have ever made any high-sounding expressions, I have lived up to what I have said. I have had the courage to vote as I speak. I can remember being in the well of this chamber 3 months before Pearl Harbor fighting for the passage of the extension of the Selective Service Act, when my friend from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] was vigorously opposing it. I had the courage then to take my position, and to take my position on all matters of that kind in those days, as I am taking my position now.

I am not questioning at all the patriotism or the motives of anyone of my colleagues, but I can seriously disagree with their judgment on matters concerning the national defense of America and the future of a decent world. I seriously question the judgment of the gentleman from New York, in no way impugning his motives. His votes and my votes are directly opposite to one another. I think the high-sounding and deceptive thoughts have been expressed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] and not by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

You talk about sovereignty. No State of the Union is completely sovereign. There are two attributes of sovereignty. In order to talk about sovereignty you must remember that there are two attributes, the external attribute of sovereignty and the internal attribute. Both of those attributes make up complete sovereignty.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That is just the point. You are not giving Puerto Rico a choice, such as was promised to them, of getting the attribute of State sovereignty such as is given to a State, or the attribute of complete sovereignty such as is given to an independent nation. Either case is the only way by which, under our Constitution, we can confer any form of sovereignty on either a possession or Territory of the United States. This bill grants not even the slightest show of sovereignty to Puerto Rico.

Mr. McCORMACK. This bill is a decided step in the right direction. The great majority of the people of Puerto Rico want the passage of this bill.

It is only a few weeks ago that we passed through this body two bills which are now in the other body, to admit to statehood in our Union Hawaii and Alaska. Both of these Territories have been Territorial possessions of our Government for many, many years. They have had to go through the journey that is necessary before statehood could be considered for them.

I am not saying when statehood might be considered for Puerto Rico. But certainly for anyone to think that this bill is not a decided step in the direction of statehood for Puerto Rico sometime in the future is to take a position and make an expression which is contrary to logic and to common sense.

This bill enables the people of Puerto Rico to have a form of government of their own within the framework of the American Government. It gives them the widest latitude at this time, which they want, and which they could reasonably expect and which the great majority of the people of Puerto Rico do expect. Some day in the future their case will be developed to the point of Hawaii and Alaska, as evidenced this year by the passage through the House of Representatives and the reporting out of both bills the other day by the appropriate committee of the other body of the bills granting statehood to Hawaii and Alaska. It is only a matter of time when both Territories will become States, if they are not admitted officially and formally into the Union of the United States during this session of the Congress.

This bill is a decided step forward toward human liberty and the possession of human liberty and the right of a people to develop within themselves that responsibility which means freedom under the law and not slavery under vicious, contemptible dictatorship.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

The motion was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BONNER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (S. 3336) to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico, pursuant to House Resolution 678 he reported the bill back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MARCANTONIO moves to recommit S. 3336 to the Committee on Public Lands, with instructions to report the bill back forthwith with the following amendment: Page 2, line 3, after the period insert "Provided, That such islandwide referendum shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925, as amended."

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 1, nays 260, not voting 169, as follows:

[Roll No. 193]

YEAS—1

Marcantonio

NAYS—260

Addonizio	Ford	Morrison
Albert	Fulton	Moulder
Allen, Calif.	Furcolo	Murdock
Allen, Ill.	Garmatz	Murphy
Anderson, Calif.	Gary	Murray, Tenn.
Andresen, August H.	Gathings	Murray, Wis.
Andrews	Gavin	Nelson
Aspinall	Goodwin	Nixon
Barden	Gordon	Norblad
Baring	Gore	Norrell
Bates, Mass.	Gorski	O'Brien, Ill.
Battle	Graham	O'Brien, Mich.
Beall	Granger	O'Hara, Ill.
Beckworth	Grant	O'Hara, Minn.
Bennett, Fla.	Gregory	O'Konski
Bennett, Mich.	Gross	O'Neill
Bentsen	Gwinn	O'Sullivan
Biemiller	Hagen	Patten
Bishop	Hale	Peterson
Blackney	Hand	Pfeifer, Joseph L.
Blatnik	Hardy	Philbin
Boggs, Del.	Hare	Phillips, Calif.
Boggs, La.	Hart	Polk
Bolton, Md.	Havenner	Potter
Bonner	Hays, Ark.	Priest
Bosone	Hedrick	Rabaut
Boykin	Herlong	Ramsay
Brehm	Herter	Rankin
Brown, Ga.	Heselton	Reed, Ill.
Brown, Ohio	Hill	Reed, N. Y.
Buchanan	Hoffman, Mich.	Rees
Buckley, Ill.	Holifield	Rhodes
Burleson	Holmes	Ribicoff
Burnside	Hope	Richards
Byrnes, Wis.	Horan	Robeson
Camp	Howell	Rodino
Canfield	Huber	Rogers, Fla.
Cannon	Hull	Rogers, Mass.
Carlyle	Jacobs	Rooney
Carnahan	Javits	Sabath
Case, N. J.	Jennings	Saylor
Case, S. Dak.	Jensen	Scott, Hugh D., Jr.
Celler	Johnson	Scrivner
Chelf	Jones, N. C.	Scudder
Chiperfield	Judd	Secrest
Cole, Kans.	Karst	Shafer
Colmer	Karsten	Shelley
Combs	Kearns	Short
Cooper	Keating	Simpson, Ill.
Cotton	Kee	Smith, Kans.
Cox	Kelly, N. Y.	Smith, Va.
Crawford	Kilday	Smith, Wis.
Crook	King	Staggers
Crosser	Kruse	Stefan
Cunningham	Kunkel	Stockman
Curtis	Lane	Sullivan
Dague	Lanham	Talle
Davenport	Larcade	Tauriello
Davies, N. Y.	LeCompte	Teague
Davis, Ga.	Lind	Thomas
Davis, Tenn.	Lodge	Thornberry
Davis, Wis.	Lovre	Tollefson
Dawson	Lucas	Trimble
Deane	Lynch	Van Zandt
DeGraffenried	McConnell	Vorys
Delaney	McCormack	Wadsworth
Denton	McCulloch	Walter
D'Ewart	McDonough	Weichel
Dollinger	McGuire	Welch
Dolliver	McKinnon	Whitaker
Donohue	McMillan, S. C.	White, Calif.
Douglas	McSweeney	White, Idaho
Doyle	Mack, Ill.	Whitten
Durham	Mack, Wash.	Whittington
Eaton	Madden	Widnall
Eberharter	Mahon	Wigglesworth
Elliott	Mansfield	Wilson, Tex.
Ellsworth	Marsalis	Winstead
Elston	Marshall	Withrow
Engle, Calif.	Martin, Iowa	Wolverton
Feighan	Merrow	Woodhouse
Fellows	Meyer	Woodruff
Fenton	Michener	Yates
Fernandez	Miller, Calif.	Young
Fisher	Miller, Md.	Zablocki
Flood	Miller, Nebr.
Forand	Mills

NOT VOTING—169

Abbitt	Harris	Perkins
Abernethy	Harrison	Pfeiffer,
Allen, La.	Harvey	William L.
Andersen,	Hays, Ohio	Phillips, Tenn.
H. Carl	Hébert	Pickett
Angell	Heffernan	Plumley
Arends	Heller	Poage
Auchincloss	Hinshaw	Poulson
Bailey	Hobbs	Powell
Barrett, Pa.	Hoeven	Preston
Barrett, Wyo.	Hoffman, Ill.	Price
Bates, Ky.	Irving	Quinn
Bolling	Jackson, Calif.	Rains
Bolton, Ohio	Jackson, Wash.	Redden
Bramblett	James	Regan
Breen	Jenison	Rich
Brooks	Jenkins	Riehlman
Bryson	Jonas	Rivers
Buckley, N. Y.	Jones, Ala.	Roosevelt
Bulwinkle	Jones, Mo.	Sadlak
Burdick	Kean	Sadowski
Burke	Kearney	St. George
Burton	Keefe	Sanborn
Byrne, N. Y.	Kelley, Pa.	Sasscer
Carroll	Kennedy	Scott, Hardie
Cavalcante	Keogh	Sheppard
Chatham	Kerr	Sikes
Chesney	Kilburn	Simpson, Pa.
Christopher	Kirwan	Sims
Chudoff	Klein	Smathers
Clemente	Latham	Smith, Ohio
Clevenger	LeFevre	Spence
Cole, N. Y.	Lichtenwalter	Stanley
Cooley	Linehan	Steed
Corbett	Lyle	Stigler
Coudert	McCarthy	Sutton
Dingell	McGrath	Taber
Dondero	McGregor	Tackett
Doughton	McMillen, Ill.	Taylor
Engel, Mich.	Macy	Thompson
Evins	Magee	Towe
Fallon	Martin, Mass.	Underwood
Fogarty	Mason	Velde
Frazier	Miles	Vinson
Fugate	Mitchell	Vursell
Gamble	Monroney	Wagner
Gillette	Morgan	Walsh
Gilmer	Morris	Werdel
Golden	Morton	Wheeler
Gossett	Multer	Wickersham
Granahan	Nicholson	Wier
Green	Noland	Williams
Hall,	Norton	Willis
Edwin Arthur	O'Toole	Wilson, Ind.
Hall,	Pace	Wilson, Okla.
Leonard W.	Passman	Wolcott
Halleck	Patman	Wood
Harden	Patterson

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Mr. Irving with Mr. Arends.
Mr. Christopher with Mr. Nicholson.
Mr. Hébert with Mr. Clevenger.
Mr. Willis with Mr. William L. Pfeiffer.
Mr. Passman with Mr. Dondero.
Mr. Sikes with Mr. Riehlman.
Mr. Stigler with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Wilson of Oklahoma with Mr. Simpson of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Barrett of Pennsylvania with Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall.
Mr. Cavalcante with Mr. Smith of Ohio.
Mr. Granahan with Mr. Gamble.
Mr. Linehan with Mr. Macy.
Mr. Chesney with Mr. Leonard W. Hall.
Mr. Roosevelt with Mr. Auchincloss.
Mr. Breen with Mr. Sadlak.
Mr. Carroll with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Harris with Mr. Engel of Michigan.
Mr. Harrison with Mr. Angell.
Mr. Stanley with Mr. Lichtenwalter.
Mr. Hobbs with Mr. Latham.
Mr. Rains with Mrs. Bolton of Ohio.
Mr. Gilmer with Mr. Coudert.
Mr. Mitchell with Mr. Jackson of California.
Mr. Williams with Mr. Corbett.
Mr. Wickersham with Mr. Hoeven.
Mr. Rivers with Mrs. St. George.
Mr. Fugate with Mr. Towe.
Mr. Preston with Mr. Hoffman of Illinois.
Mr. Fogarty with Mr. Jenkins.
Mr. Price with Mr. Kean.
Mr. Frazier with Mr. Kearney.
Mr. Evins with Mr. Hardie Scott.
Mr. Perkins with Mr. Poulson.
Mr. Fallon with Mr. Sanborn.
Mr. Dingell with Mr. Kilburn.
Mr. Abbitt with Mr. McGregor.
Mr. Abernethy with Mr. Harvey.
Mr. Bates of Kentucky with Mr. Werdel.
Mr. Bolling with Mr. Wilson of Indiana.
Mr. Burke with Mr. Mason.
Mr. Walsh with Mr. Martin of Massachusetts.
Mr. Sims with Mr. Wolcott.
Mr. Wagner with Mr. LeFevre.
Mr. Sasscer with Mr. Taber.
Mr. Sheppard with Mr. Taylor.
Mr. Tackett with Mr. Velde.
Mr. Hays of Ohio with Mr. Morton.
Mr. McGrath with Mr. Cole of New York.
Mr. Magee with Mrs. Harden.
Mr. Noland with Mr. Golden.
Mr. Bailey with Mr. Barrett of Wyoming.
Mr. Jackson of Washington with Mr. Bramblett.
Mr. Klein with Mr. Burdick.
Mr. Keogh with Mr. Patterson.
Mr. Heffernan with Mr. Keefe.
Mr. O'Toole with Mr. Hinshaw.
Mr. Heller with Mr. Jenison.
Mr. Clemente with Mr. Jonas.
Mr. Thompson with Mr. Vursell.
Mr. Redden with Mr. McMillen of Illinois.
Mr. Regan with Mr. Phillips of Tennessee.
Mr. Sutton with Mr. Rich.
Mr. Multer with Mr. James.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have five legislative days within which to extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 635, Eighty-first Congress, the Chair appoints as members of the Special Committee To Investigate Campaign Expenditures of the various candidates for the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. CHELF, Mr. DEANE, Mr. FELLOWS, and Mr. JENNINGS.

AMENDMENT OF WAR CONTRACTORS RELIEF ACT—VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 629)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 3436, an act "to amend the War Contractors Relief Act, as amended."

In taking this action, I wish to make it clear to the Congress that I am not opposed to legislation which would insure an equitable settlement of the claims filed under the original War Contractors Relief Act. If the Congress will take prompt action on such a measure, I shall be glad to approve it.

The First War Powers Act authorized the Government to provide relief on war contracts when "such action would facilitate the prosecution of the war." Its purpose was not to relieve contractors because of losses, or to insure them against losses. Its purpose was to obtain needed war production.

When hostilities ended on August 14, 1945, a number of Government agencies felt, quite logically, that they could no longer make contract adjustments on the ground that relief so provided "would facilitate prosecution of the war." Accordingly, pending requests for relief were denied even though the facts in particular cases would have justified favorable action if they had been disposed of prior to surrender of the Japanese Government.

I cannot accept the contention that the purpose of the War Contractors Relief Act, which H. R. 3436 would amend, was other than to provide a basis for relief to those contractors whose cases would have been handled under the First War Powers Act if war had not ended. Had I believed there was a broader purpose, I would not have issued the kind of regulations which were promulgated in Executive Order 9786. These regulations were a faithful attempt to interpret the language of the act as affording nothing more than a statutory basis for the continued processing of written applications for relief under the First War Powers Act which were pending and undisposed of on August 14, 1945. In accordance with the terms of the act, claims relating to these applications were permitted to be filed until February 7, 1947.

H. R. 3436, and the reports recommending its enactment, would radically change the basic purpose of the original War Contractors Relief Act. I believe that in spite of any administrative interpretation which might be made to limit the effects of the bill, its provisions not only require reconsideration of all claims originally filed, but might also be construed to permit reopening of an unknown number of cases settled under the First War Powers Act and the Contract Settlement Act. This belief is based upon the fact that the bill greatly relaxes the requirements for filing notice, and upon the further fact that the bill permits two new elements of cost which were not authorized under the 1946 act to be allowed as costs of performance of the contracts and subcontracts. To quote the bill, these elements are "(1) all, or the properly allocable portion, of the sum paid or allowable by the claimant as reasonable compensation for services, during the period of performance of the contracts and subcontracts, to its working partners or working sole proprietor, and (2) interest at reasonable rates paid by the claimant to the date of determination of the claim on sums borrowed by him or if for the purpose of providing necessary working capital for the performance of the contracts and subcontracts."

I do not object to the language which clarifies the intent of the Congress with respect to sums paid as a reasonable compensation for services, but I do find objectionable the inclusion of interest on working capital as a basis for allowing relief. In the first place, it would discriminate unjustly against those contractors who financed their own operations. Secondly, I find nothing in the legislative history to indicate that it was ever intended to authorize the inclusion of such interest as a basis for computing losses and making claims for relief as a result of such losses. In fact, it was certainly upon this point which led to the exclusion in Executive Order 9786 of interest on invested capital as an item of cost upon which losses might be computed.

When this element of interest, relaxation of requirements for filing notice, liberalization of relief beyond that afforded by the First War Powers Act, and the specific exclusion of finalty of settlement under the First War Powers Act and the Contract Settlement Act are all added together, I believe that the net effect of this bill for all practicable purposes, would be to write into law the principle of Government insurance against all wartime net losses incurred by contractors providing goods and services to the Government.

In my veto message on H. R. 834, Eighty-first Congress, a bill "To amend the Contract Settlement Act of 1944," I stated that the implications of acceptance of such a principle "are profound, both with respect to our finances and with respect to our free-enterprise system." I stated further, "In my opinion, it would be a serious error to introduce at this time a new principle—insurance against war-caused losses. This would involve reopening the entire program of financing the war, with incalculable effects upon our finances." These quotations are equally applicable in the case of this bill. If this principle should ever be accepted for those who had contracts with the Government, I would see no basis for withholding its extension to thousands upon thousands of other persons who suffered in producing for the war effort without contracts.

In addition to this major objection to H. R. 3436, I should like to elaborate another point to which I have already referred. There can be no doubt that the bill relaxes the requirement of the original War Contractors Relief Act that requests for relief must be in writing. The last sentence of section (b) of the bill states, "The form of the request for relief hereunder shall be immaterial, provided it inform the Government or the dominant contractor that a loss was being suffered, was anticipated, or had been suffered by the contractor, subcontractor, or subcontractor in connection with the work in question." To authorize the founding of a claim upon any kind of notice and regardless of whether the notice was filed with the Government, would in itself place the Government in a most unfavorable position to protect itself against favoritism and collusion or fraud.

When taken together with the provisions of section 1 of the original act which authorizes settlement for losses incurred "without fault or negligence," it would place upon the Government the requirement of having to prove fault or negligence in order to deny claims for work which may have been performed as long ago as the fall of 1940. Such a requirement would be wholly indefensible.

It is unfortunate, and I deeply regret that there has been uncertainty and, in the opinion of the supporters of this measure, controversy between the Congress and executive agencies as to the intent of the War Contractors Relief Act. It is likewise a matter of deep concern to me that I find myself unable to agree with the committees' reports upon H. R. 3436. The language of the bill standing alone, or when read in the light of the committees' statements, does not provide an acceptable clarification of the original act. Therefore, I see no way to approve the act and depend upon its legislative history to provide an enforceable statement of its limitations.

In spite of my objections to the scope of H. R. 3436 and the principles which I believe it would write into law, I am convinced that agreement can be reached upon what the Government has a clear-cut obligation to do. To that end, I wish to repeat that I shall be glad to approve a bill which limits its amendment and interpretation of the War Contractors Relief Act as suggested in this message.

I believe that a bill incorporating the following seven provisions would be fair and would permit equitable settlement of those claims, unsettled at the end of the war, which the Congress feels have been rejected on the basis of "flimsy technicalities."

1. Authorize reconsideration of the claims filed in accordance with the provisions of the original War Contractors Relief Act.

2. Remove the basis for technical rejection by permitting either a request in writing for relief under the First War Powers Act, or a written demand for payment of losses, or a written notice of sustained or impending loss, if timely filed, to be accepted as a basis for claim.

3. Authorize consideration and settlement of the claims of subcontractors on the same basis as the prime contractors if the same kind of written request, demand, or notice was filed with a Government agency, a prime contractor, or another subcontractor prior to August 14, 1945.

4. Permit reasonable compensation with respect to partners and proprietors, thus affording them the same treatment accorded corporations.

5. Preserve jurisdiction of the courts over suits now pending and not require any claimant to start over again in the presentation of his claim.

6. Permit a reasonable time, perhaps 60 days, for amendment or revival of any claim.

7. Include the clarifying definitions of section 7 of H. R. 3436.

Prompt enactment of such legislation will make it possible for the executive agencies and the courts to discharge the responsibilities which I am convinced they cannot equitably discharge under the measure that I am returning without my approval.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 30, 1950.

The SPEAKER. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

AMENDING HATCH ACT—VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 630)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 1243, a bill "to amend the Hatch Act."

This bill would make two major revisions in the act which imposes restrictions on the political activities of Federal employees. First, the bill gives the Civil Service Commission a limited amount of discretion to provide a lesser penalty than removal from office for those employees found to violate the political activities restrictions of the Hatch Act. Second, the bill requires that, in those political subdivisions where Federal employees are allowed to take part in nonpartisan election activities restricted to a local or community level, they shall also be allowed to take part in such activities on a partisan basis.

The bill makes other changes in the Hatch Act. One of these would require that every year the Civil Service Commission shall send to the President for transmittal to the Congress a report listing all persons against whom action has been taken by the Commission, along with a statement of the facts of each case and the penalty imposed. Another change would confer a statutory right upon committees of the Congress to obtain records containing testimony or other evidence relevant to charges and allegations of violation of the political activity restrictions of the Hatch Act. A final change would impose a criminal penalty for the failure to disclose parties sponsoring political literature transported in interstate commerce.

I have no objection to three provisions of this bill: that giving a limited discretion to the Civil Service Commission in the imposition of penalties for violations of the Hatch Act; that requiring annual reports to the Congress of cases involving violations by Federal personnel of the political restrictions of the Hatch Act; and that with respect to distribution of political literature. Particularly, I am wholeheartedly in accord with the desirability of vesting in the Civil Service Commission the authority to impose lesser penalties than removal from the Federal service for violations of the political activities provisions of the Hatch Act. Under present law, this stern penalty must be imposed even in cases involving a minor or inadvertent violation. Clearly there is a need to temper this drastic provision in order to assure full and effective enforcement of the law. I feel that the new section 9 (b) provided in section 1 of this bill would adequately meet this need.

Unfortunately, there are two other provisions of the bill to which I cannot subscribe.

One of these provisions extends additional privileges to Federal workers in certain areas by enabling their participation in partisan political activity restricted to a local or community level. If, as the measure intends, the political privileges of the Federal employees are now to be extended to the field of local partisan politics, there is no valid reason to confine the extension to geographic locations or to areas where the number of Government employees is predominant. If Federal employees are to be allowed to participate completely and actively in the selection of local officials, a move which I endorse, their participation should be permitted on a Nationwide basis.

I feel the obligation to point out that this particular provision, as now worded, might not accomplish what it purports to do. In certain States or localities having so-called party plans, the provision would not represent any extension of rights now held. Where a party plan is in force, a Federal worker could not seek local office on a partisan ticket without supporting all other party candidates, whether for local, State, or national office. If he did support them actively, he would automatically be in violation of the Hatch Act. If he failed to give active support, he could be penalized by removal from the ballot. Thus, it would appear that in such a case the Federal worker gets nothing more than the rights which he already has. To protect the Federal worker in such circumstances against undue pressures to indulge in partisan activities, the Civil Service Commission should be authorized to deny the right to participate in local partisan politics wherever the party plan exists.

The other objectionable provision in this bill relates to the statutory right given congressional committees to obtain records containing testimony or other evidence relevant to charges and allegations of violations of the Hatch Act. This provision represents an encroachment upon the long-recognized prerogative of the Chief Executive to maintain in confidence those papers and documents which, in the public interest, he feels should be so maintained. It has been the position of every President that it is for the Executive to determine what documents and papers in the executive branch should be held confidential. This is entirely consistent with the separation of powers provided by our Constitution. I cannot accept or give my approval to any act of the Congress which would threaten or diminish so preeminently necessary a right of the Chief Executive.

In view of the foregoing considerations, I have felt obliged to withhold my approval of this enactment in its present form. I shall be quite willing to approve a bill which does not contain these two objectionable features, and I urge that the Congress take such action before the close of the present session.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 30, 1950.

The SPEAKER. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal, and without objection the bill and message will be referred to the Committee on House Administration and ordered to be printed.

There was no objection.

REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 24 OF 1950

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 648) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate continue not to exceed 2 hours, the time to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] and myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand and hope that the 2 hours will not be used?

Mr. DAWSON. I was hoping the same thing. There has been an agreement on that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the resolution H. Res. 648, with Mr. CHELF in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the resolution was dispensed with.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 17 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 648) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950, having considered the same, report unfavorably thereon, without amendment, and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

Reorganization Plan No. 24 is very short. I will read it:

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, together with all of its functions, agencies, property, assets, funds, contracts, loans, liabilities, commitments, authorizations, allocations, personnel, and records, is hereby transferred to the Department of Commerce, and shall be administered, subject to the supervision, coordination, and policy guidance of the Secretary of Commerce, by the Board of Directors and officers of the Corporation: Provided, That the agency, personnel, property, functions, and all other matters and affairs transferred by, and all reorganizations effected by, Reorganization Plan No. 22 of 1950 and by Reorganization Plan No. 23 of 1950 are excluded from the scope and effect of this Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950 upon the taking effect, respectively, of such Reorganization Plans Nos. 22 and 23.

Plans Nos. 22 and 23 had to do with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It took certain loaning powers from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and transferred them to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. This had to do with loans for housing and with loans for building and constructing prefabricated housing. Those functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have already been transferred. No disapproving resolutions have been filed to them and they will become the law as far as this body is concerned. That leaves in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation its lending powers for industry, particularly for small business, together with some minor functions. This plan No. 24 transfers the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce. That is where the argument comes in.

To state it simply, should we transfer it to the Department of the Treasury or should we transfer it to the Department of Commerce? The Hoover Commission, by a majority report, recommended that it be transferred to the Department of the Treasury. There was a split vote on that. Of the 12 members of the Hoover Commission, 4 or 5 believed it should be sent to the Department of Commerce. The other seven believed it should have gone to the Treasury Department. The President of the United States, in considering the different recommendations, and in looking at the situation as it now exists, upon the advice of those who counseled him upon this matter, came to the conclusion that the welfare of this Nation could be best served by putting the remains of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that now exists into the Department of Commerce. The majority of our committee agreed with that transfer.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was organized in 1932, when Mr. Hoover was President of the United States. At that time the Congress in its judgment and the then President believed that it should be in the Department of Commerce. When originally formed with all of its various lending agencies then attached to it they believed that it should be put in the Department of Commerce and they put it there. How did it get out of the Department of Commerce? You remember the incident: We had a prospective Secretary of Commerce at that time; I think his name was Mr. Wallace; we had a head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; I think his name was Mr. Jones, of Texas. They differed on some important details. Mr. Jones won, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was taken out of the Department of Commerce and has been out of it ever since.

On one thing the Hoover Commission was in accord, that this corporation should no longer be left as a separate agency but that it should be in one of the major departments of the executive branch, and the President has taken steps to carry out that recommendation. As I said, he has taken the lending features relative to housing away from Reconstruction Finance Corporation and put them into the Housing Administration in order that that agency that handled major housing details should take care of that function of government that deals with housing. The ability to make loans there was put into the Home and Housing Agency where it should be. Some of the other corporations under the control of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were put in the Department of Agriculture because those loans came within the general purpose of the Department of Agriculture; and so it is that the remaining part that has to do with business and industry should be placed in that department of the Nation charged with the responsibility of encouraging and promoting business—that is their major purpose—and we take the remaining features of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that have to do with lending to business, encouraging business, and put them in the department whose major objective is to deal with business. That carries out the same program that was set up in plans and was adopted by this House.

There was some difference of opinion with regard to placing it in the Treasury or the Department of Commerce, and such differences of opinion are an entirely normal thing, but it must be remembered that the Treasury does not lend money to business or to individuals; the Treasury does not lend money to private corporations. This would be a new feature set up in a department none of whose major purposes constituted the purpose for which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation exists. So the logical thing to do is to put it in the Department of Commerce and that is what this plan does; it puts it in the Department of Commerce instead of in the Treasury Department.

That is the only question involved, and I submit that good legislative practice would put it into that department whose main objectives are to carry out the functions that now remain in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The issues are clear.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. I yield to my distinguished friend from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. I wish to say that the statement of my colleague and the chairman of that great committee is correct, because when I first introduced the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill creating that organization it was the intention that it should go to the Department of Commerce because the aim was to help small business that suffered so much during the crash of 1929, and the years that followed, 1930, 1931, and 1932; consequently, the resolution and the recommendation of the committee is in the right direction; it belongs to the Department of Commerce.

Mr. DAWSON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HERTER. As a matter of historic record, I think the gentleman from Illinois is incorrect in regard to the original legislation dealing with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It is my recollection that was created under President Hoover's administration and that the first directors were appointed by President Hoover. If the gentleman initiated the legislation on behalf of a Republican President he should be congratulated.

Mr. SABATH. I introduced the first resolution in 1931 creating a lending agency to aid business that was in despair. The House passed the bill, but unfortunately President Hoover vetoed it because he desired an amendment to be inserted whereby the municipalities could not obtain loans unless they were for self-sustaining projects. The bill originally was presented by me and urged by me early in 1931. I had the matter up with Mr. Mellon and Mr. Mills and finally it was passed in 1932 when Hoover was President. But had the bill been passed in 1931 the crash would not have been as great as it finally was.

Mr. HERTER. The gentleman is talking about an amendment to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act but the RFC was already in existence prior to that time.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is mistaken. The first one was when I introduced my bill. There was no Reconstruction Finance Corporation. But I will say this, I did not call it the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I called it in my bill the Federal Finance Relief Corporation because I did not want to leave any insinuation as to the reconstruction that the Republicans might indulge in and that there would be any reconstruction, so I called it the Federal Finance Relief Corporation Act.

Mr. DAWSON. Upon this we are agreed, that it was passed in 1932.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. I would like to ask two questions. First, will the change result in some economy? Second, has this been recommended by the Hoover Commission?

Mr. DAWSON. It has been recommended by the Hoover Commission.

Mr. STEFAN. It has been?

Mr. DAWSON. Will the gentleman permit me to finish?

Mr. STEFAN. Yes.

Mr. DAWSON. It was recommended by the Hoover Commission that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be placed in some department of the Government. The President placed certain activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in those departments and agencies, the chief business of which was to carry out the purposes embodied in portions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act. It also recommended that the remainder be put in the Treasury Department. I tried to explain that. That was by a division vote. Five members of that 12-man commission believed it ought to go into the Department of Commerce, but the majority believed it should go to the Treasury Department. In sending his plan down here and in studying both the majority and minority views, the President of the United States believed in light of present circumstances that it ought to be put into the Department of Commerce and that the minority views should be sustained. That is what we in our judgment will have to decide today, whether the remaining functions should go in the Treasury Department or in the Department of Commerce.

Mr. STEFAN. Will the gentleman answer my question on economy? Will it result in economy?

Mr. DAWSON. Efficiency means economy. When a function is efficiently administered it cannot be less economical than a function inefficiently administered. It is the opinion of the Hoover Commission that the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at present existing in Government is both inefficient and not economical. We believe economy will result.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. Certainly.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. I would like to say that I have great respect for the work done by the gentleman's committee and by the gentleman himself, but I would like to ask the gentleman whether he would agree that if a farmer, for example, were to direct me to put the turkeys in the hen house and I put them in the pig pen, would that be a compliance with the directive?

Mr. DAWSON. I would like to suggest this answer. I think if you were the President of the United States that you, when any problem or recommendation came to you, would deal with that recommendation in the light of existing circumstances, and particularly so when there was such a close division as to whether it go one place or not. Then, if in your judgment you believe that it should go where the minority said, you would to that extent follow the recommendation of the Commission at that time and you would deal with it, whether it would be better to put in the hen house or the turkey house, in the light of existing circumstances.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Would the gentleman be correct, however, in saying it is in compliance with the directive of the Hoover Commission, if the Hoover Commission recommended it go to the Department of the Treasury and the gentleman's committee recommending it go to the Commerce Department?

Mr. DAWSON. I will say this, that the former President of the United States would not expect the present President of the United States to follow every recommendation, dot every "i" and cross every "t." He would expect for him to assume the responsibility that had been on his shoulders to do the thing now that will be for the best interest of the country.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. I thank the gentleman; he answered my question. The recommendation of the Hoover Commission has not been complied with, but an alternative recommendation has been offered.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. I yield.

Mr. KUNKEL. There is one question I would like to ask. The gentleman has been talking about the transference of the remaining functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Do these functions go to the Department of Commerce, or is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation kept intact and the Corporation transferred over into the control of the Department of Commerce?

Mr. DAWSON. The functions are kept under the Board of Directors, sir, but they work under the guidance of the Secretary of Commerce, in dealing with business. Since it is his duty to promote business it is essential to have it within his Department where he can confer with them, and it seems to me it is much better than putting it into a department which does not have those functions.

Mr. KUNKEL. I agree that it should go to the Department of Commerce, but the corporation is kept intact?

Mr. DAWSON. That is right.

Mr. KUNKEL. What really happens is that it goes back to the same system that existed prior to the change, except that certain functions in Reorganization Plans 22 and 23 have been transferred to the home and housing agency.

Mr. DAWSON. That is right.

Mr. KUNKEL. I thank the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the situation which confronts the House today demonstrates the unsoundness of the original reorganization act. Here we have a plan, No. 24, which changes the existing law sent down to the Congress. It becomes the law of the land unless within 60 days one House or the other, by a constitutional majority, rejects the plan. Probably there are now not more than 150 Members of the House in the city of Washington. It would require 218 to reject this plan. You see the situation? Anything that the President wants to send down, and the leadership wants to keep from coming up for a vote until it just happens that many of the Members are out of the city, may become a law because a lack of attendance prevents a veto by the House. The reorganization act changes our whole legislative system. But there is no use talking about that because that is the law today.

Then there is another little thing that illustrates how we can be led astray. There is no question but that the country see the need for efficiency and economy in the operations of the Federal Government. The Hoover Commission made its report, and the country is sold on those two ideas that by the adoption of its recommendations we will get efficiency and economy. The President, clever politician that he is, has taken advantage of the situation, and he is just pinning the Hoover label on every nice little political scheme he has in mind and is sending them down here. I think we have had 27 of them, some of them in accord with the Hoover Commission's recommendations and some, like this one, out of step with those recommendations.

The gentleman can talk all he wants to about the minority on the Hoover Commission. There were minority views. I doubt if there is any one question that ever came before that Commission, unless perhaps it was the issue of increasing the salaries of Federal officials and employees, upon which there was not a dissenting opinion of some kind, and there was on this.

The Hoover Commission recommended that if there was to be a change in the housing of the RFC the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should be transferred to the Department of the Treasury. That is what they recommended. You cannot get away from the record. That was the recommendation. All you need to do is read the recommendations and the report of the task force.

But the Hoover Commission was primarily concerned with delaying any change until the Congress should determine the future of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. We will assume the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was all right when it came into existence but, like every other Federal agency, it has grown and expanded. Instead of being a sort of throw out a life line organization it has developed into a lending organization. It is now proposed by the President to liberalize the lending program.

Those who have studied governmental operations will reach the conclusion, I believe, that lending is to be construed so that after a while a loan will mean a gift, somewhat similar to our foreign policy. We lent, but after a time we just dropped the term "loan"—for the money we advanced turned out to be a gift.

This is one thing the committee had to say, and we quote from our report:

> A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, headed by Senator FULBRIGHT—
>
> A Democrat—
>
> already is engaged in a review of the policies and operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as recommended by the Hoover Commission.

The Commission recommended a study of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and a determination by the Congress of what policy that organization should follow.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. May I ask if there was any testimony before the committee relative to the citizens' committee that followed the Hoover Commission, as to their recommendations upon the transfer of this agency either to the Department of Commerce of the Treasury Department? I am referring to the citizens committee that is set up, I think, in all the States now, that is making recommendations to Members of Congress relative to this plan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Yes; the citizens committee sent up a witness, Mr. McCormick, and his testimony followed very closely the recommendations of the Hoover Commission. We quote from that report. Both the Hoover Commission and the citizens committee for the Hoover Report have given greater emphasis to the Commission's recommendations for a review by Congress of the operations and policies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation than to the question of its location.

The minority of the committee and the Member of the other body wants the Congress first, before it places this organization any place except where it is now to make a study of what the RFC is doing and to determine the future policy of the RFC.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. KUNKEL. There was the bill which drastically curtailed the powers of the RFC which was passed by the Eightieth Congress. Does this plan, which the House passed then, and which was reported out by the Committee on Banking and Currency, which we thought did a pretty good job in cutting the RFC back, change that bill?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. It certainly does. I will read to you from the report on page 16:

> The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, at least until a recent period, has maintained, in general, a reputation for conservatism. Excessive liberalization—

I think this answers the gentleman's question—> of its policies would tend to weaken the financial foundation upon which rests not only the Government but the whole economy as well.

Here at least in my judgment is what they are trying to do. First, they are trying to take advantage of the Hoover Commission's recommendation but ignore the recommendation that a study should first be made. But they want to take advantage of the recommendations that if a change is made it should go to the Treasury Department, but they instead want to switch it over to the Commerce Department. Why? Well, you do not need to be a prophet nor the son of a prophet to understand that. The RFC has had and it undoubtedly will have control of billions of dollars. The RFC has placed some restrictions upon the loaning of that money. We all know the RFC has been fairly liberal with Lustron and with Kaiser and some more borrowers. They have lost some money. In one case they lost $37,000,000 in one chunk. They made some loans which, to say the least, are peculiar. It occurs to me it might be well to have a little more conservatism in the operations of that organization when it is dealing with the taxpayers' dollars, especially if we are to get into a war and we are to have to finance the war.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. HUBER. Did I hear the gentleman say Gabrielson?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. No, I was not aware until it came up in committee that any Republican—I do not know how many Republicans there are—can you tell me how many voted in the last election?—there were not quite enough—has borrowed any large sum of RFC.

Mr. HUBER. No, not quite enough.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I do not know. But there were not quite enough—not quite. I hear some applause—from the left again. I acknowledge it. I am thankful for it. I appreciate the fact that apparently you approve of something I said because I can only assume you are honest and sincere in applauding and encouraging my remarks.

What they propose to do, Mr. Chairman, is this: The RFC has shown a little independence. If they can just move over that lending agency and liberalize it, and lend the money—and I do not assume they will lend very much of it to Republicans—but lend the money to individuals or corporations which will support the so-called Fair Deal, that will be a wonderful, fine thing for the party in power. If you can just get the control of the Department headed by a gentleman—and I am not talking about the present holder of that position—but if you can just get control of the lending of these billions of dollars and get that into the political channel—you see what it means? In addition to all the special favors granted to labor and to others—first to this group and then to that—now, if you can get the businessman and make them dependent for their existence upon the administration, because the holder of a mortgage always has quite a little control over the borrower—you have almost insured, have almost made certain the return of a Democratic Congress. I would not mention Members of the other body who may be able to go to the source and apply for and advise as to loans to be made to influential people who take an interest in politics in their own districts.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman stated that only loans will be made to Democrats. Does not the gentleman know the biggest loan was made to a Republican, former Vice President of the United States, Mr. Dawes, amounting to $90,000,000, and I at that time, as one, approved the loan because I thought it might save many of the banks.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. That loan did save many banks. And the gentleman showed good judgment, because, as I understand, every dollar was paid back and paid back with interest. What is the matter with that? Did not Dawes change his political opinion? Are you quarreling with him about that? Do you think he did not deserve the loan because he did not change his political views? What are you squawking about?

Mr. SABATH. I take exception to the statement that the gentleman said that loans were made only to Democrats. The greatest loans were made to Republicans and the record will bear me out, and the largest one was to Dawes, $90,000,000, and it took 14 years before it was paid back.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Well, they showed good sense, because they got all their money back and with interest. In the Lustron loan you lost something like $37,000,000. Does anyone contend for a moment that you have not used every power within your control to force people into accepting your political philosophy? Attempted recently to silence Congressmen who were critical of the administration? Oh, I know you were educated in the Chicago school of politics.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I yield myself two additional minutes until I tell him about Chicago, and how they operate over there. They operate on a cash basis. I know some precinct committeemen that you got over by favors. That is all right with me, but what I object to your doing now is taking this money of the taxpayers and, under the guise of helping businessmen, shall I say seduce them into going along in support of your party? What you are trying to do here is what you have done in other instances, purchase votes by the distribution of taxpayers' money. If you want to get political on it, I call your attention to the report of a committee of the other body, where they reported that in Texas Federal money appropriated for relief was used to purchase votes, and that the same thing occurred in Kentucky. Now that is the record, if you want it. I realize that we do not have enough here to put this through, but I do not propose to let the plan become law without voicing protest against using again Federal funds to assure a continuance of your party in power.

But now back to plan 24, permit me to read the report of the minority. It is signed by all Republican members of the committee:

Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950, transferring the now independent Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce, is in conflict with a recommendation of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, which proposed to place it in the Treasury Department.

The plan raises issues broader than those relating to efficient organization. It is part of the administration program for what may prove to be a dangerous relaxation of credit policies.

Decision on the proper location of the RFC in the Government structure should be deferred until there is opportunity for more complete consideration of pending legislative measures before other committees. Time also should be given for a comprehensive review by the Congress of policies and operations of this Corporation, which was the major recommendation of the Hoover Commission with respect to it.

The plan should be rejected by approval by the House of Representatives of House Resolution 648.

TERMS OF PLAN

Reorganization Plan No. 24 consists of a single paragraph, the implications of which are far reaching.

It provides that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, together with all of its functions, agencies, property, assets, funds, contracts, loans, liabilities, commitments, authorizations, allocations, personnel, and records, shall be transferred to the Department of Commerce.

The Corporation would continue to be administered by its Board of Directors but—"subject to the supervision, coordination, and policy guidance of the Secretary of Commerce."

Excluded from the scope and effect of the plan are functions relating to housing which are to be transferred to the Housing and Home Finance Agency under Reorganization Plans Nos. 22 and 23, also pending.

ATTITUDE OF HOOVER CITIZENS COMMITTEE

Mr. Robert L. L. McCormick, research director for the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, testified that his group could not support Reorganization Plan No. 24 because of its divergence from the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

The attitude of this group, which is widely representative of a very strong public sentiment favoring adoption of the reorganization program of the Hoover Commission, is that plan No. 24 should not be allowed to become effective until there is a complete congressional review of the policies and operations of the Corporation.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE HOOVER COMMISSION

The Hoover Commission in its report, General Management of the Executive Branch, held that there are an excessive number of departments, administrations, agencies, boards, and commissions engaged in executive work which report directly to the President, if they report to anyone. In its recommendation No. 17 in this report, the Commission proposed that 65 present departments and agencies be consolidated into about one-third that number.

Recommendation No. 12 in the same report was that "the numerous agencies of the executive branch must be grouped into departments as nearly as possible by major purposes in order to give a coherent mission to each department." The Commission added that "by placing functions cheek-by-jowl the overlaps can be eliminated, and, of even greater importance, coordinated policies can be developed."

The Hoover Commission in its report on the Treasury Department pointed out that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation are independent agencies reporting directly to the President, that the President cannot give the time necessary for their supervision, and that, practically, they are accountable to nobody.

The Commission in its recommendation No. 3 in that report proposed that supervision of the operations of these agencies be vested in the Secretary of the Treasury.

With respect to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commission expressed its belief that "the operations of this Corporation, on which we make recommendations in our report on Federal business enterprises, should be placed in the Treasury Department with general responsibility for its supervision vested in the Secretary."

The major recommendations of the Commission with respect to the RFC appear in the report on Federal business enterprises.

Recommendation No. 18 of that report was that the Congress review the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in accord with recommendation No. 8 in the same report relating to lending policies of all corporations.

Recommendation No. 8 was as follows:

"We recommend (a) that the Congress review the power to make loans * * * taking into account the problems of economy, efficiency, and integrity; (b) that in nonemergency periods the Congress place restrictions on direct loans in order to insure that the normal channels of credit are utilized to the maximum extent possible or, alternatively, provide for the guaranty of loans made by private or other established agencies."

DIRECT LOAN ISSUE

The Hoover Commission in recommending that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be placed in the Treasury Department appears to have been influenced by its belief that further direct lending by the Government should be curtailed rather than expanded as proposed in the administration's present program.

The Commission had this to say on direct lending:

"Direct lending by the Government to persons or enterprises opens up dangerous possibilities of waste and favoritism to individuals or enterprises. It invites political and private pressure, or even corruption. Emergencies may arise in depression, war, national defense, or disaster which must be met in this way. But direct lending should be absolutely avoided except for emergencies."

The Commission held that no guaranties of loans should be made on terms more liberal than those made on direct loans and that the Government should not engage in direct lending where loans can be obtained from private sources on reasonable terms.

The Commission did not go as far as its task force on lending agencies, which recommended the liquidation of the RFC.

The Commission expressed its own view on this Corporation as follows:

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation performed a useful and necessary function in the days of the depression and the war. Its life was extended by the Congress on May 25, 1948. The manifest major purpose of that extension was to maintain it as a stand-by agency in case of emergencies. But it still has 31 branch offices and over 3,000 employees.

"This agency is engaged in making direct loans to persons and enterprises, frequently without the participation of private agencies in its risks.

"Our task force strongly recommends the liquidation of this Corporation and the substitution of guaranties by the Government, operating through the Federal Reserve banks, of loans to be made by commercial banks.

"The Commission believes it preferable that the Corporation be reorganized to guarantee loans by commercial banks.

"There may arise cases of needed loans which are not available from private institutions. However, this unavailability, except in the case of emergency or where the national defense is involved, arises from the fact that more than normal risk usually is involved. It may be in the public interest to provide such credit.

"However, the credit of the Government should not be used to obtain lower rates of interest and easier terms than those which private institutions can properly provide."

COORDINATION OF CREDIT AGENCIES

Under the Hoover Commission program, the policies of domestic credit agencies would be coordinated by a National Monetary and Credit Council to be appointed by the President. The Council would be located in the Treasury Department and its chairman would be the Secretary of the Treasury. The various credit and related agencies would be represented on the Council. Its functions in the domestic field would correspond to those of the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems in the foreign field.

By means of the coordinating activities of the proposed National Monetary and Credit Council, the Commission proposed to bring policies of housing credit agencies, which were to be grouped under the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and those of farm credit agencies, which were to remain in the Farm Credit Administration within the Department of Agriculture, into line with those of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Export-Import Bank in the Treasury Department.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation were assigned to the Treasury Department under a listing of that Department's responsibilities which include the maintenance of the public credit, advice in the conduct of credit institutions, and supervision of certain others; and the periodic inspection of lending and other agencies in process of liquidation.

PURPOSE OF REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 24

The President, in his message accompanying Reorganization Plan No. 24, asserted that the activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are designed primarily to aid business, which is the basic mission of the Department of Commerce. He pointed out that a minority of the Hoover Commission favored assignment of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce, the statutory function of which is "to foster, promote, and develop the foreign and domestic commerce."

The President referred to his special message of May 5 on the subject of coordination of Government aids to small and independent business.

The real significance of the reorganization plan becomes apparent upon study of the President's message of May 5 and legislation introduced to effectuate the recommendations of that message.

It is important that the Congress should understand fully the implications of that message in acting upon Reorganization Plan No. 24.

The President in his May 5 message recommended a five point program including, first, insurance of bank loans up to $25,000; second, the chartering of national investment companies; third, broadening of lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; fourth, strengthening and improvement of the technical and managerial aids now provided by the Department of Commerce; and, fifth, placing of responsibility for these new programs in the Secretary of Commerce, including transfer of the RFC to his supervision.

With respect to the broadening of the lending powers of the RFC, the President said:

"The Corporation should be permitted to relax its collateral requirements on loans to small businesses, if management abilities and potential earnings of the borrower afford reasonable expectation of repayment. This amendment will merely give the Corporation the same discretion which many bankers already successfully exercise. The Corporation should also be authorized to increase its participation with private banks on such loans. In addition, I again recommend that the present 10-year maximum maturity on all types of business loans be increased to at least 15 years."

PENDING LEGISLATION

The President's recommendations are before the Congress in S. 3625, which is in the hands of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and H. R. 8565 and H. R. 8566, in the House Committee on Banking and Currency. The bill is designated as the Small Business Act of 1950.

Title III of this measure relates to amendments to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act.

One of the principal proposed amendments would insert the following among present statutory lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation:

"To make loans to any small-business enterprise (as determined pursuant to section 603 of the Small Business Act of 1950, and the classifications established thereunder) which is a worthy credit risk but does not have adequate collateral, either directly or in cooperation with banks or other lending institutions through agreements to participate or by the purchase of participations, or otherwise, for the purpose of meeting the credit requirements of such business enterprise: Provided, That management abilities, potential earnings, and other factors deemed pertinent by the Corporation afford a reasonable expectation that the loan will be repaid."

Section 603, referred to in the proposed amendment, authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to establish such classifications of business enterprises as he deems appropriate. The criteria to be considered in establishing such classifications include the relative size and importance of businesses in an industry, the competitive circumstances and degree of independence, and such other factors as may be appropriate.

The proposed legislation is very broad and raises many highly controversial issues. Members of Congress should realize that approval of Reorganization Plan No. 24 is intended as a part of a movement for liberalization of the credit policies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in a manner contrary to its traditions.

If the entire legislative program is approved, we may expect scandals in RFC lending which would cause the cases which have been subjects of recent public discussion to pale into insignificance.

Liberalization of RFC credit policies would mean a reversal of the policies laid down by the Congress in the acts of 1947 and 1948 which provided for reorganization of the wartime Corporation on a peacetime basis. In both of those laws the Congress declared its purpose to curtail rather than expand the activities of the Corporation.

DIVERGENT VIEWS IN JOINT COMMITTEE ON ECONOMIC REPORT

While a subcommittee on investment of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report issued a report in March recommending Government action to provide capital loans and equity capital to small enterprise, a minority of that committee challenged both its statement of facts and conclusions.

The minority was skeptical of proposals for a liberalization of credit and held that the majority had placed too little emphasis on adverse effects of heavy taxation upon all kinds of business.

The minority report, signed by Senator TAFT and Representative HERTER, said:

"In addition to the shortage of equity capital, the small companies have difficulty in borrowing money on any long-term basis. The testimony is conflicting as to whether money is available on a short-time basis from the banks. We are inclined to think that it is available to the extent that the loans are sound, and we question the desirability of the Government stimulating short-term loans which are not sound."

These minority party members held that the principal causes of the disinclination of private investors to invest in common stocks and other forms of equity capital are high tax rates on middle and higher incomes, discrimination against investors in common stocks because of double taxation, and tax difficulties confronted by all business enterprises.

INVESTIGATION BY FULBRIGHT SUBCOMMITTEE

A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, headed by Senator FULBRIGHT, already is engaged in a review of the policies and operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as recommended by the Hoover Commission.

Senator FULBRIGHT in testimony before the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments on Reorganization Plan No. 24 asked for its rejection. He stated that his subcommittee could not complete its work before the effective date of the reorganization plan.

It was Senator FULBRIGHT's opinion that a decision by the Congress on the future policies of the RFC should precede any action as to its place in the Government structure.

Disclosures before the Fulbright subcommittee have been of such a disturbing character as to provide a warning against further liberalization of lending policies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as proposed to accompany its transfer to the Department of Commerce.

INTEGRITY OF GOVERNMENT CREDIT

Maintenance of the integrity of the Government's credit is of fundamental importance to the entire American economy.

It is essential that the lending agencies of the Government should maintain standards on a par with those of private banking. Loose methods could lead to Government bankruptcy in the same way that lax financial policies undermine private banking and business.

Heretofore, agencies with very liberal policies to meet depression or other emergencies have been kept apart from those which have kept their practices on a sound basis.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, at least until a recent period, has maintained in general, a reputation for conservatism.

Excessive liberalization of its policies would tend to weaken the financial foundation upon which rests not only the Government but the whole economy as well.

CONCLUSION

The issues which are in the background of Reorganization Plan No. 24 are clearly of such a nature as to call for caution.

It is neither necessary nor desirable to take snap action on this plan without full consideration of related legislative questions. Other committees than those on Expenditures in the Executive Departments in the two Houses of Congress are concerned with these related matters. The status of pending legislation and investigations is such as to preclude any possibility of action on related issues prior to the effective date of Reorganization Plan No. 24.

The Hoover Commission and the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report have made a convincing showing for the transfer of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Treasury Department rather than to the Department of Commerce, assuming a decision of Congress to chart the Corporation's course along sound lines.

Both the Hoover Commission and the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report have given greater emphasis to the Commission's recommendation for a review by Congress of operations and policies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation than to the question of its location.

Such a review should clarify the issues in a manner to facilitate a decision as to whether the Corporation should be placed in the Department of Commerce or the Treasury Department.

Reorganization Plan No. 24 should be rejected by approval by the House of Representatives of House Resolution 648. Nothing will be lost by such rejection. The question can be reopened at a later date after questions of legislative policy have been decided.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN].

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the President's Reorganization Plan No. 24. I believe we should adopt this plan now.

The statement has been made in some quarters that this plan might conceivably be deferred in its taking effect and operation until present congressional inquiries have been completed. It would be well to point out that this plan goes to the structural and programming activities of this Corporation, and the findings of any congressional group now or later can be carried out as well with the Corporation within the framework of the Department of Commerce as under its present circumstances. Such scrutiny by the Congress from time to time is highly productive and performs a most valuable service, but any examination of the feasibility of continuing corporate lending powers or appraisals of judgment in regard to specific loans is not at issue here. These matters will appertain during the authorized lifetime of any governmental corporation. Each of these inquiries by the Congress has produced one abiding conclusion: This Corporation is left singularly to operate too much on its own.

The Hoover Commission, while acknowledging that the President has over-all direction of the executive branch, realized immediately that his attention and control cannot be of the intensive interest necessary; therefore, they conclude that "practically the RFC is accountable to nobody."

The result of Reorganization Plan No. 24 would be to make the RFC responsible to somebody and would, in effect, seek to place its functions under a major department related by goal, aims, and purpose.

Today we have the opportunity to set in motion the legislation which will accomplish this laudable purpose, by rejecting House Resolution 648, and thereby support Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVENPORT].

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Chairman, in testimonial to the greatness of the American family, I have introduced a resolution calling for the establishment of National Family Day to be honored on the third Sunday in September each year. We set aside a day each year to pay our respects to the mothers of America and another day to honor our fathers. To complete the circle of endearment, I have introduced this resolution so that we may take time each year to consider the importance and the wonders of family life. In the years ahead, the third Sunday in September will take its place in American life as one of our most treasured days.

At a time when the forces of communism test our very national existence, it is the family to which we must turn to preserve the sanctity of our way of life and to show the beleaguered outside world that in the end evil will be vanquished.

No nation can be greater than its families. A nation with weak family ties is a weak nation; a nation with poor families, families with little hope, or disintegrated family life is easy prey to the false promises of communism. The best bulwark against communism is a nation with strong and healthy family ties. American family life must be kept stable and healthy. We must accent our economic and political activities in this direction. National Family Day will serve each family as a yardstick each year to measure the degree of kinship and joy in such relationships.

If everything is right with the American family, we need have little concern with the future welfare of this great Nation. The family is the social cell; the family is the teacher; the family produces the citizen. Virtue is the basis of good citizenship and where is virtue developed? Only in a good home.

None of us is a creature of the State. The State is our servant. We are born into a family and we spend our formative years in its bosom. The child's entire world is his family and even when he is moving through adolescence, he returns to the family as the fulcrum of his existence. Who would question that the family is most responsible in molding the youth as he stands on the threshold of maturity? Who would question that he is essentially a product of his family. All his tastes, attitudes, temperaments and personalities are shaped by family life. The better the family life, the loftier the individual mind, the more exalted the nation, the better our future.

We honor our mothers on a special day, as we should. Yet it is family life which gives her the basic peace, dignity and security which are her characteristic lot throughout our land. On another special day we honor our fathers. Yet it is their family ties which ennoble and provide a steadying influence upon our men. For both mother and father, family life establishes and develops a deep sense of responsibility and promotes their growth in selflessness, sacrifice, and patience.

We struggle within the most complex economic market place ever known to mankind to provide our families with the essentials of life. And we are happiest when our families are content, secure, and healthy. It is therefore my purpose in introducing this resolution establishing National Family Day that we take time out each year to appreciate this wonderful institution and to think of ways to make it even more extraordinary.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HUBER].

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Chairman, it might be well for the better understanding of the circumstances surrounding this legislation to restate briefly the nature and purpose of the agency most affected. January 22, 1932, saw the establishment of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It performed a great service during a severe and dark depression era, and World War II, of recent memory. From time to time its basic legislation has been altered within the orginal act and upon occasion separate statutes have emphasized some phase or other of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation program. This Corporation has proved to be a valuable contribution to the stabilization of our national economy. It has provided the vehicle for the safeguarding of our Nation's banking, insurance, and industrial enterprises.

Generally, the present Reconstruction Finance Corporation is permitted to make loans on adequate security to business enterprises including railroads and other carriers, to banking and financial institutions and public agencies engaged in financing or developing public works or projects, where in such cases credit elsewhere cannot be obtained on reasonable terms. The total Reconstruction Finance Corporation authorization now aggregates $3,880,000,000—with $825,000,000 to be employed for business loans; $200,000,000 for public agency loans; $40,000,000 for catastrophe loans; $15,000,000 for insurance loans; the greater share of the total, $2,750,000,000 goes to the Federal National Mortgage Association, and there is $50,000,000 for prefabricated-housing loans. These two latter functions and funds are transferred out of Reconstruction Finance Corporation by Reorganization Plans No. 22 and 23 of 1950, respectively.

An evaluation of the mission of this organization gives the membership an opportunity to bring new policy guidance program and direction to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Reorganization Plan No. 24 is a sincere legislative vehicle which will result in proving in its field a most effective element in our business life.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TAURIELLO].

Mr. TAURIELLO. Mr. Chairman, as a former examiner with the RFC in the Buffalo district, I rise to support this reorganization plan.

Mr. Chairman, one of the basic recommendations of the Hoover Commission in their examination of the executive branch of our Government took the form that the total of our executive agencies should be reduced to approximately one-third of their present number. In order to effectively carry this out, it becomes necessary to consider the grouping and fusion of related agencies, and the various missions which have been created for the major departments. Reorganization Plan No. 24 is an important step in this direction. It seeks to place a function important in our economy, that is, the lending function or power to loan money to our business world when funds from private credit sources are not available at reasonable terms. Commerce Department concerns itself with our business life; the Reconstruction Finance Corporation concerns itself with lending for the fostering and development of our business life. The purpose of both these organizations are inextricably interwoven. Lending is a concomitant of our business life; it is the blood of our business veins. Successful adoption of this plan will be a recognition of the joint role played by these two important forces.

If we are to succeed in reducing the size of our executive structure for the promotion of simpler government, a plan of this nature for these functions and many more like them throughout the length and breadth of the executive branch must be evolved, presented to the House and successfully enacted.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BURNSIDE].

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this reorganization plan.

Mr. Chairman, this transfer, which proposes to place the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in the Department of Commerce, would result in the Secretary of Commerce having a realm of interest in its supervision, coordination, and policy guidance. It would be interesting for the membership to know the testimony of the Honorable Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Commerce, in this regard. In his unequivocal endorsement of this transfer he had this to say:

> You may wish me to indicate for you how I, as Secretary of Commerce, would approach my new responsibility of guiding the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in matters of policy.
>
> The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act of 1948 authorizes the Corporation to make loans and purchase obligations in order "to aid in financing agriculture, commerce, and industry, to encourage small business, to help in maintaining the economic stability of the country, and to assist in promoting maximum employment and production." The intent of this language seems clear to me. For it to be translated into practical policy, however, requires that the Corporation's board know the facts concerning a very wide range of business and economic activity. It must know where its aid in financing commerce and industry is most needed. It must know what is to be regarded as small business. It must know in what areas or industries small business is in need of aid. It must have some solid basis for judging how loans can be made most effective in promoting maximum production and employment.

Secretary Sawyer added:

> I am convinced * * * that such guidance is most appropriately furnished by the official who is charged with precisely this general area of public policy in all its aspects, nonfinancial as well as financial, and statistical and analytical as well as operating.

In these words we have the proposition presented that the interchange of information and coordination of programing can lend better direction, improved service, and economy.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I may not need to use the 15 minutes, and I want to approach this question entirely frankly without indulging in partisanship, Democrats versus Republicans. I am not criticizing anything that happened before; I just want to make a few remarks about the President's plan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. In reply to what the gentleman said about not getting politics into it, if the gentleman will recall, I never mentioned politics until the chairman mentioned Mr. Gabrielson.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I am sure the gentleman had no intention of referring to politics.

In the consideration of the Hoover Commission recommendations we just cannot pick out one recommendation and eliminate or ignore the other recommendations. There is bound to be a diversity of opinion as to just how closely any piece of legislation, whether it be substantive legislation or a Presidential plan, conforms to the all-over Hoover recommendations when you consider them together.

Let me say at the outset that this plan 24 does not conform 100 percent to the Hoover Commission recommendation, because one of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission was that the RFC should go into the Treasury. I want to show, however, where it does conform to other recommendations of the Hoover Commission which are more important than the final location of the RFC itself. In the first place, one of the major purposes of the Hoover Commission was to eliminate as many independent bureaus and agencies as possible, and there were about 67 of them, which reported directly to the President, and consolidate them in the executive departments, give them departmental status, put them where they should be in relation to the functions of the particular executive department. So in the placing of this particular independent corporation, the RFC, the President and his advisers had to consider that; and they also had to consider the placing of the Corporation in a department according to major purpose.

Plan 22 of the President's plans transferred 75 percent of the RFC functions, in terms of statutory authorization, over to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. About $2,750,000,000 of the $3,880,000,000 was transferred to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. For what purpose? For the major purpose of implementing the housing program. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, therefore, was not looked upon as a major purpose; it was looked upon as an enabling corporation to enable other major departments and major projects to function better in the Government. So the part that had to do with implementation of the housing program was sent over to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Plan No. 23 sent over the prefabrication financing also to the Housing and Home Finance Agency, because it had to be there to do the job of housing. This left approximately 25 percent of the original Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and in that category was embraced about $800,000,000 of loans to business. That was the second large piece of the RFC.

Where should that go? Should it go to Treasury just because dollars are involved? No, it should not go to Treasury; it should go to the place where it could be used for the major purpose for which it has already been used, which is loans to business.

Where is the executive department whose major function is the promotion of business? We know that is the Department of Commerce. Therefore, this second large piece of the RFC was transferred to Commerce, and there it is to perform part of the major function which is to promote and cause business to prosper.

A few other items, such as authorization of $75,000,000, loans to insurance companies, were also put there, as well as about $40,000,000 in so-called catastrophe loans to different areas where flood damage and other great damage had occurred. Those also went to Commerce. That was the tail end, you might say, of RFC.

So in the sending of the $800,000,000 part of the RFC and the $75,000,000 and the $40,000,000 you were sending it to the place where it should be sent according to the major purpose of the Hoover Commission, because you had to make the decision as to whether lending is a major purpose of Government or whether financing is a tool for the departments of Government to use to accomplish their major purpose. That in a nutshell is the reason why Commerce was chosen in place of Treasury.

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HAND. Would the gentleman inform the committee who the members of the Hoover Commission were who voted on this subject?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Seven members of the Hoover Commission, a majority, voted to send it to Treasury.

Mr. HAND. The gentleman from Illinois told us that. I mean the personnel.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I do not think I have that, but I will place it in the RECORD with my remarks.

I want to point out something which is very important, and that is that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] is opposed to all of these plans. He undoubtedly would have been opposed to this plan had it been given to Treasury because he is against the Reorganization Act.

Another thing I want to point out is that the function of RFC is not changed. RFC still is to be administered by the board of the RFC and not by the Secretary of Commerce. It still has to be administered according to the policies set forth by the Congress during the Eightieth Congress because that was the last time the RFC Act was amended. So that is not changed. The Eightieth Congress made certain limitations on the RFC and extended its life to 1954 so far as lending purposes were concerned. Had the Congress at that time wanted to do away with RFC it would have done away with RFC; but it recognized that RFC had a legitimate function to perform. So the Congress extended the life of that agency.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. How much money will be saved by this proposal?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is a question which it is impossible to determine. The same answer is applicable to every piece of legislation which we passed in relation to the Hoover Commission recommendations, whether it be in the form of substantive legislation or in the form of a Presidential plan. The President is required by the Reorganization Act to say that it will save money, but he is not required to say how much. I do not think the President or any of us can judge until it is put into effect how much it will save. But this plan is following the grouping according to major purpose, it is eliminating the small, independent corporations and putting them into executive departments. It is placing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in an executive department, although it is put in a different department. I hope the gentleman remembers that conditions have changed since the original Hoover Commission made its recommendation. Conditions have changed, and 75 percent of the RFC is being transferred to the Housing and Home Finance Agency by plans 22 and 23, so what is left is being transferred to the place where it will do its duty as an enabling tool to the Department of Commerce, whose purpose is to foster and promote business.

Mr. CURTIS. Was there any evidence offered on the subject as to how much it might save?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. In terms of actual dollars, no; there has been no definite testimony offered on any of the bills. There have been rough estimates, but I assure you they are rough, because in the administration of legislation and plans based on the Hoover Commission recommendation, the administration itself will have to develop those savings. We have been given a rough estimate that there will be approximately $3,000,000,000 saved, and I am talking about all the recommendations.

Mr. CURTIS. How much have they saved to date?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Well, we have not had a fiscal year as yet under even part of the plan.

Mr. CURTIS. How many employees have been let out by reason of what has been adopted?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I cannot answer that.

Mr. CURTIS. Any?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I have no knowledge.

Mr. CURTIS. Have any?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I think some have been let out and some have been hired.

Mr. CURTIS. Well, do we have more or less?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I could not give the gentleman that answer.

Mr. CURTIS. Well, do we have any more agencies now?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. We have many less. Let me put it this way: We have grouped the agencies together according to major purposes, and there are less independent agencies reporting to the President.

Mr. CURTIS. The agencies are still there?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. The agencies are still there, and the Hoover Commission did not recommend that the agencies be abolished.

Mr. CURTIS. Have you created any new agencies?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. No.

Mr. CURTIS. The general service agency was not a new one?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. No. It was a consolidation of existing agencies. Let me be very fair. My friend, the gentleman from Michigan, says that it is a new agency. If he considers putting seven or eight agencies together into one group and calling it a new agency, that is a new agency.

Mr. CURTIS. What happened to the personnel in that move? Do you have more or less than when you started?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I cannot answer that question. Being very frank, I think we have more at the present time in the General Services Administration than we had before, because the Hoover Commission put upon the General Services Administration additional duties.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. While I was out of the Chamber answering a telephone call I was advised that the gentleman from California made the statement that I was opposed to the original reorganization bill giving the President authority to send down plans. The gentleman is correct in that; I was opposed, because I did not want to make it possible for the President to get legislation through unless one House or the other exercised its veto power. I also understand the gentleman made the statement that I had opposed the Hoover Commission recommendations. I am sure the gentleman does not mean that because he must know, sitting on the committee, that I do not oppose all those.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I said that as far as I knew, the gentleman had opposed all of the Presidential plans.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Oh, no.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. If am wrong, will the gentleman tell me which plan he supported?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. All those that have gone through without objection. I did not oppose those. How many have gone through? A dozen or more.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. The gentleman spoke against every one of them.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. No. We have not even had a vote on some of them.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Any Presidential plan that has been brought to the floor of this House I say that the gentleman from Michigan has spoken against, and I believe the RECORD will bear me out.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. That might be, but the gentleman says nothing about the plans that I am not opposed to. The gentleman only has a half truth in there.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I apologize if I said "half truth," because I believe the gentleman is sincere and I do not want to put him in the wrong light.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. There are several of these plans, and maybe what I should have done is to have introduced a resolution, which I did not do. I am sure the gentleman knows me well enough to know that, being here practically all the time and seldom missing a roll call, as the gentleman is fully aware, I would have introduced a resolution to disapprove of the plan if I had been against it.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. The gentleman's logic is unanswerable and his service to his people in their opinion no doubt is unparalleled.

So, Mr. Chairman, I believe the argument as to where this agency should go has been determined by the change of events and by the logic of dividing up this facility and placing it where it will accomplish the major purposes of the different departments where it is being sent.

As to the policy of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as to whether it makes loans to Democratic or Republicans or whether it makes loans on prefabricated housing or loans to insurance companies, or makes catastrophe loans or housing loans, that has not been changed and will not be changed by the transfer that is contemplated here. If that has to be changed, it will be the job of the Congress to change it. The functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation still remain under its Board of Directors and will continue as the law which is now written requires.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. The gentleman says it will be under the Board of Governors. Will they be responsible to the Secretary of Commerce?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. They will be responsible to the Secretary of Commerce as far as guidance and as far as reports are concerned, but as far as carrying out the basic function of the Reconstruction Act is concerned they will not. For instance, the Congress in the last amendment, I believe it was the 1948 amendment, put in a clause which said that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should foster loans to small business. It would be, in my opinion, within the category of the power of the Secretary of Commerce to advise the acting Board that he wanted small-business loans, he wanted that particular expressed will of Congress carried out if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Board was not carrying it out, but he would not say to the Board, "You shall loan to A, B, C, or D."

Mr. STEFAN. Would the Secretary have veto power over any decision of the Board of Governors?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. No, in my opinion he would not have any veto power. The basic Reconstruction Finance Corporation law gives that to its Board of Directors.

Mr. STEFAN. It would be really another division in the Department of Commerce, would it not?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Yes, in effect it would be one of the subdepartments of the Department of Commerce.

Mr. STEFAN. Would the relationship of the Secretary of Commerce be similar to his present relationship to the Patent Office, the Bureau of Standards, the Weather Bureau, the Bureau of the Census, and so on?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. It would not be identical, because the plan itself provides that the Secretary of Commerce shall have guidance, and that the Board of Directors shall execute the policy expressed by Congress in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DAWSON. I think the words of the Secretary will answer the gentleman's question. He testified before our committee:

> You may wish me to indicate for you how I, as Secretary of Commerce, would approach my new responsibility of guiding the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in matters of policy.
>
> The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act of 1948 authorizes the Corporation to make loans and purchase obligations in order "to aid in financing agriculture, commerce, and industry, to encourage small business, to help in maintaining the economic stability of the country, and to assist in promoting maximum employment and production." The intent of this language seems clear to me. For it to be translated into practical policy, however, requires that the Corporation's Board know the facts concerning a very wide range of business and economic activity. It must know where its aids in financing commerce and industry is most needed. It must know what is to be regarded as small business. It must know in what areas or industries small business is in need of aid. It must have some solid basis for judging how loans can be made most effective in promoting maximum production and employment.

Secretary Sawyer added:

> I am convinced * * * that such guidance is most appropriately furnished by the official who is charged with precisely this general area of public policy in all its aspects, nonfinancial as well as financial, and statistical and analytical as well as operating.

Mr. STEFAN. Does that statement by Mr. Sawyer mean putting the RFC in the Department of Commerce as a division of that Department and that it will integrate the RFC with the operations of foreign and domestic commerce and the Department of Commerce field offices and other divisions of the Department?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. If I may answer the gentleman, it will be grouping together the aids to business. One of the aids is financing. Other aids are advice and statistics which the Department of Commerce gives to business. Those would be grouped together into one major executive department.

Mr. STEFAN. Will it then result in some reorganization of the various divisions of the Department of Commerce?

Mr. DAWSON. No.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I would not think so. I think it would merely place the tool which they need to function that much closer in a closer interrelationship.

Mr. STEFAN. Should there be some duplication on the part of the RFC concerning research in small business, which they get through the field offices of the Department of Commerce and through the Census, and other divisions, would it be possible for them to secure some of the employees in their division and eliminate the duplications in the RFC?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Certainly the major purpose of the Hoover Commission's recommendations is to place these functions together so that one man will be responsible for seeing where they overlap and duplicate and he is required to eliminate that duplication and overlapping of function.

Mr. STEFAN. Is that not the answer to the possibility of efficiency and economy in order to eliminate that duplication? So there would be some separation from the payrolls of employees who are operating in duplication activities?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Yes, sir; I think the President brought out in his message that would be one of the fields where savings could be made. However, he was unable to say how much.

Mr. STEFAN. Yes, but the Secretary has no control under a veto power of the action of the Governors in making loans.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. No, sir; absolutely none, and he so testified.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. We have an agency known as Fannie May, which is part of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which is officered by people who work with the RFC. What becomes of the jurisdiction of Fannie May to buy and sell GI securities?

Fannie May is organized for the purpose of creating a secondary market for the GI loans. What becomes of Fannie May?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I am glad the gentleman asked that question, because I know how interested he is in secondary mortgages financing questions in the Committee on Banking and Currency of which he is a distinguished member. Under plan No. 22, $2,750,000,000 of authorizations which is in the Federal National Mortgage Association at this time, goes over to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. That was the point I made, that 75 percent of RFC has been transferred to the agency by plan No. 22, but the functions of FNMA are not changed and will be changed only by action of the gentleman's committee.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. But you are undertaking to make a banking institution of the Housing Administration when it is not supposed to be a bank. The purpose of Fannie May is to buy and sell securities.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is true.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. For that reason it ought to be in the RFC, because that is a financial institution working with the banks. Therefore, it ought not to be separated. One agency builds homes, and all they do is to market the loans. They do not make the loans. You are transferring the banking activities of the RFC over into General Housing.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. But we are not now discussing that particular plan.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I understand that.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That plan would have to rest on its own merits. Probably that plan will come before the Congress. However, I will give the gentleman the reasoning on that transfer, without taking any position on it myself. The reasoning was that the major purpose of housing was to be located in the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has again expired.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. And that the financing of these houses was not the major purpose of government, but was an incidental purpose to the accomplishment of building the houses. Therefore, it was put in the agency which the Congress said had the major purpose of creating housing. That is the reasoning.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I know that is the reasoning, but at the same time you have transferred a financial institution over to an agency that is supposed to know nothing about financing or banking. You are putting them in the banking business.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. It will still function according to the FNMA Act.

This resolution before the House is a resolution of disapproval. Therefore, if you want Plan No. 24 you must vote "No" on the resolution of disapproval. In other words, a "no" vote on the resolution to disapprove is a "yes" vote for plan No. 24. I urge you to vote "No."

REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 24 OF 1950

Reorganization Plan No. 24 of 1950 proposes to transfer the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce. This is a simple transfer plan. The change merely places the RFC under the supervision, coordination, and policy guidance of the Secretary of Commerce. The administration of the Corporation's affairs, as such, is not affected. The corporate entity of the RFC is preserved intact. The plan states that the RFC "shall be administered, subject to the supervision, coordination, and policy guidance of the Secretary of Commerce, by the Board of Directors and officers of the Corporation."

I emphasize the words "shall be administered by the Board of Directors and officers of the Corporation." Opponents of this plan have contended—and contended wrongly—that the Secretary of Commerce might assign RFC functions to other officers or units in the Department of Commerce and break up the corporate structure of the RFC. These opponents cite Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1950 which, as you will recall, centered authority and responsibility in the Secretary of Commerce to organize and administer the affairs of his Department. The legal relationship between the earlier plan—No. 5—and the present plan—No. 24—should be clearly understood. The later plan qualifies and limits the earlier one.

The functions of RFC and its officers are being transferred not to the Secretary but to the Department of Commerce. The Corporation is being transferred as an entity, and the functions remain within it. Its status within the Department under Reorganization Plan No. 24 will be generally analogous to that of 35 other wholly owned Government corporations now within departments or agencies or subject to the supervision of department heads.

The Attorney General has rendered a legal opinion to the effect that plan No. 24, as a later enactment, cannot be altered by prior authority of plan 5.

The justification for Reorganization Plan No. 24 lies in the fact that the primary purpose of the RFC, as defined by Congress, is to engage in lending activities in aid of business. This is part of the larger purpose conferred upon the Department of Commerce by its organic law. Consequently, in line with the Hoover Commission's basic recommendation for grouping similar activities under unified and responsible administrative leadership, the RFC should be placed within the Department of Commerce.

I emphasize again that Reorganization Plan No. 24 would not authorize the Secretary of Commerce to transfer the functions of RFC to other officers and agencies of the Department, nor will the Secretary have a legal right to administer the Corporation or to compel the RFC Board to take a specific action. The function of the Secretary of Commerce will be to supervise, coordinate, and give policy guidance. The Secretary would prescribe, for example, a policy that loans must be made to small business, but he would not and could not direct that particular firm A, B, C, or D should get the loans.

The supervision which the Secretary would exercise over RFC through this plan would mean the right to have something to say about general procedures, their legality, and so forth. Internal management of the RFC would stay with its Board and officers.

The Hoover Commission recommended that the RFC be brought within the structure of the executive departments. There was a difference of opinion among the Commission members as to what Department was most appropriate to contain the RFC. A majority preferred the Treasury; a minority preferred Commerce. The President has taken the position, after careful study, that the purpose of the RFC is clearly to aid domestic business and therefore should be placed within the Department of Commerce. The Treasury does not engage in lending operations to private individuals or corporations. Nor is lending, in the financial sense, a major purpose of government. Loans to business are made for the broader purpose of promoting the development and stability of business. The Department of Commerce now extends various technical and managerial aids to business. Lending should be coordinated with these other services under the supervision of the Secretary of Commerce.

Analogous relationships are to be found in the Department of Agriculture where we have combined financial and nonfinancial activities to serve the broader purposes of agricultural development. Similarly we have brought together financial and nonfinancial activities in the Housing and Home Finance Agency to promote the building of homes. In fact, by several other pending reorganization plans, we will transfer RFC activities in the housing field to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Thus, the Federal National Mortgage Association, an RFC subsidiary which provides additional sources of credit by maintaining a secondary market for home mortgages through its authority to purchase mortgages on homes and rental housing projects insured by FHA or guaranteed by VA, is to be transferred to the Housing and Home Finance Agency by Reorganization Plan No. 22 of 1950.

Also, the authority of the RFC under the Housing Act of 1948 to make loans or to purchase the obligations of business enterprises engaged in the prefabricated housing industry and in large-scale modernized site construction, is to be transferred to the Housing and Home Finance Agency by Reorganization Plan No. 23 of 1950.

It may be noted that by far the greater part of the RFC's statutory authorizations relate to the Federal National Mortgage Association, which is to be shifted to the central housing agency. RFC authorizations now total $3,880,000,000 of which $2,750,000,000 or about 70 percent are assigned by law to the FNMA.

In considering the appropriateness of the proposed transfer of the RFC to the Department of Commerce, the members may recall that the RFC was once before in the Department of Commerce as a part of the Federal Loan Agency. It was taken out of that Department later for reasons completely unrelated to matters of organization.

Opponents of this plan have tried to rest their case on the Hoover Commission recommendation that the direct lending operations of the RFC be reviewed by the Congress. They want this plan held up or shelved until Congress decides what to do with RFC. To this I say that transfer of the RFC to the Department of Commerce by plan No. 24 does not preclude any subsequent decision of the Congress as to its location and proper scope of duties. Practically every Congress investigates the RFC, and if we wait for a final expression of congressional policy, we will never be able to effect any reorganization in this field. The Eightieth Congress made a comprehensive investigation of RFC and passed laws in 1947 and 1948 regarding its basic functions. The 1948 law, after extensive investigation by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee pursuant to Senate Resolutions 132 and 208 of the Eightieth Congress, extended the Corporation for 8 years, so presumably the future of RFC is determined to that extent at least.

It is plainly evident, from a reading of the Hoover Commission reports, that the majority of the Commission was opposed to direct lending as a Government policy. Whatever the grounds of their opposition, these Commission members were taking a stand on policy matters not within their proper sphere of jurisdiction. Whether direct lending is good or bad policy, it has nothing to do with matters of organization. Mr. Robert McCormick, executive secretary of the Citizen's Committee for the Hoover report, acknowledged as much in his testimony on plan No. 24 before the Senate Committee on Expenditures.

In any event, I call to your attention the fact that the Congress has many times reviewed the lending and other activities of the RFC. The committee of the Eightieth Congress which reported out the bill to renew and extend the life of RFC said that "there are sound reasons which justify the continuation of RFC on a permanent basis"—Eightieth Congress, second session, Senate Report No. 974, page 5. The committee also declared:

> The committee believes that the public interest will be served by the presence of a Government lending agency to which an applicant who has been declined credit among private sources of credit may go for a reconsideration of his proposal (ibid., p. 7).

And furthermore, that committee of the Eightieth Congress, in reporting out the RFC legislation, emphasized that RFC lending powers should not be hedged in with statutory qualifications and conditions.

The Congress, in 1948, added small business to the lending objectives of RFC and extended the life of that agency until 1956. At any time the Congress can decide to shorten or lengthen that period of RFC life. It can decide to liberalize or to curtail RFC lending operations. Bills are now pending to expand its lending powers. But whatever the Congress may decide to do about RFC's duration or lending policies is not affected in any way by this reorganization plan.

The only matter—an organization matter—which we are asked to settle by this plan is a coordination of financial aids to business with other aids to business rendered by the Department of Commerce.

I urge the Members to reject this disapproving resolution and to support Reorganization Plan No. 24 as a sensible step in the grouping of major Government activities relating to business within the Department of Commerce.

Mr. LOVRE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER].

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, I realize the hour is late and that the Members are perhaps tired of having this matter discussed. However, I do want to say a few words in regard to this disapproval resolution, which I favor, and I hope the Members will vote "yes" when it comes to a vote.

The purpose of any reorganization is either to save money or to shift responsibility to an agency or a person where the responsibility properly belongs. This reorganization plan can, under no circumstances, be said to save money. There was a colloquy a few moments ago which indicated that possibly under the Secretary of Commerce it would be possible to save some money in the RFC. That seems to me absolutely absurd. The very function of the RFC, as the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BROWN] has just brought out, is essentially a banking function. There is nothing in the Department of Commerce today that has anything to do with banking or credit or the determination of credit facilities. That is an entirely new function and responsibility put into the Department of Commerce, and, obviously, the old existing personnel will have to be kept on. I see no possibility for any saving of money.

The second question involved is whether or not the transfer of responsibility to a new chief is a desired thing. The Hoover Commission report made it clear that there were too many independent agencies, all of which had to report to the President of the United States, thereby overburdening him with too many responsibilities, and that those independent agencies ought to be grouped logically and in accordance with their functions, under a Cabinet officer, whenever possible, or under new agency heads. In this particular case the regrouping that is performed is entirely contrary to the Hoover Commission report. The Hoover Commission reported that three independent agencies of Government—the RFC, the Export-Import Bank, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation—should all three be put under the Secretary of the Treasury. Here we have one taken out of the three and put under the Secretary of Commerce. In other words, the two primary reasons for any reorganization bill are, first, the saving of money, and, second, better organization. It seems to me there is still another reason why we should not act at this time, that this reorganization plan is entirely premature. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was created as an emergency organization. It served, in my opinion, an extremely useful function in emergencies, during the depression period and then during the war period. It took unto itself a lot of subsidiary corporations, a lot of subsidiary banking and lending operations that were extremely valuable in time of stress. What is intended now, though, is that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should become a permanent body, as a money-lending agency to private industry in the hands of the Department of Commerce. It seems to me that it is premature to make any such decision as that today.

I happen to be a member of the Committee on the Economic Report that has been studying the question of small businesses' need for capital today. There has not been a suggestion before that committee that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is the agency to help small business. There have been such suggestions, but all of them have been predicated on what to my mind is a great misapprehension as to the proper way to help small business.

There is no sense in talking partisan politics here, but there is no greater temptation in the world to the playing of partisan politics than to allow the government to make small direct loans to business concerns. That I think has been shown over and over again in the experience of other countries. It is clearly something that in peacetime we should be getting away from in this country. If small business needs aid it is infinitely better that it be given by guaranteeing a part of the loan which has already been made by a private institution than it is to make the loan from the Government direct. I do not think there is a single economist who disagrees with that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 additional minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, I shall not take all of that time, but I do want to recapitulate. There is absolutely no hurry insofar as this matter is concerned. Let us be frank about it. This is a measure that we have here before us that has got to be examined by both bodies. The other body under the Reorganization Act has before it a disapproving resolution on which it must act within a 60-day period which expires next week.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentle yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. In the Eightieth Congress, in Public Law 548 the following language was added to the function of the RFC: "To encourage small business."

Mr. HERTER. I am familiar with that.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That was placed in the RFC Act at the insistence of the Eightieth Congress. I heartily approved it. As to the policy involved, that is not changed by the plan, as the gentleman knows.

Mr. HERTER. Not a bit.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. As to the merit of the policy, that was something that was decided in the Eightieth Congress and has not been changed.

Mr. HERTER. I know that is true; nevertheless, I disagree with it, whether it was done by the Eightieth Congress or any preceding Congress.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. It is not at issue here and I agree with the gentleman that in the making of loans whether it be to small business or to large business, there is always danger of loss, and particularly in connection with RFC operations, because they only lend after the regular private lending institutions have refused to lend because possibly of the long time needed to amortize the loan, or the rate of interest is too high, or for some other reason that makes it unprofitable for a private bank to lend. That has been accepted as one of the necessities for RFC operation.

Mr. HERTER. With the RFC operation, taking into consideration times of serious depression or times of emergency such as we have been through, I fully approve of its being used as a means of financing certain operations.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Did the gentleman approve of it in the Eightieth Congress which was not a time of depression?

Mr. HERTER. I cannot recall voting for it at that time. If I did, I am sorry I did insofar as that is the only thing which concerns, I think, all of us who have a natural sympathy and who want to help small business. I think we are likely to do very foolish things because of trying to satisfy that particular desire, though. It is a matter, however, that should be thought through much more carefully. Certainly the implications in this bill, whether the law is changed or not, are that the minute you put it in the Department of Commerce that is the place to go to if you are in business in order to get a hand-out or a loan without any cooperation with private concerns.

Mr. HAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HAND. I have been trying to find out how the Hoover Commission voted on this question of whether or not RFC should go to Commerce or to Treasury. The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Illinois, said it was a very close vote and he thought 7 out of the 12 members of the Commission voted for Commerce.

Mr. HERTER. No. It is the other way around.

Mr. HAND. Voted for Treasury. The gentleman from California was not able to enlighten me on that particular point.

The committee report on page 4 states with reference to the subject of transfer to the Commerce Department that Commissioners Aiken, Pollock, and Rowe voted for that transfer; that is, transfer to Commerce. Can anyone inform us or can the chairman advise us how the Hoover Commission voted on this subject?

Mr. DAWSON. My best information is 5 out of 12 voted for Commerce. The majority was for Treasury.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. If my memory serves me correctly, as a member of the Commission, there were only 10 or 11 present that day. There were 10 present. The vote was 7 to 3, if I remember correctly, 3 for transfer to Department of Commerce and 7 were opposed. That is if my memory is right.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I wish to add another fact to that. There was one commissioner, Acheson, while agreeing on the need of placing RFC within the executive department did not specify whether it should go to either Commerce or Treasury. The dissenting members were Commissioners Aiken, Pollock, and Rowe.

Mr. HERTER. The colloquy that has just taken place raises a point that I think ought to be stressed. The American people have great faith in the Hoover Commission recommendations. The American people have been led to believe that all of these reorganization plans that have been brought in by the committee or sent in by the President are Hoover Commission recommendations. There is a complete misapprehension on that score throughout the country. Every effort is made whenever one of these matters comes up on the floor of the House to try to show how close it comes to the Hoover Commission recommendation in order to get approval of the Hoover Commission. This to my mind is absolutely unjustified, and in this particular case I cannot see that the plan has any relevancy to any report of the Hoover Commission except to take one out of three agencies and put it under somebody else rather than to leave it independent.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. It is my understanding that the RFC has made a lot of money. Is that true?

Mr. HERTER. Under certain forms of bookkeeping I think it has.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I have been reliably informed of that fact. In this day and time when we have an agency that makes some money I think we better not disturb it by shifting it around to some place else.

Mr. HERTER. I think so, too.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. We have a grand RFC building that was paid for out of the funds they made. What is going to become of these people in the RFC Building? Are they going to be taken down to the Commerce Building?

Mr. HERTER. I do not think the gentleman is going to see anything happen under this bill. This is a paper operation and nothing but a paper operation.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I take the position that the RFC has served the people well, it has made money, and I am against disturbing the RFC at this time. I want to go on record to that effect.

Mr. HERTER. I am glad to hear the gentleman say that. It seems to me this particular reorganization accomplishes exactly nothing and if it were to go through, what it might accomplish is in the reverse direction of what has been recommended by the Hoover Commission.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Am I not correct in the assumption that the Hoover Commission did recommend that we go slow until after a study had been made of the RFC by the Congress?

Mr. HERTER. There is no question about that. They went over its functions very carefully. They examined not only that, but they recommended that there be created a coordinating agency as we have in the international field today to coordinate all of our activities instead of having them scattered all over the lot under independent direction.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. Does the Citizens Committee advancing the Hoover Commission report favor this reorganization plan?

Mr. HERTER. They testified against it.

Mr. MICHENER. Does the Junior Chamber of Commerce which, throughout the Nation, has adopted the Hoover Commission report as one of its projects this year, support this reorganization plan?

Mr. HERTER. I think not. I hope, as I said at the very outset, that this disapproval resolution will have a large aye vote.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, in view of the statement of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] that the RFC has made loans only to Democrats, I rise to take exception to and correct his remarks, because, as one who introduced the first bill creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation I have been vitally interested in its operations, and I must state that the largest loans that have been made have gone to Republicans—not Democrats. I call your attention to the loan made to ex-Vice President Dawes, who was president of the Central Trust Co. of Chicago, and the first Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Conditions were so serious at that time that when I was called relative to this application, I consented, but with the understanding that the smaller banks as well would be aided—to enable them to weather the storm. But unfortunately after the Dawes loan was made, the assurances and promises to take care of the smaller banks were forgotten, with the result that in Chicago alone some forty outlying small banks were forced to close their doors.

Not only that—most of the loans made at that time were made to the large banks, railroads, and insurance companies which were controlled by Republicans, and most of them were actually insolvent.

My aim and purpose in introducing legislation early in 1931 was to help small business; big business could take care of itself. I followed the act that we passed during the First World War—the Federal Finance Corporation Act—which actually aided small business, but during the Hoover administration, as a result of the members he appointed to the RFC, such was not the case.

However, in 1933, when President Roosevelt became President, it was realized that my original aims to help small business should be carried out, and we passed an act amending the original law to take care of small business. If my memory serves me correctly it was in 1933 or 1934 that the Federal Reserve Act was amended permitting the Federal Reserve to make loans. That was under a Democratic administration. Therefore, the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts is erroneous and not borne out by the facts. As I stated before, if Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Under Secretary Mills had cooperated with me in 1931 instead of waiting until 1932, a presidential year, the crash would not have been as serious and everything would not have been lost.

Furthermore, nearly all of the big loans—or about 90 percent of them—made in the first few years were made to Republicans. I regret that even in 1935 and 1936 the Reconstruction Finance Corporation failed to carry out the intent and purpose of the act. Small business was not aided by the Corporation as I originally intended. It was indeed unfortunate that President Roosevelt did not change the membership of the RFC more readily, when they were failing to carry out the desire of the administration to aid small business. We had heard many complaints, and it was for that reason we passed an act creating the Small War Plants Corporation. However, I feel the present chairman and the members are more liberal in trying to aid small business, and I hope they will continue to so interpret the law.

What effect putting the RFC under the Department of Commerce will make, I am not in position to state, but I know its functions would not be affected and the Secretary would have no jurisdiction in passing on loans. This authority would still be vested in the Corporation. It has been explained that the RFC formerly was under the Department of Commerce, but at that time the all-powerful Chairman, Mr. Jesse Jones, did not like the then Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Henry Wallace, and had it taken out of the Department. All this resolution aims to do is to put it back where it originally was and where it properly belongs.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. JENNINGS].

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Chairman, I simply wish to say that in my opinion this resolution is in accord with the Hoover Commission recommendations and that I shall vote for this resolution of disapproval of this proposed plan to shift the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce where it should not be. The proposal is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Hoover Commission's recommendations.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this plan of reorganization of the executive department is one that the entire American public is interested in. We have hundreds of agencies that have to report to the President, and the Hoover Commission endeavored to make recommendations so as to limit the number of independent agencies and place them under some responsible head, like the head of a department. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation as it originally existed stood there by itself, responsible almost to no one. It has already been structurally divided; that is a fact. Certain of its lending agencies are now under the Housing Agency; others have gone to Agriculture, and all that remains now is the smallest one of its features. What shall we do with that feature about lending to small business? The Reconstruction Finance Corporation under its law can only lend to business when loans cannot be had at banks, because sometimes applicants are not able to pay within the limit of time that the banks may require. If we are going to help small business in this country, then we have got to do it through what remains of the RFC, which was created for this purpose.

I would like to answer the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER] in regard to one thing he said about the Hoover Commission recommendation as far as housing is concerned, that is, that the Hoover Commission recommended that Fannie May be placed in the Housing Agency. It was a specific recommendation showing that they meant to group kindred agencies under one suitable head. That is Recommendation No. 9.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAWSON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HERTER. If the gentleman will read the minority report favoring the disapproving resolution he will see in there a quotation from the task force.

Mr. DAWSON. I am reading from the Hoover Commission recommendation.

Mr. HERTER. But if the gentleman will read elsewhere, he will find that the Hoover Commission very definitely recommended a complete study of all the functions of that agency.

Mr. DAWSON. That has nothing to do with the matter before us. Congress can still study it. Congress is now investigating it. No action that we take here today can stop any investigation or can keep Congress from studying it or doing anything about it. But we should place it under some responsible head with a direct channel to the President. We have done it in other instances and we ought to do it now.

Mr. HERTER. Will the gentleman tell me why the committee refused to take the three independent agencies that were recommended be taken in bloc and put under the Treasury Department, and merely singled out one and put that under Commerce?

Mr. DAWSON. I do not know what the gentleman refers to by taking three agencies and placing them there, but if that was the recommendation the President could still do it by plan. There is no plan the President can submit at one time that can embrace all the recommendations of the Hoover Commission. He must do it step by step, and this is one of the steps.

I read now into the record the Hoover Commission recommendation:

> We do, however, recommend that all housing activities be placed in one agency under a single administrator who should be given the type of authority which we have recommended for the heads of all agencies.
>
> We propose that the following functions also be included: Federal National Mortgage Association.

The gentleman will find that on page 25.

The CHAIRMAN. There being no further requests for time, the Clerk will read the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives does not favor the Reorganization Plan No. 24 transmitted to Congress by the President on May 9, 1950.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report House Resolution 648, disapproving Plan No. 24, back to the House with the recommendation that it not be agreed to. That means that a vote for the plan is "no." A vote for the plan is a vote against the resolution.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JUDD. Is this just a motion for the Committee to rise?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HERTER. The Chair has just stated that the motion is merely a motion to rise. As I understood, the motion was to rise and recommend that the disapproving resolution be not concurred in. In other words, the vote is actually on the merits of this resolution, not the question of whether we rise.

The CHAIRMAN. It is on the Committee's rising and reporting the matter to the House.

Mr. HERTER. Reporting the matter, but disapproving.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Mr. HERTER. Disapproving a disapproving resolution?

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly. It is a double negative.

The CHAIRMAN. Reporting the resolution back to the House with the recommendation that it be not agreed to.

Mr. HERTER. That the disapproving resolution be not agreed to?

The CHAIRMAN. That is right.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SHORT. What is the motion?

The CHAIRMAN. The motion of the gentleman from Illinois is that the Committee do now rise and report the resolution back to the House with the recommendation that it be not agreed to.

The question is on the motion.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HERTER) there were—ayes 46, noes 22.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. MILLS, having assumed the chair, Mr. CHELF, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the resolution (H. Res. 648) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 24, had directed him to report the resolution back to the House with the recommendation that it be not agreed to.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Eighty-six Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, if the House were to adjourn now this would be the first order of business the next day we meet, would it not?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The motion was rejected.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 194]

Abbitt	Andresen, August H.	Barrett, Wyo.
Abernethy	Angell	Bates, Ky.
Allen, La.	Arends	Bennett, Mich.
Andersen, H. Carl.	Auchincloss	Blatnik
Anderson, Calif.	Barden	Bolling
	Barrett, Pa.	Bolton, Ohio
		Bramblett

Breen	Javits	Plumley
Bryson	Jenison	Poage
Buchanan	Jenkins	Poulson
Bulwinkle	Johnson	Powell
Burdick	Jonas	Preston
Byrne, N. Y.	Jones, Ala.	Price
Canfield	Jones, Mo.	Quinn
Carroll	Kean	Rains
Cavalcante	Kearney	Ramsay
Celler	Kearns	Redden
Chesney	Keefe	Regan
Christopher	Kelley, Pa.	Rich
Chudoff	Kelly, N. Y.	Riehlman
Clemente	Kennedy	Rivers
Clevenger	Keogh	Roosevelt
Cole, N. Y.	Kerr	Sadlak
Corbett	Kilburn	Sadowski
Coudert	Kirwan	St. George
Davenport	Klein	Sanborn
Delaney	Latham	Sasscer
Dingell	LeFevre	Scott, Hardie
Dollinger	Lichtenwalter	Scrivner
Dondero	Linehan	Sheppard
Doughton	Lodge	Sikes
Durham	Lyle	Simpson, Pa.
Eaton	Lynch	Sims
Engel, Mich.	McCarthy	Smathers
Evins	McConnell	Smith, Ohio
Fallon	McGrath	Spence
Fogarty	McGregor	Stanley
Frazier	McGuire	Steed
Fugate	McKinnon	Stigler
Furcolo	McMillen, Ill.	Sutton
Gamble	Macy	Taber
Gillette	Magee	Tackett
Gilmer	Marshall	Taylor
Golden	Martin, Mass.	Thompson
Gossett	Mason	Thornberry
Granahan	Miles	Towe
Green	Mitchell	Underwood
Gwinn	Monroney	Velde
Hall, Edwin Arthur	Morgan	Vinson
	Morris	Vursell
Hall, Leonard W.	Morton	Wadsworth
	Multer	Wagner
Halleck	Murphy	Walsh
Harden	Nicholson	Werdel
Harris	Noland	Wheeler
Harrison	Norton	Whitaker
Harvey	O'Neill	White, Idaho
Hays, Ohio	O'Toole	Wickersham
Hébert	Pace	Widnall
Hedrick	Passman	Wier
Heffernan	Patman	Willis
Heller	Patterson	Wilson, Ind.
Hobbs	Perkins	Wilson, Okla.
Hoeven	Pfeifer, Joseph L.	Wolcott
Hoffman, Ill.		Wood
Irving	Pfeiffer, William L.	Woodhouse
Jackson, Calif.		Young
Jackson, Wash.	Phillips, Tenn.
James	Pickett

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLS). On this roll call 232 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

REORGANIZATION PLAN 24 OF 1950

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will report the resolution.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives does not favor the Reorganization Plan No. 24 transmitted to Congress by the President on May 9, 1950.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, the resolution, not having received the affirmative vote of a majority of the authorized membership of the House, is not agreed to.

SIGNING OF ENROLLED BILL

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, notwithstanding the adjournment of the House until Monday next, the Clerk be authorized to receive messages from the Senate and that the Speaker be authorized to sign any enrolled bills and joint resolutions duly passed by the two Houses and found truly enrolled.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

PROGRAM FOR NEXT WEEK

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask the majority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] as to the program for next week and for as much of the following week as he can give it.

Mr. McCORMACK. I will be very glad to. As previously announced, there will be no legislative business next week. There will be nothing unless something arises which will call us back.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I understand arrangements have been made that proper notice will be given the Members, should the occasion arise.

Mr. McCORMACK. The Members will receive notice. Of course, if there is any necessity, the newspapers will probably carry it. But, every effort on the part of the leadership will be made to notify the Members. I have no expectation of any business, as I am talking now, and I want the Members to know so that they can govern themselves accordingly. But one never can tell what emergency might arise, and the House is always ready. We have caught up with our legislation. There are only a few rules remaining which can wait until the week of July 10. The House has been very cooperative and has dispatched its business with rapidity. As a matter of fact, only the other day we got several rules out of the Committee on Rules, and we have disposed of two or three of them already. Other than that we are completely caught up. So, there is no business on the program for next week.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. How about Monday, July 10?

Mr. McCORMACK. Monday, July 10, the Consent and Private Calendars will be called; also, District Day. Reorganization Plan No. 27 will come up on that day also.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Are there any suspensions for Monday, the 10th?

Mr. McCORMACK. No. I have conferred with the Speaker and there are no suspensions and none proposed. I make that statement now that none are proposed for July 10.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That is the Reorganization Plan for the Department of Welfare that will come up?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes. Then on Tuesday the bill pertaining to point 4 that came out of the Committee on Banking and Currency will come up and after that I am in hopes that we will be able to quickly adopt the rule on the security bill. I understand that the adoption of the rule today has been agreed to. Then the consideration of the bill itself will go over until Tuesday, July 11. In any event, following the point 4 bill from the Committee on Banking and Currency, the next order of business will be H. R. 7439, the so-called security bill.

I have nothing further to announce now as to the program for that week, but in the early part of that week I shall announce the program for the remainder of the week.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Then is my understanding correct that for this coming week there will be no legislative program, unless the Members are notified in case of an emergency?

Mr. McCORMACK. Unless an emergency situation arises, there is no legislative program for next week.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Beginning with Monday, July 10, there will be a rather important, steady legislative program for that week, beginning with the vote on Reorganization Plan No. 27?

Mr. McCORMACK. From my angle, the point 4 bill is of course very important.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That will come up on Monday also.

Mr. McCORMACK. The resolution on plan 27, from my angle, is not very important. The President's recommendation should be approved.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The Reorganization Act provides that the resolution must be voted on within the 60-day limit?

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Of course, that is the last day. It comes up the 10th.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am unable to state when the last day is on this matter.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on House Resolution 648.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

SUMMARY SUSPENSION OF CIVILIAN GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 683 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7439) to protect the national security of the United States by permitting the summary suspension of employment of civilian officers and employees of various departments and agencies of the Government, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, this resolution provides for the consideration of the so-called security bill, just mentioned by the majority leader. It provides for 1 hour of general debate. I have no request for time, and I do not think the minority desires any time, but I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the report on the rule was a unanimous report of the Committee on Rules. It is my understanding that the bill itself will not be taken up this evening. The measure has been cleared with the leadership on this side of the aisle.

I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES], the ranking member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, the bill, H. R. 7439, provides that the Secretaries of State, Defense, Army, Navy, Air Force, and Treasury—in the case of the Coast Guard—and the heads of the Atomic Energy Commission, National Security Resources Board, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, may suspend without pay any civilian officer or employee when such action is deemed necessary in the interest of national security.

The bill makes permanent present temporary legislative authority under which the Secretaries of State, Defense, Army, Navy, and Air Force may suspend or remove civilian employees whenever such action is necessary or advisable in the interest of national security. The bill also grants similar permanent authority to the Atomic Energy Commission, the Secretary of the Treasury—for the Coast Guard—the National Security Resources Board, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force today are empowered to suspend or remove security risks under Public Law 808, Seventy-seventh Congress, which is temporary legislation. The Secretary of State is empowered to remove security risks under section 104 of the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriation Act for fiscal year 1950, which expires tomorrow. The Secretary of Defense has similar authority provided him under section 630 of the Appropriation Act of 1950 for the Military Establishment, which also expires tomorrow.

In view of the fact that the large majority of the agencies covered by the bill have only temporary authority to deal with these security matters, I believe it is appropriate for the Congress to approve this legislation.

During the hearings on this legislation certain witnesses stated that the legislation should contain provisions providing for an adequate appeal to make certain that no civilian employee is dismissed arbitrarily without sufficient evidence that such employee is a security risk.

These views were taken into consideration, and the bill provides the following rights for employees who are suspended as security risks, but before their termination:

First. A written statement of the charges against the employee shall be stated as specifically as security considerations permit;

Second. A reasonable opportunity to answer such charges and to submit affidavits;

Third. A hearing at the employee's request by a duly constituted department or agency authority;

Fourth. A review of the case by the agency head or some official designated by him before a decision adverse to the employee is rendered; and Fifth. A written statement of the final decision to the employee by the department or agency head.

Similar legislation was approved by the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee during the Eightieth Congress, and in my judgment, this legislation is as necessary today as it was in the judgment of our committee 2 years ago.

It is my understanding that the bill has the unqualified endorsement of all of the departments and agencies, including the Bureau of the Budget.

One of the most important provisions of the legislation allows employees separated as security risks from the agencies covered by the bill to be employed in nonsensitive Government agencies upon the approval of the Civil Service Commission.

I believe the Congress should be careful in the enactment of legislation of this type, but in view of the testimony presented the committee as to the number of security risks that have been separated from the departments and agencies involved since this temporary authority that was granted such agencies by the Congress, I believe that such authority has been exercised with some degree of care. For example, there have been only 375 employees removed from the Military Establishment as security risks since December 17, 1942, which was the date of the approval of Public Law 808. Only three such summary removals have been made by the Secretary of State during the 4-year period the appropriations acts for that Department have contained this authority. Since 1946 the Atomic Energy Commission has discharged only two employees on security grounds.

The Federal Government has a loyalty program which is administered under Executive Order 9835 of March 21, 1947. In my judgment, this loyalty program of the President should have the sanction of Congress in legislation as well as congressional approval for the authority to dismiss security risks.

I have urged the enactment of the legislation which would legalize and make more secure the President's loyalty program, but I am pleased to observe that the administration sees fit to request the Congress to enact legislation of this nature involving security-risk cases.

While this subject is under consideration, I wish to make the observation that the loyalty program of the President has failed largely because of the fact that it does not have the sanction legislatively of the Congress. I have seen newspaper accounts to the fact that the President is considering the appointment of a board to review the operation of the loyalty program to determine how it can be improved. From time to time during the past 4 years on the floor of this House I have pointed out the failures of the President's loyalty program and why it is completely inadequate to meet the needs of our people.

In my judgment, if the executive branch would submit to the Congress proposed legislation, or take some action on the legislation which I introduced several years ago, with respect to the handling of loyalty cases in the Government, many of the problems and shortcomings of the present loyalty program would disappear.

With respect to the rule on the legislation under consideration, I feel that it is proper for the Congress to consider it and provide the policy under which these security matters may be handled. I approve the provisions of H. R. 7439 and trust the Members will support the rule.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT FINANCIAL CONTROL ACT OF 1950

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8923) to provide improved procedures with respect to the financial control of the Post Office Department, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to point out that this has been cleared with the minority members of the gentleman's committee and by the leadership on both sides. I want the record to show that.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That is correct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Post Office Department Financial Control Act of 1950."

SEC. 2. (a) There are hereby transferred to the Postmaster General functions performed by the General Accounting Office for the Post Office Department and the postal field service (hereinafter referred to as the "Department") with respect to the maintenance of administrative appropriation and fund accounts, accounts receivable and payable, and allotment controls; the preparation of financial and statistical reports; the preaudit of expenses; and related administrative, accounting, and reporting functions. The Postmaster General shall provide for such preaudit of expenses as he deems necessary.

(b) The Postmaster General shall establish and maintain adequate and efficient systems of accounting and of internal control which shall provide for—

(1) adequate accounting and internal control over and accountability for all funds, property, and other assets for which the Department is responsible, including appropriate provisions for internal audit;

(2) assembling of financial information needed for management purposes;

(3) full disclosure of the financial results of the operations of the Department.

Such accounting system shall conform to accounting principles and standards prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

(c) The Comptroller General shall cooperate with the Postmaster General in the establishment of the accounting system provided for under subsection (b) and shall approve such system when he deems it to be in conformity with the accounting principles and standards prescribed by him under such subsection.

(d) The Postmaster General shall collect debts due the Department and collect and remit fines, penalties, and forfeitures arising out of matters affecting the Department. Any such debt which is uncollectible through administrative action may be referred to the General Accounting Office for collection. This subsection shall not apply where judicial proceedings have been instituted; and shall not affect the operation of section 409 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (5 U. S. C., sec. 383), with respect to disabilities and liabilities under any law relating to officers, employees, operations, or business of the postal service.

SEC. 3. (a) There is hereby established with the Treasurer of the United States a revolving fund to be known as the Post Office Department Fund. There shall be deposited in such fund, subject to withdrawal by check by the Postmaster General—

(1) amounts requisitioned by the Postmaster General against appropriations available to the Department out of the General Fund of the Treasury; and

(2) such amounts as the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, pay into the fund from receipts of the Department.

(b) The Postmaster General may, within limits of appropriations and subject to provisions of appropriation or other laws limiting expenditures or authorizing appropriations, use the funds of the Department, from whatever source derived, in the exercise of any power or function vested in him.

SEC. 4. The Postmaster General is authorized to designate the place or places, at the seat of government or elsewhere, at which the administrative examination of accounts will be performed. With the concurrence of the Comptroller General, the Postmaster General may waive the administrative examination, in whole or in part, when it is determined that the accounting and audit procedures of the Department otherwise adequately protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 5. The financial transactions of the Department shall be audited by the General Accounting Office in accordance with such principles and procedures and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Comptroller General. To the fullest extent practicable, as determined by the Comptroller General, all accounts of accountable officers, contracts, vouchers, or other documents which are required under existing law to be submitted to the General Accounting Office shall be retained in the Department and the audit shall be conducted at the place or places where the accounts of the Department are normally kept in accordance with the determinations of the Postmaster General. The representatives of the General Accounting Office shall have access to all books, accounts, financial records, reports, files, and all other papers, things, or property belonging to or in use by the Department and necessary to facilitate the audit, and shall have full facilities for verifying transactions with the balances or securities held by depositaries, fiscal agents, and custodians. In the determination of the auditing procedures to be followed and the extent of the examination of vouchers and other documents, the Comptroller General shall give due regard to the adequacy of the system of accounts and internal and control maintained by the Department and to generally accepted principles of auditing.

SEC. 6. The amounts required to be certified annually by the Postmaster General to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller General by the act of June 9, 1930 (39 U. S. C., sec. 793), shall be separately set out in appropriate reports of the Department.

SEC. 7. (a) There shall be transferred to the Department from the General Accounting Office such records, property, personnel, appropriations, and other funds of the General Accounting Office as the Postmaster General, the Comptroller General, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall jointly determine in connection with the transfer of functions to the Postmaster General under section 2 (a) of this act. Transfer of personnel under this subsection shall be subject to section 12 of the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944, as amended (5 U. S. C., sec. 861).

(b) All policies, procedures, and directives which are related to any function transferred to the Postmaster General by section 2 (a) of this act, and not inconsistent with this act, shall remain in full force and effect until rescinded, modified, or superseded by or under authority of this act.

SEC. 8. In the performance of, and with respect to, the functions, powers, and duties vested in him, the Postmaster General may—

(1) enter into such leases of real property as may be necessary in the conduct of the affairs of the Department on such terms as he may deem appropriate without regard to the provisions of any law, except those provisions of law specifically applicable to the Department;

(2) accept gifts and donations of services, and of property (whether real, personal, or mixed, and whether tangible or intangible), in aid of any of the activities of the Department;

(3) offer and pay rewards in connection with violations of the postal laws.

SEC. 9. (a) The President may, by Executive order, postpone the application of any or all of the provisions of this act (except this section) for a period of not to exceed 2 years from the effective date provided in subsection (c) if he determines that such postponement is in the public interest and necessary to assure the implementation of this act in an orderly and efficient manner.

(b) This section shall take effect on the date of enactment of this act.

(c) The other sections of this act shall take effect on the ninetieth day following the day on which this act is enacted.

SEC. 10. (a) There are hereby repealed—

(1) sections 405, 406, 407, and 408 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (5 U. S. C., secs. 378, 379, 380, and 381);

(2) sections 277, 292, 293, 294, and 3674 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U. S. C., secs. 73, 109, 111, 112, and 632);

(3) section 4 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 343), as amended (31 U. S. C., sec. 113);

(4) section 4 of the act of July 12, 1876 (19 Stat. 80), as amended (31 U. S. C., sec. 114);

(5) section 4055 of the Revised Statutes as amended (39 U. S. C., sec. 787).

(b) All laws or parts of laws inconsistent with this act are repealed to the extent of such inconsistency.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present for the consideration of this House H. R. 8923, a bill to provide improved procedures with respect to the financial control of the Post Office Department, and for other purposes.

This bill is the product of painstaking work on the part of the committee, its staff, and representatives of the Post Office Department, the Bureau of the Budget, and the General Accounting Office. It is a development of recommendations made from a number of viewpoints for the improvement of accounting, financial reporting, and audit of the postal service. It establishes the basic framework for a modern accounting system and for the improvement of the financial operation and control of the Post Office Department. At the same time the bill retains the essential controls of Congress over the operation of this vast Government enterprise.

One of the objectives of the bill is to carry out the recommendations of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government with respect to accounting and auditing of the Post Office Department.

With respect to the recommendations concerning budgeting, accounting and audit of the postal service, the Hoover Commission stated:

> We do not recommend that the Post Office should be incorporated under that law (Government Corporation Control Act of 1945) as we consider that to be unnecessary.
>
> We do recommend that the provisions of that law in respect to business management, budgeting, accounting, and audit be applied to the Post Office.
>
> Such a provision will bring the Department into step with modern business methods and will not lessen executive or congressional controls. At the same time it will provide flexibility in management, simplification of budgeting, accounting, and audit which will result in large economies.

The report further stated:

> We wish to emphasize our recommendations elsewhere that the Department should keep its own accounts and make its own disbursements subject to audit by the Comptroller General and in accordance with procedures determined by the Accountant General, these procedures to be approved by the Comptroller General.

The budget procedures of the Hoover Commission recommendations for the Post Office Department have already been implemented in the 1951 Appropriations Act which has passed the House, and authorizing legislation is not required on this subject.

The proposed legislation will modernize and improve the accounting and auditing of the Post Office Department and implement the Department's new budget procedure. The bill will transfer to the Post Office Department the administrative accounting and reporting functions now performed for the Department by the General Accounting Office so as to place the Department in a position of all other Government departments and agencies. It will provide for an up-to-date system of accounting to be developed by the Post Office Department with the cooperation and subject to the approval of the Comptroller General under principles and standards prescribed by him.

The bill also provides for a system of internal control as determined by the Department and suited to its needs.

The bill provides a revolving fund for simplified accounting and gives the Postmaster General the authority to spend any funds of the Department for its lawful operations within limits established by appropriation acts or other laws.

Under the bill the audit of the financial transactions of the Department will be made by the General Accounting Office. Under the terms of this section the foundation is laid for a progressive decentralization and refining of General Accounting Office audits. The audits will be more comprehensive in scope but will be made on a selective basis as to individual transactions depending upon the development of an adequate and efficient system of accounting and internal control in the Department. Related provisions will enable the decentralization and appropriate waiving of the administrative examinations of accounts after payment.

The bill grants needed flexibility to the Post Office Department in the case of leases of real property and provides specific authority for collection of debts due the Department and for the collection and remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures.

One important feature of the bill is to provide for the separately setting out in appropriate reports of the Post Office Department the amounts represented by certain services such as penalty mail, franked mail, and the estimated excess during the year of the cost of aircraft service over the postage revenue derived from air mail. It is the purpose of this section to inform the public of the amount of these items which are often referred to as representing the entire amount of the postal deficit. Such statements are, of course, unfounded in fact. For example, these items in 1949 amounted to $120,000,000 when compared with the total deficit of $550,000,000.

This bill will take effect 90 days after enactment unless postponed in whole or part by the President but such postponement may not exceed 2 years.

I should like to say that throughout our studies on this far-reaching measure, we had the fullest cooperation of the Postmaster General, the Comptroller General, the Bureau of the Budget and the Department of the Treasury. This measure is a step forward in the improvement of the operations of our postal service. I hope it will receive the unanimous support of the Members of the House.

For the information of the Members of the House, I would like to include here in my remarks a section-by-section analysis of the bill:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

The bill commences by providing that it may be cited as the "Post Office Department Financial Control Act of 1950."

SECTION 2. ADMINISTRATIVE ACCOUNTING AND REPORTING

(a) This subsection transfers to the Department all administrative accounting and reporting functions being performed by the General Accounting Office for the Department as required by existing law. Since it is not practicable to enumerate all of the many functions involved, the provisions of this subsection specify without limitation the maintenance of administrative appropriation and fund accounts, accounts receivable and payable, and allotment controls; the preparation of financial and statistical reports; and the preaudit of expenses. All of these functions are now being performed by the General Accounting Office under provisions of law proposed to be repealed by other sections of this legislation. While this subsection contemplates that the Post Office Department will make payment currently covering expenses incurred in its operation, it does not affect the settlement by the Comptroller General of claims arising under the Department. Under the uniform policy of the General Accounting Office administrative reports on such claims would be obtained before settlement was made. Such settlements when made by the General Accounting Office are by law final and conclusive upon the executive branch. The Postmaster General is to provide such preaudit or audit of expenses prior to payment, as he deems necessary.

The function of settlement of accounts of accountable officers is not transferred but will remain with the Comptroller General as it is under present law. With respect to this phase of financial control, the task force of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, upon which the Commission based its report, stated in recommendation X:

"Redefine the responsibilities of the Post Office Department and the General Accounting Office for auditing the financial transactions of the Postal Establishment by:

"1. Transferring from the General Accounting Office to the Post Office Department the responsibility for preaudit and preliminary settlement of postmasters' accounts and transactions of other accountable individuals.

"2. Providing for the conduct of an annual commercial-type audit and the final settlement of accounts of the Post Office Department by the General Accounting Office."

In the opinion of the committee, this section is in conformance with the above recommendation by transforming preaudit of expenses to the Postmaster General and retaining final settlement with the Comptroller General.

(b) This subsection provides that the Postmaster General shall establish and maintain adequate and efficient systems of accounting and internal control and establishes the following requirements for the systems:

(1) Adequate accounting and internal control over and accountability for all funds, property, and other assets for which the Department is responsible, including appropriate provisions for internal audit;

(2) Assembling of financial information needed for management purposes;

(3) Full disclosure of the financial results of the operations of the Department.

The accounting system set up pursuant to these requirements shall conform to the principles and standards prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

(c) This subsection provides that the Comptroller General shall cooperate with the Postmaster General in the establishment of the accounting system provided for under subsection (b) and shall approve such system when he deems it to be in conformity with the accounting principles and standards prescribed by him under such subsection. Nothing in this section is intended to affect the relations established under section 205 (b) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949.

(d) This subsection authorizes the Postmaster General to collect debts due the Department and to collect and remit administrative fines, penalties, forfeitures, etc., arising out of matters affecting the Department. Under previously existing laws these activities have in many instances been subject to approval by the General Accounting Office or performed entirely by such Office for the Department. The Postmaster General is authorized to use the facilities of the General Accounting Office for collection of those debts uncollectible administratively. This subsection does not apply where judicial proceedings have been instituted.

This section does not change the operation of section 409 of the Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C., sec. 383) with respect to disabilities and liabilities under any law relating to officers, employees, operations, or business of the postal service. It is the desire of the committee that the procedures in effect under the afore-mentioned act will be reviewed having in mind the simplification of procedures and the expediting of actions and that legislation will be recommended if necessary.

SECTION 3. REVOLVING FUND AND USE OF FUNDS

(a) This subsection establishes with the Treasurer of the United States a revolving fund (in the nature of checking accounts) for the deposit of sums requisitioned by the Postmaster General against appropriations made from the general fund of the Treasury which are available to the Post Office Department and for the deposit of such receipts of that Department as the Postmaster General may decide to place in the fund. All withdrawals from the revolving fund will be made by the Postmaster General by checks drawn on the Treasurer of the United States chargeable to the fund. Existing procedure will be followed in requisitioning and advancing funds under the afore-mentioned appropriations and the use by the Post Office Department of the facilities of the Treasurer of the United States for the custody of these and other funds which the Postmaster General desires to maintain on deposit in such accounts as may be necessary for the purposes of his Department. The aggregate of the balances in such deposit accounts maintained with the Treasurer of the United States would constitute the revolving fund. The bill does not contemplate that the Post Office Department should maintain on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States such of its funds as are needed elsewhere for current operating purposes.

(b) This subsection gives the Postmaster General a general authority to use funds of the Department from whatever source derived. This subsection restates the fact that such expenditures must necessarily be in accordance with limitations in appropriations or other laws limiting expenditures.

SECTION 4. ADMINISTRATIVE EXAMINATION OF ACCOUNTS

This section authorizes the Postmaster General to designate the places where the Department will conduct the administrative examinations of its accounts after payment. The section further provides that with the concurrence of the Comptroller General the examination may be waived by the Postmaster General either in whole or in part when it is determined that the accounting and audit procedures of the Department otherwise adequately protect the interest of the United States.

SECTION 5. AUDIT

This section provides for the audit and settlement of the accounts of the Department and of its accountable officers. To the fullest extent practicably vouchers and other documents will not be submitted to the General Accounting Office but will be retained in the Department for audit by that Office. Provision is made for access by representatives of the General Accounting Office to all records or things necessary to facilitate the audit. The Comptroller General is directed to give due regard to the adequacy of the accounting system and internal controls maintained by the Department, as well as to generally accepted principles of auditing in the determination of the extent of the audit. This leaves to the discretion of the Comptroller General the extent of his audit in order to determine that there has been compliance with the applicable laws.

This section will enable decentralization of present General Accounting Office audits as well as a much more comprehensive examination of the Department's financial transactions. The full development of independent audit techniques will depend substantially upon the internal accounting organization and procedures. This subsection further provides that the settlement and adjustment and adjustment of accounts of accountable officers of the Department shall be based upon the audit made thereunder.

It is the view of the committee that through cooperation between the Comptroller General and the Postmaster General and the establishment of an efficient and adequate system of accounting together with a strong system of internal controls, much of the detailed post-audit of individual transactions can be eliminated.

SECTION 6. REPORTS OF PENALTY AND FRANKED MAIL, ETC.

It is the purpose of this section to include in the Post Office Department reports potential revenues which would have been received as distinguished from revenues actually received for certain types of mail matter. In the case of air mail, the estimated excess of cost of aircraft service over postage revenues will be shown. For this purpose the Postmaster General will set out in appropriate reports the following:

(1) The estimated amount which would have been collected at regular rates of postage on matter mailed during the year by officers of the Government (other than those of the Post Office Department) under the penalty privilege, including registry fees;

(2) The estimated amount which would have been collected at regular rates of postage on matter mailed during the year by Members of Congress and others under the franking privilege;

(3) The estimated amount which would have been collected during the year at regular rates of postage on publications going free in the county;

(4) The estimated amount which would have been collected at regular rates of postage on matter mailed free to the blind during the year:

(5) The estimated difference between the postage revenues collected during the year on mailings of newspapers and periodicals published by and in the interest of religious, educational, scientific, philanthropic, agricultural, labor, and fraternal organizations, and that which would have been collected at zone rates of postage; and

(6) The estimated excess during the year of the cost of aircraft service over the postage revenues derived from air mail.

SECTION 7. TRANSFERS AND CONTINUATION OF POLICIES

(a) This subsection transfers to the Post Office Department from the General Accounting Office such records, property, personnel, appropriations, and other funds of the General Accounting Office as the Postmaster General, the Comptroller General, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall jointly determine in connection with the transfer of functions to the Postmaster General under section 2 (a) of this bill. Transfer of personnel under this subsection is subject to section 12 of the Veterans' Preference Act which provides that in the case of veterans they will be offered an opportunity for employment with the agency to which the function is transferred before new personnel may be employed by that agency.

(b) This subsection provides that all policies, procedures, and directives which are related to any function transferred to the Postmaster General by section 2 (a) of this bill, and not inconsistent with this bill, shall remain in full force and effect until rescinded, modified, or superseded by or under authority of this bill.

SECTION 8. LEASES, DONATIONS, AND REWARDS

This section gives the Postmaster General additional authority and freedom of action with respect to the leases of real property. It gives basic legislative authority for the acceptance of gifts and donations of services or property as well as to offer and pay rewards in connection with violations of postal laws. The Postmaster General has had this latter authority for many years under successive appropriation acts.

With respect to the authority in this section concerning leases, the Postmaster General is authorized to enter into leases of real property necessary in the conduct of the Department's affairs, without regard to the provisions of laws other than those specifically applicable to the Department. General provisions of law regulating the rent payable under Government leases, general provisions requiring advertising, etc., will not apply to such transactions. It is recognized that post offices must be located to meet the needs of the public, the handling of the mail matter, and to permit economical operations of the Department, and that the statutes waived give rise to frequent difficulties in this respect.

SECTION 9. EFFECTIVE DATE

This section provides that the act shall take effect on the ninetieth day following the day on which enacted. However, in view of the extensive changes and transfers of functions that this legislation will entail, additional time may be extended for all or part of the provisions of the act by the President through an executive order, such postponement may not exceed 2 years.

SECTION 10. REPEAL PROVISIONS

(a) This subsection repeals the following specific statutes or sections of statutes:

(1) Section 405, Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 378), requiring orders and regulations of the Postmaster General which may originate a claim or affect the accounts of the postal service to be certified to the General Accounting Office.

(2) Section 406, Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 379), relating to the issuance of warrants by the Postmaster General upon the quarterly statement by the General Accounting Office of payments by postmasters.

(3) Section 407, Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 380), relative to payment of postal revenues and debts due the Post Office Department into the Treasury of the United States.

(4) Section 408, Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 381), requiring deposits on account of the postal service to be brought into the Treasury by warrants of the Postmaster General countersigned by the Comptroller General of the United States.

(5) Section 277, Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 73), requiring the General Accounting Office to keep and preserve all accounts arising in the Post Office Department and vouchers after settlement, and to close the account of the Department quarterly and furnish various reports to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General. This section also requires the Comptroller General to countersign all lawful warrants upon the Treasury for receipts or payments issued by the Postmaster General.

(6) Section 292, Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 109), requiring the General Accounting Office to superintend the collection of all debts, penalties, and forfeitures due the Post Office Department.

(7) Section 293, Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 111), requiring the Bureau of Accounts of the Post Office Department to keep the accounts of the money-order business separately and by offices.

(8) Section 294, Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 112), relative to quarterly statements by the Bureau of Accounts of the Post Office Department to the Postmaster General of the money paid by postmasters out of the receipts of their offices and pursuant to appropriations.

(9) Section 3674 of the Revised Statutes as amended (31 U. S. C. 632), requiring payments of money out of the Treasury on account of the postal service shall be in pursuance of appropriations made by law, by warrants of the Postmaster General, registered and countersigned in the General Accounting Office, and expressing on their face the appropriation to which they should be charged.

(10) Section 4 of the act of March 3, 1875 (31 U. S. C. 113), requiring the Bureau of Accounts of the Post Office Department to keep the accounts relating to the Post Office Department so as to show the expenditures under each item of appropriation.

(11) Section 4 of the act of July 12, 1876 (31 U. S. C. 114), requiring annual reports of the Bureau of Accounts of the Post Office Department to be incorporated in the Postmaster General's annual report to show the financial condition of the Post Office Department. (This function, and the functions referred to in (7), (8), and (10), while codified as duties of the Bureau of Accounts in the Post Office Department, have necessarily been performed under existing law by the General Accounting Office.)

(12) Section 4055, Revised Statutes (39 U. S. C. 787), requiring all payments on account of the postal service to be made to the persons to whom certified to be due by the General Accounting Office, except that certain advances may be made by the Postmaster General to post office inspectors to be charged to them by the General Accounting Office and accounted for in the settlement of their accounts.

(b) All other laws or parts of laws inconsistent with this act are repealed to the extent of such inconsistency.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support H. R. 8923 and to urge my colleagues to approve this legislation. I introduced an identical bill, H. R. 8926, and also, earlier in the session, I introduced a bill dealing with this subject, H. R. 6395.

This bill deals with a very complex problem related to the accounting and auditing of one of our biggest Government departments and has been the subject of detailed study. In my judgment, the adoption of this bill will bring about much needed reform in the accounting and auditing processes of our postal service. When compared with the bill which I originally introduced, this present legislation has eliminated the budget provisions since the House has already approved a performance budget for the Post Office Department and cut down the number of appropriations from 58 to 4.

I might add in this regard that in the Eightieth Congress a study made by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee of the House pointed out weaknesses of the budget system. In House Report No. 1242 of the Eighteith Congress, we pointed out that each bureau had its own budget and, in many instances, economies in the service were not effected because the expenditures would have to be made from one bureau's budget while the savings would accrue to the budget of another bureau. The new budget procedure permits a flexibility and freedom of action which will eliminate the restrictions pointed out in our findings.

I might state with respect to the Hoover Commission recommendations that the Post Office and Civil Service Committee in the Eightieth Congress, in its study, made many recommendations which later also appeared in the Hoover Commission report and its task force report. Many of these recommendations have been placed into effect and economies are being made in the postal service as a result of them.

The administration's bill, H. R. 5775, which was sent to the Congress on this same subject, is a good example of what has occurred in many legislative proposals purporting to carry out the Hoover Commission report. The bill was weighed down with many provisions which were not related to the financial control of the postal service. For example, under the administration proposal, there would have been an unlimited authority for the Postmaster General to appoint specialists without regard to the Classification Act or to any other governmental ceilings and without any restrictions on the number that might be appointed. The Postmaster General would have had practically unlimited authority with regard to contracts, leases, and other agreements in connection with operating the postal service. Such provisions would have voided, for example, the laws governing the letting of contracts of star routes and many other laws which specifically apply to the conduct of the postal service.

Directly contrary to the recommendations of the Hoover Commission, the function of settlement of accounts, which is a financial control of Congress exercised by the Comptroller General, would have been eliminated. Because of the many controversial elements contained in the administration bill, together with direct conflicts with the Hoover Commission recommendations, it has taken a long time to work out the bill presently before the House which has reconciled the divergent views of the departments concerned. This legislation, H. R. 8923, now receives the enthusastic support of these departments and agencies as well as the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report.

The chairman has outlined the provisions of the bill. However, briefly, this is what the bill will accomplish:

First. Transfers the administrative accounting and reporting functions presently performed by the Comptroller General for the Post Office Department to the Postmaster General;

Second. Transfers the preaudit of expenses of the Post Office Department by the General Accounting Office to the Postmaster General;

Third. Establishes the requirements of the accounting system to be set up by the Post Office Department and provides that the Comptroller General will prescribe the principles and standards for such system;

Fourth. Authorizes the Postmaster General to collect debts due the Department and collect and remit fines, penalties, and forfeitures arising out of matters affecting the Department;

Fifth. Provides a revolving fund for the Post Office Department;

Sixth. Authorizes the Postmaster General to designate the places where administrative examination of accounts will be made;

Seventh. Authorizes and directs the Comptroller General to audit the financial transactions of the Post Office Department;

Eighth. Provides for separately setting out in appropriate reports of the Post Office Department amounts representing certain services which the Department performs free or at special rates;

Ninth. Transfers to the Post Office Department such records, property, personnel, appropriations, and so forth, primarily connected with functions transferred under the bill;

Tenth. Removes certain restrictions with regard to leases of real property; and Eleventh. Repeals certain laws relating to financial control of the Post Office Department which are no longer necessary if this bill is enacted.

The bill will take effect 90 days after enactment unless postponed in whole or in part by the President, but such postponement may not exceed 2 years.

This bill, which represents a vast step forward in eliminating outmoded and ineffective auditing and financial procedures of the postal service and replaces them with a fundamental basis for modern and streamlined accounting and auditing procedures, deserves the unanimous support of this House.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MRS. MARION T. SCHWARTZ

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 1169) for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2286)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1169) for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum inserted by the Senate amendment insert "$3,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

WILLIAM T. BYRNE,
WINFIELD K. DENTON,
JOHN JENNINGS, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

PAT MCCARRAN,
HERBERT R. O'CONOR,
ALEXANDER WILEY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1169) for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The bill as passed the House appropriated the sum of $4,000 to Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz for damages on account of the personal injuries sustained by her late husband, Leo Schwartz, as the result of an accident involving an Army vehicle at the Oakland Army Base, Oakland, Calif., on September 1, 1944.

The Senate reduced the sum to $1,671 and at the conference a compromise of $3,000 was agreed upon.

WILLIAM T. BYRNE,
WINFIELD K. DENTON,
JOHN JENNINGS, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONNEL AND COMPOSITION OF THE ARMY AND AIR FORCE

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand this has been cleared by the minority members of the committee, as well as with the leadership?

Mr. KILDAY. That is true. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] who is present can so advise the gentleman. This is the bill providing for the 70-group air force.

Mr. SHORT. That is correct.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2322)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 8, 10, 12, 16, 21, 22, and 24.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 11, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 33 and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "Army (exclusive of the numbers authorized by law for the Army Nurse Corps, the Women's Medical Specialist Corps, professors of the United States Military Academy, and any numbers authorized by special provisions of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"(b) Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, and subject to the limitations imposed by sections 202 and 203 of this Act, the Air Force of the United States shall have an authorized strength of not to exceed seventy United States Air Force groups and such separate United States Air Force squadrons, reserve groups, and supporting and auxiliary United States Air Force and reserve units as may be required."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "twenty-seven thousand five hundred, exclusive of any numbers authorized by special provision of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers,"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be striken out by the Senate amendment insert the following: "(1)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 25: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "guided missiles, and (3)"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 34: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 303. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"(b) Moneys appropriated to the Departments of the Army, Navy, or Air Force for procurement of technical military equipment and supplies, the construction of public works, and for research and development, including moneys appropriated to the Department of the Navy for the procurement, construction, and research and development of guided missiles, which are hereby authorized for the Department of the Navy, shall remain available until expended unless otherwise provided in the appropriation Act concerned."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"LIMITATION OF AUTHORITY

"SEC. 304. Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to authorize the Department of Defense to expend any money appropriated pursuant to authority conferred by this Act for the design or development of any prototype aircraft intended primarily for commercial use."

And the Senate agree to the same.

CARL VINSON,
OVERTON BROOKS,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE C. ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

VIRGIL M. CHAPMAN,
HARRY FLOOD BYRD,
LYNDON B. JOHNSON,
CHAN GURNEY,
LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

LEGISLATION IN CONFERENCE

On March 22, 1949, the House passed H. R. 1437, which was designed to create a statutory charter for Army and Air Force size and composition. The purpose of the legislation was to create a legal framework for these two armed services as regards their military strengths, the composition of the military forces, their procurement authority, their research and development authority, and their appropriation authority. On August 27, 1949, the Senate passed H. R. 1437 but with numerous amendments which, together with the action of the conferees in respect thereto, are explained below.

SHORT TITLE

The House bill prescribed a short title for the legislation, as follows: "Army and Air Force Act of 1949." The Senate amendment modified the short title to read "Army and Air Force Authorization Act of 1949." The conference agreement accepts the Senate amendment.

AUTHORIZED ACTIVE DUTY PERSONNEL STRENGTH OF THE ARMY

The House bill authorized an active duty personnel strength of 837,000 officers, warrant officers, and enlisted persons for the Army of the United States. This total figure was exclusive of (1) 1-year enlistees, (2) officer candidates, (3) personnel of the Reserve components on active duty for training purposes only, (4) persons paid under the appropriations for the National Guard and Organized Reserve Corps, and (5) personnel and units of the Reserve components ordered to active duty in an emergency hereafter declared. The Senate amendment deleted exclusion (4) above, and also deleted the words "and units" in exclusion (5) above. The conference agreement restores exclusion (4) above, which had been deleted by the Senate, and accepts the deletion of the words "and units" in exclusion (5) above.

AUTHORIZED REGULAR ARMY OFFICER STRENGTH

The House bill authorized 33,500 active-list commissioned officers in the Regular Army, from which total figure there were excluded numbers authorized by law for (1) the Army Nurse Corps and (2) the Women's Medical Specialist Corps. The Senate amendment reduced the authorization from 33,500 to 30,600. The Senate amendment also specifically included in the Regular officer strength commissioned officers of the Women's Army Corps and added to the exclusions proposed in the House bill (1) professors of the United States Military Academy, and (2) any numbers authorized by special provisions of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers. The conference agreement authorizes 30,600 active-list commissioned officers in the Regular Army, deletes the Senate reference to the Women's Army Corps, and accepts the additional Senate exclusions of professors of the United States Military Academy and additional numbers officers.

NATIONAL GUARD AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL STRENGTH

The House bill authorized a personnel strength of 750,000 for the National Guard and National Guard of the United States. The Senate amendment reduced the House figure to 600,000. The conference agreement accepts the Senate amendment.

ORGANIZED RESERVE CORPS AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL STRENGTH

The House bill authorized a personnel strength of 980,000 for the Army Organized Reserve Corps. The Senate amendment authorized such personnel strength as is necessary to form the basis for complete and immediate mobilization for the national defense in the event of a national emergency and removed the House numerical limit. The conference agreement accepts the House language.

ARMY MATERIALS AND PROCUREMENT AUTHORIZATION

The House bill specifically authorized the Army to procure guided missiles. The Senate amendment deleted the House reference to guided missiles. The conference agreement accepts the House language.

AUTHORIZED COMPOSITION OF THE AIR FORCE

The House bill authorized an Air Force strength of 70 Regular Air Force groups, 22 separate Regular Air Force squadrons, and 61 Air Force Reserve groups, together with supporting auxiliary Regular Air Force and Reserve units. The Senate amendment deleted these provisions of the House bill. The conference agreement provides that the Air Force of the United States shall have an authorized strength of not to exceed 70 Regular Air Force groups and such separate Regular and Reserve squadrons and units and Reserve groups as may be required.

AUTHORIZED ACTIVE DUTY PERSONNEL STRENGTH OF THE AIR FORCE

The House bill authorized an active duty strength of 502,000 officers, warrant officers, and enlisted persons in the Air Force. This was exclusive of (1) 1-year enlistees, (2) officer candidates, (3) aviation cadets, (4) personnel of the Reserve components on active duty for training purposes only, (5) persons paid under the appropriations for the Air National Guard and the United States Air Force Reserve, and (6) personnel and units of the Reserve components ordered to active duty in an emergency. The Senate amendment deleted exclusion (5) above and also the words "and units" in exclusion (6) above. The conference agreement accepts the deletion of the words "and units" but retains the House exclusion (5) above.

AUTHORIZED AIR FORCE REGULAR OFFICER STRENGTH

The House bill authorized an Air Force Regular officer strength of 27,500. The Senate amendment reduced the House figure to 22,400 and excluded from that figure (1) numbers authorized for the Air Force Nurse Corps, (2) numbers authorized for the Air Force Women's Medical Specialist Corps, and (3) any numbers authorized by special provisions of law providing for officers in designated categories as additional numbers. The conference agreement accepts the House

Regular officer figure of 27,500 and deletes exclusions (1) and (2) above.

AIR NATIONAL GUARD AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL STRENGTH

The House bill authorized a personnel strength of 100,000 for the Air National Guard and the Air National Guard of the United States. The Senate amendment increased the House figure to 150,000. The conference agreement accepts the Senate amendment.

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE RESERVE AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL STRENGTH

The House bill authorized a personnel strength of 500,000 for the United States Air Force Reserve. The Senate amendment deleted the House numerical limit and authorized the United States Air Force Reserve to have such personnel strength as is necessary to form the basis for complete mobilization for the national defense in the event of a national emergency. The conference agreement accepts the provisions of the House bill.

AIR FORCE PROCUREMENT AUTHORIZATION

The House bill authorized the Air Force to procure 5,200 aircraft or 42,500 airframe tons annually, whichever amount the Secretary of the Air Force may determine is more appropriate, to provide 24,000 serviceable aircraft or 225,000 airframe tons aggregate of serviceable aircraft. The House bill further authorized the Air Force to procure guided missiles. The Senate amendment (1) deleted language of the House bill authorizing the procurement of 5,200 aircraft or 42,500 airframe tons annually and (2) deleted the House provision relating to guided missiles. The conference agreement accepts the provisions of the House bill as regards (2) above and the Senate amendment as regards (1) above.

APPROPRIATIONS

The House bill provided (1) that any moneys appropriated to the Army for the procurement of materials and facilities, including guided missiles, shall remain available for obligation during the fiscal year which appropriated and for the succeeding fiscal year, and shall remain available for expenditure for a total of 5 years; (2) that any moneys appropriated to the Army for research and development shall remain available until expended; and (3) that moneys appropriated to the Air Force for procurement of aircraft and guided missiles, and for research and development, shall remain available until expended. The Senate amendment deleted the provisions of the House bill pertaining separately to the Army and the Air Force and inserted a new section containing appropriation authority for the Army, Navy, and Air Force. The Senate amendment provided that moneys appropriated to the Departments of the Army, Navy, or Air Force for procurement of military equipment and supplies, the construction of public works, and for research and development shall remain available until expended unless otherwise provided in the appropriation acts concerned. The conference agreement accepts the Senate amendment with an amendment granting the Department of the Navy legislative and appropriation authorization for the procurement, construction, and research and development of guided missiles.

LIMITATION OF AUTHORITY

The Senate added a new section to the bill providing that nothing contained in the proposed act shall be construed to authorize the Department of Defense to expend any money appropriated pursuant to the proposed act for the design, development, testing, tooling, modification, construction, or procurement of any transport or cargo aircraft intended primarily for commercial use, whether or not such aircraft may be adaptable for auxiliary military service. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The conference agreement substitutes for the Senate amendment language providing that nothing contained in the proposed act shall be construed to authorize the Department of Defense to expend money appropriated pursuant to the proposed act for the design or development of any prototype transport or cargo aircraft intended primarily for commercial use.

CARL VINSON,
OVERTON BROOKS,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE C. ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT LANDS ACT OF 1949

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Department of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interest therein, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I understand this measure has been approved by the minority members of the Armed Services Committee and also the minority leadership.

Mr. KILDAY. That is correct.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows :

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No 2348)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interest therein, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 305. The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to convey to the Carolina-Virginia Coastal Highway Corporation, a municipal corporation created under the laws of the State of North Carolina, or to the State of North Carolina, a perpetual easement one hundred feet wide, in, over, and across a tract of land comprising one hundred seventy-four acres, which includes all land lying between the Atlantic Ocean and Currituck Sound for a distance of approximately three thousand three hundred feet north and south along the coast, referred to and known as target site number twelve and located approximately one mile north of Duck, North Carolina, and to accept in exchange therefor from Ray T. Adams, the conveyance of a leasehold interest in one hundred seventy-four acres of land which is a part of a larger parcel of land located at Corolla, North Carolina, and owned by the said Ray T. Adams, at such location upon said larger parcel of land and under such terms and conditions as may be determined and agreed upon by the Secretary of the Navy and the said Ray T. Adams: Provided, That the said Ray T. Adams shall erect, or shall have erected, at the option of the Secretary of the Navy, adequate substitute facilities without cost to the United States on such leasehold site as may be determined and approved by the Secretary of the Navy."

And the Senate agree to the same.

CARL VINSON,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

HARRY F. BYRD,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
VIRGIL M. CHAPMAN,
LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interest therein, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

LEGISLATION IN CONFERENCE

The House passed H. R. 5368 on October 3, 1949. The Senate passed H. R. 5368, with seven amendments, on June 8, 1950.

Senate amendments Nos. 1 to 6, inclusive, were merely corrective amendments which did not alter any substantive provisions of the bill. In each instance the House recedes and concurs in same.

Senate amendment No. 7 substituted a new section 305. Section 305 of the bill, as passed by the House, contained authorization for the conveyance of an easement to the State of Kentucky by the Secretary of the Army. This particular authorization was subsequently introduced as separate legislation and passed by both the House and the Senate. The Senate committee then amended the bill by deleting section 305 and substituting a new section 305, which authorized the Secretary of the Navy to convey to Ray T. Adams, of Corolla, N. C., all right, title, and interest of the United States in a Navy aerial gunnery range, consisting of approximately 174 acres, located approximately 1 mile north of Duck, N. C., and to accept in exchange therefor a conveyance by the said Ray T. Adams to the Secretary of the Navy of a substitute site or sites of equivalent value, suitable in all respects, together with adequate substitute facilities erected thereon, all without cost to the United States.

The purpose of this transfer was to expedite the construction of a toll road, approximately 53 miles long, along the Virginia and North Carolina coast, from a point south of Virginia Beach, Va., to Nags Head, N. C. Approximately 95 percent of the rights-of-way have already been obtained by the Carolina-Virginia Coastal Highway Corporation, a municipal corporation created under the laws of the State of North Carolina, and a similar authority created under the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia. However, it was impossible to construct the toll road without either obtaining an easement across the Navy gunnery range or making a suitable transfer of lands with the Navy. The Navy could not grant an easement without destroying the use of the property as an aerial gunnery range. Hence the transfer was agreed to by the Navy and the said Ray T. Adams, who is one of three commissioners of the North Carolina corporation. This proposed transfer would have given the Navy fee simple title to another plot of 174 acres of land of equal value and equally desirable to the Navy for an aerial gunnery range, and would have given Ray T. Adams fee simple title to the present gunnery range of the Navy, thereby enabling the said Ray T. Adams to convey a 100-foot right-of-way across the property and making it possible to construct a toll road.

The House committee is aware of the fact that the area to be traversed by the proposed toll road is presently isolated, very sparsely settled, and of little value in its present condition. The committee is further aware of the fact that the development of this area for tourists and recreational purposes, the revenue from which source constitutes 95 percent of the business realized in Dare County, N. C., in which the greater portion of this road is to be located, will be highly beneficial to both the State of North Carolina and the Commonwealth of Virginia. The committee wishes to expedite the development of this area; however, the committee likewise feels that it is mandatory that in doing so it adequately protect the interests of the Government. In this connection, it is a foregone conclusion that the 174 acres of land which comprise the present aerial gunnery range will be greatly enhanced in value as a result of the construction of the toll road by the two State authorities. It is the intent of the committee that any increase in value of this property now owned by the Government be recovered to the Government.

With the foregoing premises in mind and acting under instructions of the House Committee on Armed Services, the House conferees offered substitute language for that presently contained in section 305. The new language would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to convey a perpetual easement 100 feet wide across the present Navy aerial gunnery range, retaining the fee in the United States. This conveyance will necessarily make the land unusable as a Navy aerial gunnery range. Therefore, the authorization further provides that Ray T. Adams shall lease to the Navy, under such conditions as he and the Secretary of the Navy shall agree to, a tract of 174 acres approximately 6 miles north of the present gunnery range, which tract can be used equally well by the Navy as its aerial gunnery range. In addition, the said Ray T. Adams agrees to erect adequate substitute facilities, on the leasehold site to be selected, without cost to the United States. The Senate agrees to same.

CARL VINSON,
PAUL J. KILDAY,
DEWEY SHORT,
LESLIE ARENDS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. DOUGLAS] is recognized for 30 minutes.

KOREA AND WORLD PEACE

Mrs. DOUGLAS. Mr. Speaker, at this critical juncture when so much affecting the present and the future of all mankind is at issue, every one of us should take special care to avoid saying those things which might add to the difficulties in world conditions.

The national situation, as well as the world situation, calls for maturity of judgment and a temperate tone. The entire Nation—except only a small collection at the extreme left and the far right—has responded with overwhelming support to the President's wise and courageous action in stopping aggression in Korea. This demonstrates, as nothing else could, the underlying vigor and sound sense of direction of our people. It must come as a rude surprise to those at home and abroad who have counted upon a schism within the American nation to further their own advantages. The importance of this situation in Korea rises over all partisan considerations—as it should.

It is timely for us to look back and to look ahead to find the essential truths of the developments in Korea and their relation to our national policy.

The first thing I want to emphasize, is that we got into Korea purely by the accident of wartime circumstances. In the past few days I have read statements and have heard comments attempting to link our position in Korea with some alleged design conceived in the wartime conferences between ourselves and our wartime allies. No facts support these allegations. The story was laid before the Committee on Foreign Affairs a year ago in its hearing on the Korean aid bill and has been published in a committee report on that legislation.

Let us review the essential facts.

Korea had been a protectorate of Japan in 1905. It became a puppet of Japan in 1907. It was formally annexed by Japan in 1910. It was one of the conquered areas of the Japanese Empire awaiting liberation in World War II. Korea's independence was pledged at the Cairo Conference on December 1, 1943. China, Great Britain, and the United States were parties to the pledge. The pledge was later underwritten by Russia at the Potsdam Conference on July 26, 1945.

Immediately after the Japanese ended hostilities, Korea was occupied by forces of the United States and of the Soviet Union. That occupation was understood to be solely for the purpose of receiving and administering the capitulation of Japanese forces.

To meet the immediate problem of coordinating the acceptance of the Japanese surrender in Korea, military authorities had agreed on August 11, 1945, on the thirty-eighth parallel as the administrative line between the two forces. It approximately divided the country. It was a clear line on the map. That is the simple explanation for the line drawn along the thirty-eighth parallel.

The Russians entered first. That was on August 12, 1945. They were already just over the border in eastern Siberia. Our nearest forces were in Okinawa. American troops had to be brought from that point and from the farther distant Philippines. They got to Korea on September 8, almost 4 weeks after the Russians.

You may ask, Why the delay? Remember, the end of the war came with unexpected suddenness. The limited available shipping had to be used for rushing troops into Japan as an item of first priority. The move into Korea was accomplished only after a vast effort of preparing and equipping troops to move from the tropics into a rugged climate. The wonder is not that it took so long but that it was done so quickly.

What was not then foreseen, and no one here did foresee it, was that the Russians who entered Korea to accept a Japanese surrender would stay on as overlords. The military administrative limit became a boundary of totalitarianism. The iron curtain was rung down across Korea.

The second point I want to make is that the United States' stay in Korea was prolonged because of a principle. We had pledged that country's independence. Russia obduracy could not be made the excuse for defaulting on that pledge. Had we abandoned the South Koreans to Communist conquest from the north, every people everywhere would have been made aware that the United States would not honor its word. Our potential allies throughout the world would have been alienated and discouraged. In that indirect way our security was involved in Korea. So, notwithstanding that Korea was to us a military liability, we were obliged to remain there to carry out our responsibilities.

When arrangements between the local commanders proved futile as a means of getting the Russians out of North Korea in keeping with their pledge, we sought the same end through diplomatic action. Starting in December, 1945, we sought vainly for two years to bring about agreement between Washington and Moscow to redeem the pledges made at Cairo and reaffirmed at Potsdam.

Finally, on September 17, 1947, the United States laid the problem before the General Assembly of the United Nations. Actually, under article 107 of the Charter, the matter might have been kept as an issue of contention between the two major victor powers. Such a thing was completely beyond the intention of this Government. We sought instead the interposition of the United Nations because, in Secretary Marshall's phrase—

> We do not wish to have the inability of two powers to reach agreement delay any further the urgent and rightful claims of the Korean people to independence.

That development brings me to the third point I wish to emphasize. For 3 years the United States has acted in Korea as the servant of the United Nations.

In November, 1947, the United Nations General Assembly called for a free election in Korea under observance of a United Nations Commission. This election was to choose a constituent assembly to draft a constitution and establish a national government.

The Soviet government turned its back on this undertaking. It refused the commission access to its zone. It withheld cooperation in the electoral procedures. Only Koreans in the American zone were allowed a voice in this effort to bring about a new state and a new government under the principles of freedom expressed in the UN Charter.

This new government, exercising authority in the southern portion, was established formally on August 15, 1948.

This did not bring an end to our responsibilities. This new government had to be given a chance for economic survival as well as juridical independence.

Under our military government and, after January 1, 1949, under the Economic Cooperation Administration, we planned in concert with the government of the young republic to bring about a replenishment of its economy, developing new sources of materials at home and new markets abroad, and restoring and modernizing its productive resources.

Gradually, as talent was developed among the Koreans and as their own governmental agencies were set up, our authorities transferred functions to them.

Finally, a year ago, the last of our military units were withdrawn. The occupation was over. The Republic of Korea stood on its own legs—still depending, however, on the United States for assistance in making its way for its first few years of independence.

There have been many false analogies between the Russian position in Korea and our own up to this point. Soviet forces were formally withdrawn from Northern Korea before ours were withdrawn from the Republic of Korea. However, we should permit no one to lead us to false conclusions on this point, for the Northern Korean regime remained in every sense a satellite of Russia.

It is pointless to attempt to equate the actions of the two great powers, one striving to establish freedom and the other trying to blot out freedom in Korea.

At the same time that the withdrawal of our forces was being completed, the Congress faced the task of legislating a basis for our policy to make a going nation out of the Republic of Korea. Up to that time policy making in Korea had been exclusively in executive hands. The Congress' sole part had been to appropriate the necessary funds. The Congress had not sought to influence the pattern of policy by statute.

The legislation, developed last year in the Committee on Foreign Affairs, of which I am a member, was delayed in the House until January 19, 1950. It was defeated on the floor of the House by a margin of only one vote. It is difficult to analyze the causes behind that vote. It is equally difficult to analyze its effects. Certainly in some quarters abroad it must have presented convincing evidence that the United States was a fickle guardian of freedom.

At the insistence of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the House reconsidered the issue 3 weeks later. This time the House demonstrated its better judgment.

The Korean aid program for the fiscal year 1950 was enacted.

What would have happened if the House had not reversed its earlier refusal? The result would have been to give the Communists of North Korea the prize they are seeking in their present invasion. Our position in the Far East, our reputation in the whole world, would have been undermined.

Besides economic aid, the Congress had enacted legislation for limited military assistance to the Republic of Korea. Though our forces were withdrawn, a small staff of advisers and instructors had remained there to help the small native defense force in developing its skill at arms. The Mutual Defense Assistance Act passed last fall authorized a small amount of weapons for defense.

The policies worked. Though beset by inflationary pressures last year and the earlier part of this year, the economy of the Republic began to respond satisfactorily to the assistance program. The small Korean force, designed and equipped only for limited defense, showed increasingly good morale.

That measure of success achieved by the Republic may have been a large factor in the decision to launch the invasion from the North.

We had helped set up the Korean Republic in pursuance of a policy sponsored by the United Nations. We had nurtured that republic from our own resources as part of our obligation to underwrite its independence in keeping with the principles of the Charter.

From the moment of the invasion, however, another facet of the Charter became involved. Not simply the right to freedom and independence as a passive thing, but the security of a people against wanton aggression was now at issue.

The situation was laid immediately before the United Nations. The Security Council immediately called upon the parties concerned to cease fire. When this call was disregarded, the Security Council then called for appropriate action by the member nations which were in a position to give assistance.

That meant us. But it did not mean us exclusively. The British and the Dutch, also having forces in that general area, joined with the United States in carrying out the principles of the Charter. Offers of assistance were also made by Australia, Belgium, and New Zealand.

We must emphasize here that in every respect our present action in Korea is in pursuance of the United Nations Security Councils' resolutions of June 25 and 27. Our action there is solely for the purpose of restoring the Republic of Korea to its status prior to the invasion from the north and of reestablishing the peace broken by that aggression.

This juncture is like the invasion of Manchuria by imperialist Japan in 1931. This juncture is like that of Ethiopia invaded by the Fascists in 1935. It is like the Nazi penetration of the Rhineland in 1936. But essentially it is unlike any of those previous examples of aggression. History is not repeating itself. This time the free world has responded to the challenge. This time prudent action is being taken. This time aggression is being met at its inception.

If the Security Council had not acted in support of the Korean Republic's independence—if the United States had not given effect to the decision of the Security Council—every small nation in the Far East and in Europe, and perhaps some large ones too, would today be sending notes of appeasement to the Russian Government.

If the President had not taken the needed action in Korea, the United Nations would have become a thing of the past and any hope of outlawing aggression and maintaining peace in the world would have vanished with it.

But the President has acted. The power of this Nation and of the entire United Nations, with the overwhelming support of free people everywhere, has been placed behind the right of one small nation to live independently and without fear.

Freedom and security must be based on strength. But they must be the right not only of the strong. They must be the right of the weakest as well. Without that, there can be no real peace and freedom in the world. It is the same in the world as within our own Nation, where the rights of the weakest are as sacred as the rights of the strongest. The rule of law can tolerate no other basis.

Finally, let us take note of an old American habit of linking the words "peace" and "freedom." I trust that Americans will always insist on thinking of them as inseparable and speaking of them in the same breath.

The contention between the totalitarian forces and the forces on our side is not over the issue of peace alone.

The Communists, too, want peace—but for them it must be peace according to Communist specifications, with communism in the saddle and freedom put to rout. In that respect they are precisely like the Nazis and Fascists, who also wanted peace in their fashion.

By its very nature, communism denies freedom to the individual human being and to the human spirit. Freedom is what we can offer and the Communists can never offer.

We must conceive of freedom not as a negative thing—not as simply an absence of restraint. In Matthew Arnold's phrase—"freedom is a goode horse, but a horse to ride somewhere."

For us and for our allies, freedom must be both an end and a means.

As an end it is infinitely worth saving by the pledge of our national strength in support of the principles of the United Nations.

As a means freedom must be regarded as an opportunity to bring about a better basis of life among the world's peoples.

We have not the wealth to guarantee them that from our own bounty.

But our great resources of technical knowledge are indispensable to the aspirations of other peoples to find their way along the upward road. Only with our help can the people of the underdeveloped areas learn to earn more bread. It is up to us to show them the way to a fuller and more secure life. That, in turn, is the only way to establish a firmer foundation for freedom. The relation between freedom and progress is reciprocal. They are facets of the same thing. That is the underlying principle of the point 4 program.

At the critical moment of the Korean affair, our moral position among the great number of underdeveloped nations of the world must certainly be strengthened by the fact that we—this Congress and this administration—have given an earnest demonstration not only of a will to buttress the world against aggression, but also of the desire to help other nations along the road to a better life.

A nation, like an individual, has a character. It has the power to choose what kind of a character it shall be. Do we want to be a nation whose word is trusted and respected? I think so. Do we want to be a nation that lives for itself alone, or a nation that lives for purposes beyond itself? I believe our highest destiny as a nation is to meet fully our opportunity to serve the aspiration of men everywhere to find the means to a better life. No other nation has ever had so vast an opportunity. No other nation has had comparable means for fulfillment. As we meet our opportunity we shall fulfill ourselves.

The rest of the world must know of our will to help toward a goal that communism promises but cannot reach—the goal of improvement in the lot and life of the world's people. It must know also of our will to nurture and defend freedom, a value that is the very opposite of communism.

Our President has seen the issues steadily and whole. It was he who projected the point 4 program. It was he who spoke and acted for the Nation in challenging aggression in Korea. The policy in one instance leads to a firmer basis for freedom. The action taken in the other instance has given new assurance to the world.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. THOMPSON, for 1 day, on account of official business.

To Mr. JONES of Missouri (at the request of Mr. WALTER), indefinitely, on account of official business.

To Mr. PRESTON, for Friday, June 30, on account of official business.

To Mr. TACKETT, for June 30, on account of official business.

To Mr. MCGREGOR (at the request of Mr. BREHM), for an indefinite period, beginning Wednesday, June 28, on account of illness.

To Mr. HÉBERT (at the request of Mr. LARCADE), for 1 day, on account of official business.

To Mr. PASSMAN (at the request of Mr. LARCADE), for 1 day, on account of official business.

To Mr. WILLIS (at the request of Mr. LARCADE), for 1 day, on account of official business.

To Mr. WAGNER, for 1 day, on account of serious illness in family.

AID TO KOREA

Mr. O'KONSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'KONSKI. Mr. Speaker, I heartily endorse the action by President Truman and his advisers in the protection of the free people of southern Korea. I am one of those who have felt that that action has been long overdue. I remember distinctly in January of this year when the Korean-aid bill came before this House many of us in the minority wanted at that time a clear line of distinction as to just what the action of the United States of America was going to be to protect the free people in the Pacific. We distinctly wanted to know what was going to happen to our relationship as far as the protection of Formosa and Korea was concerned. The bill that was before the House at that time dealt exclusively with economic aid to the free people of Korea. Those of us who wanted action on the part of Formosa also feel that we have been vindicated in our demand in that now, some 6 months later, the leadership of the United States of America has taken the action which the minority of this House wanted taken in January of 1950.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota asked and was given permission to extend his remarks on the subject of the presentation of the portrait of Hon. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. WOODRUFF asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. HAGEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include excerpts from newspapers and magazines.

Mr. NELSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAND asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. DONOHUE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances.

Mr. YATES asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter and an article appearing in the Chicago Daily News.

Mr. BOYKIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include two editorials.

Mr. BUCHANAN (at the request of Mr. PRIEST) was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. HAVENNER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a telegram.

Mr. ELLIOTT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include certain extraneous matter.

Mr. MCCORMACK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article appearing in the Washington Star of June 29 by Dorothy Thompson.

Mr. REES asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include certain printed matter.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A concurrent resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. Con. Res. 96. Concurrent resolution to print additional copies of hearings on S. 1832, on immigration bill, to the Committee on House Administration

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 2348. An act to increase the annual authorization for the appropriation of funds for collecting, editing, and publishing of official papers relating to the Territories of the United States;

S. 3550. An act to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter), and rice and rice products;

S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes;

S. J. Res. 170. Joint resolution to provide for the transfer of the paintings The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and The Chasm of the Colorado from the United States Capitol to the Department of the Interior; and

S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution transferring the plaster cast of the statue of George Washington from the United States Capitol to the Smithsonian institution.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. MCCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 1 minute p. m.) under its previous order, the House adjourned until Monday, July 3, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1526. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the Annual Report of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, prepared by the Commissioner of Narcotics, for the calendar year ended December 31, 1949, pursuant to section 1 of the act of June 14, 1930; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1527. A letter from the Acting Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency, transmitting the Third Annual Report of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, covering the housing activities of the Federal Government for the calendar year 1949; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1528. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a report on records proposed for disposal and lists or schedules covering records proposed for disposal by certain Government agencies, pursuant to the act approved July 7, 1943 (57 Stat. 380), as amended by the act approved July 6, 1945 (59 Stat. 434); to the Committee on House Administration.

1529. A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting a report on the audit of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs for the 2 years ended June 30, 1949, together with Precinradio, Inc., and Institute of Inter-American Transportation for the periods from July 1, 1947, to the dates of final liquidation—May 10 and August 20, 1949—pursuant to the requirements of the Government Corporation Control Act (31 U. S. C. 841) (H. Doc. No. 631); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and ordered to be printed.

1530. A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting volume 2 of the report of the audit of Commodity Credit Corporation and its affiliate, War Hemp Industries, Inc., for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1946 and 1947, pursuant to the requirements of section 5 of the act of February 24, 1945 (59 Stat. 6), and the Government Corporation Control Act (31 U. S. C. 841), respectively (H. Doc. No. 632); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. KARST: Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. Report pursuant to House Resolution 114, Eighty-first Congress. Resolution authorizing and directing the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service to conduct thorough studies and investigations relating to matters coming within the jurisdiction of such committee under rule XI (1) (e) of the rules of the House of Representatives; without amendment (Rept. No. 2456). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. WILLIAMS: Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. Report pursuant to House Resolution 114, Eighty-first Congress. Resolution authorizing and directing the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service to conduct thorough studies and investigations relating to matters coming within the jurisdiction of such committee under rule XI (1) (e) of the rules of the House of Representatives; without amendment (Rept. No. 2457). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. ENGLE of California: Committee on Public Lands. H. R. 7059. A bill to create a National Cemetery Commission for the consolidation of national cemetery activities within one civilian commission, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2458). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HART: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 7954. A bill to authorize the commercial operation of certain vessels on the Great Lakes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2459). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6606. A bill to provide that the district judge for the eastern, middle, and western districts of Pennsylvania shall become a district judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania alone when the first vacancy occurs in that district; without amendment (Rept. No. 2466). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. CELLER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8763. A bill to amend the Clayton Act with respect to the recovery of triple damages under the antitrust laws, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2467). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. JONES of Alabama: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 7670. A bill to regulate the height, exterior design, and construction of private and semipublic buildings in the Georgetown area of the National Capital; with amendment (Rept. No. 2468). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 8909. A bill to authorize the District of Columbia government to establish an Office of Civil Defense, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2469). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 381. An act for the relief of Low Way Hong; without amendment (Rept. No. 2435). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 587. An act for the relief of Sister Stefania Cuprys; without amendment (Rept. No. 2436) Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 848. An act for the relief of Lorenzo Buira Sarrate; without amendment (Rept. No. 2437). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1049. An act for the relief of Amy Alexandrovna Taylor and Myrna Taylor; with amendment (Rept. No. 2438). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary: S. 1347. An act for the relief of Jose Da Silva; without amendment (Rept. No. 2439). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1792. An act for the relief of Thomas Nicholas Epiphaniades and Wanda Julia Epiphaniades; with amendment (Rept. No. 2440). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1869. An act for the relief of Marcantonio Doria d'Angri and his wife, Sonia Stampa Doria d'Angri; without amendment (Rept. No. 2441). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2231. An act for the relief of Marco Murolo, and his wife, Romana Pellis Murolo; without amendment (Rept. No. 2442). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2243. An act for the relief of Tevfik Kamil Kutay; with amendment (Rept. No. 2443). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2349. An act for the relief of Ho Paak-Sui; without amendment (Rept. No. 2444). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2462. An act for the relief of Ruzina Skalova; without amendment (Rept. No. 2445). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2575. An act for the relief of Yayoko Kobayashi and June Kobayashi, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2446). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2662. An act for the relief of Evzen Syrovatka and his wife; without amendment (Rept. No. 2447). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2682. An act for the relief of Naum Ionescu and his wife; without amendment (Rept. No. 2448). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2735. An act for the relief of Mrs. Vernon B. Rasmussen; without amendment (Rept. No. 2449). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2745. An act for the relief of Marie De Champourcin; without amendment (Rept. No. 2450). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2795. An act for the relief of Fortunato Giulio Torre; without amendment (Rept. No. 2451). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 3007. An act for the relief of Stefanie Pfister and Hildegarde Weber; without amendment (Rept. No. 2452). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. Senate Concurrent Resolution 91. Concurrent resolution favoring the suspension of deportation of certain aliens; with amendment (Rept. No. 2453). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6463. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Shikaju Nakashima; with amendment (Rept. No. 2454). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FEIGHAN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8423. A bill for the relief of Yuriko Mizumoto; without amendment (Rept. No. 2455). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KEATING: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 649. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Alice N. Kozma; with amendment (Rept. No. 2460). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. FRAZIER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 1638. A bill to pay Warren P. Hoover for services rendered the Army of the United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 2461). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FRAZIER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 5981. A bill for the relief of Clayborne V. Wagley; without amendment (Rept. No. 2462). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6095. A bill for the relief of Universal Corp., James Stewart Corp., and James Stewart & Co., Inc.; with amendment (Rept. No. 2463). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KEATING: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7921. A bill for the relief of Eva T. Ross; without amendment (Rept. No. 2464). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8929. A bill for the relief of Vincent F. Leslie; with amendment (Rept. No. 2465). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mrs. BOSONE:

H. R. 9014. A bill to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance of the Colorado River storage project and of certain other reclamation projects, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. COMBS:

H. R. 9015. A bill granting the consent of the Congress to the negotiation of a compact relating to the waters of the Sabine River by the States of _____, Texas, and Louisiana; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. DENTON:

H. R. 9016. A bill to provide for the elimination of the erosion of the banks of the Ohio River in the vicinity of Mount Vernon, Ind.; to the Committee on Public Works.

By Mr. HAGEN:

H. R. 9017. A bill to promote the rehabilitation of the bands of Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, located on the Red Lake, White Earth, Greater Leech Lake, Bois Fort or Nett Lake, Mille Lac, Fon du Lac,

Grand Portage, and Vermillion Lake Indian Reservations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. VINSON:

H. R. 9018. A bill to provide that personnel of the Reserve components of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States shall have common Federal appointments or enlistments as reserves in their respective services, to equalize disability benefits applicable to such personnel, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

H. R. 9019. A bill to provide for a Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. BIEMILLER:

H. R. 9020. A bill to amend the Hatch Act; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mr. CELLER:

H. R. 9021. A bill to provide for the appointment and compensation of an Assistant Solicitor General and two assistants to the Solicitor General; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

H. R. 9022. A bill to provide for the establishment of summer training installations to offer basic military training for certain civilian volunteers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. McCORMACK:

H. R. 9023. A bill to amend the Hatch Act; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mrs. WOODHOUSE:

H. R. 9024. A bill to amend the Hatch Act; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mr. KILDAY:

H. R. 9025. A bill to provide for the establishment of summer training installations to offer basic military training for certain civilian volunteers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, requesting immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BURKE:

H. R. 9026. A bill for the relief of Rashid Cassis; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FARRINGTON:

H. R. 9027. A bill for the relief of Riyoko Iwamoto and Hiroto Iwamoto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HERLONG:

H. R. 9028. A bill for the relief of Louis E. Gabel; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. JENNINGS:

H. R. 9029. A bill for the relief of Demetrios Kapitanopoulos; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KILBURN:

H. R. 9030. A bill for the relief of Wesley Amell; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KUNKEL:

H. R. 9031. A bill for the relief of Suzuko Yoshimura and Sachiko Yoshimura; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MITCHELL.

H. R. 9032. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Hanaco Tatsumi; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan:

H. R. 9033. A bill for the relief of Sumi Marguriete Hamada; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. O'KONSKI:

H. R. 9034. A bill for the relief of Ryma Adele Zilinskaite; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2237. By Mr. GOODWIN: Resolutions memorializing Congress to take immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

2238. By Mr. MILLER of Maryland: Resolution of Dorchester Unit, No. 91, American Legion Auxiliary, Cambridge, Md., opposing any form of compulsory health insurance or any system of political medicine designed for national bureaucratic control; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2239. By Mr. RICH: Resolution of Lycoming County Medical Society, Williamsport, Pa., in opposition to Reorganization Plan No. 27 of 1950; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

2240. By the SPEAKER: Petition of Carlton Skinner, Governor, Guam, Marianas Islands, transmitting Guam Congress Resolution 5, relative to expressing its deep grief and sorrow at the untimely death of Representative William Lemke; to the Committee on House Administration.

2241. By Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin: Resolutions in the form of a declaration of policy by the Wisconsin Bankers Association; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2242. By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: Memorial of the General Court of Massachusetts, to take immediate action to prevent the complete liquidation of the shipbuilding industry in Massachusetts; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

SENATE

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1950

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, in this time of tumult, in this hour of danger, in this night of anxiety, give us, we beseech Thee, calmness of mind, consecration to duty, and a stern determination to finish the work which Thou hast given us to do.

As again there comes a supreme test of America's faith, when ruthless foes deny, defy, and would defile the very conceptions and aspirations which to us nurtured in liberty make life precious and sacred, may our Nation under God have a new birth of freedom.

May the crusaders in freedom's holy cause now marching and flying to do battle for a righteous peace be inspired by the assurance that—

"Who fights for freedom goes with joyful tread.
To meet the fires of hell against him hurled,
And has for captain Him whose thorn-wreathed head,
Smiles from the Cross upon a conquered world,"

Amen.

DESIGNATION OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., July 1, 1950.

To the Senate:

I appoint Hon. CARL HAYDEN, a Senator from the State of Arizona, to perform the duties of the Chair.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
President pro tempore.

Thereupon Mr. HAYDEN took the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Friday, June 30, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1169) for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1437) to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5368) to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Acting President pro tempore:

S. 2596. An act relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944);

S. 3336. An act to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico;

H. R. 1169. An act for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz;

H. R. 1437. An act to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5368. An act to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, July 1, 1950, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 2596. An act relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944); and

S. 3336. An act to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. LUCAS. I move that the Senate stand in recess until Wednesday next at 12 o'clock noon.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold the motion in order that I may make an inquiry? Would it be possible to make some insertions in the RECORD?

Mr. LUCAS. If nothing more than that is to be done, I withhold the motion; but I am not going to yield to any long speeches this afternoon.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not pour out his wrath on me. I am merely making a modest request to place two insertions in the RECORD, which I failed to present on Friday. If I may be permitted to do that, I should like to do it.

Mr. LUCAS. I yield for such routine matters.

RESOLUTIONS OF GRAND LODGE SONS OF HERMANN IN NEBRASKA

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as a part of my remarks, resolutions unanimously adopted at the recent convention of the Grand Lodge Sons of Hermann in Nebraska.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GRAND LODGE SONS OF HERMANN IN NEBRASKA,
Columbus, Nebr., June 22, 1950.

Hon. KENNETH WHERRY,
United States Senator,
Senate of the United States of America,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: At the recent convention of the Grand Lodge Sons of Hermann the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"RESOLUTIONS

"Whereas there is great national concern with the affairs of the Government deficit spending and lack of apparent interest in curtailment thereof; and

"Whereas it is the opinion of the convention assembled that the national budget must be balanced: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That a request be made to our Senators and our Representatives in the Congress of the United States to do all in their power to bring about the establishment of a sound financial policy, by invoking the report of the Hoover task force, and that we are opposed to the proposed Missouri Valley Authority, which will lend itself to a socialistic tendency and developments. We strongly recommend and favor a soil and conservation program, and a democratic and sound waterways program, which will give to the future of the United States of America a heritage to posterity to be economically sound.

"Whereas there is great world disturbance, and the peace of the world is presently endangered: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That we strongly urge the Congress of the United States to be alert and watchful of the tendencies that may lead us to war, and that they use every means at their disposal and command to bring about amicable settlement of disputes by the nations of the world; be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be sent to our Nebraska Representative in the Congress of the United States."

Sincerely,

WILLIAM D. EGGERT,
Grand Secretary.

SPEECH BY AMBASSADOR J. M. ELIZALDE BEFORE MIDCONTINENT WORLD TRADE COUNCIL CONVENTION

[Mr. WHERRY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered by Ambassador J. M. Elizalde, of the Philippine Islands, before the Midcontinent World Trade Council Convention at Omaha, Nebr., on June 2, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO YOU?—ARTICLE BY JOHN T. FLYNN

[Mr. WATKINS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "What Has Happened to You?" written by John T. Flynn and published in a recent issue of the Reader's Digest, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE HEART OF THE AMERASIA CASE—ARTICLE BY GEORGE SOKOLSKY

[Mr. WATKINS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "The Heart of the Amerasia Case," written by George Sokolsky and published in the Washington Times-Herald of June 21, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR MURRAY AND PROCLAMATION BY HAROLD TURK, MAYOR OF MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

[Mr. MURRAY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by him at the Roosevelt Memorial Service held at Miami Beach, Fla., on April 12, 1950, and a proclamation issued by the Honorable Harold Turk, mayor of Miami Beach, Fla., on the same occasion, which appear in the Appendix.]

THE RAILROAD STRIKE

[Mr. SCHOEPPEL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Could Be Simple," published in the Pretty Prairie (Kans.) Times of June 29, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE RAILWAY STRIKE

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in view of the importance of the early enactment of Senate bill 3463, I ask unanimous consent that there be inserted in the body of the RECORD at this point an article entitled "Rail Tie-up in Sixth Day With Peace Hope Dim," published in the New York Times today.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAIL TIE-UP IN SIXTH DAY WITH PEACE HOPE DIM

CHICAGO, June 30.—Revenue and wage losses were counted in the millions of dollars today in the 6-day-old strike of the Switchmen's Union of North America, AFL., against five railroads of the Midwest and West.

Prospects of a settlement over the week end appeared dim tonight.

Francis A. O'Neill, Jr., Chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, reported following meetings with union and railroad officials that there was no progress to talk about.

Mr. O'Neill and Leverett Edwards, a member of the Board, also reported no progress in talks with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railroad Conductors, and the Railroad Yardmasters of North America. These three unions are threatening strikes on or after July 15.

Like the switchmen, the three organizations are demanding a reduction in the workweek from 6 days of 48 hours to a 5-day week of 40 hours with no loss in pay.

Heavy losers among the struck carriers are two companies with headquarters here: The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Co. and the Chicago Great Western Railway Co. Both of them are shut down completely.

Based on last year's figures, the Rock Island has lost on an average of $500,000 a day in gross operating revenues. The Chicago Great Western's losses have been estimated at an average of $85,000 a day. The two road's idle employees are 21,000 and 3,500, respectively.

Losses were not disclosed by the other three struck lines: the Great Northern Railway Co., the Western Pacific Railroad Co., and the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co.

If it is continued another 3 or 4 days, the tie-up on the Great Northern will seriously curtail iron-ore shipments, according to shipping sources. The walk-out has stopped all iron ore moving from the mines to the Great Northern's docks at Superior, Wis. These terminals handle almost a third of the ore shipped from the Lake Superior mining region to steel plants.

With mills at capacity and above, the loss of this supply is pictured as a serious threat to the steel industry. Because of the late opening of the navigation season on the Great Lakes, ore shipments already are behind schedule.

STATEHOOD FOR HAWAII AND ALASKA—MINORITY VIEWS

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to file within the next few days minority views on the bill (H. R. 49) to enable the people of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, and also on the bill (H. R. 331) to provide for the admission of Alaska into the Union.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President——

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I have the floor, but I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I inquire if the motion made by the majority leader is debatable.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. No, it is not.

Mr. CAIN. I thank the Chair.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Michigan for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. FERGUSON. What is the pending question before the Senate?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is the motion of the Senator from Illinois that the Senate stand in recess until Wednesday next.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield so that I may make a statement not to exceed 2 minutes.

Mr. LUCAS. I yield for that purpose.

REPRESENTATION OF CHINA IN THE UNITED NATIONS

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, active and undercover allies of the Soviet Union in and out of the United Nations are spreading rumors to the effect that it is possible to work out a "deal" whereby the Government of the Republic of China will be unseated and the Communist regime become their replacement in the United Nations.

I have been assured by what I believe to be responsible sources that this Government has no such intention.

To the contrary there are now indications in the British press that the Government of that country may reconsider its earlier decision to press for Chinese Communist membership in the United Nations. I hope that the unofficial reports are confirmed by an official statement of His Majesty's Government.

In view of the events of the past week it is important that this Government make known in clear and unmistakable language that not only our vote but also our influence and, if necessary, our veto will be used against the seating of the Communist regime or the unseating of the representatives of the Republic of China, our wartime ally and long-time friend. Such a declaration should not contain any clever or unclear language which might indicate that we intended to oppose the seating of the Communist regime in such a forthright manner, but that we would be willing to sacrifice the seat of the Republic of China pending later decision on new representation.

The island of Formosa is an integral part of the Republic of China. Our honor as a Nation is so pledged and must not be again tarnished as it was at Yalta.

The Government of the Republic of China, which is temporarily located on Formosa, is reported to have offered several divisions of their best-trained troops to serve under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. With the exception of our own forces in Japan they are the only substantial body of troops who can reach Korea in the next few critical days.

This morning the Washington Post, apparently speaking for a faction in the State Department who are more interested in carrying on their private feuds with the Government of the Republic of China than they are in facing up to the realities of the menace of this new outcropping of overt Communist aggression in Korea, indicates that this Government should turn down such an offer.

The decision on the need of accepting the offer of troops from the Republic of China should be left to the decision of our commander in the Far East and not to those who wrote a memo last Decemberber 23 to the effect that Formosa had no strategic value.

BILL FOR RELIEF OF CITY OF CHESTER, ILL.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I have in mind the bill to which the distinguished Senator from Illinois referred yesterday, H. R. 2365, for the relief of the city of Chester, Ill. I understood the distinguished majority leader to say that it would be taken up on Monday. I assume now, in view of the motion of the Senator from Illinois, that consideration of the bill will go over until Wednesday.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator is correct. Last night I inadvertently moved that the Senate adjourn until today, instead of until Monday. Today I shall ask that the Senate stand in recess until Wednesday, since that seems to be everyone's desire. Yesterday I agreed with the minority leader that nothing would be taken up on Monday but the bridge bill, in which the Senator from Missouri and I are interested.

Mr. DONNELL. In order that I may govern myself accordingly, may I understand that it is the intention of the Senator from Illinois to take up the bridge bill, H. R. 2365, on Wednesday?

Mr. LUCAS. I doubt that very much, because I have already served notice on the Senate that we would take up the nomination of Mr. Pike, who has been appointed by the President to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. I shall arrange with the Senator from Missouri to take up the bridge bill on a later date.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

RECESS

Mr. LUCAS. I renew my motion.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Illinois that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Wednesday, July 5, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, JULY 3, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. WHITTINGTON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication:

THE SPEAKER'S ROOMS,
Washington, D. C., July 3, 1950.

I hereby designate Hon. WILLIAM M. WHITTINGTON to act as Speaker pro tempore today.

SAM RAYBURN.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou God of majesty and mercy, may we now be lifted by the mighty tides of Thy grace into the glad assurance that Thou art willing and able to help us meet all our challenging tasks and responsibilities.

We penitently confess that frequently we are far more conscious of our problems and perplexities, our trials and tribulations, than we are of Thy gracious providence and those inexhaustible resources of power which Thou hast placed at our disposal and which we are privileged to appropriate by faith.

Our finite minds do not know how to rightly read and interpret the signs of the times but may we believe that it is our highest wisdom to trust Thee and not be afraid.

Grant that our beloved country, conceived in sacrifice and dedicated to liberty, may be inspired and strengthened in its glorious mission of helping to release the hidden splendor of humanity and lead all mankind into the radiant light of a new day.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, June 30, 1950, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on June 30, 1950, the President approved and signed bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 7058. An act to amend laws relating to the United States Military Academy and the United States Naval Academy, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2230. An act for the relief of Arthur S. Horner, Leah B. Horner, and Maude Brewer, doing business as the A. S. Horner Construction Co.;

H. R. 3783. An act authorizing the transfer of part of Camp Joseph T. Robinson to the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 4895. An act to permit the prospecting, development, mining, removal, and utilization of the mineral resources within the national forests in Minnesota, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5002. An act to incorporate the Reserve Officers Association of the United States;

H. R. 5846. An act for the relief of Mrs. Lillian Coolidge;

H. R. 5943. An act to provide for the erection of a bronze and stone monument at the grave of Constantino Brumidi;

H. R. 6934. An act for the relief of E. H. Corrigan;

H. R. 6826. An act to extend the Selective Service Act of 1948, as amended, for a period of 1 year, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 4692. An act to provide for the extension of the term of certain patents of persons who served in the military or naval forces of the United States during World War II.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McDaniel, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 3666. An act to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry;

S. 3809. An act to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949; and

S. J. Res. 180. Joint resolution to suspend until December 31, 1950, the application of certain Federal laws with respect to attorneys employed by the Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare in connection with the study and investigation ordered by Senate Resolution 140, Eighty-first Congress.

The message also announced that the Vice President has appointed Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina and Mr. LANGER members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers referred to in the report of the Archivist of the United States numbered 50–27.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had on June 29, 1950, examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 1169. An act for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz;

H. R. 1437. An act to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5368. An act to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to announce that the Speaker, pursuant to the authority granted him on June 30, 1950, did on that date sign the following enrolled bills:

H. R. 1169. An act for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz;

H. R. 1437. An act to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5368. An act to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes;

S. 2596. An act relating to education or training of veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (Public Law 346, 78th Cong., June 22, 1944); and

S. 3336. An act to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL WEDNESDAY

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

GLUCKIN CORP.—VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 633)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, the enrolled bill (H. R. 3498) for the relief of the Gluckin Corp.

The bill provides for payment of the sum of $11,540.90 to the Gluckin Corp., in full and final settlement of all claims growing out of certain War Department contracts for the furnishing of mattress covers and sandfly bars.

It appears that on August 6, 1942, claimant entered into a contract with the United States for the manufacture of 24,000 sandfly bars at a cost of $19,197.60, the material to be furnished by the Government. The contract was subsequently modified and the number of bars to be manufactured was reduced to 12,189 at a cost of $9,749.98. In the performance of the contract claimant manufactured and delivered 379 extra bars for which it claimed the sum of $303.16. This claim was denied on the ground that there was no provision in the contract for payment on the surplus number of bars. Upon appeal, the claim was examined by the War Department Board of Contract Appeals and was denied.

It further appears that on July 28, 1942, claimant entered into a contract with the Government for the manufacture of 240,000 mattress covers at a cost of $82,560, the material to be furnished by the Government. The contract provided for liquidated damages at the rate of one-fifth of 1 percent of the price of each article for each day's delay. Claimant encountered difficulty in the performance of the contract due to a shortage of labor and the preference of non-Government work, and the contract was terminated by the contracting officer on November 24, 1942, because of claimant's failure to meet delivery requirements. The sum of $6,300 was deducted as liquidated damages for failure to meet the delivery schedule of the contract and the sum of $2,848.30 was assessed to cover the excess cost to the United States for purchases made elsewhere to complete the contract which had been terminated, in accordance with the provisions of the contract.

The third contract entered into by claimant with the Government was for the furnishing of 165,000 cotton mattress covers. As a consequence of claimant's delay in delivery the contracting officer terminated claimant's right to deliver 135,246 covers and advised claimant that purchase of this quantity would be made and any excess cost occasioned the Government would be charged to claimant's account. The Government succeeded in obtaining the mattress covers elsewhere at a saving and no costs were therefore assessed against the claimant. Under the liquidated damage provision of the contract, the same as in the second contract, however, the sum of $2,089.44 was assessed.

The instant bill provides for reimbursement to claimant not only for liquidated damages for delay but also for excess costs incurred by the Government in reletting a contract which claimant failed to perform, as assessed against it, and for the disallowance on excess deliveries under the first contract.

Every contract entered into represents a risk voluntarily assumed by the contractor, presumably, for the purpose of profit. To attempt to eliminate all of the risks associated with such an undertaking and to secure each contractor against any untoward financial conditions arising out of the performance of the contract would be to obviate the very need for the system of competitive bidding and contract award which now prevails. It is not unusual for Government contracts to contain provisions with respect to assessment of liquidated damages and excess costs like those contained in the contracts executed by the claimant, and the courts have held that such provisions are to be enforced in accordance with their terms. The need for timely delivery and the difficulty of measuring the cost of delay in wartime would seem further to justify provisions for liquidated damages.

The contracts involved were freely entered into by the claimant, and the liquidated damages and excess costs were withheld in accordance with the agreement of the parties. Undoubtedly, many persons entering into contracts with the Government during the war period experienced difficulties in performance which were not anticipated at the time the contract was assumed. Most of these, however, completed their contracts despite such difficulties. It would be, indeed, inequitable for the Government to reward those who failed to perform their contractual obligations, through reimbursement by way of private legislation, at the expense of those who have faithfully carried out their responsibilities even in many cases at a loss.

Were the instant bill to be amended so as to provide for payment to this company of the sum of $303.16, representing the value of extra material actually delivered to the Government, I would approve it. In its present form, however, I am constrained to withhold my approval.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 3, 1950.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal, and the message and bill referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered printed.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair wishes to announce that under the agreement between the Speaker and majority leader there will be no debate or 1-minute addresses, but the Chair will recognize Members for a request to extend their own remarks.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HUBER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech by the commander of the VFW.

Mr. DOYLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include appropriate material in each instance.

Mr. BARTLETT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in four instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. JENKINS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. WOODRUFF (at the request of Mr. BLACKNEY) was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous material.

LT. DARRELL SAYRE

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sayre, residents of my county, have received the sad information that their son, Lieutenant Sayre, is reported missing in action in the war-like territory in Asia. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include some editorial comment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sayre, highly respected residents of the district which I have the honor to represent, were notified on June 30 that their son, First Lt. Darrell Sayre had been reported missing since June 28. Lieutenant Sayre was pilot of an F–82 fast fighter plane. He was participating in the Korean campaign. While his friends and his parents are praying for his safe return, it is feared that he will be the first casualty from our congressional district.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point and to print therewith an article from the Pomeroy Sentinel, a newspaper of wide circulation in our district:

The United States seventh war hit home today in Meigs County when it was learned that a Meigs County air officer is missing in the Korean action.

He is First Lt. Darrell Sayre, 27, who has been stationed at Yokota air base in Japan for the past 2 years.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sayre, parents of the missing officer, received the distressing telegram delivered by special messenger yesterday afternoon at their home in Racine R D.

They said it read:

"Missing in flight since June 28 as a result of participating in the Korean operation. Letter following."

Lieutenant Sayre was flying an F–82, a fast fighter plane, at the time of his disappearance.

He was a graduate of Racine High School and entered the service soon after graduation. He served as an instructor during World War II in western United States. He was discharged at the end of hostilities and reenlisted in 1946.

Sayre married the former Doris Hayman, daughter of George Hayman, Apple Grove, and Mrs. Hayman joined him in Japan in January 1949, and a son was born to the couple in November of last year.

Lieutenant Sayre's tour of overseas duty was to have expired this October at which time he and his family had planned to return to the United States.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois (at the request of Mr. PRIEST) was given permission to extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.

STRENGTHENING THE ARM OF FREEDOM

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr HOEVEN. Mr. Speaker, a historic gathering is taking place at Valley Forge, Pa., at the present time. Some 47,000 Boy Scouts and their leaders are camped on the hallowed grounds where George Washington and his 11,000 ragged Continentals spent the dreadful winter of 1777–78.

The gathering of the Boy Scouts from every State in the Union and several foreign countries is known as a jamboree. What is probably the largest tent city ever erected anywhere is spread over 600 acres of Valley Forge Park, maintained by the State of Pennsylvania. The entire enterprise will be self-liquidating.

This jamboree is a wonderful adventure and one that will long be remembered by the boys who are privileged to attend. It is a thoroughly American gathering of a cross section of American youth—the citizens of tomorrow. Boys from all sections of the country will meet together. New friendships will be made and a better understanding will arise to help knit our great Nation together.

Only a free people could develop such a thrilling adventure for our American boys. It is a triumph for free enterprise and our American way of doing things. Scouting is wholly dedicated to preserving for America those things which have made us strong and great as a Nation. More power to the Boy Scouts of America who are strengthening the arm of freedom throughout the world.

SENATE BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A bill and joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 3809. An act to amend the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. J. Res. 180. Joint resolution to suspend until December 31, 1950, the application of certain Federal laws with respect to attorneys employed by the Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare in connection with the study and investigation ordered by S. Res. 140, Eighty-first Congress; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on July 1, 1950, present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 1169. An act for the relief of Mrs. Marion T. Schwartz;

H. R. 1437. An act to authorize the composition of the Army of the United States and the Air Force of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5368. An act to authorize the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to participate in the transfer of certain real property or interests therein, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Wednesday, July 5, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1531. A letter from the Director, Division of Territories and Island Possessions, Department of the Interior, transmitting a copy of the laws passed by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1949, pursuant to section 69 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1900; to the Committee on Public Lands.

1532. A letter from the Assistant Secretary, Department of Agriculture, transmitting a printed copy of the report on the agricultural experiment stations, 1949; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1533. A letter from the Acting Deputy Attorney General, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill entitled "A bill to amend sections 3052 and 3107 of title 18, United States Code, relating to the powers of the Federal Bureau of Investigation"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. PRIEST: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 5865. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize assistance to States and political subdivisions in the development and maintenance of local public health units, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2480). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BECKWORTH: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 8417. A bill to amend part II of the Interstate Commerce Act, with respect to the regulation of motor carriers engaged in commerce to and from the Territories and possessions of the United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 2481). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 3132. A bill for the relief of Sergio and Mara Lamberti; with amendment (Rept. No. 2470). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FEIGHAN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6442. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Martha Reid; with amendment (Rept. No. 2471). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GOSSETT: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6586. A bill for the relief of Stamatie Amersonis; with amendment (Rept. No. 2472). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GOSSETT: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6750. A bill for the relief of Achileus Maroulis; with amendment (Rept. No. 2473). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6804. A bill for the relief of certain Italian aliens; with amendment (Rept. No. 2474). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7012. A bill for the relief of Anna Ellero and Clara Ellero; with amendment (Rept. No. 2475). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7282. A bill for the relief of Cornelius VerSluis; with amendment (Rept. No. 2476). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7297. A bill for the relief of Ignas Malcius; without amendment (Rept. No. 2477). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7364. A bill for the relief of Jenny Irene Benson; with amendment (Rept. No. 2478). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FEIGHAN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7814. A bill for the relief of Stella Matutina Kazuko Yamazaki; with amendment (Rept. No. 2479). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII,

Mr. DEANE introduced a resolution (H. Res. 690) authorizing funds to defray expenses incurred by the special committee created by House Resolution 635, which was referred to the Committee on House Administration.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SADOWSKI:

H. R. 9035. A bill for the relief of Fumiko Ito; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 9036. A bill for the relief of Thomas Jacob and Alice Jacob; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 9037. A bill for the relief of Kimiko Shibata; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2243. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Hawaii Economic Study Club, Honolulu, T. H., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to rejecting and opposing communism, fascism, and all forms of totalitarianism; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2244. Also, petition of the Grand Lodge of the States of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho of the Sons of Italy in America, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to opposition to communism and to any other form of subversion; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2245. Also, petition of the Grand Lodge of the States of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho of the Sons of Italy in America, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the enactment of legislation making Columbus Day a national holiday throughout the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2246. Also, petition of the Southwestern Peanut Shellers Association, Durant, Okla., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the proceedings instituted and prosecuted by the Department of Justice of the United States against the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., and the Atlantic Commission Co., under the Federal antitrust laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2247. Also, petition of the chairmen of the Estonian and Latvian National Foundations and the chairman of the Lithuanian Association in Sweden, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to a protest meeting in Stockholm on June 19, on the tenth anniversary of the occupation of the Republics of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania by the Soviet Union; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2248. Also, petition of the mayor, city of Bryan, Tex., petitioning consideration of his resolution with reference to the Brazos River conservation and reclamation district; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2249. Also, petition of J. W. Edgar, commissioner of education, Texas Education Agency, Austin, Tex., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the ownership of the tidelands in the State of Texas along its own coast line; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1950

(Legislative day of Saturday, July 1, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, with our burdened lives tense and strained in a violent world we seek that peace which is the gift of Thy grace to all those who yield their will to Thy will, their minds to Thy truth, their hearts to Thy obedience. In these troubled days, confronted with anxiety, tragedy, and death, all a part of the crimson cost of freedom, our hearts cry out for a meaning that is larger than the things we seek. Lest our feet slip we must be upheld by something that has an eternal faith behind it. Arising above the dividing prejudices of our embittered days, may we be hearers and doers of Thy Word and of Thy will, as "we lift our living Nation a single sword to Thee." Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, July 1, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, and he announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On June 30, 1950:

S. 118. An act for the relief of Clemente Sabin Dopico;

S. 330. An act for the relief of George Gabriel Herrmann, Greta (Marketa) Herrmann (wife), and Alice Hermann (daughter), known also as George Gabriel Herman, Greta Herman, and Alice Herman;

S. 1165. An act to provide relief for the sheep-raising industry by making special quota immigration visas available to certain alien sheepherders;

S. 1452. An act for the relief of Dr. Juan A. Queralt Balleste;

S. 2107. An act for the relief of Georges Gregory Alpiar;

S. 2265. An act for the relief of Marina George Papadopoulos;

S. 2269. An act to provide for the enlistment of aliens in the Regular Army;

S. 2556. An act for the relief of Mrs. Billy J. Knight and Dorothea Knight;

S. 2629. An act for the relief of Marianne Bruchner;

S. 3258. An act to continue a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of school-age and under-school-age children in the District of Columbia;

S. 3527. An act to amend section 14 (b) of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended;

S. 3550. An act to continue for a temporary period certain powers, authority, and discretion for the purpose of exercising, administering, and enforcing import controls with respect to fats and oils (including butter), and rice and rice products;

S. 3571. An act to continue the authority of the Secretary of Commerce under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, and for other purposes; and

S. 3776. An act to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended.

On July 3, 1950:

S. 2309. An act for the relief of Oscar (Oszkar) Nemenyi, Marianna Nemenyi (wife), and Thomas John Nemenyi (son); and

S. 3336. An act to provide for the organization of a constitutional government by the people of Puerto Rico.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (H. R. 8923) to provide improved procedures with respect to the financial control of the Post Office Department, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

On request of Mr. WHERRY, and by unanimous consent, Mr. TOBEY was excused from attendance on the sessions of the Senate for the remainder of this week and Monday of next week.

On his own request, and by unanimous consent, Mr. MAGNUSON was excused from attendance on the sessions of the Senate until Wednesday of next week.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS DURING SENATE SESSION

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, a subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Finance were authorized to sit during the session of the Senate today.

On request of Mr. HILL, and by unanimous consent, a subcommittee of the Committee on Public Works was authorized to meet this afternoon during the session of the Senate.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LUCAS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Ecton	Hoey
Anderson	Ellender	Holland
Benton	Ferguson	Humphrey
Brewster	Flanders	Hunt
Bricker	Frear	Ives
Bridges	Fulbright	Jenner
Butler	George	Johnson, Tex.
Cain	Gillette	Kefauver
Connally	Graham	Kem
Cordon	Green	Kerr
Darby	Gurney	Kilgore
Donnell	Hayden	Knowland
Douglas	Hendrickson	Langer
Dworshak	Hickenlooper	Leahy
Eastland	Hill	Lehman

Lodge	Mundt	Stennis
Lucas	Murray	Taft
McCarthy	Myers	Thomas, Utah
McClellan	O'Mahoney	Thye
McFarland	Robertson	Tydings
McKellar	Russell	Watkins
McMahon	Saltonstall	Wherry
Magnuson	Schoeppel	Williams
Martin	Smith, Maine	Young
Millikin	Smith, N. J.
Morse	Sparkman

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is absent because of serious illness in his family.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are absent on public business.

The Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senators from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON and Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. WITHERS] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] and the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, attending the sessions of the International Labor Organization at Geneva, Switzerland, as a delegate representing the United States.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] are absent on official business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, before the Senate proceeds to the consideration of other business, I ask unanimous consent that Senators be permitted to introduce bills and joint resolutions, present petitions and memorials, and place routine matters in the RECORD and in the Appendix, without long speeches or long debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following letters, which were referred, as indicated:

TRAFFIC IN OPIUM AND OTHER DANGEROUS DRUGS

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, United States Treasury Department, entitled "Traffic in Opium and Other Dangerous Drugs," for the year ended December 31, 1949 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT ON AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATIONS

A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a printed copy of a report on agricultural experiment stations, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

AUDIT REPORT ON COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, an audit report of the Commodity Credit Corporation, for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1946 and 1947 (vol. 2, individual sections relative to specific commodity programs) (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

AUDIT REPORT OF THE INSTITUTE OF INTER-AMERICAN AFFAIRS CORPORATIONS, ETC.

A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, an audit report of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs Corporations, for the 2 years ended June 30, 1949, together with Prencinradio, Inc., and Institute of Inter-American Transportation for the periods from July 1, 1947, to the dates of final liquidation, May 10 and August 20, 1949 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

LAWS ENACTED BY LEGISLATURE OF HAWAII

A letter from the Secretary of Hawaii, transmitting, pursuant to law, a copy of laws passed by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1949 (with an accompanying volume); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Petitions, etc., were laid before the Senate, and referred as indicated:

By the PRESIDENT pro tempore:

Resolutions adopted by the Fifth Mississippi Valley World Trade Conference, sponsored by the Export Managers' Club, of New Orleans, La., relating to the continuance of the reciprocal trade-agreements program, and so forth; to the Committee on Finance.

The petition of Raymond di Donne, and sundry other citizens of New York, praying for the enactment of House bill 4617, to liberalize the requirement for payment of pension in certain cases to veterans and their widows and children; to the Committee on Finance.

Resolutions adopted by the Associated Townsend Clubs of Dade County, and the Miami Townsend Club No. 1, of Miami, both in the State of Florida, praying for the enactment of the so-called Townsend plan, providing old-age assistance; to the Committee on Finance.

Resolutions adopted by the Brandeis Chapter, American Jewish Congress, Women's Division, and representatives of Detroit Community Organizations on Democratization of Germany, Detroit, Mich., favoring the adoption of Senate Resolution 260, to provide for the appointment of a bipartisan civilian commission of inquiry to look into the operation of the occupational program in Germany, and the denazification of Germany; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

A resolution adopted by the Hawaii Economic Study Club, Honolulu, T. H., relating to communism; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Resolutions adopted by the Grand Lodge of the Sons of Italy in America, at Spokane, Wash., relating to communism and the designation of Columbus Day as a legal holiday; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Resolutions adopted by the Willard Hospital Auxiliary, Willard, Ohio, and the Luzerne County (Pa.) Pharmaceutical Association, protesting against the enactment of legislation providing compulsory health insurance; to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

RESOLUTIONS OF NORTH DAKOTA WILDLIFE FEDERATION

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference three resolutions adopted by the North Dakota Wildlife Federation in convention assembled at Valley City, N. Dak., June 1, 2, 3, and 4, 1950, relating to Federal aid to State games fisheries program, the Baldhill Dam located on the Cheyenne River near Valley City, N. Dak., and the building of dams to impound much new water on North Dakota land, and I ask unanimous consent that they be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE NORTH DAKOTA WILDLIFE FEDERATION IN CONVENTION ASSEMBLED AT VALLEY CITY, N. DAK., JUNE 1, 2, 3, AND 4, 1950

1. Whereas the North Dakota Wildlife Federation convening in the city of Valley City for the fifteenth annual convention this 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th days of June 1950, wish to thank the people of Valley City and vicinity, and the Barnes County Wildlife Federation, for the hospitality extended us during this convention and, whereas, the officers and committees in charge of this convention have done an excellent job, therefore, we extend our sincere thanks and appreciation.

2. Whereas the North Dakota State Game and Fish Department, the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Wildlife Federation have contributed greatly to the success of this convention, be it resolved that we extend our deep appreciation for their contributions.

3. Whereas there is pending in the Congress of these United States, a bill, known as the Dingell bill, which will provide Federal aid to State game-fisheries programs: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the North Dakota Wildlife Federation respectfully urge that our Representatives and Senators in Congress continue to support and direct their best efforts toward the passage of this bill; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of these resolutions to the Honorable Mayor of Valley City, N. Dak., the Barnes County Wildlife Federation, Valley City, N. Dak., the North Dakota Game and Fish Department, Bismarck, N. Dak., the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington, D. C., and to each Member of North Dakota's congressional delegation.

Resolution 7

Whereas the Army engineers constructed Baldhill Dam, located upon the Cheyenne River near the city of Valley City, N. Dak.; and

Whereas this structure is important from a standpoint of flood control and has a potential for good game fishing; and

Whereas this dam is of value not only to the city of Valley City, but also to all of the communities situated below Valley City on the Cheyenne River: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by this North Dakota Wildlife Federation meeting in its fifteenth annual convention in the city of Valley City on June 4, 1950, That the engineers be complimented upon the construction of this dam; be it further

Resolved, That this dam be made a multiple-use project, attaching all possible values to the program including those of wildlife, and that the engineers be encouraged to turn over the land, with the exception of that needed to manage the impounded water, to the State as a wildlife management area, that they fence this area; providing for public access by establishing gates, cattle passes, etc., that they furnish planting stock to provide habitat which will take the place of that lost through inundation, that they prepare the land upon which this stock is to be planted, that they bear the cost of such planting and that they further bear the cost of replacements and cultivation until these plantings have become established; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this organization, whose chapters are located in each of the 53 counties and whose membership exceeds 10,000 members, be instructed to send copies of this resolution to each of the congressional delegation, Col. L. G. Yoder, Corps of Engineers, district engineer, St. Paul district; D. H. Janzen, regional director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, 501 Metropolitan Building, Minneapolis, Minn.; and to the North Dakota State Game and Fish Department, Bismarck, N. Dak.

Resolution 9

Whereas Federal Agencies are currently in the process of building dams which will impound much new water on North Dakota lands which prior to the building of these dams were not inundated; and

Whereas environment for wildlife existed upon much of this land now being and to be inundated; and

Whereas this valuable wildlife enviroment will be lost to wildlife for all time once it is inundated; and

Whereas the wildlife thus lost has a recognized economic and esthetic value to the State and its people; and

Whereas the Congress, having been conscious of this value, did in its wisdom provide through Public Law 732 that the agent responsible for sponsoring the water management program which results in loss of wildlife environment shall consider wildlife values along with other multiple use values accruing from the program; and

Whereas, through Public Law 732, the sponsoring agent is instructed by the Congress that moneys necessary to implement a study of the wildlife values where they are to be influenced by such a program and other moneys which may be spent for the purpose of habitat reestablishment, to the end that such program will not decrease wildlife values in the program area, shall become an integral part of the sponsor's request to the Congress for project funds; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the fifteenth annual convention of the North Dakota Wildlife Federation in meeting at Valley City on this 4th day of June, 1950, That this body composed of delegates from its several chapters which are located in all of the 53 counties of North Dakota, petition the Congress and the various sponsoring agents of the water development program to carry out the provisions of Public Law 732 and to in all ways practically possible provide that wildlife values be given the consideration which their value to the present and the future merits; be it further

Resolved, That the planning for such wildlife consideration shall be done by trained experts working in the field of wildlife management, and that the results of such planning shall take the form of reports which shall be prepared by the Basin Studies group now employed as a branch of the Fish and Wildlife Service after being accepted by the State Agency responsible for the wildlife within the State; such reports to be made a part of the agent's report to the Congress and the moneys necessary for implementing the program of wildlife outlined in such report to be a part of the agent's request for the funds necessary to carry out the program for wildlife, this request to be an integral part of its request for project funds to the Congress; be it further

Resolved, That the lands purchased by the sponsor for developing the project shall be great enough in area to include adequate development for wildlife and that all such lands, save those which are necessary for managing the water which is being developed, shall be turned over to the Agency of the State and/or Federal Government responsible for managing the wildlife of the area, as a wildlife management area. Farm lands which are to be leased to individual farmers shall be included in this transfer and revenue accruing from the management of such lands shall be used by the wildlife agency responsible for the management of such lands to offset the expense of management, operation, and maintenance of the area. The term "wildlife" as used in this resolution shall include fish and other wildlife resources; be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary be instructed to forward copies of this resolution to each member of its congressional delegation from North Dakota, the Secretary of the Interior, the Chief of the Army Engineers, the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Billings office of the Basin Studies Group and the North Dakota Game and Fish Department.

INVESTIGATION OF THE AMERASIA CASE—PETITION

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, a petition signed by Roland Felix, president, and Richard Elver, secretary, of the Viroqua (Wis.) Kiwanis Club, praying for a full and open investigation of all aspects of the Amerasia case.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JUNE 26, 1950.

Senator McCARTHY,
Washington, D. C.:

We, the members of the Viroqua Kiwanis Club, desire to see a full and open investigation of all aspects of the infamous Amerasia case. Regardless of political affiliation, all those who were connected with the theft of Government documents, and the consequent endangering of our security, all those who showed neglect in fulfilling their duties in prosecuting the case, all those who influenced or obstructed justice in this case must be exposed and brought to justice. We must have action and we must have it now.

ROLAND FELIX,
President.
RICHARD C. ELVER,
Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs:

H. R. 3284. A bill to authorize grantees of recreational demonstration project lands to make land exchanges relating to such properties, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1934); and

H. R. 8230. A bill to amend the act of March 11, 1948 (62 Stat. 78), relating to the establishment of the De Soto National Memorial, in the State of Florida; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1935).

By Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments:

S. Res. 299. Resolution disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 22 of 1950; without recommendation (Rept. No. 1936).

REPORT ON PERSONNEL AND FUNDS BY COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS

Pursuant to Senate Resolution 123, Eighteth Congress, first session, the following report was received by the Secretary of the Senate:

JUNE 30, 1950.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS

To the SECRETARY OF THE SENATE:

The above-mentioned committee, pursuant to Senate Resolution 123, Eightieth Congress, first session, submits the following report showing the name, profession, and total salary of each person employed by it and its subcommittees for the period from January 1, 1950, to June 30, 1950, together with the funds available to and expended by it and its subcommittees:

Name and profession	Rate of gross annual salary	Total salary received
Adair, Margaret, clerical	$5,197.21	$2,598.60
Bassett, E. W., professional staff	10,846.00	5,423.00
Burnett, Frank, chief clerk	10,846.00	5,423.00
Miller, Margaret, clerical	4,415.10	2,207.55
Ortiz, Frances, professional staff	7,941.22	3,970.60
Porter, Eloise, clerical	6,326.94	3,163.47
Sneed, Theo W., professional staff	10,346.83	5,173.41
Stovall, Frances A., clerical	5,197.21	2,598.60
Walker, Emily N., clerical	4,762.70	2,305.28
Wilson, Thomas L., professional staff	10,846.00	5,423.00
Funds authorized or appropriated for committee expenditure, additional authorization	$50,000.00	$5,344.96
Amount expended	7,577.69	1,419.69
Balance unexpended	42,422.31	3,925.27

DENNIS CHAVEZ,
Chairman.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HUNT:

S. 3861. A bill to authorize the District of Columbia government to establish an Office of Civil Defense, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. IVES (for himself and Mr. LEHMAN):

S. 3862. A bill authorizing the Ogdensburg Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near the city of Ogdensburg, N. Y.; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. BUTLER:

S. 3863. A bill to authorize the sale of inherited interests in the allotment of Samuel Wolf, deceased Santee Sioux allottee; and

S. 3864. A bill to authorize the sale of inherited interests in the allotment of Charles St. Clair, deceased Santee Sioux allottee; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. CAIN:

S. 3865. A bill for the relief of Tokiko Nakayama and her minor daughter, Bonnie Powers; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BENTON:

S. 3866. A bill for the relief of Ludek Stransky; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REDUCTION OF EXCISE TAXES—AMENDMENT

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8920) to reduce excise taxes, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 8923) to provide improved procedures with respect to the financial control of the Post Office Department, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

GROUP LIFE INSURANCE IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—WITHDRAWAL OF MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I ask leave to withdraw the motion I made to reconsider the vote by which House bill 4394, an act to amend sections 10, 11, and 12 of chapter V of the act of June 19, 1934, as amended, was passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the motion is withdrawn.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TAFT. With the withdrawal of the motion of the Senator from North Dakota to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, does the bill automatically go to the House of Representatives?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will now be transmitted to the House; yes.

INDEPENDENCE DAY ADDRESS BY SENATOR KNOWLAND

[Mr. MARTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an Independence Day address delivered by Senator KNOWLAND at Fredericksburg, Pa., which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR McMAHON AT GRADUATION EXERCISES AT FBI NATIONAL ACADEMY

[Mr. STENNIS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Senator McMAHON before the graduation exercises of the FBI National Academy, on June 30, 1950, together with introductory remarks by J. Edgar Hoover, which appear in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE BEFORE RESERVE OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION

[Mr. STENNIS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Secretary of Defense, Hon. Louis Johnson, before the Reserve Officers' Association, which appears in the Appendix.]

BROADCASTING AND LAW ENFORCEMENT—ADDRESS BY NILES TRAMMELL

[Mr. McMAHON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Broadcasting and Law Enforcement," by Niles Trammell, chairman of the board, National Broadcasting Co., and introductory remarks by J. Edgar Hoover, delivered before the FBI National Academy at Washington, D. C., on June 30, 1950, which appear in the Appendix.]

HAWAII NEEDS ITS YOUTH—ADDRESS BY SAMUEL WILDER KING

[Mr. GILLETTE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Hawaii Needs Its Youth," delivered by Samuel Wilder King, former Delegate from Hawaii, at the commencement-day exercises of the University of Hawaii, June 14, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

NONE BUT AMERICANS—EDITORIAL FROM THE OMAHA EVENING WORLD-HERALD

[Mr. WHERRY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled, "None But Americans," published in the Omaha Evening World-Herald of July 3, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE SURPRISE ATTACK ON KOREA—ARTICLE BY SAMUEL SHAFFER

[Mr. MUNDT asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Data for a Pearl Harbor Echo: Did We Muff It in Korea?" written by Samuel Shaffer, and published in Newsweek of July 10, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

SOIL FERTILITY AND THE NATION'S FUTURE—ESSAY BY GEORGE F. DUNBAR

[Mr. AIKEN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the first-place essay entitled "Soil Fertility and the Nation's Future," written by George F. Dunbar, of East Craftsbury, Vt., in the 1950 essay contest jointly sponsored by the National Grange and the American Plant Food Council, Inc., which appears in the Appendix.]

SOIL FERTILITY AND THE NATION'S FUTURE—ESSAY BY ALBERT B. HARVEY

[Mr. FREAR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an essay entitled "Soil Fertility and the Nation's Future," by Albert B. Harvey, of Hockessin, Del., which appears in the Appendix.]

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY—STATEMENT BY ELMER W. CART

[Mr. LANGER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the statement made by Elmer W. Cart, member of the North Dakota Public Service Commission, before the House Committee on Public Works in support of proposed legislation providing for the construction of the St. Lawrence seaway, which appears in the Appendix.]

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF GOOD CITIZENSHIP—BY MILTON F. NAPIER

[Mr. KEM asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a paper entitled "The Ten Commandments of Good Citizenship," written by Milton F. Napier, of St. Louis, Mo., which appears in the Appendix.]

AID TO SMALL BUSINESS—ARTICLE FROM THE WICHITA BEACON

[Mr. SCHOEPPEL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Small Business Is Against Aid Program, Survey Shows," published in the Wichita (Kans.) Beacon, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE GENOCIDE CONVENTION—LETTER FROM ADOLF A. BERLE

[Mr. LEHMAN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Adolf A. Berle, Jr., addressed to the editor and published under the headline "Outlawing genocide," in the New York Times of July 2, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE POST OFFICE DEFICIT

[Mr. CORDON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter received by him from Spencer W. Yates, of Roseburg, Oreg., which appears in the Appendix.]

THE RAILROAD STRIKE

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, as bearing on the urgent importance of early action by the Senate on Senate bill 3463, a bill which makes unlawful any strike or any lockout by a carrier arising out of or in connection with a dispute falling within the purview of the Railway Labor Act, I ask unanimous consent that there be inserted, not in the Appendix, but in the body of the RECORD certain articles which I shall list as I offer them.

First I offer an article appearing in the New York Times of Sunday, July 2, 1950, headed "Rail 'aristocrats' want to remain so," the concluding two sentences of which read:

If disputes and strikes continue to increase at the present rate, the chances are Congress will consider even more seriously the pending bill with compulsory arbitration. Threat of compulsory arbitration may spur the parties to agree upon different procedures or upon modifications of the present law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the article will be printed in the RECORD.

The article is as follows:

RAIL "ARISTOCRATS" WANT TO REMAIN SO—OPERATING UNIONS COMPLAIN POSITION HAS CHANGED IN RELATION TO OTHERS

(By Louis Stark)

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Strike and threatened strikes among railroad workers have focused national attention on the causes of unrest among these key employees who have usually been considered the most conservative in American industry.

The engineers, conductors, firemen, and brakemen, long regarded as the aristocrats of labor, are fighting to retain the wage supremacy they enjoyed before the war over other groups, in and out of the railway industry.

This is a losing battle. The million or so nonoperating members of railway unions (machinists, boilermakers, and the like) have been slowly narrowing the gap between their wages and those of the train crews. So have other workers.

The yard service employees who are threatening to strike on July 15 because an emergency board refused to grant them 48 hours' pay for 40 hours' work, complain that they have fallen from third place in the rank of hourly earnings during the 1920's to eighteenth place among 25 industries in 1949.

DURABLE GOODS GAP

These employees are not satisfied that the emergency board recommended the 40-hour week and 18 cents an hour increase to make up in part the loss of pay in lopping off the sixth day.

How the gap between pay of yard train servicemen and nonoperating employees has shrunk is evident in these estimates: Average hourly earnings of yard employees in 1946 was $1.29 compared with $1.03 for nonoperating employees. This 26 cents an hour difference had narrowed to 7 cents in 1949 when yardmen received $1.57 and nonoperating employees $1.50 an hour.

Engineers and firemen also feel that during and since the war their standing relative to the 1,000,000 nonoperating rail employees has dropped because of the way in which the adjustments have been made.

Rivalry among the railway brotherhoods cannot be minimized as a cause of the current unrest. Twenty years ago engineers, firemen, conductors, and trainmen worked together. Today they are divided. The switchmen's union used to join in with the four others but now it is out on its own.

The present strike of switchmen against the five western and midwestern roads is attributed to the desire of this small group to obtain an emergency board's report on its dispute before the board decided on the major case affecting similar demands for the 40-hour week by conductors and trainmen in yard service.

The method of pay on the railroads also leads to unrest. Engineers and firemen on passenger trains earn a day's pay according to three standards—hours of work, miles run, and the weight of the engine.

They earn a day's pay for running 100 miles in 5 hours or less. They are paid under a graduated scale also as the weight of the locomotive increases. An engineer on a 200,000-pound locomotive earns more than one on a 100,000-pound locomotive.

OVERTIME BEGINS LATER

But conductors and brakemen on the same train must be on duty 7½ hours and produce 150 miles of transportation for a basic day's pay. Naturally, their overtime begins later than that of engineers and firemen.

The brotherhoods have increasingly sought changes in operating rules that stem back to the days of Federal control in World War I. Such changes cost money and so the railroads have resisted them.

The roads in turn have proposed changes of their own. In time these demands and counterdemands have come to the emergency boards. The employees believe that in the emergency boards' settlement proposals the carriers have got the better of it.

If disputes and strikes continue to increase at the present rate, the chances are Congress will consider even more seriously the pending bill for compulsory arbitration. Threat of compulsory arbitration may spur the parties to agree upon different procedures or upon modifications of the present law.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask that in the body of the RECORD there be incorporated at this point in my remarks an article which appeared in the New York Times of Sunday, July 2, 1950, entitled "Government Calls for Rail Strike End as Help in Crisis."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GOVERNMENT CALLS FOR RAIL STRIKE END AS HELP IN CRISIS—MEDIATION BOARD MESSAGE DOES NOT MENTION KOREA, BUT ITS MEANING IS CLEAR—COMPLIANCE IS EXPECTED—PATRIOTISM OF UNIONISTS IS CITED IN NOTE ON "SERIOUSNESS OF NATIONAL SITUATION"

(By Joseph A. Loftus)

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The National Mediation Board appealed to the Switchmen's Union, A. F. of L., on a patriotic basis today to call off its strike against five western railroads. It was reported that union leaders expected the appeal and probably would comply.

"Current critical developments unmistakably reveal the urgent necessity for prompt restoration of full service," the board chairmain, John Thad Scott Jr., said in a telegram to union officials.

Mr. Scott sent the appeal to A. J. Glover, president of the switchmen, at Fort Atkinson, Wis., and C. E. McDaniels, chairman of the union's 4-week committee in Chicago.

The Government agency's message also said:

"It is unnecessary to impress you with the seriousness of the national situation at this time. We are confident of the patriotism of the good citizens in your ranks and anxiously await your prompt and favorable response."

KOREA NOT MENTIONED

The message did not mention specifically the Korean fighting and its potentialities, but that was what was meant. One of the struck railroads is a vital link between steel mills and the Mesabi iron ore range in Minnesota. Another is important to the transport of a great part of the western wheat crop. Others are important in the movement of munitions and supplies to west coast ports.

The railroads involved in the strike that began a week ago are the Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Western Pacific, Chicago Great Western, and the Great Northern. The switchmen struck for a reduction in the workweek from 48 to 40 hours without a pay cut.

This was Mr. Scott's first day as chairman of the mediation board, a post that is rotated among the three members. The other two members, Francis A. O'Neill Jr., and Leverett Edwards, were standing by in Chicago.

The chairman noted in his message that other railroad unions, the trainmen and the conductors, were making similar demands and said that the disputes could not be settled on an individual basis. The trainmen and the conductors will be free to strike on July 15 but a walkout then has not definitely been set.

The trainmen and conductors rejected an emergency board recommendation to raise wages 18 cents an hour when the 40-hour week is put into effect. The unions object that it would mean a cut in take-home pay.

The switchmen, making the same demand, moved ahead to enforce it.

Some inter-union rivalry is involved in this. Particularly between the switchmen and the trainmen. About 4,000 switchmen left their jobs on the five railroads and about 50,000 railroad employees were thrown out of work.

Mr. Scott told the switchmen that, with a restoration of full service, the board would immediately call a resumption of negotiations with all the unions and the carriers to try to effect a settlement.

The text of his telegram:

"Current critical developments unmistakably reveal the urgent necessity for prompt restoration of full service on the five western railroads against which your organization is now on strike. Accordingly, in the national interest, this board urgently requests that the strike be called off immediately and that full service be promptly restored.

"Disputes similar to yours are now pending with other organizations and you can readily understand that the entire matter cannot be settled on an individual basis. When the strike is called off the National Mediation Board will immediately resume further negotiations in Chicago with all interested parties, concurrently or jointly as the parties may prefer, in an effort to settle all disputes now threatening uninterrupted railroad service.

"It is unnecessary to impress you with the seriousness of the national situation at this time. We are confident of the patriotism of the good American citizens in your ranks and anxiously await your prompt and favorable response."

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask that at this point in my remarks there be incorporated in the body of the RECORD an article published in the New York Times of Monday, July 3, 1950, entitled "Switchmen Turn Down Plea of United States Board to End Strike."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SWITCHMEN TURN DOWN PLEA OF UNITED STATES BOARD TO END STRIKE—UNION HEAD IN REPLY SAYS PATRIOTISM APPEAL BORDERS ON INSULT, BUT HE OFFERS MEN TO MOVE VITAL MATERIAL

CHICAGO, July 2.—Arthur J. Glover, president of the striking Switchmen's Union of North America, flatly rejected today the request of John Thad Scott, Jr., chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, that the union call off its strike against five western railroads.

Mr. Scott, in Washington, made his appeal yesterday on the basis of patriotism in view of current critical developments, but Mr. Glover asserted that Mr. Scott had failed to specify these developments. And the union leader declared that the reference to patriotism borders on insult.

Mr. Glover, however, said in his reply:

"We offer to send enough men on railroad divisions back to work to move any material deemed essential by the Government.

"But the switchmen's union does not believe at this time that it can restore complete rail service for nothing, especially when small effort has been made by both the railroads and the board to bring about a settlement of the current disputes."

A somewhat sanguine report was made to night, however, on another aspect of the current rail picture, that involving the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors, which have indicated they might strike on or after July 15, making demands similar to the switchmen's.

Francis O. O'Neill, Jr., a member of the National Railway Board who has been working with the disputants here in Chicago, reported tonight that for the first time there's a little bit of progress.

"That is not to be construed as saying we're near a settlement," he cautioned.

Mr. O'Neill explained that the parties to the dispute had moved under the same roof and he and Leverett Adwards of the Board had carried proposals and counterproposals between the negotiators, who were in separate quarters. Previously, the parties had been separately in different parts of the Loop.

The principal issue in all three disputes, which the Mediation Board seeks to consider together, is the union's demand for a 40-hour week with 48 hours' pay for those of their members who are yard service employees. A Presidential fact-finding board on June 15 recommended reduction of the work week of yard service employees in the three unions, as well as in the Railroad Yardmasters of America, from 48 to 40 hours, and an 18-cents-an-hour increase.

The railroads accepted the recommendation, but the unions rejected it on the ground that a 31-cents-an-hour pay increase would be required to maintain take-home pay.

The switchmen's union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which was legally free to strike on and after May 19, called out about 4,000 employees at 6 a. m., June 25, against these railroads: the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Chicago Great Western; Denver & Rio Grande Western; Western Pacific, and Great Northern.

All the roads except the Great Northern suspended all service. The Great Northern has continued a reduced passenger service. About 50,000 railroad employees thrown out of work altogether.

UNION BLAMES MEDIATION BOARD.

Mr. Glover's reply to Mr. Scott, handed to the press by Larry Gonder, union public relations director, laid the responsibility for any emergency that might exist to the Mediation Board itself. It said, in part:

"We regard your telegram a most unusual document. You say the strike should be terminated because of certain current critical developments. You fail to specify these developments. You imply that an emergency situation exists. You fail to specify that emergency.

"The daily press contends that you have reference to the Korean situation. To the switchmen's union this seems unlikely inasmuch as President Truman's personal press secretary only yesterday told newsmen there is no atmosphere of emergency. According to the President's press secretary, not only is there no emergency, there is no atmosphere of emergency.

"And, the President himself said only last week that the United States Government is not at war * * *.

"In your telegram, to the switchmen's union, you make reference to switchmen's patriotism. This, sir, borders on insult. The patriotism of switchmen never has been the subject of even the slightest doubt * * *.

"The union's switchmen worked 48 and 56 hours a week without overtime during the war years. They are still working under these same conditions. The railroads, on the other hand, piled up enormous profits during the war years. Their profits continue high at present. * * *

"Patriotism has been a costly virtue with switchmen but that virtue has never been found lacking. * * *

"Our demands are legitmate. Our strike is a legal one. * * *

"Railroad management apparently once again is merely waiting for the Government to crack down on a union and pull the carriers off the hook."

Mr. Glover, after placing "a large part of the responsibility" for any existing emergency "on the doorstep of your own Mediation Board" went on to say that the Board had received offers from the union to move material deemed essential by the Government, and that other offers to the Board to move wheat in the wheat belt and ore from the Mesabi Range in Minnesota had been rejected.

He said also that the railroads had not offered to meet with the union since the beginning of the strike, and had not made any offers through the Board, whereas the union had made a number of compromise offers and suggestions.

The trainmen's and conductors' unions total about 250,000 members, of whom about 75,000 are in yard service. The yardmasters, also an American Federation of Labor union, have about 4,000 employees working for 66 railroads with whom they are in dispute.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask that at this point in my remarks there may be incorporated in the body of the RECORD an editorial which appeared in the Washington Post of Monday, July 3, 1950, entitled "Appeal to Deaf Ears." The second sentence of the editorial reads:

The Korean War, however, merely high lights the necessity of putting an end to strikes that tie up rail transportation and do incalculable damage to the economy in either peacetime or war.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

APPEAL TO DEAF EARS

The Switchmen's Union has rejected the appeal of the National Mediation Board for an end to the strike against five western roads that has delayed iron ore and munitions shipments needed on the Korean fighting front; but the union has agreed to provide enough men to keep strategic materials moving. The Korean war, however, merely high lights the necessity of putting an end to strikes that tie up rail transportation and do incalculable damage to the economy in either peacetime or war. In recent years the railway unions have been increasingly disposed to exercise their legal right to strike in disregard of the recommendations of emergency boards set up under the Railway Labor Act after attempts at mediation of disputes have failed. Often they have succeeded in obtaining additional concessions. Moreover, an increasing number of disputes over technical issues that would formerly have been settled by the National Adjustment Board have had to be handled by emergency boards.

Further appeals to patriotism may or may not avert the threatened strike of the trainmen and conductors. But the United States cannot rely on wars to provide a solution of the problem of strikes that endanger the national welfare under any conditions. Nor can it afford to encourage strikes against the railroads by failing to back up the recommendations of the impartial boards appointed by the President to investigate disputes and propose terms of settlement after collective bargaining negotiations have broken down. Yet, there is more than a hint that the Government would have been willing, had the switchmen gone back to work, to continue this shortsighted policy by upsetting the findings of the emergency board that has been handling the disputes involving the switchmen, trainmen, and conductors. For the union was assured that the National Mediation Board would resume negotiations at once with the parties to the switchmen's dispute, if the strike were called off.

Since the companies have agreed to accept the compromise recommendations of the emergency board, we fail to see why the Government should make another attempt at mediation unless the mediators are prepared to put pressure on railway managements to make further concessions. If the switchmen were rewarded, the trainmen and conductors would expect to receive comparable rewards. The result would be further to discredit the efficacy of the Railway Labor Act as a means of peaceful settlement of disputes and to encourage the unions to rely increasingly on strikes as weapons of coercion when the present crisis has passed.

Mr. DONNELL. Next, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point in my remarks an article which appeared in the New York Times of July 4, 1950, entitled "Rail Strike Talks Fail to Reach Pact. But Mediation Continues in Hope of Averting New Walk-out by Trainmen."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAIL STRIKE TALKS FAIL TO REACH PACT—BUT MEDIATION CONTINUES IN HOPE OF AVERTING NEW WALK-OUT BY TRAINMEN

CHICAGO, July 3.—The situation in the 9-day switchmen's strike against five midwestern and western railroads remained stalemated today, but mediation continued in the attempt to avert the possibility of a strike by trainmen and conductors before July 15.

In Washington, two Senators called for an end to the switchmen's tie-up. WAYNE MORSE, of Oregon, and FORREST C. DONNELL, of Missouri, both Republicans.

The Switchmen's Union of North America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, struck June 25 for a 40-hour week at 48 hours' pay, calling out about 4,000 members against the Chicago Great Western, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande Western, Western Pacific and Great Northern. About 60,000 persons have been made idle.

Senator MORSE recommended prompt Presidential action to end the strike.

At a Senate Labor Subcommittee hearing on the bill to outlaw rail strikes and require arbitration of disputes in the industry, the Oregon Senator said there was no justification for continuance of the strike because we are at war.

The union yesterday turned down an appeal by John Thad Scott, Jr., chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, to end the strike in view of current critical developments.

Francis A. O'Neill, Jr., a board member, reported here tonight that the railroads and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors had been holding separate meetings with the Board all day.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be set forth in the body of the RECORD at this point an article which appeared in the Baltimore Sun of July 5, entitled "Rail Strike Talks Begin."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAIL-STRIKE TALKS BEGIN—REPRESENTATIVES OF ROADS AND SWITCHMEN JOIN IN PARLEY

CHICAGO, July 4.—Government mediators got representatives of the railroads and the striking AFL switchmen's union together for joint peace talks today.

The conferences—one in the morning and another in the afternoon—marked the first time the disputants have met since 4,000 switchmen walked out on five western and midwestern lines June 25.

Francis O'Neill, Jr., member of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, reported no progress in the peace talks. He said tonight after the talks ended: "The situation is about the same."

Negotiations are expected to resume tomorrow.

PARLEYS "EXPLORATORY"

One source close to the negotiations said the conferences merely are exploratory. However, another source said there was a ray of hope for some break with the parties back in direct negotiations.

The conferences were arranged by the mediation board.

This board has been trying without success to find some compromise that would end the walkout and prevent a possible Nation-wide strike by three other rail unions after July 15.

The unions are protesting a ruling of a Presidential fact-finding board. The board rejected their demand for a 40-hour workweek at 48 hours' pay. The board agreed to the shorter workweek, but at a pay boost of only 18 cents an hour.

The other unions are the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railway Conductors, and the AFL Yardmasters of North America.

The strike is against the Rock Island, Great Northern, Chicago Great Western, Denver & Rio Grande Western, and the Western Pacific railroads. Only the Great Northern has attempted to operate.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point in my remarks there may be set forth an article in today's New York Times headed "Railroads, unions meet in two sessions."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAILROADS, UNIONS MEET IN TWO SESSIONS—REPRESENTATIVES OF FIVE WESTERN LINES AND SWITCHMEN DISCUSS ISSUES IN 10-DAY STRIKE

CHICAGO, July 4.—Two mediation sessions were in progress today in disputes between railroads and three unions pressing demands on behalf of yard service employees. The 10-day strike of the Switchmen's Union of North America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, against five midwestern and western railroads, continued without immediate prospect of settlement.

The joint sessions were attended by Francis A. O'Neill, Jr., and Leverett Edwards of the National (Railway) Mediation Board. One included Arthur J. Glover, president of the striking switchmen, and railroad representatives. The second included representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors and railroad spokesmen.

It was the first time the railroads and the switchmen had got together in joint session since the strike began. No official report on the results of the session have been issued, but a source close to the negotiations said the talk was largely exploratory and did not mean that a peace-making step was under way.

The struck railroads are the Rock Island, Chicago Great Western, Great Northern, Denver & Rio Grande Western, and the Western Pacific. Some 60,000 persons have been thrown out of work.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point in my remarks there may be set forth an article published in the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch of today entitled "Mediators Get Rail Officials, Striking Switchmen Together."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEDIATORS GET RAIL OFFICIALS, STRIKING SWITCHMEN TOGETHER

CHICAGO, July 4.—Government mediators got representatives of the railroads and the striking AFL switchmen's union together for joint peace talks today.

The conferences—one in the morning and another in the afternoon—marked the first time the disputants have met since 4,000 switchmen walked out on five western and midwestern lines June 25.

Members of the National (Railway) Mediation Board gave no hint on how the peace talks were going.

One source close to the negotiations said the conferences merely are exploratory. However, another source said there was a ray of hope for some break with the parties back in direct negotiations.

The conferences were arranged by the mediation board. This board has been trying without success to find some compromise that would end this walkout and prevent a possible Nation-wide strike by three other rail unions after July 15.

These unions are protesting a ruling of a Presidential fact-finding board. The board rejected their demand for a 40-hour workweek at 48 hours' pay. The board agreed to the shorter workweek, but at a pay boost of only 18 cents an hour.

The other unions are the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railway Conductors, and the AFL Yardmasters of North America.

The strike is against the Rock Island, Great Northern, Chicago Great Western, Denver and Rio Grande Western, and the Western Pacific Railroads. Only the Great Northern has attempted to operate. It has cut its service on several divisions.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, at this point in the body of the RECORD I ask unanimous consent that an editorial in the Baltimore Sun of July 2, 1950, entitled "Another Railway Strike in Another Military Emergency," may be set forth.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ANOTHER RAILWAY STRIKE IN ANOTHER MILITARY EMERGENCY

In the excitement over the Korean crisis it has generally been overlooked that the country has a major railway strike on its hands. Promptly as scheduled last Sunday morning the AFL switchmen's union quit work on five major western and midwestern lines.

Four of the struck lines shut up shop at once and let the rails cool. The fourth, the Great Northern, many of whose switchmen belong to a nonstriking union, continued passenger operations but curtailed everything else very sharply.

The result of the shut-down was reported Wednesday by a spokesman for the western carriers conference committee. He said that the strike came at the peak of wheat shipments to Great Lakes ports. Iron shipments from the Mesabi Range were also being interrupted. From 12 to 15 percent of all freight carried by western roads had been delayed, this spokesman said.

And what are the details of the labor controversy at the bottom of this paralysis? Why, the switchmen have been asking for a 40-hour week in place of their old-fashioned 48 hours. This was reasonable enough, as was the rail union's lack of enthusiasm for a cut in wages exactly proportionate to that in hours. So far the carriers agreed. They accepted the 40-hour week with a wage rate increase.

The wage rate increase did not satisfy the union, however. Its people demanded a full 48 hours pay for the new 40 hours work. This the rail managements refused. The controversy went through all the procedures of the Railway Labor Act, including a study and recommendations by a Presidential emergency board. The board held for the managements on the wage issue.

But as has happened many times since 1941, when the Railway Labor Act first began to slip, the union rejected this fact-finding report. The strike followed. Now Government mediators say there is no peace in sight. In the meantime the country simply suffers a stoppage in one of its arterial channels.

The date cited above for the time when the Railway Labor Act began to come apart is 1941. Since the present strike continues under a great military crisis, it is appropriate to recall that the 1941 rail episode so ruinous to the Railway Labor Act broke just before the Pearl Harbor attack.

What happened in November of 1941 was that the President forced a settlement more favorable to the rail unions than that recommended by his own fact-finding board. One of his motives may have been his wish to assure full rail service in the mounting crisis of November and early December 1941.

But clearly it cannot become routine practice for the Government to give in to the unions to secure labor peace in the face of national military emergencies. This issue ought to be considered carefully in the emergency control legislation now being framed by the National Security Resources Board. Or, in default of that, maybe the Congress ought at least to debate Senator DONNELL'S suggestion for a peacetime law imposing compulsory aribtration on the roads.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask also that an editorial entitled "The Usual Victim," which appeared in the Grand Junction (Colo.) Sentinel for June 27, 1950, may be set forth in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE USUAL VICTIM

Who will be the victor in the current dispute between five midwestern and western railroads and A. F. of L. Switchmen's Union we cannot predict. But it takes no seer to tell who is the chief victim of the situation that leaves a vast sector of our Nation without rail service. As in all such conflicts, the greatest loser is that collective personage known as Mr. John Q. Public. Not only are his personal plans upset by this particular work stoppage but his business suffers not inconsiderably, as his opportunities to send and receive goods and mail are drastically curtailed.

Apparently the public welfare is given little consideration by either management or labor when the holding out of one against the other becomes the issue in their disputes.

The residents of the regions affected by today's rail tie-up justifiably wonder why this particular dispute is confined only to western and midwestern roads. The inference is that others have found a formula acceptable to both sides. Why can it not be applied in this situation?

Fortunately the public is no longer as dependent on the railroads as in eras past. We have bus lines and airlines that can come to the rescue to a great degree, and it is to be hoped that the Post Office Department, especially, will avail itself of these transportation mediums to keep the mails moving in and out of the affected communities with as little disruption as possible.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an editorial entitled "What Kind of Country?" which appeared in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator for June 27, 1950, may be set forth in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHAT KIND OF COUNTRY?

Four thousand striking switchmen, members of an A. F. of L. union, deal a blow at millions of people by stopping four big western railroads and crippling a fifth. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors threaten a national strike July 15. Members of all these unions should ask themselves what kind of country they want to live in, for their strikes may give the answer.

The railroads are public utilities. For this reason they cannot shut down as a factory can. They cannot lock out employees as part of a labor dispute. They cannot abandon an unprofitable line without first getting public consent, through the Government.

The railroad workers are under no such restraints. There is a law which requires them to use Government mediation facilities, and if these fail to wait for a fact-finding board to determine the merits of their case. But if they refuse to abide by the result and insist on striking, there is no law to forbid them.

Yet the railroad employees constitute a vital part of the public utility for which they work. They have as much responsibility as do the companies for continuing service to the public. If they ignore this responsibility, sooner or later an aroused public will put legal hobbles on them as binding as those which control the companies.

In particular there will be a demand for passage of the bill now pending in Congress, to require compulsory arbitration of railroad labor disputes. This and other compulsory measures would be distasteful, but they will be passed if the rail workers continue to disregard their responsibility. If such laws must be put on the books, to this extent America would cease to be a democracy. What kind of country do the rail workers want to live in?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. What progress is being made in getting out of the committee the bill to which the Senator has made reference?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, the hearings on the bill have been completed; they were completed at the session of the committee on Monday. I am to file certain papers, exhibits, and one thing and another, which I hope to get to the subcommittee this afternoon. I may say to the Senate that it is my expectation and intention to urge the subcommittee to take prompt action in reporting the bill favorably to the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator for the information.

INTELLIGENCE REPORTS ARE FUTILE UNLESS THEY LEAD TO DECISIONS—ARTICLE BY RAMOND P. BRANDT

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, an article entitled "Intelligence Reports Are Futile Unless They Lead to Decisions," by Raymond P. Brandt, which appeared in the Washington Star of July 2, 1950. I think this is an article which should be of interest to all Members of the Senate. As one member of the Appropriations Committee, I am convinced that the Central Intelligence Agency was doing its part of the job.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INTELLIGENCE REPORTS ARE FUTILE UNLESS THEY LEAD TO DECISIONS

(By Raymond P. Brandt)

The tactical surprises by the norther Korean Communists demonstrated that the best national security intelligence is without value unless it is made the basis of policy decisions and actions.

Failure of the Defense Establishment and the State Department to act on the increasingly ominous reports of the Central Intelligence Agency during the past 12 months that the Communists had the capabilities to overrun South Korea indicated there are still fundamental flaws in the American intelligence organization and personnel.

Speaking at the graduation exercises at the National War Colleges this week, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that "the collection of intelligence was the front line in peace as well as war." He continued:

"The eternal struggle of intelligence—finding out what the enemy can do and what he intends to do—is now more exacting because it includes the difficult search for technical information in many new fields.

"In the United States, where the art of economic, political and military intelligence has not been developed over the centuries, we are building an over-all intelligence agency which combines the efforts of the several gatherers of information. Success in this field will require great and generous men, both civilian and military, who are willing to devote their lives to the important job of gathering information for security."

General Bradley's words clearly implied that success had not yet been attained. In speaking about the front line of defense he was using a thought first publicized by the Hoover Commission's task force committee on national security organization, which said:

"Intelligence is the first line of defense in the atomic age. Recognition of its preeminent role in defense planning was given in the National Security Act by creation of the Central Intelligence Agency directly under the National Security Council to coordinate intelligence activities of the Government and to collect, correlate, and evaluate intelligence. The relationships of this agency to some of the other intelligence agencies of Government—notably to G–2 of the Army, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the State Department have been and still are unsatisfactory. But even more important, the committee is convinced that too many disparate intelligence estimates have been made by the individual departmental intelligence services; that these separate estimates have often been subjective and biased, that the capabilities of potential enemies have frequently been interpreted as their intentions, and that a more comprehensive collective system, better coordination, and more mature and experienced evaluation are imperative.

"The Central Intelligence Agency is sound in principle, but improvement is needed in practice. It is not now properly organized. A serious deficiency is the lack of an adequate top-level evaluation board or section whose duties are confined solely to the evaluation of intelligence, with no responsibilities for general policy or administrative matters."

LACK OF COOPERATION

"Coequal improvement in G–2, FBI, ONI, State Department, and other Government intelligence services is also essential. Above all, a spirit of teamwork must govern interagency intelligence relationships. The Central Intelligence Agency deserves and must have a greater degree of acceptance and support from old-line intelligence services than it has had in the past."

The buck-passing and evasion by military and state officials early this week as to who was responsible for the tactical surprise evidenced the present lack of cooperation between the departments and the CIA, which now is attached to the White House.

Rear Adm. Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, CIA chief, gave a convincing account of the CIA intelligence on Korea to the Senate Appropriations Committee and changed critics into advocates. Senators reporting on Admiral Hillenkoetter's testimony apparently misquoted him when they had him saying that his agency did not evaluate intelligence gathered and collated by his agency.

Admiral Hillenkoetter told the committee that his group did evaluate information but did not recommend policy or action. Decisions on policy and action, he said, were the responsibility of the receiving agencies; if this were not so, the CIA would be making policy, which is not its statutory function. He said CIA might unconsciously misevaluate its information, if given this function. Republican Senator SALTONSTALL, of Massachusetts, complimented Admiral Hillenkoetter on his attitude and observed that the CIA should not have policy-making powers.

The lack of cooperation given the CIA by the departmental intelligence groups is difficult to understand. Some of it is a holdover from the days when Army, Navy, Air Force, and State Department had their own autonomous intelligence services and jealously guarded their information so each could claim credit for what it collected and evaluated. That feeling undoubtedly prevails today, and it goes up as high as one or two civilian secretaries who like to boast that they have given the President information that was not available to the CIA.

Admiral Hillenkoetter, a Navy career officer since his graduation from Annapolis, has had some success in establishing greater cooperation. He has said that 80 to 85 percent of the information going through his establishment comes from other governmental departments and agencies and that the remainder is obtained by his own people, many of whom are engaged in clandestine or covert activities.

Both kinds of reports are necessary and they supplement each other, giving new leads here, verifying information there.

Admiral Hillenkoetter has been in his job for 3 years and President Truman at a recent press conference gave support to reports that he would soon be replaced, perhaps by Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, now commander of the First Army and former Ambassador to Moscow. There is a serious question whether General Smith's health will permit him to take over the CIA. If it does not, the uncertainty about Admiral Hillenkoetter's tenure will continue.

This uncertainty has already impaired the morale of the CIA, as it would in any organization when there are substantial reports that the boss is on his way to another job. The uncertainty did not affect the Korean reports but it has affected the general, long-run efficiency of the organization.

The CIA's reports on the Korean situation satisfied the critical Senate Appropriations Committee. In the long run, however, this vital agency will need the services of great and generous men, both civilian and military, who are willing to devote their lives to the important job of gathering information for security.

ROLE OF THE UNITED NATIONS IN THE KOREAN SITUATION

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, the New York Times issue of July 3 carried what I considered a very excellent editorial on the role of the United Nations in the present Korean situation. Because of its widespread interest I ask unanimous consent of the Senate that this editorial be printed in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNDER THE FLAG OF THE UN

Giving expression to the gathering wrath of the civilized world against the Soviet-sponsored breach of international peace and security in Korea, 39 members of the United Nations and 1 prospective member, Italy, have now lined up in support of the Security Council's decision to use armed force against the invaders. These nations represent every continent and every race and include, in particular, such Asiatic nations as India and Pakistan, Nationalist China, Thailand, and the Philippines. They all pledge themselves to do everything within their power to back up the Council's precedent-breaking policy. The list is growing steadily toward and beyond the two-thirds majority that will assure support of this policy by the General Assembly as well.

This rallying around the United Nations banner is a welcome and impressive display of international solidarity in the face of new aggression. It is also the most effective refutation of the Soviet propaganda charges that the Korean War was started by the Republic of Korea at the instigation of "American imperialism." But one thing remains to be done to translate this solidarity into action, and that is to coordinate and organize the various kinds of aid offered into a composite whole. Thus we would not only make the best possible use of the resources of the supporting nations but also demonstrate beyond any chance of misrepresentation that the military support now being extended to South Korea by the United States and other nations is, indeed, a United Nations action undertaken solely in defense of the principles of the Charter, and not for any selfish gain.

This obviously calls for a special United Nations body to organize and direct the whole United Nations war effort in Korea—a body to which all the supporting nations can submit their specific offers of aid and which, in particular, can mobilize representative forces from the Asiatic nations to nip in the bud not only Communist propaganda but also any remaining Asiatic suspicions regarding "white" imperialism. Under the Charter, this directing body should be the Military Staff Committee, consisting of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council and representatives of other nations participating in its work. That committee is charged with advising and assisting the Security Council on all questions relating to its military requirements and the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal. But due to Soviet obstruction the committee broke down completely 2 years ago, and it would be obviously absurd to permit a Soviet represe tative to participate in the United Nations war effort at this time.

For that reason the Security Council is expected to consider this week the appointment of a United Nations Coordinating Committee, or War Council, to direct both the military and economic efforts necessary to cope with the present emergency. Such a committee could and undoubtedly would then appoint General MacArthur, who is already directing the military operations in Korea, as commander of the combined United Nations forces and channel to him whatever additional aid is available. No doubt, each national contingent would still want to fight under its own flag, but side by side with the national banners would then also fly the blue and white banner of the United Nations to demonstrate that the United Nations has at last come of age, and is meeting the responsibilities imposed on it. It is to be hoped that the Security Council will take whatever action is necessary to achieve that end.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 8565, making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8568) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, this bill, the regular appropriation bill for the government of the District of Columbia, provides a total appropriation of $119,019,562, for the fiscal year 1951 to meet the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. As the Senator well knows, I am also associated with the distinguished Senator from Alabama on the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee handling this bill.

In the report, on page 6, relative to the Metropolitan Police, the following appears:

METROPOLITAN POLICE

The committee recommends the appropriation of $7,433,600, or an increase of $30,000 over the House allowance, for salaries and expenses of Metropolitan Police in the fiscal year 1951. The Commissioners requested the restoration of $57,500 of the $96,400 reduced by the House. However, the committee believes the $30,000 additional will adequately serve the needs of the Police Department to insure the purchase of radio equipment needed under the frequency modulation conversion program.

I am particularly interested in the next paragraph of the report, reading as follows:

The bill also provides funds for 30 additional uniformed police to compensate for the 30 policemen now on license duty. The committee directs the Commissioners to assign a sufficient number of these additional policemen to augment the force now engaged on vice-squad work.

Does that mean that the 30 policemen will be full time policemen under the call and supervision and direction of the vice squad?

Mr. HILL. It means that the 30 additional policemen will be regular, full time policemen, and that the vice squad will have—I think the best way to express it would be—priority for them. In other words, such number of the additional 30 policemen as the vice squad will need will be assigned to the vice squad.

Mr. WHERRY. Who will have authority to make the decision as to where those policemen shall go?

Mr. HILL. I should say the Superintendent of Police, under the authority of the Board of District of Columbia Commissioners.

Mr. WHERRY. In other words, the chief of police?

Mr. HILL. Yes. In the District of Columbia he is called the Superintendent of Police. He would have that authority, under the authority of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. WHERRY. Let me say, by way of clarification, that my point is that although the 30 additional policemen will be available, if the bill including that particular provision is passed, yet the assignment of those policemen still will be left up to the chief of police. Even though a particular division might want more men, the assignment of additional policemen to it would be subject to the will and the desires of the chief of police.

Mr. HILL. Yes; that is true under existing law. To change that, it would be necessary to change the existing law.

Mr. WHERRY. That is my next point. I understand that is why the appropriation was proposed in this particular way. However, is it not true that it is the intention of the committee that the vice squad shall have a priority on these policemen, if the vice squad needs them?

Mr. HILL. That is correct. The Senator from Nebraska is a member of the Subcommittee on District of Columbia Appropriations, and he expresses the view of the subcommittee. We wish the vice squad to have its needs met.

Mr. WHERRY. Since, otherwise, it would be necessary to change the legislative authority, and because this is an appropriation bill in which legislation cannot be written, we are making the provision in this way. Does the Senator agree?

Mr. HILL. We are doing it this way in order to avoid including legislation in an appropriation bill.

Mr. WHERRY. It was my firm conviction that the head of the vice squad should be an inspector—as the ratings go—in the District of Columbia police. In this bill, of course, a provision to that effect would also be legislation.

Mr. HILL. To put such a provision in the bill would mean writing legislation on an appropriation bill, which, as the Senator knows, is contrary to the rules of the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. And it would be necessary, in order to get that particular provision in, to change the legislative authority; which, of course, could be done by the legislative committee on the District of Columbia, or by a bill introduced by any Senator; is that correct?

Mr. HILL. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. How does the chairman of the subcommittee feel, though, relative to the importance of including the head of the vice squad on a level with inspectors of the Metropolitan Police Department?

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Alabama feels that that is an important division or bureau within the police department, and that the head of the squad should have equal recognition with the heads of other important divisions or bureaus of the police department.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished Senator for his observations, because I realize that on an appropriation bill, in the drafting of legislation which is needed to carry on the work which the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, and the other members of the subcommittee including the junior Senator from Nebraska, attempted to accomplish, relative to law violations, it is very necessary that not only these additional policemen be added to the force to take care adequately of the situation in the District, but also it seems to me that as soon as possible the vice squad should be elevated to a position equal to that of other divisions or bureaus of the Metropolitan Police Department. I hope if the chief of police can do that without legislative authority it will be done; but if not, I am satisfied the Senator from Alabama at least will join the junior Senator from Nebraska in the observation that the vice squad is an important agency of the police department, and that the subject should be given immediate consideration by the Senate, if it is not taken care of otherwise.

Mr. HILL. I may say to my distinguished friend from Nebraska that I think it can be done by the chief or superintendent of police under the authority he has under the Board of District Commissioners.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HILL. I thank the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will proceed to state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "General administration," on page 3, line 15, after the word "investigations", to strike out "$281,350" and insert "$290,450."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 3, after the word "Columbia", to strike out "$299,100" and insert "$336,100."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Fiscal service," on page 5, line 1, before the word "Provided", to strike out "$406,850" and insert "$415,700."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 4, after the word "office," to strike out "$492,300" and insert "$527,800."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 5, after "Purchasing Division", to strike out "$115,900" and insert "$119,775."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Regulatory agencies," on page 6, line 24, after the word "only", to strike out "$163,775" and insert "$219,275."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 7, after "License Bureau", to strike out "$67,750" and insert "$71,400."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 11, after the word "purposes", to strike out "$231,300" and insert "$236,300."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 3, after "Zoning Commission", to strike out "$35,800" and insert "$36,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public schools—Operating expenses," on page 8, line 8, after the word "Columbia", to strike out "$683,200" and insert "$709,850."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 16, after the word "textbooks", to strike out "and athletic apparel and accessories"; and in line 22, after the word "individuals", to strike out "$16,034,900" and insert "$16,006,900."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 8, after the word "vehicles", to strike out "$3,335,000" and insert "$3,368,480."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 13, after the word "grounds", to strike out "$1,239,500" and insert, $1,269,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 24, after "(58 Stat. 811)", to strike out "$117,800" and insert "distribution of surplus commodities and relief milk to public and charitable institutions, and for the carrying out, under regulations to be prescribed by the Board of Education, of a 'penny milk' program for the school children of the District, including the purchase and distribution of milk under agreement with the United States Department of Agriculture, $250,847: Provided, That collections from the milk program shall be paid to the Collector of Taxes, District of Columbia, for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Capital outlay," on page 11, line 20, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$552,500" and insert "$617,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, after line 2, to insert:

For improvements and alterations at Cardozo (formerly Central) Senior High School, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 10, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$366,000" and insert "$418,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 17, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$501,500" and insert "$560,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 1, after the word "Northeast", to strike out "$287,000" and insert "$307,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 8, after the word "Northwest", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$20,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 16, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$323,000"' and insert "$361,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, line 4, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,589,500" and insert "$1,776,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, line 18, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,589,500" and insert "$1,776,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, after line 23, to strike out:

For completion of plans and specifications for a new senior high school building to replace the present Armstrong Senior High School building, including recreation facilities and treatment of grounds, to be constructed on a site owned by the District of Columbia in Brentwood Park, $75,000, which amount may be credited to the appropriation account "Office of Municipal Architect, construction services";

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 8, after the word "specifications", to strike out "$3,712,000" and insert "$3,737,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Purchase of sites," on page 17, after line 4, to insert:

At the Anacostia Senior High School, to provide additional land for school-playground purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 4, after the word "sites", to strike out "$320,000" and insert "$360,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public Library," on page 18, line 23, after the numerals "1945", to strike out "$1,385,700" and insert "$1,410,700."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 8, after the word "Building", to strike out "$15,000" and insert "$30,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 8, to insert:

Capital outlay: For preliminary design studies and surveys for the construction of extensions to the central building of the Public Library of the District of Columbia, to encompass and include the existing central building located in Mount Vernon Square, United States Reservation No. 8, to be expended only with the approval of the Commissioners on report from the Office of the Municipal Architect, not to exceed $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Recreation Department," on page 19, line 20, after the word "Columbia", to strike out "$1,372,900" and insert "$1,387,900."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the increase? I do not seem to remember it.

Mr. HILL. That is an increase of $15,000, I may say to the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, for the purpose, largely, of permitting part-time employment of school custodians. We have some new schools, as the Senator knows, which are coming into being.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 3, after "(58 Stat. 791)", to strike out "$180,000" and insert "$260,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Metropolitan Police," on page 22, line 7, after the word "otherwise", to strike out "$7,403,600" and insert "$7,433,600."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, after line 16, to insert:

REDEVELOPMENT LAND AGENCY

For necessary administrative expenses for the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency, $15,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, after line 19, to insert:

MIDCENTURY WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON CHILDREN AND YOUTH

For expenses necessary for carrying out the proposed plans for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth in December 1950, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Courts," on page 24, line 7, after the word "court", to strike out "$314,500" and insert "$319,900."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, line 19, after the word "judges", to strike out "$661,800" and insert "$684,514."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 3, after the word "appeals", to strike out "$92,000" and insert "$94,750."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Health Department," on page 27, line 2, after the word "automobile", to strike out "$2,467,800" and insert "$2,496,330."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, line 17, after the word "grounds", to strike out "$2,225,300" and insert $2,243,540."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 5, after the word "grounds", to strike out $4,770,100" and insert $4,782,025."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 29, line 3, after the word "all", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$745,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public welfare," on page 31, line 21, after the word "services", to strike out "$108,350" and insert "$109,100."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 10, after the word "homes", to strike out "distribution of surplus commodities and relief milk to public and charitable institutions; $133,047 for the carrying out, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners of a 'penny milk' program for the school children of the District, including the purchase and distribution of milk under agreement with the United States Department of Agriculture;" on page 33, line 16, after the word "building", to strike out "$4,184,600" and insert "$4,139,639"; and in the same line, after the word "Provided", to strike out "That collections from the milk program shall be paid to the collector of taxes, District of Columbia, for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District: Provided further."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 10, after the word "vehicles", to strike out "$2,730,150" and insert "$2,792,797."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, line 19, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$2,550,000" and insert "$2,-850,000"; and on page 36, line 1, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,054,000" and insert "$1,178,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, line 13, after the word "law", to strike out "$7,855,000" and insert "$8,105,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public works," on page 37, line 5, after the word "Incorporated", to strike out "$68,325" and insert "$68,925."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 38, line 10, after the word "operators", to strike out "$1,125,600" and insert "$1,-149,850."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 38, line 17, after the word "office", to strike out "$155,225" and insert "$156,300."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, line 8, after the word "each", to strike out "$754,850" and insert "$764,850."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, line 23, after the word "thereto", to strike out "$1,329,000" and insert "$1,-342,275."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 40, line 9, after the word "kinds", to strike out "$190,900" and insert "$215,900."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, line 15, after the word "work", to strike out "$2,191,600" and insert "$2,216,600."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 25, after the word "Commissioners", to strike out "$2,704,200" and insert $5,000,000"; and on page 46, line 17, after the word "inspectors", to strike out "$1,095,800" and insert "$1,105,350."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 6, after the word "dumps", to strike out "$3,757,600" and insert "$3,837,600."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 50, line 18, after the word "all", to strike out "$2,443,000" and insert "$2,943,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Washington Aqueduct," on page 52, line 21, after the word "pipelines", to insert a semicolon and "construction of a thirty-million-gallon clear water basin and connecting conduits and control chamber; new chemical building and operating center at McMillan"; on page 53, line 1, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,300,000" and insert "$7,213,000"; in line 17, after the words "per diem", to strike out "$1,050,000" and insert "$2,978,000"; and in line 18, after the word "expended", to insert "of which $1,405,000 is appropriated from any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to the provisions of the act of June 2, 1950 (Public Law 533, 81st Cong.)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Guard," on page 54, line 5, after the word "including", to insert "compensation to the Adjutant General at the rate of $7,353 per annum"; in line 22, after the word "purposes", to insert "purchase of one passenger motor vehicle"; and in line 23, after the amendment just above stated, to strike out "$93,750" and insert "$124,300."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Capital Parks," on page 56, line 3, after the word "wagons", to strike out "$1,742,200" and insert "$1,752,200."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Capital Park and Planning Commission," on page 57, line 1, before the word "Provided", to strike out "$84,200" and insert "$95,675."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama whether the revenue to support this bill is based on a contribution by the Federal Government, and if so, how much.

Mr. HILL. The amount of Federal revenue which will go to the District of Columbia to meet the expenses of the District of Columbia government is yet to be determined, because that amount is item I in the general appropriation bill. The budget recommended that the provisions of the statute passed in 1947 be carried out, which would mean a Federal contribution of $11,000,000 to the general fund and $1,000,000 to the water fund. The House of Representatives appropriated the $1,000,000 for the water fund, but reduced the appropriation for the general fund from $11,000,000 to $9,800,000.

I will say to the Senator that whether the Senate, in its wisdom, and the Congress, in its final wisdom, decide to make the contribution $11,000,000 or $9,800,-000, there will still be sufficient funds to meet the appropriations as carried in the pending bill.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. With a contribution of $9,800,000 and the other revenues from taxation, how much of an estimated surplus will there be over and above the appropriations contained in the bill?

Mr. HILL. Approximately $5,000,000.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. The appropriatons just agreed to by the Senate include, do they not, all the pay raises and all the amounts authorized because of the 40-hour week, and so forth?

Mr. HILL. They do, with one exception, and that is the 5-day week for the police department, because that provision has not yet become law. But it does include such capital outlay as the Congress has authorized, such as the East Capitol Street Bridge, and the aqueduct which is necessary to assure an adequate water supply for the District of Columbia. The 40-hour week for the police department would cost approximately a million dollars.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. So that there will be an estimated surplus of approximately $4,000,000 over and above all known estimates of expenditure; is that correct?

Mr. HILL. The Senator is correct. The Senator realizes, of course, that most of these funds are raised by taxes in the District of Columbia from the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I understand that. So that if there is any question about the amount of the Federal contribution, it will come up in the general appropriation bill, and it is not in question in this appropriation bill.

Mr. HILL. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. The Senator from Alabama has gone into the matter with a great deal of care, and he estimates that over and above all expenditures, estimated increases, and everything else, including the appropriations added by the Senate which were not provided for by the House, there will be an estimated surplus of somewhere between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Is that correct?

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Alabama would say a minimum of $5,000,-000, not including the additional cost of $1,000,000 which it is expected will be incurred because of the 5-day week for the policemen.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama one more question. Would he object to a further decrease in the Federal contribution? I ask that question because the District of Columbia budget will show a surplus, and the Federal budget will probably show a deficit. So, under the conditions of war, if we can this year save all the money we can for the Federal Government, we should do so.

Mr. HILL. I will say to my distinguished friend, that I think we should save all the money we can for the Federal Government, but I seriously doubt that the Senate Appropriations Committee should attempt to reduce the Federal contribution as fixed by statute in 1947.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I should like to ask one more question, if the Senator will permit.

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Of course, the revenues of the District of Columbia are based in part on the sales tax, which has not been in operation for a full year.

Mr. HILL. The sales tax went into operation on the 1st of last August. It has been in operation a little over 11 months.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. So that the calculation of receipts from the sales tax should be reasonably accurate.

Mr. HILL. I would say they should be.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. There should be some surplus in prospect.

Mr. HILL. We would not be wise, in my opinion, if we did not provide for some surplus. We never know when some emergency might arise, in which event we might have to make some supplemental or deficiency appropriations.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. But when the Federal Government is in the condition in which it now is, the Senator would agree that if we can save money for the Federal Government, we should do so.

Mr. HILL. I agree that we should save all the money that in good conscience and fairness we can save for the Federal Government.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to have the Senator state for the RECORD the amount to be paid to the District by way of contribution, and whether he claims it is mandatory legislation rather than merely an authorization?

Mr. HILL. The amount of the Federal contribution was fixed by statute. Congress fixed the amount by legislative enactment at the same time it levied the sales tax. The specific sum of $11,000,000 was fixed as the Federal contribution to the general fund for the District of Columbia, and a million dollars as the Federal contribution to the water fund.

Mr. FERGUSON. What is the amount of the appropriation for the District for the current fiscal year over and above that of last year?

Mr. HILL. Does the Senator mean how much is this year's appropriation over and above the appropriation for 1950?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes.

Mr. HILL. Approximately $15,000,000. A large part of that is for capital outlay, which I will say we foresaw last year and which we had in mind when we enacted the sales tax.

Mr. FERGUSON. How much more is the operating budget than last year, considering the capital expenditures?

Mr. HILL. The $15,000,000, of course, includes both operating expenses and capital outlay. I do not have the figures broken down in that way at this moment, but will furnish them to him shortly.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. This bill, of course, is a separate appropriation bill from the omnibus appropriation bill which is soon to be brought before the Senate.

Mr. HILL. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Is there anything in the omnibus bill which might affect this bill, if there is a general cut made in the omnibus bill?

Mr. HILL. Item No. 1 in the general appropriation bill is the Federal contribution to the Government of the District of Columbia. The House, as I said to the Senator from Michigan, allowed a $1,000,000 contribution for the water fund as fixed by statute. At the same time it reduced the $11,000,000 contribution to the general fund to $9,800,000. Even if $9,800,000 should be the sum finally agreed to by concurrence of the Senate in the House action, there would still be a surplus of approximately $5,000,000.

Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. What the Senator has said does not fully answer the question I asked; but I appreciate his observation. Let us take a hypothetical case. Let us assume that a cut of 10 percent is made in the general provisions of the omnibus appropriations bill, and that the cut would apply to the provisions of the pending District of Columbia bill. In a situation like that would any conflict arise if we passed this measure now?

Mr. HILL. No; there would be no conflict.

Mr. WHERRY. Therefore whatever might be done with respect to the omnibus appropriations bill would carry over to the District of Columbia appropriations bill regardless of what action is presently taken in the pending bill.

Mr. HILL. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. HUNT. In view of the fact that in 1922 the Federal Goverment was paying approximately 40 percent of the total expenditures of the District, and in the intervening years between 1922 and 1951 the contribution by the Federal Government has been constantly decreased, while the tax on the citizens of the District has been constantly increased, I should like to ask the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee on District of Columbia appropriations if he thinks it is quite fair to the citizens of the District to reduce the Federal contribution further, even though there is a surplus of nearly $5,000,000 in the general fund?

Mr. HILL. The Congress, having fixed the contribution by legislative enactment, at the same time that it levied the sales taxes on the inhabitants of the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government's contribution being, as the Senator indicated, at the minimum in relation to the contributions that have been made during the last 28 or 30 years, I do not think there ought to be a further reduction. That question is not before us now, as the Senator knows.

Mr. HUNT. No; but I should like to get it into the RECORD, if I may.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HUNT. Since the Federal Government occupies, with buildings and otherwise approximately 42 percent of the land area of the District, does the Senator from Alabama feel that we should contribute only slightly over 10 percent of the taxes?

Mr. HILL. I think the figures which were arrived at in 1947, under which the Federal Government agreed to make an over-all contribution of $12,000,000—$1,000,000 to the water fund, and $11,000,000 to the general fund—were fair by way of payment in lieu of taxes. I do not think the contribution should be reduced at this time.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. With reference to what the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] has said, to the effect that the Federal contributions have constantly decreased and the taxes of the residents of the District have constantly increased, I think he meant to make that observation in terms of percentages, rather than amounts.

Mr. HUNT. I meant both, I may say to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts. The dollars in volume contributed by the citizens of the District have increased. The contribution percentagewise has likewise increased.

Mr. HILL. The dollars have greately increased, I would say to the Senator from Massachusetts. Take the year 1922. That is the first year for which I have the figures before me. The District of Columbia's share of the appropriation was $13,784,647.70. This year, 1951, the District's share will be $92,146,675. The District's share in 1922 was 60 percent of the over-all appropriations made. That was fixed at that time by law. If we allow the full amount allowed by the statute of 1947, this year the over-all figure for the District's share will be about 89.13 percent.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. What was the Federal contribution in 1922, and what is it now?

Mr. HILL. In 1922 it was $9,192,763.37, in terms of general funds. The Federal contribution today as fixed by statute, will be $11,000,000.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HILL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Apparently the Members of the House considered the matter and they were of the opinion that they could cut the Federal contribution.

Mr. HILL. The House did cut it. As I said, the House cut the appropriation for the general fund from $11,000,000 to $9,800,000. I will say, however, that the amendment cutting the appropriation did not come from the House Committee on Appropriations. It came from the floor, where, I think an examination of the record will show, there was not the opportunity for consideration of the matter that obtained in the House committee.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I wanted to bring out—and I think the figures are clear—that in dollars the Federal contribution is larger today than it was in 1922.

Mr. HILL. The Federal contribution today is larger, but only a wee bit larger, if I may say so, whereas the contribution of the people living in the District of Columbia is overwhelmingly larger.

Mr. HUNT. I may say to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts that while the contribution at this time may be slightly larger in dollars than it was in 1922, yet the percentage of land area on which Government buildings now stand is a very great deal larger than it was then.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference thereon with the House of Representatives, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. HILL, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. MCCLELLAN, Mr. HUNT, Mr. FERGUSON, Mr. WHERRY, and Mr. YOUNG conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. LUCAS obtained the floor.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

Mr. LUCAS. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, on the calendar of the Senate appears a very important bill. It is Calendar No. 1757, H. R. 940, to authorize construction of the Eklutna project, hydroelectric generating plant and transmission facilities, and so forth. I should like to move, if it is agreeable to the majority leader, to proceed at an appropriate time to the consideration of this measure.

Mr. LUCAS. In reply to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming I should like to advise him that last week I gave notice to the Senate that we would proceed to the consideration of executive business and take up the nomination of Sumner T. Pike, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, which was reported adversely. We have more or less a tentative understanding that immediately after we take up the nomination a unanimous-consent agreement will be entered into to vote on it on Monday next. I am sure that following that, the Senate can proceed to the consideration of the bill, laying aside temporarily the unfinished business.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I understand the suggestion of the Senator from Illinois to be that he will now move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. LUCAS. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. And after a unanimous-consent agreement to vote on the Pike nomination has been reached, he will then have no objection to my making a motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill I have mentioned.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Reports of committees are in order. If there be no reports, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the executive calendar.

ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Sumner T. Pike, of Maine, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, which had been reported adversely.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, after conferring with the distinguished minority leader, and the minority member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER], and Senators on this side of the aisle, we have reached a tentative agreement to vote upon the nomination on Monday next at 3 o'clock. In the meantime, any Senator who desires to debate the nomination will have the privilege of doing so, or he can wait until Monday and debate it at that time. However, the time on Monday might be short for a full debate on the nomination, and I therefore ask any Member of the Senate who really cares to discuss the pending nomination, which has been reported adversely by the committee, to do so between now and Monday.

Mr. President, with that preliminary statement, I now ask unanimous consent that on Monday next at 1 o'clock, p. m., the Senate proceed to consider the nomination of Sumner T. Pike, of Maine, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission for a term of 4 years expiring June 30, 1954, that the vote on the nomination be taken at 3 o'clock, p. m., on that day, and that the time between 1 o'clock and 3 o'clock in the afternoon be equally divided between those favoring the nomination and those opposed, to be controlled, respectively, by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, in discussing the matter with the the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Connecticut, my understanding was that we tentatively agreed to recommend a 3-hour period, to be evenly divided. Therefore I wonder if the Senator from Illinois would make the hour of voting 4 o'clock, if the debate is to begin at 1 o'clock.

Mr. LUCAS. I shall be delighted to modify my unanimous-consent request. My reason for suggesting the period between 1 and 3 is that probably routine business will be transacted in the first hour.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I can understand the Senator not desiring to have the debate start at 12 o'clock. I would have no objection if the time between 1 and 4 o'clock were evenly divided, and the hour for voting made 4 o'clock.

Mr. LUCAS. I modify my request to meet the suggestion made by the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection of the request of the Senator from Illinois, as modified?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I merely wish to say for the RECORD that I have discussed the matter of the unanimous consent with those particularly interested in the nomination pro and con on this side of the aisle, and there is no objection, so far as I know.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I do not intend to object—I wish to say that I was consulted about this matter only a short time ago, and I am wondering if the distinguished Senator from Iowa wants to take the responsibility of entering into this unanimous-consent agreement without all Senators on this side of the aisle being advised of the request. So far as I am concerned, it is perfectly agreeable, but usually a quorum is called. Some Senators are present who would like to take part in the debate, and some might not be able to be present Monday. It is perfectly agreeable with the minority leader to take the nomination on Monday, as the majority leader has outlined. The Senator from Iowa is a member of the committee, where he represents the minority, and if there is no objection on his part, it is perfectly agreeable to me to proceed with the debate Monday, which will be the case, because after such unanimous-consent agreements are entered into usually the debate occurs on the day fixed. If it is the wish of the distinguished Senator from Iowa to proceed without a quorum call, it is perfectly agreeable to me.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I can say to the Senator from Nebraska that I have talked with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN], who is a member of the committee, and I have talked with the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND], who is also a member of the committee and who is present. I have been unable to reach the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER], another member of the committee, but I feel that this consent agreement would be satisfactory to him. Of course I cannot commit him, since I have not discussed the matter with him, but I feel it would be all right with him. I have talked the matter over with the two Senators from Maine, and they have expressed no objection. In fact, they affirmatively said that such an agreement would be satisfactory, so far as they were concerned.

There is one other matter. So far as the RECORD is concerned, there was a quorum call a very few minutes ago, and there was an announcement the latter part of last week that this nomination would be brought up today, so that the entire Senate is on notice that it would be discussed today. If there should be any Senator who would object, I certainly would not want to proceed, but I know of no Senator objecting.

Mr. LUCAS. Of course, Mr. President, there is no certainty that we would vote on the nomination today, even though we might debate it.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. How long the debate would take, no one could tell. Senators on this side of the aisle, of course, are agreeable to the unanimous-consent request.

There is another reason why I should like to have it entered into. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] cannot be present today, and I do not know when he will return. I cannot say whether he is opposed to Mr. Pike. I am trying to check his position on the nomination. I understand the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] cannot be present today. So, if we voted today, those two Senators would have to be absent on the vote.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. As I have already stated, there is no objection on the part of the minority leader. I merely desired to be sure that the rights of Senators on this side were protected. If the Senator from Iowa has made the thorough canvass his remarks have indicated, and it is perfectly agreeable to the Senators from Maine, and most of the Senators on the committee, it certainly is agreeable to me. This day was set aside for debating the nomination. It is true, as the majority leader has said, that we might not vote today. On the other hand, this day was set aside for the debate. I felt that possibly it should be drawn to the attention of the Senator from Iowa that it might be that Senators should know of the unanimous-consent request.

I shall not object, and I trust the unanimous-consent agreement will be entered into.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois, as modified? The Chair hears none, and the unanimous-consent agreement is entered into.

The agreement, as subsequently reduced to writing, is as follows:

Ordered, That on the calendar day of Monday, July 10, 1950, at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m., the Senate, in executive session, proceed to consider the nomination of Sumner T. Pike, of Maine, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission for a term of 4 years, expiring June 30, 1954, and, at the hour of 4 o'clock p. m., proceed to vote, without further debate, on the question of advising and consenting to the said nomination.

Ordered further, That the time between 1 o'clock and 4 o'clock be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the nomination and controlled, respectively, by Mr. MCMAHON and Mr. HICKENLOOPER.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming was here a moment ago, and he desired to get the floor. I suggest that the clerk proceed with the call of the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will continue the call of the calendar.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the postmaster nominations are confirmed en bloc.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT BOARD

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Horace W. Harper to be a member of the Railroad Retirement Board.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations in the Public Health Service are confirmed en bloc. That completes the call of the Executive Calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL BASIS FOR THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION IN USING ARMED FORCES TO REPEL THE INVASION OF SOUTH KOREA

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the indulgence of the Senate to speak for a few minutes on what I believe to be the constitutional and legal basis for the action of the President in authorizing the use of our Armed Forces to repel the invasion of southern Korea.

While the action of the President in sending our Armed Forces to the aid of southern Korea has been overwhelmingly approved by the people of this country, there have been voices of criticism raised from divergent quarters. The most common charge has been that the President's action was unconstitutional. It is alleged that since the Constitution in article I, section 8, gives solely to the Congress the power to declare war, the use of armed force by the President without congressional assent is consequently an abrogation of these powers and therefore a violation of the Constitution. At the root of this argument is, therefore, the contention that for us to use armed force against the persons or forces of other countries is in effect a declaration of war and hence should only be authorized by act of Congress.

This issue has been repeatedly debated throughout our history and in all likelihood it will continue to be discussed for a long time to come. If we can judge the future by the past, it will probably be raised in the future about President Truman's present action. In order to produce greater clarity of thought in the present and to decrease possible future bitter controversy, I believe it may be worth while to analyze this contention in a dispassionate manner.

I. THE LEGISLATIVE INTENT OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF 1787 AS REGARDS THE USE OF ARMED FORCES

The true meaning of the provision will be made much clearer if we trace the legislative history inside the Constitutional Convention of 1787 of the phrase, "to declare war," and arrive at the legislative intent behind that phrase. We can do this from the very full and accurate notes of the debates which were taken by the leading figure in the convention, James Madison, and which were published after his death in, I believe, 1840.

If we turn to this chronicle, we find that when the drafting committee, or the committee on detail, as it was called, submitted its draft on August 6, 1787, it gave to Congress not the right to declare war, but instead the broader right to make war—James Madison, the Journal of the Debates in the Convention Which Framed the Constitution of the United States, May–September, 1787, edited by Gaillard Hunt, volume II, page 82; see also Max Farrand, Records of the Federal Convention of 1787, volume II, page 168.

It was not until August 17 that this clause was debated. Mr. Pinkney of South Carolina opened the discussion by saying that he opposed "vesting this power in the legislature." "Its proceedings," he declared, "were too slow." After further discussion by Mr. Butler of South Carolina, James Madison, and Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, both moved to strike out the verb "make" and to substitute the verb "declare." I should like to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that this was for the purpose, as Madison wrote in his notes, of "leaving to the Executive the power to repel sudden attacks."

This amendment was shortly thereafter accepted on this same date of August 17, 1787, by a vote of 7 States to 2, with one State, Massachusetts, being recorded as absent, although one of its delegates, Mr. Gerry, had previously moved the amendment, and three States being absent entirely from the convention. Rhode Island, as we know, did not attend the convention. The two New York delegates, Yates and Alexander Hamilton, were not in attendance, and New Jersey was also absent on that day. The vote was therefore 7 to 2 to substitute the verb "to declare" for the verb "to make." The States voting for the substitution of "declare" for "make" were Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. New Hampshire and Connecticut voted in the negative with the latter State afterward switching its vote. A majority of the Massachusetts delegation was absent and that State was not recorded, although Gerry was, as stated above, in favor of the amendment. Rhode Island was not participating in the convention and New York and New Jersey did not participate in the vote.

From this discussion and vote it is clear that the convention did not want to tie our country's hands by requiring congressional assent for all employment of armed force. It is obvious, instead, that, as Madison said, they wanted to leave to the President the power to use force "to repel sudden attacks," even though not authorized to do so by Congress. This, as the founding fathers were careful to distinguish, was not equivalent to a declaration of war.

II. THE SPEED OF MODERN WAR REQUIRES QUICK EXECUTIVE ACTION

I know it will be objected that this use of legislative intent to justify present action is faulty. It will be argued that it was the difficulty and slowness in stagecoach days of assembling Congress which caused the constitutional fathers to give to the President the interim powers of using force to repel attacks. It will be contended that the need for this has passed in these days of the airplane when Congress can be called into session on a day's notice.

But this tremendous increase in the speed of assembling Congress has been accompanied by an equal and, indeed, even greater increase in the rapidity of delivering deadly attacks. War in the days of the founding fathers was even more leisurely an institution than the stage coach itself. It was speeded up in the nineteenth century by the tactics of Napoleon and the German general staff. But now with tanks, airplanes, and the atom bomb, war can become instantaneous and disaster can occur while Congress is assembling and debating. For death and destruction can now come to whole cities and possibly to nations in a matter of seconds. For these reasons, therefore, it would be unwise to insist that the President cannot use armed force in advance of formal congressional approval.

But there is one further point which should be faced. Congress was already in session when President Truman on June 26 ordered our naval and air forces to repulse the Communist attacks on South Korea. Why, then, it may be asked, should not the issue in the present instance have been submitted to Congress, which was then in session?

The answer is, I think, a double one. In the first place, in all such military operations success or failure may depend on a matter of hours and even the slightest delay may prove fatal. Secondly, our own congressional procedures are themselves subject to some delay. As events have shown, Congress has overwhelmingly approved of this action once it was taken. This is shown by the unanimous votes in favor of both the extension of the draft and of military aid. But there might well have been some minority opposition to the Korean policy had it been submitted to Congress in advance. In the House, it is true, debate could have been restricted within reasonable limits by action of the Rules Committee, but formal approval could still have been withheld if insisted upon by one Member until the actual engrossing of the bill a day later. This parliamentary device has been used in the past in the House to delay action and without mentioning any one person, it is very probable that it would have been used in the present case.

In the Senate, the right of unlimited debate might well have permitted one or two Senators to slow us up. It should be remembered, moreover, that when cloture is proposed, it cannot be voted upon for 2 days after the petition asking for it has been signed and submitted and that, thereafter each dissenter will be permitted to speak for an hour. In short, even though the recommendation of the Executive were later to be supported by an overwhelming vote of both Houses, so much valuable time might be lost in the interval that the military action authorized might come much too late to be effective.

III. SOME LEADING INSTANCES OF PRESIDENTIAL USE OF ARMED FORCE WITHOUT CONGRESSIONAL DECLARATION OF WAR AND THE REASONS THEREFOR

My colleague, the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] has already mentioned the fact that our Armed Forces have been used by Executive direction—and I include in that the decisions of the military as well as at the direction of the President—against the forces and persons of other countries in over a hundred instances without any declaration of war. I shall merely mention a few of these incidents. (For a more complete list see Right To Protect Citizens in Foreign Countries by Landing Forces, State Department, 1933, 130 pages.)

First. Naval hostilities with France, 1798.

Second. Jefferson's expedition against the Barbary pirates, 1804.

Third. The Seminole War, 1817.

Fourth. Polk's occupation of disputed Texas-Mexican border territory 1846.

Fifth. Intervention in Samoa, 1840–41, 1888, 1899.

Sixth. Use of naval forces in Chile, 1891.

Seventh. Boxer Rebellion in China, 1900.

Eighth. Theodore Roosevelt's Intervention in Panama, 1903.

Ninth. Santo Domingo, 1904.

Tenth. Nicaragua, 1895, 1910, 1912, 1926.

Eleventh. Haiti, 1914.

Twelfth. Wilson's intervention at Vera Cruz, 1914.

Thirteenth. Santo Domingo, 1916.

Fourteenth. The Pursuit of Pancho Villa, 1916.

Fifteenth. Intervention in Russia—Archangel and Siberia, 1919.

These and a host of other instances indicate that Presidents have frequently used their power to use the Armed Forces of the United States against other countries without a prior declaration of war by Congress. In a few cases, the exercise of this power was probably unwise. In most cases, however, it was distinctly wise, benefiting both this country and the world as a whole.

There is indeed a good reason, besides the need for speed, why the President should have been permitted to use force in these cases without a formal declaration of war by Congress. That is because international situations frequently call for the retail use of force in localized situations which are not sufficiently serious to justify the wholesale and widespread use of force which a formal declaration of war would require.

In other words, it may be desirable to create a situation which is half-way between complete peace, or the absence of all force, and outright war marked by the exercise of tremendous force on a wholesale scale. This is most notably the case when big powers deal with small countries, and in situations where only a relatively temporary application of force is needed to restore order and to remove the threat of aggression. It would be below the dignity of the United States to declare war on a pigmy state, but it might be necessary to apply force in such a case in order to prevent attacks on American lives and property.

Such an intermediate method is also particularly useful when dealing with satellite or puppet states of another big power. Force can be used against a satellite without necessarily stirring up the opposing big power, as would almost certainly occur were war formally to be declared. It is made easier, therefore, for the other big power lurking in the background to save its face by pretending not to notice what is happening to its satellite, and therefore in effect to disavow it.

This is peculiarly appropriate to the present situation, since northern Korea is really under the direction of Communist Russia. This need for the use of force without the launching of war has been recognized in international law by the peculiar status given to the employment of naval forces, for the use of naval force is not regarded as an act of war in itself. It is this fact which accounts in part—and, of course, only in part—for the maintenance and use of the Marine Corps in times past in so-called minor incidents. As part of the Navy, they were in a sense State Department troops.

IV. WAS OUR SECURITY THREATENED?

But there is one step more which is required to make the argument conclusive. Up to the invasion of Korea, the use of armed force had been almost invariably ordered by our Presidents as a protection against immediate and direct attacks or threats to American lives and property. The vast majority of these cases could, therefore, be regarded as direct acts of defense to repulse direct attacks or as retaliatory measures for such aggression.

Our present intervention to check the provocatory invasion of South Korea by the North Korean Communists under almost certain Russian direction is of a somewhat different kind. The damage to American mission schools and churches and American business houses, while real, was not in any sense the primary reason for our intervention. That should be recognized.

The basic reason for our intervention was the recognition by the President, and, I believe, by the Nation, of the fact that, if the Communists were successful in taking over southern Korea without our imposing any effective opposition, they could be depended upon to make similar invasions of other areas. This would notably be true of Burma, Indochina, Persia, Jugoslavia, Greece, Berlin, and west Germany. Let us make no mistake about it; our own ultimate safety would then have been threatened, for both the will to conquer of the Russian police state would have been whetted and many of our actual and potential allies, seeing others abandoned, would have begun to make terms with the Communists.

The disastrous experience of the 1930's in the efforts by the western democracies to appease Hitler by allowing him to take over, by aggression, country after country, and the bad record made by the Russians, particularly since 1945, are convincing proof that if we permit an aggressor to take over another country by force, we do not avert danger for ourselves, but, instead, bring it even closer. It means, instead, that if we adopt such a course, ultimately we must either yield our liberties or, if we defend them—as I hope and believe we would—that we would have to do so on terms far more disadvantageous to us than would originally have been the case. Peace is indivisible—as Mr. Litvinov once remarked, and as the Russians are now trying to forget.

The ultimate security of the United States depends upon convincing the Communist aggressors that we will resist aggression and will check it in its earliest stages. Vigorous and effective action when aggression begins prevents it from coming closer and rallies potential friends to one's cause. The best time to put out a fire is immediately after it starts, and before it can gain headway.

The decision of the President to aid South Korea was, therefore, both in the best interests of the United States and in no sense violated constitutional theory or practice. It was, instead, a sound measure to guard against an ultimate and indirect threat to the security of the United States, building upon the precedents previously established for dealing with immediate and direct threats.

V. USE OF OUR ARMED FORCES ALSO A POLICE ACTION UNDER THE UNITED NATIONS

Let us also realize that once the United Nations called upon its members to lend military aid, first to the United Nations—as in its proclamation of June 24—and then to Korea itself, in its resolution of June 26, in forcing the invaders back to the boundary line at the thirty-eighth parallel, any use of armed force by us was not an act of war, but, instead, merely the exercise of police power under international sanction. For war is the anarchic use of force by one nation against another for the purpose of imposing its own will, and in the absence of an international authorization. What we are really doing in Korea is to serve as a police force to carry out the decision of the United Nations that its member nations should help to repel the invasion of South Korea. We are, therefore, serving as agents of an international authority designed to protect the peace of the world, and not as anarchic or self-appointed users of force.

This is, indeed, probably the only manner in which an international police force could as a practical matter be created. An international police force would not be born in a vacuum. We can only hope that when the present emergency has been ended the free nations will learn this lesson and will establish a permanent international police force which can be used in just such situations as that which has arisen without throwing the main burden upon any one country.

Our actions are therefore as much in harmony with international law as were the President's in harmony with our own internal constitutional law.

VI. DANGERS OF FUTURE PRESIDENTIAL ACTION AND POSSIBLE RESTRAINTS

There are, of course, grave dangers which are created in thus giving to the President in his role as Commander in Chief discretionary powers to use our Armed Forces in advance of a declaration of war by Congress. A reckless and a militaristic President—which President Truman is not—could commit us to a program of aggression. Once embarked upon such a course of action, it would admittedly be difficult for Congress to order a withdrawal, since not only national pride and prestige would be involved, but also actual national safety as well.

What protection is there against such possible future abuses? As I see it, there are two: first, the sobering and terrible responsibilities of the office of President itself; and second, the fact that if such an act were to be grossly at variance with the national interest and against the public will, the President would render himself liable to impeachment at the hands of Congress. This is certainly something of a deterring influence.

I submit, moreover, that we of the Congress could make it easier for the President to consult us in the event of such a national emergency, and to share any attendant responsibility, by so revising our rules that congressional action in such matters can be speeded up. The House, for example, might waive for this range of subjects the formal engrossing of a bill, and the Senate could for such issues permit the vote on cloture to come more quickly after the submission of the petition. These are reforms which in my judgment we should effect, if in the future we are legitimately to claim more joint powers in such matters.

VII. SUMMARY

Summing up, Mr. President, I hope that this brief review of the issues will be convincing proof that the acts of the President in helping to protect southern Korea from Communist aggression were in thorough harmony with the legislative intent of the framers of the Constitution, in line with sound historical precedent, in conformity with international law and the rules of the United Nations, and in the best interests of our own ultimate security and the peace of the world.

Mr. LEHMAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Magnuson
Anderson	Hendrickson	Martin
Benton	Hickenlooper	Millikin
Brewster	Hill	Morse
Bricker	Hoey	Mundt
Bridges	Holland	Murray
Butler	Humphrey	Myers
Cain	Hunt	O'Mahoney
Connally	Ives	Robertson
Cordon	Jenner	Russell
Darby	Johnson, Tex.	Saltonstall
Donnell	Kefauver	Schoeppel
Douglas	Kem	Smith, Maine
Dworshak	Kerr	Smith, N. J.
Eastland	Kilgore	Sparkman
Ecton	Knowland	Stennis
Ellender	Langer	Taft
Ferguson	Leahy	Thomas, Utah
Flanders	Lehman	Thye
Frear	Lodge	Tydings
Fulbright	Lucas	Watkins
George	McCarthy	Wherry
Gillette	McClellan	Williams
Graham	McFarland	Young
Green	McKellar
Gurney	McMahon

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DOUGLAS in the chair). A quorum is present.

CONSTRUCTION OF EKLUTNA PROJECT, ALASKA

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, earlier in the session today, when the majority leader was outlining the program for the day, I asked him if it would be agreeable to move to the consideration of Calendar 1757, House bill 940, which proposes to authorize the construction of an electric-power project approximately 36 miles north of Anchorage, Alaska. I have discussed the matter with the leadership on both sides of the aisle, and it has been agreed that there would be no objection following the executive session to my making a motion to consider this measure, which has been reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, may I inquire whether the bill has been reported unanimously by the committee?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It has been reported unanimously by the committee, with the exception that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], who was a member of the subcommittee which drafted the bill, afterward said he desired to offer an amendment. I have the amendment before me, and I shall be glad to offer it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senate is now in legislative session.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then, Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 1757, House bill 940.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 940) to authorize construction of the Eklutna project, hydroelectric-generating plant and transmission facilities in connection therewith, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Wyoming that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 940) which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insudar Affairs, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That in order to encourage and promote the economic development of the Territory of Alaska, to foster the establishment of essential industries in said Territory, and to further the self-sufficiency of national defense installations located therein, the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to construct, operate, and maintain the Eklutna project in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska, consisting of a low dam at Lake Eklutna, a diversion tunnel and penstock, a power plant with an installed capacity of 30,000 kilowatts, transmission lines to Anchorage and other load centers, and related works (except recreational facilities) substantially in accordance with the plans and recommendations in the report adopted by the Secretary of the Interior on January 18, 1949, on file with the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate at an estimated cost of $20,365,400. The capital investment properly allocable to each unit of said project, as determined by the Secretary, shall be amortized over a period of not to exceed 50 years from the time such unit is first put into service, and interest shall be charged on the unamortized balance of such capital investment during the same period at a rate of 2½ percent per annum and shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. All minerals discovered in the course of constructing the Eklutna project are hereby reserved to the United States and may be sold or otherwise disposed of in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary, if he finds and so reports to the Congress in writing that the only economically practicable method of recovering the ore so reserved is to provide for the salvage of any minerals that may be contained in the excavated materials removed from the tunnel during the normal process of construction. The net proceeds from any such sale or other disposition shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. The waters of Eklutna Lake and its tributaries which are required for the operation of the Eklutna project are hereby reserved for that purpose.

SEC. 2. Electric power and energy generated at the Eklutna project, except that portion required in the operation of such project, shall be disposed of in such a manner as to encourage the most widespread use thereof at the lowest possible rates to consumers consistent with sound business principles and the maintenance of adequate electric service, the rate schedules to become effective upon confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission. Such rate schedules shall be drawn having regard to the recovery (upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of the project) of the cost of producing and transmitting the power and energy, including the amortization of the capital investment as provided in section 1 hereof. Preference in the sale of such power and energy shall be given to all public bodies and cooperatives on the same terms, and to Federal agencies. It shall be a condition of every contract made under this act for the sale of power and energy that the purchaser, if it be a purchaser for resale, will deliver power and energy to Federal agencies or facilities thereof within its transmission area at a reasonable charge for the use of its transmission facilities. All receipts from the transmission and sale of electric power and energy generated at said project shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts, save and except that the Treasury shall set up and maintain from the receipts for said project a continuing fund of $200,000 to the credit of the Secretary and subject to expenditure by him, to defray emergency expenses and to insure continuous operation.

SEC. 3. The Secretary is authorized to perform any and all acts and enter into such agreements as may be appropriate for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this act into full force and effect, including the acquisition of rights and property, and the Secretary, when an appropriation shall have been made for the commencement of construction or for operation and maintenance of said project, may, in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of such project, enter into contracts for miscellaneous services for materials and supplies, as well as for construction, which may cover such periods of time as the Secretary may consider necessary but in which the liability of the United States shall be contingent upon appropriations being made therefor.

SEC. 4. Upon completion of amortization of the capital investment allocated to power, the Secretary is authorized and directed to report to the Congress upon the feasibility and desirability of transferring the Eklutna project to public ownership and control in Alaska.

SEC. 5. Wherever in this act authority is vested in, or functions are to be performed by, the Secretary, such authority may be exercised, and functions performed, through such agencies of the Department of the Interior as he may designate.

SEC. 6. There are authorized to be appropriated the sum of $20,365,400 for the construction of the Eklutna project and, in addition, such sums as may be necessary for the operation and maintenance of such project.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I should like briefly to explain this measure. During the Eightieth Congress when the appropriation bill for the Department of the Interior was under consideration the Committee on Appropriations, recognizing the great importance of development in the Territory of Alaska, provided an appropriation of $150,000 to enable the Bureau of Reclamation to make a study of electric-power development in the Territory. As a result of that appropriation, and an additional appropriation which was made in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress, the Bureau of Reclamation filed a report for the so-called Eklutna project, which is located about 37 miles north of the city of Anchorage, which is now the largest city in Alaska. In 1939 its population was about 3,500 or 3,600. According to the last report the population exceeds 36,000.

The city is now being served by a makeshift electrical-producing plant. A merchant vessel which went on the rocks has been salvaged and the engine section of the vessel is now producing what little electric power and electric energy which this growing community has available to it. The pending bill would authorize the construction of a 30,000-watt plant. It would take a year and a half or two years to build it. The authorization is for the expenditure of less than $20,500,000. The bill was thoroughly analyzed in the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, and a subcommittee on which the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON] and the present speaker served drafted the bill. The bill came from the House with very much broader provisions in it than it now contains.

The House bill would have authorized broad studies and broad development, but the Senate committee has amended the bill to provide solely for the construction of this single project. The Senator from Oregon, after the bill had been reported to the Senate, suggested to me that he would like to propose a special amendment. I am entirely willing to accept the amendment, and on behalf of the Senator from Oregon I offer to the committee amendment the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment on page 7, line 18, after the figures "$20,365,400", it is proposed to strike out "The capital investment properly allocable to each unit of said project, as determined by the Secretary, shall be amortized over a period of not to exceed 50 years from the time such unit is first put into service, and interest shall be charged on the unamortized balance of such capital investment during the same period at a rate of 2½ percent per annum and shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts." and insert "The capital investment properly allocable to each unit of said project, as determined by the Federal Power Commission, shall be amortized over a reasonable period of years, and interest shall be charged on the unamortized balance of the full capital investment in said project at a rate of 2½ percent per annum and shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I understand that the project would be self-supporting on that basis.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. The money would be repaid to the Federal Government, will it not?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It will be completely repaid. There is no nonreimbursable item in the measure.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Was there any discussion at any time with reference to a private enterprise going to Alaska and building this hydroelectric plant?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The subject may have been discussed, but there is no possibility of any such development. There is at Anchorage, a municipal plant, which is completely inadequate. This bill provides that once the construction of the plant is completed, provision shall be made to turn it over to some form of local public ownership.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. As I understand, no private public utility enterprise ever offered to undertake this project.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No. Without this authorization there will be no additional power there.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I was going to ask the senior Senator from Wyoming to invite the attention of the Members of the Senate to the particular clause in section 5 in which provision is made for eventual local public ownership. That was one of the phases of the bill in which I was particularly interested.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator referred to section 5. I believe it is section 4 of the bill which contains the provision to which he has reference. I should also point out, Mr. President, that this project will develop, as I stated, 30,000 kilowatts of power. There is a market for every single kilowatt that can be produced. The power will be used not only for municipality purposes, but for three rural electric cooperatives, for the Alaska Railroad, for the Elmendorf Air Field, and for Fort Richardson.

Mr. President, I trust that the bill may be passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 940) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD at this point the entire text of the committee report, together with the letters approving the proposed legislation from the Department of the Interior and from the then Director of the Budget.

There being no objection, the report and letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 940) to authorize construction of the Eklutna project, hydroelectic generating plant and transmission facilities in connection therewith, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment is to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That in order to encourage and promote the economic development of the Territory of Alaska, to foster the establishment of essential industries in said Territory, and to further the self-sufficiency of national defense installations located therein, the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to construct, operate, and maintain the Eklutna project in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska, consisting of a low dam at Lake Eklutna, a diversion tunnel and penstock, a power plant with an installed capacity of 30,000 kilowatts, transmission lines to Anchorage and other load centers, and related works (except recreational facilities) substantially in accordance with the plans and recommendations in the report adopted by the Secretary of the Interior on January 18, 1949, on file with the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate at an estimated cost of $20,365,400. The capital investment properly allocable to each unit of said project, as determined by the Secretary, shall be amortized over a period of not to exceed 50 years from the time such unit is first put into service, and interest shall be charged on the unamortized balance of such capital investment during the same period at a rate of 2½ percent per annum and shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. All minerals discovered in the course of constructing the Eklutna project are hereby reserved to the United States and may be sold or otherwise disposed of in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary, if he finds and so reports to the Congress in writing that the only economically practicable method of recovering the ore so reserved is to provide for the salvage of any minerals that may be contained in the excavated materials removed from the tunnel during the normal process of construction. The net proceeds from any such sale or other disposition shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. The waters of Eklutna Lake and its tributaries which are required for the operation of the Eklutna project are hereby reserved for that purpose.

"SEC. 2. Electric power and energy generated at the Eklutna project, except that portion required in the operation of such project, shall be disposed of in such a manner as to encourage the most widespread use thereof at the lowest possible rates to consumers consistent with sound business principles and the maintenance of adequate electric service, the rate schedules to become effective upon confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission. Such rate schedules shall be drawn having regard to the recovery (upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of the project) of the cost of producing and transmitting the power and energy, including the amortization of the capital investment as provided in section 1 hereof. Preference in the sale of such power and energy shall be given to all public bodies and cooperatives on the same terms, and to Federal agencies. It shall be a condition of every contract made under this act for the sale of power and energy that the purchaser, if it be a purchaser for resale, will deliver power and energy to Federal agencies or facilities thereof within its transmission area at a reasonable charge for the use of its transmission facilities. All receipts from the transmission and sale of electric power and energy generated at said project shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts, save and except that the Treasury shall set up and maintain from the receipts for said project a continuing fund of $200,000 to the credit of the Secretary and subject to expenditure by him, to defray emergency expenses and to insure continuous operation.

"SEC. 3. The Secretary is authorized to perform any and all acts and enter into such agreements as may be appropriate for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this act into full force and effect, including the acquisition of rights and property, and the Secretary, when an appropriation shall have been made for the commencement of construction or for operation and maintenance of said project, may, in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of such project, enter into contracts for miscellaneous services, for materials and supplies, as fell as for construction, which may cover such periods of time as the Secretary may consider necessary but in which the liability of the United States shall be contingent upon appropriations being made therefor.

"SEC. 4. Upon completion of amortization of the capital investment allocated to power, the Secretary is authorized and directed to report to the Congress upon the feasibility and desirability of transferring the Eklutna project to public ownership and control in Alaska.

"SEC. 5. Wherever in this act authority is vested in, or functions are to be performed by, the Secretary, such authority may be exercised, and functions performed, through such agencies of the Department of the Interior as he may designate.

"SEC. 6. There are authorized to be appropriated the sum of $20,365,400 for the construction of the Eklutna project, and, in addition, such sums as may be necessary for the operation and maintenance of such project."

EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

The purpose of this bill as amended is to authorize the construction of the Eklutna project near Anchorage, Alaska, substantially in accordance with the plans and recommendations in the project report adopted by the Secretary of the Interior.

As it passed the House of Representatives on July 13, 1949, H. R. 940 was broader in scope than the substitute bill recommended herewith by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. In addition to specific authorization for the Eklutna project, the House bill provided basic authority for the Secretary of the Interior to undertake broadscale hydroelectric development in Alaska. The Secretary was authorized to make findings of economic and engineering feasibility with respect to proposed hydroelectric projects and to submit a report of such findings to the President and the Congress. If the Congress approved such report, the project would be deemed authorized substantially in accordance with the plans and recommendations contained in the report. The original House bill also provided for investigations by the Secretary of the Interior relating to the development of natural resources in Alaska and set up a system for reporting the results of such investigations to the President, the Congress, and interested governmental agencies. For reasons discussed hereafter in this report, the authority for widespread hydroelectric development in Alaska and the provision for investigations in Alaska have been eliminated in the substitute bill offered by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. With the exception of certain changes recommended by the Director of the Budget in his letters to the Secretary of the Interior (included hereafter as a part of this report), the substitute bill is substantially similar to those portions of the original bill that related wholly to the construction, operation, and maintenance of the Eklutna project.

In the course of hearings on this bill before the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, much evidence was received from witnesses and in communications indicating the real need for large-scale hydroelectric development in the Territory of Alaska. The committee recognizes that the security of Alaska is essential to the security of the United States, and that the development of its economy is necessary to the strengthening of the national economy. In order to fulfill a role in keeping with its potentialities in natural resources, Alaska must have more people, more railroads, more roads, more power, and more industries. Cheap and abundant power will do much to bring about the kind of development Alaska needs. In addition to improving the economy of Alaska, power will directly further the self-sufficiency of the Territory's defense installations.

The committee desires to emphasize that its action in eliminating from the House bill the authority for the Secretary of the Interior to undertake broad-scale hydroelectric development in Alaska should not be interpreted to mean that the committee is not convinced of the importance of hydroelectric development in Alaska. Evidence in support of the need for such development has been substantial and impressive. The committee favors such development but is of the opinion that the need for immediate action on a broad front is not so compelling as to require the adoption and assignment at this time of a definite program before certain policy questions have been more fully considered. It is recognized that both the Department of the Interior through the Bureau of Reclamation and the Department of the Army through the Corps of Engineers have been authorized by the Congress to conduct investigations of natural resources and their development in Alaska. The Department of the Interior, as the executive department responsible for the administration of Territories, has a legitimate interest in the development of Alaska. Since the development of hydroelectric power and the strengthening of the local economy will contribute to the security of Alaska, the Department of the Army also has special interest in the program contemplated in this bill. The Department of the Interior has submitted specific plans and justification for a specific project, the Eklutna project, and the proposal has been submitted and considered with the understanding that it is not a reclamation project and that it will not have the effect of extending reclamation laws to Alaska. In the view of the committee the immediacy of the need for the Eklutna project near Anchorage is such as to warrant immediate approval for the construction of that particular project by the Secretary of the Interior. The approval of this project, to the exclusion of the program for more extensive hydroelectric development, is not intended to be prejudicial to the valid case for further development but arises from the feeling of the committee that the general authorization of such development should await the determination of problems of policy with respect to resource development and executive-agency reorganization now under active study. It was the feeling of the committee, however, that the construction of Eklutna should not be delayed.

Similarly, the elimination of the program of investigations relating to the development of natural resources in Alaska as authorized in the measure as it passed the House does not represent a decision by the committee on the policy questions involved. The committee has narrowed the scope of H. R. 940 to the single purpose of providing for the construction of the Eklutna project solely for the purpose of expediting action on a most essential development.

The situation existing in Anchorage area appears to be one of the best examples of the pressing need for improvements in Alaska. Anchorage is the largest city in Alaska with a population that has grown from 3,500 in 1939 to about 26,000 at the present time. A principal base of the Department of Defense is located there; the best-known agricultural area in Alaska is in this vicinity; the headquarters of the railroad serving the Fairbanks area is located there; and it is the sea and rail shipping center for the Kenai Peninsula and the Fairbanks area. The rapid growth of Anchorage seems likely to continue but the city must have relief for its municipally owned electric system. To a considerable extent the city must now depend on power generated from the salvaged engine section of a disabled merchant vessel tied up in the Anchorage Harbor. The city owns a small hydroelectric plant below Lake Eklutna having a capacity of 2,000 kilowatts, but the plant cannot be depended on to give continuous service.

The plans of the Department of the Interior to alleviate this condition call for the development of a 30,000-kilowatt hydroelectric plant at Eklutna Lake, 36 miles north of Anchorage, to supply electric service to the Matanuska Valley, three rural electric cooperatives the Alaska Railroad, Elmendorf Airfield, Fort Richardson, the city of Anchorage, and the town of Palmer, all of which are in critical need of additional power supply. Local agencies have unanimously agreed that this project is badly needed.

The committee draws particular attention to a new section (sec. 5) it has added to the bill to provide the possibility of eventual local public ownership and control of the project in Alaska after the capital investment has been amortized.

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs held hearings on this bill and received testimony from Gov. Ernest Gruening, of Alaska, and Delegate E. L. Bartlett. Representatives from the Department of the Interior also appeared and recommended passage of H. R. 940. There was received also a large number of communications urging favorable action on the bill.

ANALYSIS OF THE BILL

Section 1 of H. R. 940, as amended by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, confers upon the Secretary of the Interior the specific authority to construct, operate, and maintain the Eklutna project in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska. This project will consist of a low dam at Lake Eklutna, a diversion tunnel and penstock, a power plant with installed capacity of 30,000 kilowatts, transmission lines to Anchorage and other load centers, and related works. The capital investment allocable to each unit of the Eklutna project is to be amortized over a period of not to exceed 50 years from the time such unit is first put into service. Interest on the unamortized balance will be charged during the same period at the rate of 2½ percent. This section further provides for reservation to the United States of all minerals discovered in the course of constructing the project. Provision is made for the sale or disposal of such minerals by the Secretary of the Interior under stated circumstances. The waters of Eklutna Lake or its tributaries required for the operation of the project are also reserved to the United States.

The provisions of section 2 governing rates and the disposition of power and energy are substantially similar to the provisions of section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944.

Section 2 provides that rate schedules for the project shall be drawn with regard to the recovery of the cost of producing and transmitting the power and energy, including the amortization of the capital investment allocated to power. Such rates are subject to the approval of the Federal Power Commission. Federal agencies, public bodies, and cooperatives are given preference in the sale of power and energy from the project. This section of H. R. 940 requires that rates must be maintained at levels that insure efficient operation of the power system in addition to amortizing the capital investment and paying the interest charge. This results in the imposition of a more rigorous standard of solvency than is customarily followed by private utility financing, inasmuch as such financing usually contemplates that the capital investment will be retained in the business indefinitely instead of being amortized over a fixed period of years. Again following the pattern of section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944, all receipts from the transmission and sale of power and energy will be covered into the United States Treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. However, the Treasury is authorized to set up and maintain from such receipts a continuing fund of $200,000 to defray emergency expenses.

Section 3 confers upon the Secretary of the Interior the general authority to perform such acts, enter into such agreements and acquire such property as may be appropriate. This section is the usual statutory provision common to this type of legislation.

Section 4 requires that upon completion of amortization of capital investment allocated to power, the Secretary will report to the Congress upon the feasibility and desirability of transferring the Eklutna project to public ownership and control in Alaska.

Section 5 contains the usual provision for the Secretary to delegate his authority and functions under the act.

Section 6 authorizes the appropriation of $20,365,400 for the construction of the Eklutna project and also such sums as may be necessary for operation and maintenance.

PERTINENT COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications from the Secretary of the Interior and from the Director of the Budget are made a part of this report in order to furnish full and detailed information on the bill. It will be noted that some of the recommendations and discussion are no longer pertinent to the bill in view of the committee amendments.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., August 11, 1949.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Chairman, Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR O'MAHONEY: This is in response to your request for a report on H. R. 940, a bill to authorize construction of the Eklutna project, hydroelectric generating plant and transmission facilities in connection therewith, and for other purposes, and to your request for a report on S. 1966, a bill to authorize public improvements in Alaska, and for other purposes.

We strongly favor the enactment of legislation to accomplish the purposes of H. R. 940 and S. 1966. We believe that these purposes could be best accomplished through legislation substantially along the lines of the proposed substitute amendment accompanying this report. The provisions of this amendment incorporate a number of perfecting changes recommended by the Bureau of the Budget or other interested parties. The substance of the amendment follows closely the provisions of H. R. 940, in the form in which the measure was passed by the House of Representatives on July 13. The text of sections 1, 4, 7, and 8 is identical with that of the corresponding sections of H. R. 940, while the text of sections 2, 3, 5, 6, and 9 has been revised in the particulars described in this report.

The principal difference between H. R. 940 and the accompanying proposed substitute amendment is that the former prescribes, in section 3, a 50-year amortization period and a 2½-percent interest rate for all power projects in Alaska, whereas the latter prescribes, in section 6, such a period and rate for the Eklutna project alone. It is our understanding that the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatitves included the 50-year amortization period and the 2½-percent interest rate in H. R. 940 in order to overcome proposals for a 52-year period and a 3-percent rate in the report on the Eklutna project which would be approved by H. R. 940, and that by inadvertence these provisions were inserted in a way that would make them applicable to all power projects which might subsequently be authorized for construction under H. R. 940. In view of the wide diversity of conditions that exist in Alaska, it would seem premature to establish at this time definite amortization periods and interest rates for all power projects to be undertaken there, particularly since the economics of these projects, other than the Eklutna project, have not yet been investigated in detail. Under the terms of H. R. 940, and also of the proposed substitute amendment, authorization of these future projects would require affirmative action by the Congress.

The other differences between H. R. 940 and the proposed substitute amendment consist of clarifications in the investigation and reporting procedures established by section 2 and 5, in the emergency fund provision of section 3, in some of the details of section 6, and in the appropriation authorization of section 9. Clerical errors in sections 2, 3, and 6 have also been corrected.

There is definite economic need for the enactment of legislation which would provide a framework for the investigation, and, where justified, the undertaking of hydroelectric power projects in Alaska. There is also a particularly urgent need for the immediate authorization of the Eklutna project, designed to serve the Anchorage area, on which a project report has been prepared by this Department and cleared by the Bureau of the Budget. Adoption of legislation providing such a framework and authorizing prompt construction of the Eklutna project would be an essential step in the development of Alaska's natural resources.

At the present time, Alaska has three basic industries based upon natural resources. They are: Fishing, mining, and the taking of furs. Another resource is timber, which has not been developed, but which if developed, may surpass the three existing industries. Large pulp and paper plants would be assured of a plentiful supply of raw materials, but they can be established only if there is also a plentiful supply of pure, fresh water and large quantities of cheap electric power. If these timber resources in Alaska are to be utilized, the construction of power projects is a necessary requirement.

The establishment of one industry carries with it the development of other industries which may be stimulated by the availability of power. Furthermore, the pulp and paper industry can economically utilize the secondary and dump power. The primary energy should be made available for the industries and the communities of the region in a manner consistent with the development and needs of the area. For example, the power may be utilized for the reduction of ores in bulk, thus diminishing the demands on scarce and expensive transportation facilities. For this reason also the power developments should be undertaken by the Government, assuring a widespread use, rather than by private persons, to meet their own needs.

Much exploratory and estimating work on worth-while hydro projects has been done in the past half century, but very little development has been achieved. Prior to 1900 the combined power installation in Alaska had a capacity of only 4,500 kilowatts, and at the present time the installed capacity is less than 40,000 kilowatts.

In those parts of Alaska where improvements are urgent there are now six publicly operated and five privately operated sources of power. In the construction of these power facilities provision was made to take care of immediate power needs without planning for future demands. As a result the power available is not sufficient to maintain adequate service at the present time.

For example: Anchorage is the largest city in Alaska. It has grown from a population of 3,500 in 1939 to approximately 26,000 at the present time. A principal base of the National Military Establishment is located there. The best known agricultural area in Alaska is in the vicinity. The headquarters of the Alaska Railroad is located at Anchorage; and it is the transportation and industrial center for the Kenai Peninsula and central Alaska. Its growth will continue unless it encounters too much frustration in the process of development. Thus far the city has been unable to secure sufficient funds to provide power facilities commensurate with its growth. During the past 4 years Anchorage has appealed, and is now appealing, to the Department of the Interior for relief for its municipally operated electric system. Its present power service has been made possible through the use of an engine section of a disabled merchant vessel. This section was salvaged and tied up in the Anchorage Harbor, and is now connected to the city's electric system. Anchorage now owns a hydroelectric plant below Lake Eklutna with a capacity of 2,000 kilowatts, but it cannot be depended upon to give continuous service. This project can be developed to an installed capacity of 30,000 kilowatts, capable of producing annually in excess of 140,000,000 kilowatt-hours. However, the city is unable to proceed with this development. Anchorage should have power in sufficient quantities to aid industry and permit the production of building materials and other products for use in Alaska.

This is but one illustration. Similar observations may be made about the other areas in Alaska, all leading to the conclusion that low-cost power is essential to meet the public needs and to enable industries to get power in order to develop the natural resources and to manufacture goods needed in Alaska. Without ample low-cost power, industrial development is under a handicap that will continue to slow down the development of Alaska. On the other hand, if power is made available, then most of the resources can be processed in Alaska, and gainful employment can be provided for the present and future population of this region.

The enactment of legislation along the lines of H. R. 940 or S. 1966 would provide a means for meeting the hydroelectric power needs of Alaska, and for undertaking related resource investigations. It should be emphasized, however, that neither the present text of these measures nor the proposed substitute amendment would extend the Federal reclamation laws to Alaska. The projects covered by these proposals would be projects for the provision of hydroelectric power, and not projects for the reclamation of lands. They would be constructed, maintained, and operated solely in accordance with the provisions of H. R. 940 or S. 1966, and not under the reclamation laws. They would be financed by appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury, and not through the reclamation fund. In short, the legislation here recommended would be entirely independent of the reclamation laws.

Attention is also invited to the fact that the National Military Establishment, now the Department of Defense, has recommended that consideration be given to the use of the Corps of Engineers to investigate and construct projects in Alaska for the development of hydroelectric power and related facilities, in view of the functions of that agency with respect to water resource investigations. The program of power investigations in Alaska now being conducted by this Department under prior statutory authorizations is already being coordinated with the work that the Corps of Engineers plans to undertake through the office established by it in Alaska on July 1, 1949, for water resource investigations. The proposed substitute amendment recommended in this report, moreover, would require that the plans for any project investigated under the contemplated legislation be submitted to the Department of Defense for review, prior to the transmittal of these plans to the Congress for its consideration. It is our belief that this requirement, in conjunction with the existing administrative procedures, would fully meet the point raised by the National Military Establishment.

In view of the considerations outlined in this report, we recommend the enactment at an early date of legislation embodying the principles of H. R. 940 and S. 1966, preferably in the form of the proposed substitute amendment submitted herewith.

The Bureau of the Budget has advised that there is no objection to the submission of such report on the foregoing matters as this Department may deem appropriate. Detailed comments on these matters appear in letters from the Bureau of the Budget dated June 30, July 1, and July 27, respectively. At the request of Director Pace, copies of these letters are enclosed for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,

J. A. KRUG,
Secretary of the Interior.

LETTERS DATED JUNE 30, JULY 1 AND 27, 1949, FROM THE DIRECTOR OF THE BUDGET TO THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, D. C., June 30, 1949.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Receipt is acknowledged of your letter dated March 15, 1949, submitting your report on the Eklutna project, near Anchorage, Alaska, prepared under the authorization contained in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1949. You recommend approval of the project as described in the report, prepared under the supervision of the Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, which provides for the construction of a hydroelectric power plant of 30,000 kilowatts installed capacity to meet urgent demands for power for domestic, municipal, and military uses at an estimated cost of $20,365,400, to be reimbursable, and for development of recreational facilities in connection with the project at an estimated cost of $1,215,500, to be nonreimbursable.

In support of these recommendations, the report and substantiating materials conclude that civilian and military requirements would absorb the full capacity and output of the proposed Eklutna power plant by 1954, that the project is highly desirable, urgently needed, has engineering and economic feasibility, and that a protected type power plant would be installed if required for military security. With respect to the recommendation that recreational facilities be developed at Eklutna Lake in connection with the project, it is noted that the usefulness of the existing lake for recreational purposes would not be increased by reason of construction and operation of the proposed dam and that no allocation of power costs to recreation benefits is proposed. The report anticipates the use of nonfirm power for irrigation pumping at the farms but proposes no allocation of power costs to such benefits until investigations of irrigation potentialities now in progress disclose the amount of energy required. It is also noted that there would be no physical connection of the project with the farms since water from Eklutna Lake would not be diverted for this use due to its colloidal content and distance from farm areas.

The comments of the Governor of Alaska, the commander in chief, Alaskan Command, the Department of Commerce and the Federal Power Commission are favorable to the report. The Federal Power Commission states that staff studies and other information available to the Commission indicate there will be a market for the power developed and that the project would be desirable to assist in meeting the power needs. The Department of the Army points to the Corps of Engineers responsibility for investigations and surveys of water development projects in Alaska and recommends that if the project is authorized for construction, it be built by the Corps of Engineers to avoid duplication of engineering and construction facilities now available through the corps in the Alaska area. While the Department of

